Charcoal to Sell.

A PARODY ON "EXCELSIOR."

THE shades of night were falling fast,
When through a Yankee village passed
A youth who drove through snow and ice,
An ox sled, with the strange device,
"Charcoal to sell."

His brow was black, his eyes well told
That not a bushel he had sold,
And like a silver tin horn rung,
The accents of that well-known tongue,
"Charcoal to sell."

In happy home he saw the light
Of walnut fires gleam clear and bright,
Near by the tavern windows shone,
But on he passed, without a groan,
"Charcoal to sell."

"Haw to your sled," the landlord said,
"Dark lowers the tempest overhead,
Turn out your team, and stop awhile;"
But still he answered with a smile,
"Charcoal to sell."

"Oh, stay," the daughter said," "and rest
Your dusky head upon this breast;"
A tear stood in his coal black eye,
But still he answered with a sigh'
"Charcoal to sell."

"Beware the pine stumps on your road!
Look out, or you'll upset your load,"
This was the old man's last advice;
"My coal," he cried, "is good and nice—
"Charcoal to sell."

At break of day, when rowdies shout,
When watchman sleep and lamps are out
There chaunting faint that same old song,
A tipsy youth came staggering on,
"Charcoal to sell,"

The team had stopped far down the road,
But not to him were team or load,
For fast he held with grasp of vice,
A bottle with that strange device,
"Charcoal to sell."

There in the twilight, cold and grey,
Most beautifully corned he lay,
A tarnished, dimmed, and fallen star,
While boys were shouting, near and far,
"Charcoal to sell."

LARGE CANNON.—"The largest cannon that ever I saw," said a traveller from Spain, "was at Gibraltar; I drove into the muzzle with a six-horse team!"

"Don't believe it," said his hearers.

"It's true, I assure you," said one of them; "I was inside with a horse and buggy, at the same time, and in order to let him turn round, I drove out of the touch-hole."

SOAP STONE GRIDDLE.—Smith, Torrey & Co. 56 Maiden-lane, have a griddle that is just the thing at this season of the year for Buckwheat cakes. The soapstone requires no grease and retaining heat for a long time, will bake the cakes with a uniform color. We heartily commend the article to the attention of all good housekeepers. What next!

"Nathan," said Mr. Sike to his youngest clerk, "have you charged old Ling with that quart of rum?" Yes sir." About an hour afterwards, somewhat forgetting, he asked, "Jerry, did you charge old Ling with that quart of rum?" Yes sir," was the response. "Confound the boys," muttered he, "there's no trustin, on 'em—no depending on 'em; to make it sure, I'll go and charge it myself, and then I shall know it's all right."

'Although you count yourself a brighter fellow than I am, yet I can come round you,' as the earth said to the sun.

A person looking at some skeletons the other day, asked a young doctor present where he got them. He replied, 'We raised them!

'Yes, ma'm, that's a crack article,' said a store keeper to his lady purchaser. 'Oh mercy!' cried she, 'if the the thing is cracked I don't want it.'

A governess, advertising for a situation, says 'she is a perfect mistress of her own tongue.'

A boy was asked what meekness was? He thought a moment, and said—"Meekness gives smooth answers to rough questions,"

THE BEGGAR BOY.

BY MRS. ANN S. STEPHENS.

The cold wind moaned along the street;
The keen, sharp frost came, bitingly,
To sting his small, uncovered feet,
As the poor beggar boy crept by.

THEY sat together—the widow and her boy—wretched, hungry and desolate. A few pine shavings had just sunk into a handful of black ashes on the broken hearth, and one lingering spark of fire darting like a tiny serpent through them, was all the promise of warmth afforded by that yawning and empty fire place.—Yet the day was bitterly cold; the bleak wind gushed down the chimney, scattering the ashes over the floor with each chill blast. It came through the crevices and pierced the ill-fitted windows, till the snow, which lay embanked against the glass, drifted through from the area, and lay in ridges all around the sash. The boy had been crouching close to his mother, and, as the fire went out, she drew him nearer to her side, and strove to shelter him beneath the old shawl which but scantily protected her own shoulders. The boy nestled to her bosom for a moment, but it was not to seek shelter from the cold. The poor woman felt his arms girding her waist with an affectionate clasp, and his warm lips were pressed to her cheek again and again, till the tears that stood half frozen there vanished beneath the loving caress. Alas, for the widow! save those young lips there was no warmth in the world for her!

'Mother, are you very hungry?' asked the boy. The winter twilight filled the room, or the pale, famished face of that poor woman had been answer enough.—She turned away her head and murmured,

'No—not very.'

'Oh! mother,' cried he, drawing back his head and looking in her face through the dim light, 'if we could but get a shilling—one little shilling—I saw four pig's feet lying close by the door at the grocery this morning: one of them was almost out on the pavement. You don't know how I tried to earn a shilling or sixpence, or only three cents, that I might bring one for your supper: but no one would give me work, and you told me not to beg.'

The poor mother burst into tears, and kissed the face lifted with such touching earnestness to hers.

'Your father little thought his son—his and mine, would ever have thoughts of begging,' she said mournfully.

'But he did not know how hungry we should be,' said the lad meekly, while his eyes drooped beneath their thick lashes, and a look of shame stole over his features, for he understood his mother's words as a reproach. 'He had not seen you shivering with cold in the dark here.'

'Oh! if he could have forseen it!'—The poor woman rose to her feet as she spoke, and gathering the shawl about her, took an old quilted hood from her chair, and seemed preparing to go out. The lad turned his eyes anxiously on her.

'May I go with you, mother?' he inquired, buttoning the scant jacket round his finely moulded person, and taking a leathern cap from the floor, he stood ready to go forth.

'I will try again', muttered the unfortunate woman; 'yes, Joseph, we will go once more to Mrs. Henry's. It is but ten cents, and she may have forgotten it; but even then it is nothing to her, everything to us; we will try, surely we cannot starve, boy, starve when food lies before us in such quantities.' As she spoke the woman lifted her finger and pointed to a baker's shop across the way, where the windows were just lighted, and loaves of bread lay heaped on the counter beyond.

This conversation had led the suffering pair into the street, and they walked forward facing the wind and the driving snow with desperate energy.

'Mother,' said the lad, as the two paused before the high granite steps of a proud dwelling in Broad-street. 'Will ten cents be enough to buy the pig's feet and fire to cook them?'

'Do not begin to think of it,' said the widow. 'I have been here again and again, but could never see the lady: it may be so now: try and think of something beside food, my boy, for I have little hopes of any to-night.'

'I would think of something else if it were not for you, mother. I can do without eating a long time, but—'

The widow quietly wiped the tears from her eyes, and descending into the area of that princely dwelling, knocked at the door. The steps above sheltered her from the cutting wind, and she waited long and patiently.

A pampered cook, who sat comforting her crimson face before the kitchen fire, heard the knock, and after a few minutes' deliberation, arose to answer it, muttering sullenly at this call to perform duties out of her place, as she went through the lower hall. She opened the door, a gust of wind came through and put out her lamp, but not till she had seen the poverty-stricken creatures standing there.

'We have nothing for you,' she exclaimed, setting down the lamp, and using both large hands to force the door against the wind; 'no cold victuals for beggars—such a night as this—you ought to know better than to come when the snow drifts into a gentleman's hall in this way,' and taking up her lamp, the overfed cook made her way to the well heated kitchen range, and sat down to regale herself on the best part of a canvass back duck which she had put away for her own benefit between two plates with cranberry sauce, before she sent up her master's dinner.

The widow turned to her son, his hand was clasped in hers, and the look of mute despair which lay upon his young face was fully revealed by a street lamp that stood close by; she did not know that her own thin features were still more faded and ghastly.

'What shall we do? She would not even hear what we had to say.'

'Let us go to the front door,' said the boy; 'ring the bell, and ask for Mrs. Henry. You are a lady as well as she is—'.

It was a bitter and sad smile which flitted across the trembling lips of the widow.

'I was a lady,' she said, 'a proud one—but not now, not under these garments, want and hunger crush our feelings so—come, boy, come. Why should we not go in the at the front door?' The two passed hurriedly up from the area and stood upon the pavement.

'How warm it looks,' said the boy, pointing to the drawing-room windows, where the light from a chanedelier came streaming, like a flood of wine, through the crimson curtains that fell in voluminous folds over them.

The mother made no reply, but grasping his hand tight, led him up the steps.

She rang the bell boldly and with energy. Her eyes had been mocked with luxuries once familiar; she was starving, she and her first born, and felt wronged, as if the inmates of that house were insulting her destitution.

It was indeed a scene of luxurious splendor! that spacious drawing-room—beds of glowing anthracite flashed in grates of glittering steel and silver. The crystal pendants on the chandelier took a rainbow tinge from the wax lights that burned among them. Rare pictures hung in glittering frames on the walls; a soft, glowing light fell upon them, and swept all around on the Ackminster carpet, the silken ottamans, and tables of rich mosiac. There was but one person in the room—a young girl of magnificent beauty and queenly presence. A harp stood before her, and as she stooped to draw forth music from its strings, the muslin drapery which shaded her arms fell loosely; her thick, black hair caught the light, and the color on her round cheek grew deep and rich as a warm sunset. What was it to her that the wind blew chill and sharp without? It could not penetrate the depths of those damask curtains. It touched not the cluster of tea roses, and that snow white japonica that stood on the sofa table, and shed a bland perfume over the couch of embroidered silk which the lady had just occupied: touched not the rare prints and the last magazine, which lay half concealed beneath the crimson cushion. Her dress was that of summer, and like summer was the atmosphere of these beautiful rooms. Her hands wandered among the harp strings, and the color deepened in her cheeks as the music which they drew forth rose and swelled around her; but, as if the discord had startled her with a pleasant surprise, she turned her head as the ringing of the door bell broke through the low notes which her harp was then whispering; her white arm rested motionless against the arras; her lips were slightly parted, and the color on her cheek was like the crimson side of a peach. She longed to steal toward the door and listen if it was indeed his voice.

When the footman opened the door, saying that a woman and boy wished to speak with his mistress, he conld see the beating of her heart through the folds of pure muslin crossing her bosom, and there was a meaning smile on his lip when he observed the look of annoyance and disappointment which settled on her beautiful face.

'Who are they, John; go ask what they want. You knew that I was engaged,' she said, impatiently; 'I am engaged, and mama is out.' The man went back to the hall door, where the widow and her son stood shivering in the cold night—he inquired their business sharply, for the wind, which swept through the opening, deranged his temper.

'We only wish to see Mrs. Henry for one moment,' said the poor woman, meekly.

'Mrs. Henry has gone out.'

'The young lady, then, can we see her?'

'I tell you she is engaged—if you have any message, speak out; you cannot expect a gentleman to stand here all night,' replied the dignitary of locks and hinges.

'Will you be so kind as to tell Miss Henry that there was ten cents due on the linen I made for her—she could not make the exact change, and—'

'A heavy business, that!' interrupted the footman, sneeringly.

'I would not have travelled here to-night, but—'

A young gentleman, who had alighted from a close carriage to the pavement, while they were disputing, came hurriedly up the steps, and interrupted the widow in her humble appeal. She shrunk back, and allowed the visitor to pass, for now the door was flung wide open, and the footman obsequiously rendered his help to relieve the young man oi his furred cloak.

'Will you speak to Miss Henry—indeed, indeed, we shall suffer terribly, if she does not give us the money,' persisted the woman, placing her hand in desperation against the door, as the man came back to close it against them. He hesitated a moment, and then went to the drawing-room door again, just in time to see the small hand of his mistress snatched from the clasping fingers of the young gentleman who had just entered, and her radiant form covered with blushes as it was turned toward the door.

She advanced to the footman, and as he spoke in the undertones of a well tutored servant, her companion leaned against the harp and gazed smilingly upon her while he passed his fingers idly along the strings.

Miss Henry turned from the servant, went to a little work box of rich mosiac, and took out her purse. It contained nothing but bank notes.

'Tell her to come again; I have no small change. I don't remember that anything is due, but that is no matter, tell her to come again.'

The young girl turned away as she spoke, and gliding to the side of her lover, began trifling with the harp strings close by his hand, till her arm was once more imprisoned in his clasp, and they forsook the instrument and sat down, content with the musical beating of their own young hearts, and there, upon the door steps, two fellow beings perishing with want, famishing from the lack of a few pennies, which that beautiful girl thoughtlessly withheld. Alas! when will the rich and prosperous learn the value of trifles to the poor?

'Who where the two persons I found at the door?' inquired the lover of Miss Henry, as he playfully turned the turquoise ring on her finger. 'The woman's face struck me as peculiarly intelligent as I hurried up the steps.' The lady smiled and answered in a quiet voice that it was a sewing woman, whom her mammy sometimes employed out of charity.

'It is a dreadful night for any female to be out,' said the young man thoughtfully; 'and the face I saw beneath that old hood was strangely wan and sorrowful.'

'Is it very cold?' enquired the young lady, beginning to look serious, 'I have not felt it in the least.'

'God forbid that you ever should feel the inclemency of a night like this!' said the young man, caressingly, 'and yet, my girl, the poor woman who stood at your door a few minutes since, may have been loved as tenderly, and nurtured gently as you are; nothing but terrible destitution would have called her out on such a night as this!'

'Do you think so?' replied the young girl, and the color grew faint on her cheek, 'I am sorry, I—'

The young man looked in that speaking face with some surprise, it became troubled beneath his glance, and tears stole like dew into those dark eyes.

'What is the matter, Frances?' he inquired anxiously, 'you are too sensitive, my sweet girl.'

Frances Henry covered her face and wept—'I have been cruel, careless,' she said in a low voice, 'the poor woman asked for a little change that she says is due her. I expected you, my heart was full of you, and I sent her away.'

'To suffer!' said the young man seriously, though his voice was still affectionate.

'It was so little—such a mere trifle—I could not think ten cents of the least consequence. It was only that, but she will come again to-morrow, and I will give her fifty times the due!' added the really kind girl with sudden animation, for she was only thoughtless not cruel.

'Let us try if she cannot be found to-night,' replied the lover, still very seriously. The footman was summoned, but he knew nothing of the poor woman. She

PLAINFIELD GAZETTE.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Thursday, January, 4, 1849.

What shall we say to arrest the attention of our readers? For without their attention to what we may say, we might as well not speak. I wonder what he is going to say! If we can have your attention we will proceed, we don't yet know ourselves, so you will have to read on.

Suppose it be a few words of advice to young men, and incidentally as they say of the tariff to the old ones

Before this number of our paper is read by our subscribers another year will have passed. Young man can you look back upon it with the satisfaction of having performed the good resolutions you may have commenced the year with, or is it with sorrow and regret that the year has closed upon you. If the former, you will read with pleasure what we may write for your benefit, and resolve to continue on in the advantages you have gained; if the latter perhaps your regret will be increased by the reflection; be it so, let that regret take deep hold of your mind, so deep that it will lead to a reformation; commence to day, reform bad habits and resolve firmly to act more wisely in future; no man need be ashamed to acknowledge that he is wiser to day than he was yesterday, this year than he was last.

We do not know what better way to benefit you than by offering the following advice, which you may as well not read unless you resolve to profit by it.

Never promise what you do not intend to perform, for whatever benefit you may anticipate by gaining what you desire by a promise, if that promise is not performed to the letter and spirit of your representations, you will be worse off than before you made that promise; you will lose the confidence of whoever you may have promised, and likewise you will lose all self respect after having once broken your word, and then resort to falsehood and perhaps an oath to restore the confidence you have once lost; how much better to maintain or not to promise what we know we cannot perform. More men lose their independance through the non-performance of their promises than all other things besides. The man that is punctual to all his engagements, which punctuality must be true as the sun, can always command a friends purse; and a 'friend in need is a friend indeed.'

Another great advantage towards the attainment of independance is living within your income, the man that lives beyond his income, no matter how large that income may be. must always be a slave.

'Out of debt out of danger,' should be the motto of all who wish to remain free and independant; the disregard of these maxims are the reason why so many complain of hard times; never get in debt to purchase an article you do not want; pay as you go, by so doing you will always be able to maintain your independance.

That man is truly independant who has his health and strength, a clear conscience, a clean shirt, and a shilling; all beyond these are superfluities with which a man of sense can do without rather than sacrifice his word and thereby his independance. That you may not forget this advice pay for the Gazette one year in advance, and if at the expiration of that time you do not say the advice is worth more than one years subscription, then we if too poor to refund the money, should we live, we will work out the amount at sawing wood, or at any other respectable calling, provided the persons word denying this much benefit will obtain credit to the amount of ten shillings at any store in this village. Try it and see.

We regret to say that in the last number of our paper, a mistake occurred in the strictures on the Rev. Dr. Ryders Lecture by Delta. We made it read:

In the Lords supper Christ only compares his body and blood to bread and wine, chapter, He calls his body but in this blood the true food of the soul of the believers.

It should have read:

In the lords supper Christ only compares his body and blood to bread and wine, but in this chapter, He calls his body and blood the true food of the soul of the believers.

Congress.

We have no mails for two days past, the cars having been detained two days at this place by the snow drifting on the track; therefore we have no later congressional news.

[FOR THE PLAINFIELD GAZETTE.]

GENTLEMEN.—I take great pleasure in congratulating you on the appearance of your very interesting and valuable paper. That you would make a journal worthy of attention on account of its choice selections, and independent and well written editorials, I well knew; but I was not prepared for the very neat, and indeed I might add, handsome style in which it is issued. I am well aware of the difficulties which attend the getting up of the first numbers of a newspaper, even when undertaken by older hands; and with your opportunity, I must say you have done nobly.

I am much pleased with this, because it is gratifying to see things well done.—Permit me to add, that I never could do work in the slovenly manner in which it is done by many persons with whom I am acquainted. If anything is worth being undertaken, it should be done in a workmanlike manner.

The publication of a new paper in Plainfield is an enterprize which should be regarded with much favor by all who have an interest in the prosperity of your thriving villiage. The intelligent business man who may visit your town, will, if he is asked to settle among you, inquire, Have you any newspapers, and what is their character? As he will find in the Gazette a paper well conducted and handsomely printed, he will soon make up his mind that your townsmen form an enterprising and spirited community, because he KNOWS that a paper of this class is sustained only by a people who have sagacity enough to appreciate the value of a good paper. This will have great weight in deciding the point as to whether or not he will take up his residence among you.

Now this is a subject in which all who are interested in the growth of Plainfield are deeply concerned. If it is an object to have intelligent and thorough going business men settle among you, it follows that your townsmen must support their newspapers as they do in all places which have a steady and wholesome growth.—Is there a person in Plainfield who can name any villiage which has rapidly increased in population, in intelligence, and wealth, which has not supported its newspapers in a liberal manner? Is it not universally conceded by the shrewdest business men in the country, that money paid to a newspaper office, either for subscription or advertising, is most judiciously expended?

But I did not design to go into an argument on this subject. I hope, however, that these hints will not be thrown away by those who are interested. I trust that none who live in your beautiful village—no matter what may be their politics—will neglect a "paper published in their midst and for their benefit." I am confident that the young will find in it much to amuse and instruct, and the old many things that will be for their comfort and advantage. Yours,

J. A.

MESSRS. EDITORS:—I send for pubication in the 'Plainfield Gazette' a story by one of our most popular female writers. Although it is quite lengthy, yet I trust the merits of the article will constrain you to insert it. I am aware that the mass of those who read newspapers would rather have something of a more exciting nature—many would even prefer a love story of the "namby-pamby" style; but I believe that "The Beggar Boy," though not adapted for this class of readers, is a character worthy of their profound attention. The tale is very beautifully written, and calculated to affect the most indifferent and unfeeling. I trust that every family into whose hands The Gazette may fall, will have the story of the widow and her son read aloud, that every member may listen to the tale of their sufferings. Let no one imagine that the picture is over drawn; for any person who has lived in our large cities must have known of similar cases of destitution and death. C.

THE TRIBUNE.—To all those wanting a city paper we would recommend the Tribune, and especialy to our democratic friends, as in it will be found embodied the principles of the Whig party, with which every Democrat should be acquainted, a man reading only his own party papers whether Whig or Democrat is but ill calculated to judge of their worth, or to advocate his own principles understandingly. The Daily Tribune is one of the ablest conducted papers in the union, its weekly and semi weekly are among the best *News*papers with which we are acquainted.

FOURTEEN DAYS LATER

FROM EUROPE.

Arrival of the Europea.

Louis Napoleon President of France.

&c. &c. &c.

The Cunard Steamer Europa, Captain LOTT, which sailed from Liverpool on the 16th ult. arrived at this port yesterday afternoon, after a passage of fifteen days.

FRANCE.

The Presidential Election—Louis Napoleon Chosen.

The election of a President commenced on Sunday, the 10th inst. and the polling terminated on Monday evening. There is no doubt that Prince Louis Napoleon is chosen, his majority in all the departments from which the returns made up have been received being very considerable; and although it would at first sight seem impossible to form any correct opinion of the probable result of a poll of so vast a constituency, yet the returns are so immensely in his favor as to place it beyond the shadow of a doubt that Prince Louis Napoleon has obtained both an absolute and a relative majority, so that he will be legally elected, and Gen. Cavaignac will lose the chance of being chosen by the National Assembly, to which the choice of one of the candidates would be referred, if none should obtain an absolute majority of the voters.

Taking all into connsideration, Prince Louis Napoleon has in Paris on the gross poll—which consisted of 250,941 votes—an absolute majority over all his competitors of upward of twenty-seven thoussnd.

Another Bonaparte Elected.

The election for Deputy to the National Assembly for Corsica terminated in the return of M. Louis Lucien Bonaparte, the son of the late Lucien Bonaparte, and brother of the Prince of Canino. The numbers were:

M. Louis Lucian Bonaparte	11,977
General Arrighi	10,560

General Arrighi was recommended to the electors by Jerome Bonaparte, ex-King of Westphalia, by his son Napoleon and by Prince Louis Napoleon, in opposition to M. Louis Lucien Bonaparte. Lucien and his sons were always, on account of their uncompromizing Republicanism, objects of fear and dislike to other members of the Bonaparte family.

A well informeed Paris paper says: "So far as we can judge from the incomplete returns that arrive to us from the Departments the suffrages were divided in the followinh proportions:

Louis Napoleon	66 per cent.
Cavaignac	21 "
Ledru-Rollin	6 "
Raspail	4 "
Lamartine	3 "

THE GERMAN REPUBLIC.

The Rsghts of the German Empire.

The proceedings of the Frankfort assembly since our last are in themselves important, but are denuded of much of that importance by the complicated and unstable character of the Assembly, resulting from the late and present proceedings in Vienna and Berlin. On the 7th inst. the Assembly was occupied in considering the fundamental rights of the German people when among other, the following articles were definitely adopted:

The law makes no difference between the various orders (of the people), all priviliges attaching to particular orders are abolished. The nobility, as an order, is abolished. All Germans are equal in the eye of the law.

All titles, so far as they are not connected with an office, are abolished and may never again be introduced. Ayes, 253, Noes, 170.

No member of a German State can accept an order from a foreign state. Ayes, 229; Noes, 193. The obligation to serve in the armed forces is the same for all; the sending of a substitute is not allowed.

The penalty of death, except when prescribed by martial law, or where admitted by naval law in cases of mutiny, as also the punishment of the pillory, of branding, and of bodily chastisement are abolished.

Every German has the right of expressing his opinion freely, by word of mouth, writng, printing, and pictorial or plastic representation.

The freedom of tho Press many not be limited, suspended, or annulled, under any way whatsoever, by preventive measures; either by censorship, concessions, payment of caution, State-imposts, restrictions imposed on the printing-offices, or, the book-trade, or by postal prohibition, or any other impediments thrown in the way of free intercourse.

[The insertion of the words "by preventive measures" was carried by 338 against 67; and the word "suspended" by 263 against 181]

On offences committed by the Press, which are officially prosecuted, verdict shall be returned by jury. A law in relation to the Press will be enacted by imperial authority.

Every German has full liberty of faith and conscience.

No one is compelled to reveal his religious convictions.

No one is bound to attach himself to any religious community. (This last clause was carried 227 against 198.)

A Free Press in Saxony.

By a new law of the Kingdom of Saxony, the Press is declared entirely free, and the censorship forever abolished.

AUSTRIA.

Abdication of the Emperor Ferdinand.

On the 2d inst. considerable sensation was created by a proclamation issued by the Emperor, in which he transfers all his rights and honors to his nephew.

The young Emperor is favorably spoken of and if he but fulfill the hopes held out in his Proclamation on entering his new duties, the people of Austria will have experienced a happy deliverance in getting rid of Ferdinand.

The National Assembly Dissolved.

'1. The Assembly, called together for the purpose of 'concording' a Constitution, is hereby dissolved.

'2. Our Ministry of State is charged with the execution of this order.

'Given and signed with our own hand, and sealed with our own arms, this day, the 5th of Dec. 1848, at Potsdam.

The Postal Convention.

We have much pleasure in announcing that the basis of the postal convention with the United States has at length been finally settled, and a draft of the convention itself will be sent by this day's steamer to America for ratification by the Senate of the United States. By the convention a considerable reduction will be made upon the postage of American letters, and we trust that the ill feelings on both sides which the question had occasioned will be definitely removed.

IRELAND.

The internal state of affairs in Ireland, is, we regret to say, without any improvement, or even the hope of a change for the better. Between the poverty and destitution of the small farmers, and the crowded state of the work-houses, the awful amount of poor rates which are refused, and the discontent that prevails, the country is in a frightful state. The eviction of insolvent debtors is the order of the day. A large and influential meeting has been held at Portarlington, for the purpose of inducing the House of Commons to institute a searching inquiry into the whole working of the present poor laws in Ireland; in order to effect the legitimate purpose of the poor laws. At Skibbereen a meeting has been held, at which a committee of intelligent gentlemen has been appointed to visit and report on the present state of the poor, which is at present really awful.

ROME.

The Pope escaped from his Capital in the Disguise of a Servant.

LATER STILL.

Our correspondent states that before closing his letter, a statement was made at the Hotel de Ville, where the scrutiny is proceeding, that Louis Napoleon had received four millions of votes, while those of Gen. Cavaignac were only hine hundred thousand. The funds rose one per cent. in consequence of the increased confidence felt in the new Government.—N. Y. Tribune.

Write it in Gold.

The great comprehensive truths, says President Quincy, written on letters of light on every page of our history, are these; —Human happiness has no perfect security but freedom; freedom, none but virtue; virtue none but knowlege; and neither freedom, nor virtue, nor knowledge, has any vigor or immortal hope, except in the principles of the Christian faith, and in the sanctions of the Christian religion.

A young married woman, who has not had the opportunity of profiting by the advice and example of a good mother' will find some difficulty at first in spending her money to the best advantages; for there is really an art in spending money, though not in getting rid of it. Some women will keep house respectably and plentifully on one third less money than will be required by others, and without either meanness of illiberal dealing. But to do this, judgment, forethought, and experience are necessary. One woman shall be able to tell you how much her house keeping costs, to a shilling, while another cannot even guess within ten.—The former has method, rule, regularity. and a certain sum assigned to her, with the latter is all hap hazard—it comes and it goes, she neither knows how, nor cares. And this is almost sure to be the case if the money is doled out by her husband in a few shillings at a time.

One sentence fitly spoken may encourage a timid goodness, or cheer a bosom dejected and drooping beneath some secret sorrow.

Cold Weather.

The thermometer at daylight on Wednesday morning Jan. 3d stood at five degrees below zero, in this Village.

The Cholera, &c.

PITTSBURG, Saturday Dec 30.

Alarming reports in relation to the Cholera reach us from below. A gentleman passenger in the steamer Diadem reports three deaths on board that boat, six on board steamer "Watkins," and four on steamer "Savanah." When he left New-Orleans, people were leaving by hundreds.

The Ravages of the Cholera at New Orleans and in the valley of the Mississippi are very serious. In New Orleans the mortality is already as great as it was in the city of New York during the height of the epidemic in 1832; on the 20th of December there were admitted to the Charity Hospital, 24 cholera patients; on the 21st there were 31. The number of deaths by cholera in the Hospital on the 20th was 35; and on the 21st there were 22. This embraces probably about one-third the number of cases in the whole city.

Gen. Taylor has consented to visit Pittsburgh, on his rout to Washington, if private busisness in Kentucky offers no impediment.

New York Saturday, Dec. 31.

A MELANCHOLY CASE.—Yesterday afternoon two respectable citizens called at the Fourth Ward Station House, and stated that a woman in a dying condition, and entirely destitute, was lying in the cellar of house 25 Rose-st. Investigation was immediately made, and the news fouud to be correct. On etnering the cellar the poor woman, whose name is Mary Sullivan, was seen lying on the floor in an exhausted condition, almost without clothing, and four or five helpless children surrounding her, and crying for that food and warmth she was unable to bestow. Some wood was sent from the Station-House, a fire lighted in the cold cellar, and the wants of the poor creatures provided for Dr. William O'Donnell of 37 James-st. on hearing the circumstances, attended the poor woman, and without any remuneration, save the conciousness of doing a benevolent action' accorded to her the aid which was so much needed.

'Are you fond of tongue, sir?" "I was always fond of tongue, madame, and I like it—still.

There are a thousand things in this world to afflict and sadden, but oh, how many that are beautiful and good. The world seems with beauty—with objects which gladden the eye and warm the heart. We might be happy if we would. There are ills that we cannot escape, the approach of disease and death, of misfortune, the sundering of earthly ties, and canker-work of grief; but a vast majority of the evils which beset us, might, be avoided. There is sunshine everywhere—in the sky; or on the earth; there would be in most hearts as we look around us. The storm dies away and a bright sun shines out. Summer drops her tinted curtain upon the earth, which is very beautiful, even when Autumn breathes her changing breath upon it.

EVIL SPEAKING.—That you may not speak ill of any, do not delight to hear ill of them. Give no countenance to busy bodies, who are running from house to house, and love to talk of other men's faults. Those who delight to hear ill of others, will soon fall into the habit of speaking ill of them. When busy bodies run out of matter of fact, they will soon resort to conjecture, and idle stories to please those who are fond of hearing others spoken against. Such characters are common nuisances, often destroy good neighborhoods and the fellowship of old friends. If we endeavor in good earnest to mind ourselves, we shall find work enough, and but little time to talk to others.

PHILOSOPHY.—'When a stranger treats me with want of respect,' said a poor philosnpher, 'I comfort myself with the reflection that it is not myself that he slights, but my old coat, and shabby hat, which to say the truth, have no particular claim to admiration. So, if my hat and coat choose to fret about it let them, but it is nothing to me.'

AREA OF U. S. TERRITORY.—Oregon Territory contains 341,463 square miles; New-Mexico, 77,387 do; California, 448,691 do; Territory west of the Mississippi, 745,584 do; total 1,861,976 square miles, of 640 acres each. The U. S. Territory, were it of a square form, would measure 1,820 miles by 1,820.

A dozen or two News.

Now the season has arrived for serenades. Now young gentlemen stay out late o'nigts, and touch the light guitar, and pitch their voices into third story windows, in the hope of awakening a tender sentiment in the hearts of the fair. Now oysters are fat and good. Now parties are given, and the 'handings-round' are done as often as circumstances will permit. Now papas groan inwardly. Now is the time for reading. Now, if ever is the time to get married. Now is the moment to form good resolutions. Now is the time to think of the poor. Now noses look both blue and red. Now is the time for dancing. Now is the time to forget your enemies. Now the ladies dress tastefully. Now concerts are well patronised, and now the opera draws well. Now the dry goods men rub their hands in joy at a big business and corresponding profits. Now patriotism is below par. Now an original joke is worth its weight in gold. Now is the time to take a good newspaper. Now we'll quit.

Pointed sermons.—Many years ago, there graduated at Harvard University, a man by the name of Rawson, who subsequently settled as a minister at Yarmouth on Cape Cod. He used to preach very pointed sermons. Having heard that some of his parishioners were in the habit of making him the subject of their mirth at a grog-shop, he one Sabbath preached a discourse from the text, 'And I was the song of the drunkard.' His remarks were of a very moving character, as many of his hearers rose and left the house. A short time afterwards, he delivered a discourse still more pointed: 'And they, being convicted in their own consciences, went out one by one.' On this occasion, no one ventured to retire from the assembly, but the guilty ones listened in silence to the lash of their pastor.

Nothing is more rediculous than to boast of advantages in education which have not been improved. A young clergyman was one day boasting among his relations of having been educated in two colleges, Harvard and Cambridge.—'You remind me,' said an aged divine present' 'of an instance I once knew of a calf who sucked two cows.' 'What was the consequence?' asked a third person. 'Why, sir,' replied the old gentleman, very gravely, the consequence was, that he was a very great calf.'

Repartee is perfect, when it effects its purpose with a double edge. Repartee is the highest order of wit, as it bespeaks the coolest exercise of genius at a moment when the passions are aroused. Voltaire, on hearing the name of Haller mentioned by an English traveler, at Forney, burst forth into a violent panegyric upon him; his visitor told him that such praise was most disinterested, for that Haller by no means spoke so highly of him. 'Well, well, n'importe,' replied Voltaire, 'perhaps we are both mistaken.'

In ridicule of the practice of duelling, Franklin used to tell the following story: One person said to another in a coffee house—'Sir, sit a little farther off, you smell offensively.' 'Sir,' answered the person addressed, 'I will fight if you insist upon it,' rejoined the first; 'but how will that end the matter? If you kill me, I shall smell too; and if I kill you, you will smell worse than you do at present.

'Thou hast a hole in thy stocking,' said a demure looking little Quaker girl, to a lady who was going up Chestnut street, on the 1st ultimo. The lady looked down. 'Thee is a fourth mouth dunce!' exclaimed little Miss Prim.

'Your house is on fire,' said a stranger' rushing into the parlor of a sober citizen. 'Well, sir,' was the answer of the latter, 'to what cause am I indebted for the extraordinary interest which you take in the affairs of my house?'

'If good people,' said Archbishop Usher, 'would but make their goodness agreeable, and smile instead of frowning in virtue, how many would they win to the good cause!'

Benevolence.—As the sweetness of the rose exhales perfume from its own nature, so the generous heart of the benevolent man sheds delight amongst mankind.

'They do say there's nothing new under the sun, but if there aint a new pair of stockings,' said an old woman, as she took the last stitch; 'then I'm mistsken, that's all.'

PRINTING OFFICE FOR SALE.

THE Subscriber offers for sale the Office, Type, Presses, Job Materials, Fixtures, etc., of the "Jersey City Telegraph," in Hudson County, N. J. and also the good will and right of conducting said paper. The paper now possesses a fair and increasing patronage, and offers many inducements to an intelligent, practical man. The subscriber is about to leave the country, and for this reason will dispose of the establishment on very low terms.

The Cheapest Periodical in America!

Sears 'Pictorial Dollar Magazine For 1849.

TO NEW AND OLD SUBSCRIBES.

Now ready for Subscribers and agents throughout the country, the January Number of a re-issue of this Popular Monthly Periodical. This work is too well known to require any lengthy prospectus of its merits. The contents are of a strictly moral and religous character, embellished with numerous plates alone worth more than the reduced subscription price. It is the duty of all men to advance the Moral as well as the Intellectual character of of their fellows, and thus to lend a helping hand, however feeble, in promoting the advancement of man. It is our wish to dedicate this Periodical to such a cause; and most unfeignedly shall we rejoice, if we attain the smallest influence, and prove of the slightest use. And to all who have at heart the progress of the race, and who wish to see man becoming a wiser and better being, we say, not in the spirit of arrogance and presumption, but with the perfect consiousness of being among the humblest of the humble workers of the cause "Come over and help us."

Terms.—Great inducements to Postmasters and clubs, unequalled by those of any other establishment in the Union, for a Magazine of this size.

One copy, one year	$1 00
Six copies, one year	5 00
Twenty-five copies, one year	20 00

was standing on the steps, when he closed the door against her, perfectly mute, but the boy had insisted on coming in, had rung the bell violently twice after he was shut out, and for some minutes the sound of his voice was heard above the wail of the tempest. Perhaps he was there yet. Frances Henry and her lover went eagerly to the door, and looked out; no one was visible; the steps were covered with sleet, and drops of frozen rain fell like a storm of pearls over the dark tresses and muslin drapery of the young girl, while the keen winds almost took away her breath.

'Does any one know where she lives?' inquired the young man, taking up his cloak. Frances turned anxiously to the servant, who did know something of the widow's residence; but the night was tempestuous, and John had no idea of leaving it for the benefit of any one; so he expressed himself profoundly ignorant, and hastened to close the door, lest his young mistress should take cold. It was indeed a necessary precaution, for she was shivering from head to foot

The young couple went back to the drawing-room, to an atmosphere so changed that the sleet which had fallen on their garments turned to water, and hung trembling all over them, like dew drops, before they had crossed the room. They sat down, but inquietude was in the heart of each. The young man was thoughtful, and Frances could not shake off a sense of regret and self reproach that saddened her spirits all the evening.

The widow and her son reached their wretched dwelling at last. Joseph turned his face resolutely from the baker's window as they went by, and his mother had not spoken a word since she left the rich man's door. They went into the dark basement and sat down. Joseph took the damp shawl from his mother's bosom, flung off his own wet jacket, and winding his arms around her neck, laid his cheek close to hers, and murmured, 'come, mother, don't give up; see, this will warm you a little, I know it will!'

He was answered by a low convulsive sob, which the poor woman tried in vain to suppress, but the brave lad would not be discouraged. He brought her to be calm, to see how strong he was—he who had eaten nothing for two whole days, and who always had such an appetite—it was not much to be hungry when one got used to it. It was beautiful—this courage in a child so young! His voice was unnaturally cheerful, but it had a sound as if the little fellow was choking back his tears all the time.

There was a straw bed lying on the floor in a corner of the room. Joseph had become accustomed to the dark, so he went to this bed and shook up the straw; heaping the principal part on the side which his mother always occupied.—Then he persuaded her to sit down; he spread the warm quilts carefully over her, tucking them in against the wall, and placed a piece of old rag carpeting between the bed and the floor, that it might seem as much like a pillow as possible.

'Now, mother, isn't it nice to feel that everything is so clean, if there isn't much of it?' said the boy, still lingering on his knees where he had been arranging the fragment of carpet. 'Do you begin to feel any better, mother?'

The poor woman murmured that she did, and told the child to make haste and come to bed, for she heard his teeth chatter as he spoke.

'In a few minutes, mother—I have just thought of something'—and starting to his feet, little Joseph went into a back passage and dragged out an old door which stood leaning against the wall.—He placed this against the bed, slanting it over his mother in a manner that shielded her from the wind which penetrated the windows.

'There,' exclaimed the boy triumphantly, 'only think, mother, how much better off we are than some poor people that haven't any old door to keep off the wind!'

If it had not been so very dark, Joseph would have been encouraged by the faint smile that crept over the pale face of his parent; for even misery could not resist the determined courage of that brave hearted boy.

When Joseph had arranged the door, he gathered fresh spirit from success, and the exertion of dragging it forth had driven away the excessive chill which had fettered down his strength; so, obeying a desperate impulse, he let himself into the street, and ran across to the baker's shop. A hard faced woman stood behind the counter talking to a mild looking female, who had just placed a couple of shilling loaves in a basket which hung on her arm. She seemed to be the wife of a mechanic, purchasing her store of bread for the next day. When she turned from the counter Joseph took her place; there was something in the clear, frank features of the boy which attracted her attention. Though worn to the thread, his clothes were mended, and perfectly clean; the bright black hair had never been neglected, and exposure to the storm only crisped it into a thousand tiny ringlets up from his bold open forehead, and all over his head. But he was very pale, and the long black lashes that sunk over his eyes when he felt that she was looking earnestly at him, concealed an expression of terrible suffering.

'Mrs. Beake, will you let me speak with you a minute,' said the child, lifting his eyes to the shop woman, with an appeal so earnest, that she impulsively bent down her head; but the widow owed her a few shillings, and this thought steeled her heart against him.

'It is of no use,' she said, before he had time to express his wishes: 'I can't trust you another loaf, it is out of the question.'

'I did not come for trust this time—that is, not all trust,' replied the boy, with almost breathless anxiety. 'See—if you will only take these, and keep them till we can pay you—they have only been mended twice.'

The boy stooped down, untied his shoes and seemed about to set them on the counter.

'Don't put your wet old shoes there!' exclaimed the woman, roughly. 'What good are such trash to me—do get out of the store.'

'I did not mean to set them on the counter—only to show you how nicely they are mended,' said the boy in a broken voice, stooping down to put on his shoes, and, as his fingers trembled among the wet strings, the woman, who stood at the door, saw that the poor child was crying as if his heart would break, though he made no noise. She looked at the bread in her basket: there was just enough for her own large family—she could not give him that—but a sixpence lay within her hard palm—harder than her heart, good woman. Her face brightened, and stepping forward, she laid her coin on the counter.

'Give the boy some bread, he looks hungry, poor fellow;' and before Joseph could start up, shake the tears from his face, and thank her, the kind woman had passed out into the street, muttering, 'My young ones must do without their candy to-night: they will make a terrible time when I get home—no matter—I could not help it!'

Joseph reached up his eager, trembling hands, and almost snatched the loaf from Mrs. Beake. He darted through the door and across the street, laughing amid his tears; and hugging the bread close to his bosom.

The widow had sunk to that heavy, uncomfortable sleep which, in truth, was scarcely more than stupid endurance of privation and cold. She had not heard her son go forth, and when he rushed into the room, sobbing out a cough, and dancing through the darkness, she started up in affright.

'Here, mother, here, I've got some bread—new bread—a whole loaf—are you setting up, mother?—come break it—my hands shake so I can't. Give me a piece of the crust, and eat the soft yourself. Have you got it?—that's right—now eat away, mother, it's all paid for!'

Joseph broke off short, for his mouth was full of something more substantial than words, and he only interrupted his mother's expressions of gratitude by now and then pausing to ask, if she ever tasted such bread in her life?

The next morning Joseph crept from the side of his mother, where he had nestled all night, and went out to a carpenter's shop in the neighborhood in search of something to burn. The carpenter was at work, and Joseph's heart leaped when he saw the delicate shavings dropping in curls from his plane to a great heap which lay by the work bench.—When the man saw Joseph, he smiled, and pushed the shavings towards him with his foot. They were eagerly gathered up, but underneath lay some chips and square pieces of wood, which the child would not have touched, but with unusual benevolence, the carpenter thrust them also towards him. So the widow was aroused by the cheerful cracking of a fire on the hearth which, if it gave forth little heat, served to illuminate the otherwise cheerless room. Joseph was before the fire, looking quite cheerful and happy as he fed the flame with handsful of crisp shavings.

'Come, mother, we have a crust or two left for breakfast, here it is, I don't feel hungry after our famous supper,' said the boy, approaching his mother with some fragments of bread.

The widow would have persuaded her son to eat, but he quietly laid the portion she gave him on a little deal table, saying that he was not hungry, and would go into the street to see if anybody wanted to send him on an errand, or have wood carried in. He kissed his mother before going out, and besought her to lie still and cover herself with the bedclothes; but the child did not guess how ill his parent was, how utterly broken down and strengthless.

It was a clear day, but intensely cold, the air was full of sharp biting frost, and the little wind that stirred along the streets was keen and stinging rather than boisterous. Poor Joseph was thinly clad and the cold penetrated every pore of his body as he hurried along the icy pavement, looking eagerly from side to side in search of something to do, but no pile of wood gladdened his eye, no little mound of coal gave him an excuse for ringing at some street door to beg the privilege of carrying it in. But the boy had suffered, and seen his mother suffer till the resolution of manhood seemed springing up in his bosom, his eye grew brighter and more determined as he walked on; his pale lips were pressed together, and he turned his face firmly against the wind as if that were his fate, and his young soul had found courage to brave it.

He went down to the wharves in hope that some traveler might employ him to carry a bandbox or portmanteau, but larger and more hardened boys drove him away, and he was more than once in danger of being crushed among the hackney-coachmen and cab-drivers that thronged the thoroughfare to every ferry. Still he would not be discouraged, though hungry and tortured with the cold, he pressed forward pleading for work till night drew on, and then, for the first time in his young life, 'begging for money, anything that would keep his mother from perishing with want.' At night-fall he stood in Broadway, and asked for 'pennies to buy bread for his poor mother,' of the passers by—it was an old story and excited no sympathy. Once that beautiful, earnest face, thin and pale with famine, might have touched a heart of stone, but it was too cold for men to pause long enough for more than an impotent glance, and if the vein with which he pleaded was sad and broken-hearted, they set it down as a part of his profession, lacking somewhat in whining humility, but very well for a new beginner, and so they passed him by.—Men who risked thousands every night at the gambling table withheld their penny from conscientious scruples. They looked upon street beggars as a moral evil; women who were driving their husbands to bankruptcy by extravagance in dress and equipage, swept by the shivering boy, wrapped in velvets and costly furs, but they too had conscientious scruples, or could not afford the penny for which he supplicated. Some passed him with averted faces and heard him not. Others ordered him away as if a wild animal had crossed his path: one or two paused as if to aid him, but it was difficult for such to find their purses without being chilled through, so when the child almost felt a coin in his palm, and looked upon them already with grateful eyes, they passed on, stifling the compassionate impulse that had almost impelled them to a kind act, by the common observation that after all this begging was but a business.—So they passed him one and all till the night came on, and when every limb was chilled, and his very heart cold in his bosom, the boy crept toward home miserable, hungry and exhausted.'

The night was colder even than the morning, a clear wintry sky bent over the city, studded with myriads of golden stars beautiful and bright, but the boy shivered beneath them, and it seemed as if they hung there to mock him with thoughts of a warm fire which he must never see again. The shop windows too, with their glittering lights gleaming over piles of confectionary and southern fruits—they had tempted him a little while before, but now the gas flames and the fruit seemed melting together in a sea of beautiful colors that danced before his eyes—still they tempted him no longer, for he had ceased to feel hungry as a faintness and loathing of food crept over him; sensation seemed gradually dying from his limbs, and he was conscious of but one wish, and that was to lie down by his mother and sleep. Still he crept on, moving to and fro beneath the bright pitiless stars, and the yet more pitiless throng that passed him by, till he mistook the way and stood quite alone in a public lumber-yard. It gave him no anxiety, for his limbs were already asleep, and his eyes grew heavy. He sunk to the earth with his face turned upward to the stars. And when the beggar boy awoke he was in heaven!

They were sitting at their breakfast table—Frances Henry and her parents—one day had passed by since the sewing woman had sought their house in that storm; but she had not called agian as directed. So Frances cast the subject from her mind, and smiled quietly when she thought how much anxiety the trifling sum of ten cents had cost her.

Mr. Henry, who had been amusing himself with the morning papers after his coffee, occasioanlly read a paragraph aloud: after runnidg over the amount of stocks he came to the coroner's inquests, and read on as if he had been still immersed in the money market.

'Coroner's inquests.—An inquest was held at 27 ——— street, on the body of a young lad, who was found dead in a wood-yard in the rear of 27. Verdict, died of exposure and want. The body was removed to the dead house.

'Another inquest was held on the body of Margaret S———, found dead in the basement of a house in W——— st.; the room in which she was found betrayed the utmost destitution. Verdict, died of disease and exhaustion.'

'Margaret S———,' said Mrs. Henry, taking the paper from her husbbnd to be certain of the name, 'Frances, was not that the woman who did the sewing for us a few weeks since?'

Frances did not answer, her elbow was resting on the table, while her trembling hand lay pressed over her eyes; the hand and face were both colorless, and there was something in her manner that frightened the two persons gazing upon her.

That day a fashionably dressed young man came out of the dead house, followed by two men, bearing a child's coffin between them—they placed it in a carriage, and the gentleman stepped in after it, ordering the coachman to drive to 27 ——— street. When the carriage stopped before that gloomy dwelling, the boy was once more removed and carried into the basement; a female coffined, and ready for burial, lay upon the little deal table, and close by sat a young girl muffled in a cloak of black velvet, and weeping bitterly.

The beggar boy was placed by the side of his mother, and, for the first time, when so near that bosom, his arms were not stretched forth to embrace her.

'My Fanny this is a gloomy scene for you,' said the young man, bending over the weeping female, 'you will take cold in this damp place.'

'They lived here for weeks, and months,' said the distressed girl, and her eyes filled once more as she looked around the miserable apartment: might, at least, have paid the pitiful sum that we owed them. If I had but seen her that night—if—alas, I shall never forgive myself!'

'Fanny,' said the young man, taking her hand with affectionate earnestness, this is the first instance of terrible suffering that you have witnessed, if it has occasioned some self-reproach, tears alone will not appease it; scenes like these are passing in this great city every day.—Thousands read the paragraph which brought us here, and yet we are alone with the dead in this dismal place.'

'They did not know the mournful details as we do,' replied the young girl.

'And if they did, Fanny, if the touching devotion of this poor boy, the patient suffering, the meekness and death of his mother were written out word for word, act by act, what would the effect be?'

'Men would be interested, touched, excited to benevolence,' replied the kind girl with beautiful earnestness.

'They might be excited to tears, perhaps, but can the details, the whole story of this poor Beggar Boy, appeal more strongly to the sympathies of men than the simple truth, proved and sworn to as set forth in the coroner's inquest.'

A hearse drove to the door, and when the coffins were carried out, Frances Henry arose, folded the cloak about her person, and went forth wiser, more subdued, and far more worthy of love than she had ever been in her life.

Horrible Wastefulness.—It seems that a full grown Buckeye in rather an oblivious and balmy state, tumbled into a stage coach one bright morning beside a traveller, who was 'in pursuit of knowledge,' certainly at that time 'under difficulties.' After the ribbins had been picked up and the 'hosses' received notice to start, the traveller remarked to the newcomer that 'Ohio was a fine country.'

'Ta—hic—ain't nothing else!' hiccoughed the Buckeye.

'What is the staple production, sir?'

'Co-or-orn!'

'Mrs. Arnold,' said a ragged urchin' 'wont you darn my stockings?' 'Darn your stockings!—why don't your mother darn them!' 'She can't get time—she's gone to the sewing circle'

'People should not stop courting when they get married,' says the editor of the Lady's Newspaper; 'on the contrary, they should learn to court the more. This laying aside the little endearments that nursed love into being, the very moment you have sworn to live upon it forever, is almost perjury.'

David Fender, 'popping the question,' in a letter concludes thus—'And should you say yes, dear Mary, I will truly be your D. Fender.

Holden's Dollar Magazine!

Largest! Cheapest!! Best!!!

8 to 20 Splendid wood Engravings each month!

This unrivalled Family Magazine, universally acknowledged by the Press as the best American Periodical published, offers at the commencement of the 3d volume unusual inducements to subscribers. Its features hereafter will be entirely American, including American Views, American Portraits, American Tales, American Sketches. A series of Engravings, from the paintings of our best artists, including Cole, Gignoux, Durand, Edmonds and others, is in vigorous preparation, and the facile pencil of the inimitable Darley is now actively engaged in enriching Holden with his Portraits of the Public Men of America.

The Portraits of Distinguished American Divines will be continued in every No., as heretofore, with life like sketches of their lives and ministry. Each No. will be filled with Tales, Poems, Essays, Reviews, Sketches, Translations, Topics of the Month, and will embrace everything Amusing, Instructive, and Readable now in progress in the world.

As a Family Magazine, the Editor is confident that no rivalry can affect, or opposition lessen its value and worth and he offers it to the world as in tone, character, literary merit, and illustrative beauty, The model Magazine of the Nineteenth Century!

No family in the land can afford to be without Holden in its circle; for when such a periodical can be obtained one year for the trifle of one dollar, who will not wish to subscribe?

The great feature of Holden is, that, while being peculiarly American in sentiment and feeling, it gathers and embodies all the beauties of the French, English and American Periodicals, while discarding their follies and vices. A combination of the Encyclopedia, the Gazetteer the Quarterly Review, and the Weekly Newspaper, it is yet separate and distinct from all, but possessing enough of their various qualifications to commend itself to every reader.

See what the press says of Holden.

* * 'The Editor's table is very rich and amusing—in some respects equal to that of the Knickerbocker.'—[N. Y. Evangelist.

☞ Holden's Dollar Magazine for September is an excellent number. The literary contents are varied and interesting; the sketches of living American Poets and Divines cannot fail of giving the work a very popular character. The Editor's table is lively and piquant, and the book notices copious and candid. We understand the circulation of this Magazine is rapidly increasing —Horace Greely, of the N. Y. Tribune.

Holden's Dollar Magazine.—The September number of this work has been received, and to simply say that it is a valuable publication, would not be doing justice to its merits. It is the best of Magazines and must soon assume its place at the head of the literary Press.—[Democrat, Bloomsbury N. Y.

Holden's Dollar Magazine.—The August No. of this sterling journal is now upon our table. In glancing over its contents we are forcibly struck at the superior arrangement of everything appertaining to Literature and Art.—the articles are all of a high order—far surpassing any-thing that appears in "Graham's," or "Godey's Lady's Book." The typography of the No. before us, is most excellent, vieing in whiteness of paper and clearness and distinctness of type, with any similar work published in the United States.—[Republican, Jackson, Tenn.

Holden's Dollar Magazine is the most interesting introduction of popular literature that we know. The price, as its name implies, is but one dollar a year, and we reccommend everybody to subscribe for it.—Advertiser Lowell, Mass.

'We believe there is no periodical published in America that contains so much choice reading matter and such excellent engravings, for so little money.'—Star, Houston, Texas.

Over three thousand, five hundred similar notices have been received, but these must suffice.

The object of the Editor has been to give a Three Dollar Magazine for one third price, and a glance at Holden's will show the result. Now, he only asks the support of the community, and in return will give improvements as they are demanded.

☞ Now is the time to subscribe, as those sending first will receive the first impressions of the engravings. The No.'s can be furnished from July, 1848 if wished by subscribers—that month commencing the previous volume.

TERMS FOR 1849.—(IN ADVANCE.)

1 copy, one year $1 00. 5 copies, one year $4 00. 20 copies, one year $15 00.

Premium!—Postmasters, or others, sending 20 names and $15 will receive Vol. II of Holden's Magazine, handsomely bound in muslin and gilt-edged! Address (post paid) Charles W. Holden, Mortality.

The house is old, the house is cold,
And on the roof is snow;
And in and out, and round about
The bitter night winds blow:
The bitter night-winds howl and blow
And darkness thickens deep;
And oh, the minutes creep as slow
As though they were asleep.

It used to be all light and song,
And mirth and spiris gay;
The day could never prove too long,
The night seemed like the day!
The night seemed bright and light as day
Ere yet that house was old;
Ere yet its aged roof was gray,
Its inner chambers cold.

Old visions haunt the creaking floors,
Old sorrwos sit and wail;
While still the night winds out of doors
Like burly bailiffs rail!
Old visions haunt the floors above,
The walls with wrinkles frown;
And peope say, who pass that way,
Twere well the walls were down.

From the N. Y. Evangelist.

THE TOILERS.

A FABLE.

BY WM. OLANE BOURNE.

Two English Brothers, dwarfs in size,
That of a noble race were born,
Set out to win a lofty prize
Upon an April's flowery morn.

But no great prize is lightly won,
No lofty point is softly gained—
No Noble task untoiling done—
No high renown for nought attained.

And thus these brothers early found
Their path with toil and trial set,
But to their promise onward bound,
They conqered each as each they met.

Till one, who fainted by the way,
When some great obstacle was seen,
Exclaimed, "I can't wear out the day,
If this must early intervene!"

His brother said, in faith and zeal,
"I'll try what strong resolve can do!"
While in the dust I saw him kneel,
And, kneeling, hurl it out of view.

The sweat scarce wiped away, they spied
A Lion in the narrow path,
When he of faltering courage cried,
"I can't endure the roar he hath!"

"O Brother!" quoth the Lion-Heart,
"Be not of tim'rous soul to-day!
I'll try the noisy foe to start, [slay!"
And thou shalt watch him while I

At eve the long, hard struggle came—
A hill that vexed the weary eye;
But on its top arose a flame
That lit the azure vault on high.

The doubting Hope of one expired—
He said, "I can't attain the top!"
While one with new devotion fired,
Exclaimed, "I'll try—I will not stop!"

And on, alone, with springing feet,
That more elastic grew with hope,
He made o'erhanging crags repeat [slope.
The songs that cheered the mountain-

And soon, as by supernal power—
A giant-hero on the skies—
He won, in evening's placid hour,
His full reward, a deathless prize.

So shall the strong of heart be blessed,
So shall their strength be well renewed;
So they, in Toil's rewarded Rest
Shall find the Ideal they have viewed.

Epigram.

Said Eliza to a reverand dean,
'What reason can be given;
Since marriage is a hoyly thing,
That there is none in Heaven.'

'There are no women,' he replied,
She quick returned the jest;
'Women there are, but I'm afraid,
They cannot find a priest!'

H.—Four of the sweetest words in the English language begin with H—Heart, Hope, Happiness, and Heaven. Heart is a hope-place, and home is a heart place; and that man sadly mistakes, who would exchange the happiness of home for anything less than heaven.

FIRST PIANO IN ILLINOIS.

. . . . . During the summer following the termination of the Black Hawk war—being one of the first of the down east emigrants, Dr. A. of Baltimore, removed to what has since become a small town near the Illinois river, by the name of P———. The Doctor's family was composed of three young ladies and his wife, all of whom were performers on the piano—and one of them the possessor of the instrument in question.

As is usually the case in all newly settled places when a 'new comer' makes his first appearance, the neighbors (that were to be) had collected together for the purpose of seeing the Doctor's 'plunder' unpacked, and making the acquaintance of its possessor.

Dr. A.'s 'household' was stowed away in seven large wagons—being first packed in pine boxes, on which were painted in large black letters, the contents, address, &c.

One wagon after another was unloaded without much sensation on the part of the crowd of lookers on, except an occasional exclamation similar to the following from those who had 'never seen the like before':

''Glass! This side up with care!'—Why, I thought this ere was a Doctor!—What on yearth is he going to do with that box full of winders!'

''This side up with care!'' exclaimed one. 'He's got his paregoric and ile-of-spike fixins in that.. Won't he fizic them agur fellers down on the river!'

In the last wagon there was but one large box, and on it were printed the words 'Piano forte—keep dry and handle carefully.' It required the assistance of all the bystanders to unload this box, and the curiosity excited in the crowd upon reading the foregoing words, and hearing the musical sounds emitted as it struck the ground, can only be gathered by giving a few of the expressions that dropped from the spectators.

'Pine fort!' said a tall, yellow-haired, fever and ague looking youth; wonder if he afeered of the Injuns? He can't scare them with a pine fort.'

'K-ee-p d-r-y' was spelled by a large, rawboned man, who was evidently a liberal patron of 'old bald face,' and who broke off at the letter 'y' with 'Cuss your temp'rance karacturs—you needn't come round here with your tracts!'

He was interrupted at this point by a stout built personage, who cried out—

'He's got his skeletons in thar, and he is afeered to give them licker, for they'll break out if he does! Poor fellers! they must suffer powerfully.

'Handle carefully,' said a man in a hunting shirt, the size of whose fist as he doubled it up was full twice that of an ordinary man. 'Thar's some live critter in thar. Don't you hear him groan?' This was said as the box struck the ground and the concussion caused a vibration of the strings.

No sooner had all hands let go of the box, than Dr. A. was beseiged by his neighbors, all of whom were determined to know what were its contents, and what was the meaning of the words 'piano forte.' On his telling them that it was a musical instrument, some 'reckoned that it would take a tarnal sight of wind to blow it;' others that 'it would take a lot of men to make it go,' &c. The Doctor explained its operations as well as he could, but still his description was anything but satisfactory, and he could only get rid of his inquisitive neighbors by promising a sight at an early day.

Three days—days that seemed like weeks to the persons before mentioned—elapsed before the premises of Dr. A. were arranged for the reception of visitors; and various and curious were the surmises among the settlers during this time. Dr. A. and his 'plunder' were the only topics of conversation for miles around. The Doctor's house had but one lower room, but this was one of double the ordinary size, and the carpets were all too small to cover the entire floor; hence a strip of bare floor appeared at each side of the room. Opposite to and facing the door was placed the 'pine fort.' All was ready for the admission of visitors, and Miss E. was to act as the first performer. The Doctor had but to open the door, and half a score of men were ready to enter. Miss E. took her seat: at the first sounding of the instrument, the whole party present rushed in. Some went directly up to the 'crittur,' as it had been called on account of its having four legs—some, more shy, remained close to the door, where, if necessary, they could more easily make their escape; while others, who had never seen a carpet, were observed walking round on the strip of bare floor, lest by treading on the 'handsome kaliker' they might spoil it!

The first tune seemed to put the whole company in extacies. The rawboned man, who was so much opposed to temperance tracts, pulled out a flask of whiskey, and insisted that the 'gal' as he called Miss E. should drink. Another of the company laid down a dime, and wanted 'that's worth' more of the 'forty pains'—as the name of the instrument had come to him after traveling through some five or six pronunciations. Another with a broad grin on his face, declared that he would give his claim and all the truck on it, if his 'darter' could have such a cupboard! The 'pine fort' man suggested that if that sort of music had been employed in the Black Hawk war, 'they would have skeered the Injuns like all holler!'

It is needless to say that it was late at night before Miss E. and the other ladies of the house could satisfy their delighted hearers that they were all 'tired out.'—The whole country for twenty miles around rung with the praises of Dr. A.'s 'consarns' and the 'musikel kubburd.'—The Doctor immediately had any quantity of patients—all of whom, however, would come in person for advice, or for a few excellent 'agur pills,' but none of whom would leave without hearing the 'forty pains.'

With an easy way and a good natured disposition, Dr. A. soon formed an extensive acquaintance, obtained a good practice, and became a popular man. He was elevated to some of the most responsible offices in the gift of the people—one of which he held at the time of his death. So much for the charms of a piano forte!

WEDDINGS.---A learned writer says, in speaking of weddings, that 'none but a parent feels upon occasions like this.'

And the bride, gazing with filial and grateful spirit upon the faces of those under whose paternal kindness she has been fostered, still trembling at the magnitude and irrevocability of the step she has taken, and which must give a color to the whole of her future existence. Then turning her eyes upon her new-made husband, with a glance which seemed to say, 'and now I must look for husband, parent, all in you,' the reciprocal glances re-assure her; she drinks in confidence and reliance as her eyes bend beneath his; a thousand new feelings agitate her bosom; the anticipation gets the better of recollection. The future for a moment banishes the past, and she feels secured on the new throne she has erected for herself in the heart of the man to whom she has confided her happiness; her all.'

ABOUT SOMETHING IN BUFFALO.—They have in Buffalo a new and very beautiful Episcopal church, which we remember surveying with pleasure, outside and in, last summer, in company with a friend. We have recently heard an amusing circumstances connected with the figures in stained glass in the great eastern window. The process of baking in the colors was a slow one, and the glazier, becoming impatient after a long delay, went to the artist, to ascertain how far the pictures—which were those of St. Peter and St. Paul—were advanced. The artst replied to his query: 'I've got a first-rate bake on Paul; but Peter ins't more than half baked, and I'm afraid he is a little cracked!' It sounded oddly enough to his interrogator.

A schoolmaster in Vermont, lately recommended to his pupils a very fine edition of Combe on the head.

SIMPLE DIVISION.—We heard a story the other night on the subject of 'Division,' that we thought 'some' at the same; and never having seen it in print, we are tempted to give our readers the benefit of it.

A southern planter, named P. pretty well to do in the world now, was some twenty years ago a poor boy on the eastern shore of Maryland. One of the strongest and most marked traits of his character was an inordinate love of money. This, however, is a characteristic of the people of 'them diggins,' where they practice skinning strangers during brisk seasons, and skinning one another during dull times. In due course of time P. was of age, and thought it about time to get married. He went to a neighboring village, and in the course of events was introduced to a daughter of Judge B.

'Dang fine gal,' said the embryo speculator to the friend who was gaining him an entrance among the elite.

'Very.'

'How much might Judge B. be worth?'

'Why about ten thousand,' was the reply.

'And how many children has Judge B?' continued the inquirer.

'Only three.'

'Three into ten goes three times and a third over,' mentally cyphered P. Here was a chance---a glorious chance, and he improved it too. He made love to the beautiful and unsophisticated daughter of the judge, with all the variations. Strange to say (for he was as uncouth a looking cub as ever went unlicked) his suit prospered, and they were married.

The honeymoon passed off, as all other honeymoons do, and they were happy. The bride was lively and chatty, and often made allusions to her brothers and sisters. Startled at a number of names he thought should not be in the catalogue of relations, one evening at tea, he said,

'My dear, I thought there was only three of you.'

'Very right, by my ma; but pa's first wife had eight more.'

'Eleven go into ten no times and nary one over!' said the astonished P. who jumped up, kicked over the chair, and groaned, in perfect agony, 'I'm sold! I'm sold! a great sight cheaper than an old bell wether sheep, at that!'

HEAVEN ON EARTH.—There are earthly Paradises, and they are inhabited by earthly angels; these are places rendered paradisical by the angelic nature of their people. Probably the most perfect of those terrestial states that constitute the heaven here and give a foretaste of a heaven hereafter, is found in that domestic circle where amiable tempers prevail. There is nothing so conducive to happiness in its choicest abode, the family relation, as mild, patient, bearing and forgiving minds. Home, be it in a palace, or 'ever so homely,' is just what we make it; and it is in the ability of nearly all who have homes, to render them heavens on this earth. Says a writer on domestic life, How sweet is the influence exerted by a mild and sunny disposition! Look at the family where there is a daughter and sister, who is kind-hearted and cheerful—who never suffers her angry feelings to rise—how much it resembles heaven.—Such a temper allays the bad passions—soothes the harsh feelings and sheds a glorious influence all round. The poet Epicharnus seems to consider almost the whole responsibility of making home a heaven or its opposite, as resting on the shoulders of woman. We cannot endorse quite so broad an idea, but in the following strain of his, there are certain facts indicated to which all will assent:

Marriage is like
A cast of dice! Happy, indeed his lot
Who gets a good wife, one of morals pure
And withal easy temper; but alight on
A gadding, gossiping, expensive jade,
And heaven deliver thee!

'What a beautiful place heaven is' exclaimed a little boy. 'Why do you think so? asked his father. 'Because,' said he, alluding to the stars, 'the nails in the floor are so beautiful.'

PLAINFIELD GAZETTE.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Thursday, January, 11, 1849.

THE PLAINFIELD GAZETTE.—Thankful for the encouragement we have thus far received, we shall by perseverance and industry endeavour to make the Gazette worthy of the patronage of the citizens of Plainfield; and also of all those in any way connected with the prosperity of our beautiful Village.

Although professing to publish a Democratic Journal, we would not thereby be understood as advocating party democracy, but democraey for the whole people.—We do not claim the exclusive support of any party, but of all, whether known as Democrats or as Whigs. It is not so much the name as the principles of democracy we would wish to see flourishing, not only over our own beloved country but throughout the world.

Our democracy is not bounded by the narrow views of party, neither by the bounderies of our State or Country. We do most earnestly sympathise with the oppressed of all nations: indeed to a truly republican heart, the emancipation of the people of Europe from the tyrany of their Kings and Priests excites a most lively interest. It is the sincere prayer of thousands of our countrymen that they may persevere unto the end: with a will to do, perseverance is the thing most needed, having commenced the glorious work they should never look back; a thousand deaths is preferable to an ignominious slavery; the seed of the tree of liberty has been sown and taken deep root in our soil, may it continue to flourish and spread its ever-green branches over all the nations of the earth.

There is no doubt that men of all parties, disconnected from the interest of party and its influences, would always act for the best interests of their country.

Democratic principles do not belong exclusively to any party; but of the two great parties heretofore existing by the names of Whig and Democrat—although as we before remarked it is not in a name, nevertheless we believe that the fundamental principles of that party known as the Democratic party have heretofore been and now are the nearest to what all men aside from the influence of party must acknowledge to be democratic principles.

We will name a few of these.—The absolute right of the majority to govern.—The rights of all men who can spell b-a-k-e-r to vote, or in other words universal suffrage; no special laws for the benefit of the few, at the expense of the many, but the sacred right of all to equally participate in the benefits of any and every law; no citizen owes alleigance to any law that he has not had a voice in creating. The fewer laws the better, no laws that do not allow all men the same priviliges upon complying with the same conditions; and as we were once all foreigners, that all foreigners should have the right upon declaring their intentions to become citizens and taking the oath to support the constitution, should at the shortest possible period be acknowledged citizens, to sum up in few words, the absolute right of all men to political, social, and religious equality. These principles shall be our guide through all the various phazes of political parties; may the spirit of the sires of seventy-six guide us while we watch the first encroachments on the liberties of the people.

We are indepted to the Hon. Wm. L. Dayton, and Hon. J. W. Miller for valuable public documents for which, they will please except our thanks.

Legislature.

From an examination of the list of applications to our Legislature, which we have not room to copy, we perceive there are applications for almost every thing the mind of man can invent.—Why legislative action is neccessary to erect a Temperance House, Hall, and Market, and a thousand other equally important matters is more than we can conceive; it is just as necessary to have an act of incorporation to eat, sleep, black your boots, or cook your dinner. How long will the people suffer these things; will they remain content to pay men to pass laws which are a curse to the country. It is time the laboring man took more interest in the selection of those who are to make our laws; we have to many professional men in our legislative halls, it is time the labouring man, the mechanic, the farmer, were more properly represented there by some of their own number; until this is done they must expect laws made prejudicial to their interests. If Gen. Taylor, who has allways been a soldier, and nothing else but a soldier, is capable of filling the presidential chair, certainly the working men can find some of their own class who are capable of representing their interest: we have not room to enlarge: but more anon.

We understand that a State Convention is shortly to be held in our State for the purpose of secureing the repeal of laws authorizing temporary residents to hold slaves in this state, and requiring or authorizing our officers to assist in the arrest of persons claimed as fugitive slaves.—This matter was prought before the Legislature at its last session, but the Judiciary Committee of the House reported adversely to the petition. and cousequently no action was had in relation to it

THIRTIETH CONGRESS.

Second Session.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3, 1849.

SENATE.—The Resolution submitted yesterday by Mr. Baldwin, relating to treaties and laws for reciprocal or joint trade with foreign nations, was taken up, and after being briefly discussed, was passed.

The joint Resolution, providing for the advance of three month's extra pay to certain officers and soldiers who served in the late war with Mexico, came up for consideration, and on motion was referrad to the Committe on Military Affairs.

Mr. BREESE moved to take up the bill providing for the settlement of titles, and surveying lands in the territories of California and New-Mexico, which was adopted, when the bill was read and informally passed over.

HOUSE.—Mr. J. R. INGERSOLL, from the Judiciary Committe. reported a resolution authorizing the Clerk of the House to purchase 20,000 copies of Hickey's Constitution at $1 60 each.

Mr. JONES of Tenn opposed the object of the resolution as extravagant.

Jan. 4.

SENATE.—Sundry petitions were presented to-day, among which was one by Mr. John A. Dix of N. Y. with 94 signatures, praying for the Reduction of Postage.

Mr. CAMERON of Pa. presented another, signed by a large number of persons, praying for a Modifiication of the present Tariff.

Jan. 8.

SENATE.—Mr. HALE presented a petition against the extension of Slavery to new States, and for abolishing Slavery and the slave trade wherever Congress has the jurisdiction.

The question of reception was laid on the table.

HOUSE.—It was announced on Saturday that the Bill for the relief of Antonio Pacheco for his lost slave, was rejected. The vote stood 89 to 89. Mr. Farrell, whose name had been omitted, was allowed to have it recorded in the negative. Several questions were asked and answered with a view to get the bill again before the House, but Mr. Giddings raised a question that this being a privete Bill, it must go over in private bill day.

Jan. 9.

SENATE.—James Cooper, Whig was elected on the third ballot a U. S. Senator from Pennsylvania, for 6 years from the fourth of March next, in place of Simeon Cameron whose time then expires; Richard Broadhead had 62; Cooper 66; Thadeus Stephens 3.

A report of the Chairman of the judiciary committee to the admission of California as a state is adverse, and the subject for the present was postponed.

The Cholera, &c.

The Picayune of the 28th says;

From all that we can learn, the Cholera is decidedly on the decrease. The hospital report does not show the amendment in the health of the city which physicians and the Howard Association say is manifest. Several arrivals from sea keep up the cases in the Charity Hospital, but the disease in private practice is more managable, owing, to the fact, as we believe, that people have more rational views respecting it. The disease has not spread among temperate and careful citizens. It is entirely manageable when taken in season, and there is not the slightest reason for the continuance of the excitement and alarm which have prevailed.

Four deaths by Cholera had occurred at Cincinnatti Jan. 8th, no new cases. It is gradually disappearing from New-Orleans By news received at Baltimore from Houstan and Port Lavaca, at the former place 12 were dying per day, and at the latter 135 persons had died.

CALIFORNIA.—It is currently rumored that the Government at Washington has received dispatches from California later than those already published, which more than confirm former accounts of the richness of the Gold Mines.—Indeed it is asserted that the extravagance of the language used in the dispatches is the cause assigned for withholding them from the public.

FOUR DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

Arrival of the Washington, &c.

FRANCE.

The accounts received in town to-day give Louis Napoleon a clear majority of four millions over Cavaignac.

As a proof of Louis Naphleon's disposition to please all parties, he has placed Lamartine's name as one of his choosing for the Vice-Presidency.

Dissension already appears in Louis Napoleon's Camp; Victor Hugo has withdrawn.

The New Ministry.

The new President was to be proclaimed at the Hotel de Ville on the 21st of December, and the new Cabinet afterward, definitely constituted, it was generally supposed, as follows:

M. Odillon Barrot, President of the Council.

M. de Suys' Foreign affairs.

E. de Malleville, Interior.

M. Passy, Finance.

M. Leon Faucher Public Works.

Gen. Ruhlies or General Oudinot, Minister of War.

Some changes would probably take place, and a variety of reports were in circulation.

ENGLAND.

Accounts from Siam via. England notice the death of Mr. Caswell, an American Missionary.

On the trial of Mr. Duffy little can be known, seeing that the judges have ordered that none of the proceedings shall be reported until after the close of the trial.

ROME.

The Alba of Florence of the 10th, however, states that the Pope had consented to receive the deputation at Gaeta.

PRUSSA.

The arrest of the Editor of the Westphalian Mercury the Referendary Loher, gave rise to an alarming riot at Paderborn. Barricades were erected in various places, but chiefly for the purpose of preventing any father attacks on the part of the military, who had employed unnecessary violence in dispersing the crowd assembled before the prison inwhich Herr Loher was detained.

AUSTRIA.

Our Vienna dispatches of the 14th of Dec. inform us that a Russian fleet has appeared off Trieste for the purpose of suppressing the liberties of the Venetians by a blockade of the city.

A Battle on the Frontier.

On the night of the 12th was heard a heavy cannonade from the Hungarian frontiers, in the direction of Hainburn, and the next morning a number of wounded were brought in from that quarter. This clearly indicate that an engagement has taken place with the Hungarians. It was already reported that Presburg was occupied by the imperial troops.

Pensylvania Message.

The Message of Governor Johnston is one of those singularly contradictory documents so characteristic of Whig politics. It contains many good points, and strives hard to generalize the absurd and conflicting notions of whiggery, and reconcile them with common sense. He pays a deserved tribute to the memory of Gov. Shunk, and advises a change in the Constitution in relation to the mode of supplying a vacancy, similar to that mentionby Governor Fish. A large portion of the Message is taken up with the financial affairs of the State. It appears that the debt is $40,424,736.

It will be remembered that this most onerous debt was imposed upon Pensylvania by her connection with the Bank system, and selling privilages to banks, (particularly the late United States Bank,) and that the people of Pensylvania have, under Gov. Shunk, for years refused to charter any of those pestilent institutions. Gov. Johnston now proposes, in effect, fo sell them all new charters, and with the proceeds of this corruption, establisha sinking fund for the redemption of the debt, from which he declares Pensylvania must be relieved, while in the next paragraph, he advises borrowing $1,000,000 more to complete the North Branch Canal!

He then indulges in a reiteration of all the old absurdities about the exploded 'home market,' endeavor to show that to give capitalists a monopoly of a market is a benefit to the consumers of goods. He then advises the alteration of the law 'restraining labor,' so as to prevent special contracts between individuals to labor longer than the law allows. He will propose a law to prevent work people from sitting upon anything but velvet cushions, or eating anything but roast turkey, but unless he provides a law to furnish those articles, the 'work people' may not be able to sit or eat at all.—True Sun.

For the Gazette.

Remember the Poor.

At the present moment these words are peculiarly applicable. It is a time of bitter trial. to the destitute. It is a dreadful thing to be straitened at any season; but now, in addition to other ills, the severe cold is a dreadful trial which must be encountered by the poor.

It is true that to those who have everything to make life desirable—who are clothed in fine linen, and fare sumptuously every day—the present is a time of rejoicing. What matters it to them though the rains fall and the winds roar, and the earth be covered with a mantle of snow? Do they not reside in houses on which large sums have been lavished that their occupants might not feel the slightest effect of the raging elements without? Look at those double doors and windows! How well contrived to exclude the damp and cold. Enter this dwelling—this palace, I might say—and see the means which wealth employs to minister to the comfort of its fortunate possessor. No sooner do you pass the threshold than you feel the influence of a cheerful fire. The sons and daughters of affluence must have a fire in the hall lest they take cold in passing from the parlor to the dining room. Pass into any of the drawing rooms, and behold the appliances of luxury. You are almost afraid to walk on the soft and costly Turkey carpet which covers the floor, and which yields to your tread like a feather. Behold the sofas, the mirrors, the paintings, the tables, the curtains, the chairs; all made of the most costly material and by the best artists and mechanics. Splendid as are these things, one can hardly realise that the articles of furniture in this single room have cost enough to have purchased a farm of considerable size.

Do the happy(?) tenants of this splendid mansion desire to ride out? The wish is only uttered and a carriage of the most costly description rolls up to the door. The well bred footman spreads a carpet down the steps and to the side of the carriage that the lady may not catch cold in crossing the pavement. What is it to her that the air is keen? Is she not comfortably dressed, and half buried beneath the load of costly furs which envelope her delicate form? Is not the carriage of the most approved construction, with cushions of down? Can she not, think you, ride a mile or two in this way without knowing anything of the biting air which pinches her poorly clad neighbor who is obliged to go abroad on foot? Ah, if the lady in the carriage but knew half how much the woman on foot suffers with the cold, if she felt one-half that love to God of which she talks, how eagerly would she offer to assist her on her journey! But she has no idea that any one suffers with the cold. Oh, no! She is surrounded with everything which makes life pleasant and desirable, and she does not stop to ask if all others are comfortable.

But it is not only the wealthy who are indifferent to the wants of the poor. The great mass of mankind are neglectful of their duty in this important particular. The number of the poor, although comparatively small in this country, is much larger than is generally supposed. It is true, the number who are dependent on our towships for support is not very large; but I hope that no one will for a moment suppose that all, or even a large part, of those who need help, apply for it to our overseers of the poor. Those who understand the matter--who are conversant with the sorrows and sufferings of the poor, know that hundreds of the most needy never apply to the authorities for relief. Oh ye, who pay taxes for the support of the poor, and do not seek out the children of want and administer to their necessities, do not flatter yourselves that you have done your whole duty to the poor. Do not imagine that the Master, when he comes to a settlement with you, will say "I was hungry—and ye ministered unto me." If you expect to listen to his commendation you must visit the widow and fatherles in their affliction, and minister to their wants. It will not avail you to say that you was ignorant of their sufferings. This is too much like Cain's answer—"Am I my brother's keeper?"—You are bound to know whether any one in your neigborhood suffers for the necessaries of life. We are all dependent on the bounty of our Creator: and therefore we will be held accountable for the destitution of any among us. We are all the children of a bountiful Father, and the only return we can make for his kindness is to receive his favors with thankful hearts, and relieve the wants of his poor children, who are our brethren. This is the great duty of life—the only return we can offer which will be received.

The poor! How many who read these lines hardly know the meaning of the word! We often hear a family called poor because they do not dress very good, and because their houses are not very well furnished. And yet, perhaps, they live comfortably, and enjoy themselves as well as their more whealthy neighbors. If everybody were as happy as they, there would be but little distress or suffering. If you are not acquainted with any one really poor, step with me into this—house, I had like to have said, but that would not be a proper use of words.—Step with me into this ruined building; it was once a shop, but it is now almost unfit to shelter swine. Here a widow and her children, four in number, make their home! Do not suppose that, because they are now wretched, they have not once been comfortable and happy. Mary S. was the daughter of a farmer in very good circumstances. She was married when quite young to a man by the name of A——, (no, I suppress the name as I do not wish her to know that I have alluded to her.) A. was a watch-maker by trade; a good workman, and for a few years they were prosperous and happy. But the husband became a lover of strong drink; his business was neglected, and in a short time they became quite poor. Mary's father died about this time, and the property left to her was soon dissipated by her worthless husband, who now became a complete sot. In a short time he was very abusive to his family, and at length Mary with her children took refuge from his assaults by fleeing to the house of a neighbor. In a few days A. died drunk and alone. Mary has shrunk from making application to the town for assistance; and if her health had remained good, she would have done quite well without help. She has at last been obliged to make her case known; but because she will not go to the "Poor House" the authorities will only allow her 50 cents per week! Having now learned the history of the widow and her orphan children, look around upon the marks of their suffering. Mary has become so weak from want of proper food that she can hardly walk alone. Her dress—although thin, and utterly insufficient to make her comfortable—is scrupulously clean. The children have so long been stinted in their food that they look wan and wretched. Let us draw near the fire, for the weather is piercing cold. The fire! Ye who warm yourselves before a blazing wood fire on the hearths of your happy homes, know nothing of one of the greatest wants of the poor—a fire. A basket of shavings, occasionally, is all the fuel they have. Does not everything here remind you of the widow and her son—the Beggar Boy's home—in the beautiful story of Mrs. Stephens, published in The Gazette of last week. Those who have not read that story should do so at once; and those who have read it, should heed its teachings.

What a comment on the professions of a Christian community are such cases as this! It is an easy task for a wealthy lady to pray for the poor—to wish that there was no suffering in the world—to sign a subscription for their relief, if it is presented by some one whose good opinion she desires to gain—all this she does and thinks she has done her duty. And yet her poor sister—(the child of the same heavenly Parent, redeemed by the same Saviour, and passing through a probationary state to the same heaven)—lives but a hundred or two yards from her mansion, in a state of great destitution! I would not shut heaven's gate against any, but it will be only through abundant mercy that the rich lady is not answered as the rich man was answered by Abraham,—"Remember that thou in thy lifetime receivedest thy good things, and likewise Lazarus evil things: but now he is comforted, and thou art tormented."

If I had not already extended this article to a great length, I would say something of the blessedness of doing good. The words of inspiration are felt by the benevolent to be strictly true, "It is more blessed to give than to receive". If the rich, generally, knew the heartfelt joy which flows from charitable acts, the heart of the destitute would often be to leap for joy. J.

There were in New York, last week, 287 deaths, of which 141 were children.

Gen. Cass is expected in Washington next week.

An exchange paper tells the following capital anecdote of an Irishman. The other day some of the workmen on the new hotel in Flushing, N. Y., were in want of a short ladder, when it was recolected that there were two spliced togather, and standing against the building. Two Irishmen were directed to unsplice the ladder. Instead of lowering them to the ground, and there performing the work, they ascended, and upon the upper ladder commenced the operation of unloosing the fastenings. The consequence may be easily foresern. The upper ladder, with two sons of St. Patric upon it, came down 'ker-thump,' landing Teddy and Pat into a bed below, very happily causing them no other injury than a severe fright. The idea of standing on the lower ladder did not strike them until they struck their heads in the 'morther.'

SHORT ACQUAINTANCE.—'Did you know Dr Weir?' asked an inquisitive gentleman in one of the Philadelphia cars, of a Northampion county Dutchman.

'Dr. Veer?' he replied, 'well, den, yass, I know'd him a little. I seed him once-t. We was on dat shteamboat vat vash plowed up mit te p'iler bu'stin' by Pittsburg dere; and w'en I vash going on de shore by de plank, he and de shmoke pipe vash commin' down. I never seed him before nor since:'

CLASSICAL.—Before leaving Troy, King Menealus offered his daughter as a victim to the gods, in order to win propitious breezes for the voyages home. We are reminded of this in modern society, when we hear of some matchmaking parent sacrificing his daughter to 'raise the wind.'

The object of all ambition should be to be happy at home. If we are not happy there we cannot be happy elsewhere It is the best proof of the virtues of a family circle, to see a happy fireside.

As among wise men, he is the wisest who thinks he knows the least; so among fools, he is the greatesr who thinks he knows the most.

THE WAY TO DISPENSE WITH READING. A boy at school had such an aversion to his letters that his teacher was about to give up in despair. Before doing so, however, he asked him what he could expect to be fit for when he grew up. 'Oh,' answered the boy, 'I will be schoolmaster and let the boys read for me.'

A rogue asked charity on pretense of being dumb A lady having asked him with equal simplisity and humanity, how long he had been dumb he was thrown off his guard and answered 'from birth, madam.' 'Poor fellow,' said the lady, and gave him a dollar.

A PUZZLE.—Hood once said, that phrenologist have never satisfactorily accounted for the fact, tha when a man is puzzled he scratches his head.

'Ain't it too wicked to rob a hen roost Jim?'

'That's a great moral question, Sam, we have no time to argue it; hand another pullet.'

Whenever I hear a married man say that he can't save money, I am sure that his wife is a fool, wears feathers and dresses her girls after the fashion.—[Benjamin Franklin.

Never be cast down or irritated by trifles. If a spider breaks his thread twenty times, he will mend it twenty times, without the least irritability or impatience. What a lesson or reproof to poor human nature!

A man may as well expect to be at ease without health, as happy without virtue.

Hear not ill of a friend, nor speak ill of an enemy. Believe not all you hear, nor report all you believe.

Be always at leasure to do good: never make buisness an excuse to decline the the offices of humanity.

PRESERVING APPLES.—'Lock them up in a dry cellar, and hide the key,' says a contemporary.

THE

AMERICAN METROPOLITAN,

Devoted to American Literature and Art.

Edited by WILLIAM LANDON.

And composed of Contributions from the most Eminent Writers of the Country; Together with

SPLENDID ENGRAVINGS,

Executed by the first Artists, from Original Designs made expressly for this Periodical, by celebrated American Painters, generally illustrative of some point in the History of our Country, or peculiar feature in American character.

THE LETTER-PRESS

Will be profusely illustrated by numerous wood Engravings, executed in the best manner by Engravers of note from ORIGINAL DESIGNS. These Wood Cuts will not be caricatures of the Art so often presented, which have served to create a distaste for this artistic style of engraving; but will be executed by eminent engravers who have been employed at liberal prices to ensure the production of the best specimens of their skill.

A new feature in this Magazine will be a Serial Illustration of

THE LIFE OF WASHINGTON;

To be continued through twelve numbers. The pictures to be made expressly for this Magazine, by T. H. MATTESON, whose "Spirit of '76," "First Prayer in Congress," &c. &c. have already stamped him pre-eminent as an Historical Painter.

The text descriptive of these paintings will be from the powerful pen of J. T. HEADLEY, the well known author of "Napoleon and His Marshalls," "Washington and His Generals," &c. &c. making when completed, the ever given to the Public.

The determination to produce a monthly periodical which shall be eminently American and exclusively original in every department, we feel assured will meet the approbation of a liberal Public, and its practical fulfilment secure a patronage indicative of the warm interest which is universally taken in this country for the advance of American Literature and Art.

MARRIED.

On the 7th inst. by Rev. J O. Rogers, Mr. JOEL R. BRIANT, to MISS. ABIGAIL M. TERRY, both of Plainfield.

Dec. 31st, by Rev. R. B. Westbrook, John Faulks, to Mary Conklin, all of Elizabethtown.

DIED.

Dec. 29th, in Elizabethtown, William B. Vreeland, aged 25 years.

UNDERTAKING IN GENERAL.

IT is an old maxim "a bird in the hand is worth two in the bush," ie. an advantage, to the Public to have Coffins ready made, of all sizes and descriptions, trimmed and polished in the latest styles. The undersigned having been connected with the undertaking and furnishing business for five years, (having furnished five hundred Coffins in that time,) We would refer to our former patrons that the public may be satisfied we have given entire satisfaction in every case; also having had private instruction from the most experienced undertaker in the city of New York in his styles of making and trimming; We now flatter ourselves, we are prepared to give entire satisfaction to the Citizens of Plainfield and vicinity.

We have been to considerable expense in fitting up, that none may be disappointed we would respectfully solicil the Public generally to give us a call before purchasing elsewhere.

J. W. S. MARTIN, Principal.

Also, Cabinet, Chair, & Sofa,

MANUFACTORY.

We would inform the Citizens of Plainfield and vicinity that we have from a thousand to fifteen hundred dollars worth of ready made Furniture on hand, consisting of Black Walnut, Maple, and Mahogony, to suit the taste, and pocket.

Our motto is Cheap for the "Chemicals."

Thankful for the encouragement we have already received; having had a perfect rush ever since we refused that proposal which was directly opposed to the peoples interests: We are going through the world on our own hook, without any incumbrance.

CAUTION EXTRA

A man by the name of CLAPP has engaged with a young man of the name of S. P. Townsend, and uses his name to put up a Sarsaparilla, which they call Dr. Townsend's Sarsaparilla, denominating it GENUINE, Original, etc. This Townsend is no doctor, and never was; but was formerly a worker on railroads, canals, and the like. Yet he assumes the title of Dr., for the purpose of gaining credit for what he is not. This is to caution the public not to be deceived, and purchase none but the GENUINE ORIGINAL OLD Dr. Jacob Townsend's Sarsaparilla, having on it the Old Dr's. likeness, his family coat of arms, and his signature across the coat of arms.

Principal Office, 102 Nassau-st., New York City

OLD DR. JACOB TOWNSEND,

THE ORIGINAL DISCOVERER OF THE

Genuine Townsend Sarsaparilla.

Old Dr. Townsend is now about 70 years of age, and has long been known as the AUTHOR and DISCOVERER of the GENUINE ORIGINAL "TOWNSEND SARSAPARILLA." Being poor, he was compelled to limit its manufacture, by which means it has been kept out of market, and the sales circumscribed to those only who had proved its worth, and known its value. It had reached the ears of many, nevertheless, as those persons who had been healed of sore diseases, and saved from death, proclaimed its excellence and wonderful

HEALING POWER.

Knowing, many years ago, that he had, by his skill, science and experience, devised an article which would be of incalculable advantage to mankind when the means would be furnished to bring it into universal notice, when its inestimable virtues would be known and appreciated. This time has come, the means are supplied; this GRAND AND UNEQUALLED PREPARATION is manufactured on the largest scale, and is called for throughout the length and breadth of the land, especially as it is found incapable of degeneration or deterioration.

Unlike young S. P. Townsend's, it improves with age, and never changes, but for the better: because it is prepared on scientific principles by a scientific man. The highest knowledge of Chemistry, and the latest discoveries of the art, have all been brought into requisition in the manufacture of the Old Dr's Sarsaparilla. The Sarsaparilla root, it is well known to medical men, contains many medicinal properties, and some properties which are inert or useless, and others, which if retained in preparing it for use, produce fermentation and acid, which is injurious to the system. Some of the properties of Sarsaparilla are so volatile, that they entirely evaporate and are lost in the preparation, if they are not preserved by a scientific process, known only to those experienced in its manufacture. Moreover, these volatile principles, which fly off in vapor, or as an exhalation, under heat, are the very essential medical properties of the root, which give to it all its value.

Any person can boil or stew the root till they get a dark-colored liquid, which is more from the coloring matter in the root than from any thing else: they can then strain this insipid or vapid liquid, sweeten with sour molasses, and then call it "SARSAPARILLA EXTRACT or SYRUP." But such is not the article known as the

GENUINE OLD DR. JACOB TOWNSEND'S SARSAPARILLA.

This is so prepared, that all the inert properties of the Sarsaparilla root are first removed, every thing capable of becoming acid or of fermentation, is extracted and rejected; then every particle of medical virtue is secured in a pure and concentrated form; and thus it is rendered incapable of losing any of its valuable and healing properties. Prepared in this way, it is made the most powerful agent in the

Cure of innumerable diseases.

Hence the reason why we hear commendations on every side in its favor by men, women, and children. We find it doing wonders in the cure of

CONSUMPTION, DYSPEPSIA, and LIVER COMPLAINT, and in RHEUMATISM, SCROFULA, PILES, COSTIVENESS, all CUTANEOUS ERUPTIONS, PIMPLES, BLOTCHES, and all affections arising from

IMPURITY OF THE BLOOD.

It possesses a marvellous efficacy in all complaints arising from Indigestion, from Acidity of the Stomach, from unequal circulation, determination of blood to the head, palpitation of the heart, cold feet and hands, cold chills and hot flashes over the body. It has not its equal in Colds and Coughs; and promotes easy expectoration and gentle perspiration, relaxing strictures in the lungs, throat, and every other part.

But in nothing is its excellence more manifestly seen and acknowledged than in all kinds and stages of

FEMALE COMPLAINTS.

It works wonders in cases of Fluor Albus or Whites, Falling of the Womb, Obstructed, Suppressed, or Painful Menses, Irregularity of the menstrual periods, and the like; and is as effectual in curing all the forms of Kidney Diseases.

By removing obstructions, and regulating the general system, it gives tone and strength to the whole body, and thus cures all forms of

Nervous diseases and debility,

and thus prevents or relieves a great variety of other maladies, as Spinal irritation, Neuralgia, St. Vitus' Dance Swooning, Epileptic Fits, Convulsions, &c.

It cleanses the blood, excites the liver to healthy action, tones the stomach, and gives good digestion, relieves the bowels of torpor and constipation, allays inflammation, purifies the skin, equalises the circulation of the blood, producing gentle warmth equally all over the body, and the insensible perspiration; relaxes all strictures and tightness, removes all obstructions, and invigorates the entire nervous system. Is not this then

The medicine you pre-eminently need?

But can any of these things be said of S. P. Townsend's inferior article? This young man's liquid is not to be

COMPARED WITH THE OLD DR'S,

because of one GRAND FACT, that the one is INCAPABLE of DETERIORATION, and

NEVER SPOILS,

while the other DOES; sourings, fermenting, and blowing the bottles containing it into fragments; the sour, acid liquid exploding and damaging other goods! Must not this horrible compound be poisonous to the system?—What! put acid into a system already diseased with acid! What causes Dyspepsia but acid? Do we not all know that when food sours in our stomachs, what mischiefs it produces? flatulence, heartburn, palpitation of the heart, liver complaint, diarrhœa, dysentery, colic, and corruption of the blood! What is Scrofula but an acid humor in the body? What produces all the humors which bring on Eruptions of the Skin, Scald Head, Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, White Swellings, Fever Sores, and all ulcerations internal and external? It is nothing under heaven, but an acid substance, which sours, and thus spoils all the fluids of the body, more or less. What causes Rheumatism but a sour or acid fluid which insinuates itself between the joints and elsewhere, irritating and inflaming the delicate tissues upon which it acts? So of nervous diseases, of impurity of the blood, or deranged circulations, and nearly all the ailments which afflict human nature.

Now is it not horrible to make and sell, and infinitely worse to use this

and yet he would fain have it understood that Old Dr. Jacob Townsend's Genuine Original Sarsaparilla, is an IMITATION of his inferior preparation!!

Heaven forbid that we should deal in an article which would bear the most distant resemblance to S. P. Townsend's article! and which should bring down upon the Old Dr. such a mountain load of complaints and criminations from Agents who have sold, and purchasers who have used S. P. Townsend's FERMENTING COMPOUND.

We wish it understood, because it is the absolute truth, that S. P. Townsend's article and Old Dr. Jacob Townsend's Sarsaparilla are heaven-wide apart and infinitely dissimilar; that they are unlike in every particular, having not one single thing in common.

As S. P. Townsend is no doctor, and never was, is no chemist, no pharmaceutist—knows no more of medicine or disease than any other common, unscientific, unprofessional man, what guarantee can the public have that they are receiving a genuine scientific medicine, containing all the virtues of the articles used in preparing it, and which are incapable of changes which might render them the AGENTS of Disease instead of health.

But what else should be expected from one who knows nothing comparatively of medicine or disease! It requires a person of some experience to cook and serve up even a common decent meal. How much more important is it that the persons who manufacture medicine, designed for should know well the medical properties of plants, the best manner of securing and concentrating their healing virtues, also an extensive knowledge of the various diseases which affect the human system, and how to adapt remedies to these diseases!

It is to arrest friends upon the unfortunate, to pour balm into wounded humanity, to kindle hope in the despairing bosom, to restore health and bloom, and vigor into the crushed and broken, and to banish infirmity that OLD DR. JACOB TOWNSEND has SOUGHT and FOUND the opportunity and means to bring his

within the reach, and to the knowledge of all who need it, that they may learn and know, by joyful experience, its

DR. JACOB TOWNSEND. NEW YORK, Oct. 5, 1848.

WALKED ACROSS THE ROOM

with the aid of crutches. Since then, I have walked in the street: have gone alone from 36 Spruce street to the Park; thence to Lovejoy's Hotel and back. I have been to 85 Nassau-street two different times, and am now frequently visiting my neighbors. During all this time, I have taken but two bottles of Old Dr. Townsend's Sarsaparilla, Oct. 4, I procured another bottle to-day (5th Oct.) I walked twice across the floor without the aid of crutches. I have also nearly recovered from obstruction of water, which gave me great distress. The pain in my back has likewise left me. I and my family have no earthly reason to ascribe my recovery to any other cause but to

OLD DR. JACOB TOWNSEND'S SARSAPARILLA.

ALEX. WELSH, 36 Spruce-st.

P. S.—Several able physicians despaired of my ever walking or even raising myself from my bed again.

CONSOLATIONS.—My father, our work is fatiguing to-day; the spade rebounds upon the parched earth: the sun darts rays of fire; the dust raised by the south wind blows in whirlwinds over the plain.

My son, He who sends burning gales sends also bedewed cloudlets. To each belongs its pain and its hope, and after labor comes repose.

My father, do you see these poor plants—how they languish, and how their yellow leaves droop down their exhausted stalk?

They will rise up again, my son;—no blade of grass is forgotten; fruitful rains and fresh dews are always provided for it amidst the celestial treasures.

My father, the birds are silent in the foliage; the quail, immoveable in the furrow, does not even recal its companion; the heifer seeks the shade; and the ox, with his limbs folded beneath his heavy body, his neck stretched out, dilates his large nostrils, in order to respire the air which he is in need of.

God, my son, will restore the birds their voices, and the oxen their strength, exhausted by the extreme heat. The breeze which will reanimate them already glides over the sea.

Let us seat ourselves, my father, upon the fern that borders the pond, near the old oak whose hanging branches so gently touch the surface of the water. How calm and transparent it is! How gaily the fishes play there! Some pursue their winged prey, poor gnats just entering into being; others, raising their heads, with their mouths half open, appear to be softly kissing the air.

He who has made all things, my son, has everywhere bestowed his inexhaustible gifts, life, and the joy of life. Evil consists only in appearance; 'tis the dark side of love, the similitude of good, its shadow.

And yet, my father, you suffer. What labor, what fatigue, you endure, in order to provide for our wants! Are you not poor? Is not my mother poor? It is the sweat of your aged brow which has given me food; have you ever for one single day had the morrow provided for?

What signifies the morrow to us, my son? The morrow belongs to God; let us confide in Him. Whoso rises in the morning knows not whether he shall see the evening. Why, then, trouble and disquiet one's self about a time which will perhaps never arrive? We live here below like the swallow, seeking from day to day the bread of each, and like her, when the winter approaches, a mysterious power draws us to milder climes.

What is this, my father? It resembles a corpse wrapped in its shroud, or an infant rolled in swaddling-clothes.

My son, it was a crawling worm, it will soon be a living flower, an aerial form, which decked in its brightest colors will rise toward heaven.

CHARITY—A FRAGMENT.—Scene.—Wheezer's dining room. Dessert on the table.

Wheezer. Guzzle, my boy—good wine this—eh—sorry I haven't got much of it left. Well, as I was saying, she threw herself at my feet (hiccup) and after a good deal of palaver about being my niece, and so on—another glass?—actually wanted me to take charge of her brats.

Guzzle. (Muddled.) Good joke that.

Wheezer. Was it—try the port—was it my fault they were starving?

Guzzle. Ah! thank you, this glass'll do.

Wheezer. Why did she marry a fellow without a sixpence, and refuse a Slobber—Alderman Slobber of our ward? As for her humbug about previous love, disparity of age, and all that—

Guzzle. (Sipping the port.) P-o-o-h.

Wheezer. And the precious scene must happen (hiccup) just as I was about to attend a meeting of the 'Benevolent Coal and Blanket Association.'

Guzzle—Ah—good charity that—very good charity.

Wheezer. Yes—there I am—Vice President—Pursy Wheezer, esq. with a subscription of £20. I believe you, it is a good charity—why (leaning over the table and confidentially winking with drunken gravity) I've got the contract myself for the coals—worth £200 at the very lowest figure.—[London Puppet Show.

Nothing more noble, nothing more venerable than fidelity. Faithfulness and truth are the most sacred excelencies and endowments of the human mind.

POWER OF A GOOD MAN'S LIFE. The beauty of a holy life, constitutes the most eloquent and effective persuasive to religion, which one human being can address to another. We have many ways of doing good to our fellow creatures; but none so efficacious as leading a virtuous, upright and well-ordered life. There is energy of moral suasion in a good man's life, passing the highest efforts of the orator's genius. The seen but silent beauty of holiness, speaks more eloquently of God and duty, than the tongues of men and angels. Let parents remember this. The best inheritance a parent can bequeath to a child is a virtuous example, a legacy of hallowed remembrances and associations. The beauty of holiness beaming through the life of a loved relative or friend, is more effectual to strengthen such as do stand in virtue's ways, and raise up those that are bowed down, than precept, command, entreaty, or warning. Christianity itself, I believe, owes by far the greater part of its moral power, not to the precepts or parables of Christ, but to his own character. The beauty of that holiness which is enshrined in the four brief biographies of the Man of Nazareth, has done more, to regenerate the world, and bring in an everlasting righteousness, than all the other agencies put together. It has done more to spread his religion in the world than all that has ever been preached or written on the evidences of christianity. [Chalmers.

PROFESSIONAL LIFE.—The ambition of adopting professional life, of all kinds, at the present day, is the scource of countless instances of misery. Every profession in England is overstocked; not merely the prizes are beyond the general reach, but the merest subsistence becomes difficult. The 'Three black graces, law, physic, and divinity,' are weary of their innumerable worshippers, and yearly sentence crowds of them to perish of the aching sense of failure. A few glittering successes allure the multitude—chancellorships, bishoprics, and regiments, figure, before the public eye, and every aspirant from the cottage, and the more foolish parents of every aspirant, set down the bauble gained, when they have once plunged their unlucky offspring into the sea of troubles which men call the world. But thousands have died of broken hearts in their pursuits, thousands who would have been happy behind the plough; thousands in the desperate struggles of thankless professions, look upon the simplicity of a life of manual labor with perpetual envy, and thousands, by a worse fate still, are driven to necessities which degrade principles of honor with them, accustom them to humiliating modes of obtaining subsistence, and make up, by administering to the vices of society, the livelihood which was refused to their legitimate exertions. [Blackwood.

THE FOP OUTWITTED.—In one of our country taverns, a few years since, there happened to be a number of respectable farmers clad in the usual habit, when a spruce young gentleman came in, rigged in the highest style, with a watch in his pocket, who strutted about the room with great pomp, dangling his watch, keys and seals in the most foppish manner. After swaggering about the room for a few minutes, he cried out and challenged any man in the room to drop money with him one piece at a time, and the man whose purse held out the longest should take the whole and treat the company. No one at first appeared to accept his challenge, which only tended to render the fop more inflated with an idea of his superiority in wealth, and he became more earnest. At length a rusty looking, but shrewd old farmer, observed, if no one else would accept the offer he would do it. 'It's done,' said the fop, and immediately called on the third man to hold the hat. The farmer then put his hand in his pocket and took out what he called a bung-town copper, and dropped it in the hat. The fop immediately dropped in his second piece, and the farmer, feeling in his pocket for another piece, but finding none, gravely observed, 'I am beat, I have no more; you may take the whole and treat the company.'

A little boy, not over ten years of age, was seen the other day, cramming his mouth full of 'fine cut,' when a gentleman standing by, somewhat amused by the spectacle, asked him what he chewed tobacbo for? 'What do I chew tobacco for?' replied the boy, 'why sir, I chew it to get the strenght out of it, to be sure—what d'ye think I chew it for?,

We once heard a young lady who said there were but two things; which, on looking over her past life she regretted;—and one of these was, that she did n't eat more cake when her sister Fanny was married!

AS GOOD AS PUNCH.—The Pekin Visitor says' 'Coming home a few mornings since, we met a man attempting to walk on both side of the street. By a skilful manœuver we passed between him.'

COLD IN HUDSON'S BAY.—Mr. R. M. Ballantyne, in a lively journal of six years residence in the territories of the Hudson's Bay Company, tells us, that for part of October there is sometimes a little warm, or, thawy weather; but after that, until the following April, the thermometer seldom rises ro the freezing point. In the depth of winter, the thermometer falls from 30 to 40, 45 and even 49 degrees below zero of Fahrenheit.—This intense cold is not, however, so much felt as one might suppose, for during its continuance the air is perfectly calm. Were the slightest breath of wind to rise when the thermometer stands so low, no man could show his face to it for a moment. Forty degrees below zero, and quite calm, is infinitely preferable to fifteen below, or thereabout, with a strong breeze of wind. Spirit of wine is, of course, the only thing that can be used in the thermometer; as mercury, were it exposed to such cold, would remain frozen nearly half the winter. Spirit never froze in any cold ever experienced at York factory, unless when very much adulterated with water; and even then, the spirit would remain liquid in the centre of the mass. Quicksilver easily freezes in this climate, and it has frequently been run into a bullet mould, exposed to the cold air till frozen, and in this state rammed down a gun barrel, and fired through a thick plank. The average cold may be set down at about 15 or 16 degrees below zero, or 48 degrees of frost. The houses at the bay are built of wood, with double doors and windows. They are heated by large iron stoves, fed with wood; yet, so intense is the cold, that when a stove has been in places red-hot, a basin of water in the room has been frozen solid!

DESPERATE PROCEEDING!—At a certain farm-house where we were slightly acquainted, lived a large tow-headed youth who had been employed as 'help,' to assist in the usual work about the farm.—Said youth bore the cognomen of Josiah, and was unfortunately possessed of an enormous appetite. We say unfortunately, for be it known, that the good dame who superintended the domestic matters of the establishment, was rather 'close,' and of a saving nature, and saw with horror what inroads Jo was making upon her larder. She, therefore, provided the plainest food, and finally Jo's principal dish was bean porridge; notwithstanding it was bean-porridge often for breakfast, dinner and supper, Jo never murmured, for there was enough of it. At length the beans began to diminish in quantity, till at last they were like angels' visits, 'few and far between.' It so happened that one day Jo came as usual to dinner, and as usual found his porridge ready, but wofully deficient in regard to beans. The old woman watched him as he slowly stirred the compound with his pewter spoon, when suddenly he started up and laid aside his jacket, then off came his vest, he then began slowly to unbutton his shirt wristbands, 'Why, Jo!' exclaimed the dame, who had regarded these proceedings with the utmost astonishment,

'Jo, what on airth are you going to do?'

'Do,' said Jo, with a desperate air, 'why, I'm goin' to dive for a bean!'

It is almost needless to add, that Jo having thus proved that he 'knew beans,' never after lacked a full supply. [Spirit of the Times.

REFLECTIONS.—There are a thousand things in this world to afflict and sadden—but, oh! how many that are beautiful and good. The world teems with beauty, with objects which gladden the eye and warm the heart. We might be happy if we would. There are ills that we cannot escape, the approach of disease and death, of misfortune, the sundering of earthly ties and canker-work of grief; but a vast majority of the evils which beset us might be avoided. The curse of intemperance, interwoven as it is with all the ligaments of society, is one which never strikes but to destroy. There is not one bright page upon the record of its progress; nothing to shield from the heartiest execrations of the human race. It should not exist; it must not. Do away with all this, let wars come to an end, and let friendship, charity, love, purity and kindness, mark the intercouse between man and man. We are too selfish; as if the world was made for us alone. How much happier should we be were we to labor more earnestly to promote each other's good. God has blessed us with a home which is not all dark. There is sunshine everywhere; in the sky, upon the earth; there would be in most hearts, if we look around us. The storm dies away, and a bright sun shines out. Summer drops her tinted curtain upon the earth, which is very beautiful, even when autumn breathes her changing breath upon it. God reigns in heaven. Murmur not at a being so bountiful, and we can live happier than we do.

SUNRISE.—The man that misses sunrise loses the sweetest part of his existence. I love to watch the first tear that glistens in the opening eye of morning—the flowers, breath—the thrilling choir of the woodland minstrels, to which the modest brook trickles applause—these swelling out of the sweetest of creation's matins, seem to pour some glad and merry tale into delight's ear, as if the world had dreamed a happy thing, and now smiled o'er the telling of it!

The Cheapest Periodical in America!

Sears 'Pictorial Dollar Magazine For 1849.

48 Large octavo pages, Embellished with NUMEROUS ENGRAVINGS.

TO NEW AND OLD SUBSCRIBES.

Now ready for Subscribers and agents throughout the country, the January Number of a re-issue of this Popular Monthly Periodical. This work is too well known to require any lengthy prospectus of its merits. The contents are of a strictly moral and religous character, embellished with numerous plates alone worth more than the reduced subscription price. It is the duty of all men to advance the Moral as well as the Intellectual character of of their fellows, and thus to lend a helping hand, however feeble, in promoting the advancement of man. It is our wish to dedicate this Periodical to such a cause; and most unfeignedly shall we rejoice, if we attain the smallest influence, and prove of the slightest use. And to all who have at heart the progress of the race, and who wish to see man becoming a wiser and better being, we say, not in the spirit of arrogance and presumption, but with the perfect consiousness of being among the humblest of the humble workers of the cause "Come over and help us."

LABOR.

BY OWEN G. WARREN.

It was no curse that said to Man,
"Labor thy lot shall be;
And with thy sweat upon thy brow
Thy hand shall nourish thee."
All who obey this high behest
Blessings in it have found;
And health and wealth are gathered best
By those who till the ground.

The human frame is scarcely made
Till toil develop form;
And health which is not won by work
Will hardly bide the storm.
Or hand or brain, with plow or pen,
May do God's will below;
But sloth will wither hand and brain,
And quench the spirit's glow.

Say not thou lordly son of gold,
No need for thee to toil;
Say not there's nought to do, except
By serfs wed to the soil.
Are there not widowed hearts to cheer,
That pine in cold neglect;
And innocence to guide and guard,
And orphans to protect?

Are there not godlike intellects
Now crushed in slavish fear,
Thy hand, thy voice, thy pen could raise
To state of angels here?
Are there not shackled limbs to free—
Wild passions to reclaim—
Wild deserts and their wilder men
Than wildest beasts to tame?

A jarring and discordant world
To harmonize and bind
Together firm with iron bands,
'Till all be of one mind?
Are there not friends in human shape,
That, from the throne of Power,
Watch, aye, lest widowed Liberty
Reclaimed her long lost dower?

Is not the task yet to be done
To banish Crime from earth,
By guiding and directing right,
Man from his very birth—
To scatter Art and Science wide
And thus prepare the way
For that Millennium to come,
When Love and Truth shall sway?

Is there no haggard, starving Want,
That feeds itself with Crime;
And dread Miasm in foul abodes
That kills men ere their time?
Are there not wrongs that every day
The rich heap on the poor;
Who toil and starve that heartless men
May swell their golden store?

Then say not there is nought to do—
Labor—'tis Heaven's command,
Each in his sphere, and soon there were
No sorrow in the land.
Without that toil none can be great—
Without it none is good,
Or even blameless and forgiven
Before his Maker stood.

WHEN DID YOU SHAVE LAST?—The following circumstances happened in one of the towns of Arkansas: A man had been drinking until a late hour at night before starting for home. Honest folks had been long in bed, and the houses were all shut and dark. The liquor he had taken was too much for him—he did not know where to go. He at last staggered into a empty wagon shed, and fell upon the ground. For a long time he lay in the unconsciousness of a drunken sleep' and would have undoubtedly frozen, for the snow on the ground showed the night to be very cold, had not others, less insensible than himself been around him.—This shed was a favorite rendezvous for the hogs, which rushed out when their new comer arrived, but soon returned to their bed. In the utmost kindness and truest hospitality, they gave their biped companion the middle of the bed—some lying on either side of him, and others acting the part of the quilt. Their warmth prevented him from being injuried by his exposure. Towards morning he awoke, finding himself comfortable, and in blissful ignorance of his whereabouts, he supposed himself enjoying the accommodation of a tavern in company with other gentlemen. He reached out his hand, and catching holt of the stiff bristles of a hog, exclaimed, 'Why, mister when did you shave last?'

The Ideal of a True Life.

BY HORACE GREELEY.

There is, even on this side the grave, a haven where the storms of life break not, or are felt but in gentle undulations of the unrippled and mirroring waters—an oasis, not in the desert, but beyond it—a rest, profound and blissful as that of the soldier returned forever from the dangers, the hardships and turmoil of war, to the bosom of that dear domestic circle, whose blessings he never prised at half their worth till he lost them.

This haven, this oasis, this rest, is a serene and hale old age. The tired traveller has abandoned the dusty crowded, and jostling highway of life, for the shadiest and least noted by-lanes. The din of traffic and of worldly strife has no longer magic for his ear—the myriad footfall of the city's stony walks—is but noise or nothing to him now. He has run his race of toil, or trade, or ambition. His day's work is accomplished, and he has come home to enjoy, tranquil and unharassed, the splendor of sunset—the milder glories of late evening. Ask not whether he has, or has not, been successful, according to the vulgar standard of success.—What matters it now whether the multitude has dragged his chariot, rending the air with idolizing acclamations, or howled, like wolves on his track, as he fled by night from the fury of those he had wasted his vigor to serve. What avails it that broad lands have rewarded his toil, or that all has, at the last moment, been stricken from his grasp? Ask not whether he brings into retirement the whealth of the Indies, or the poverty of a bankrupt—whether his couch be of down or rushes—his dwelling a hut or a mansion. He has lived to little purpose, indeed, if he has not long since realized that whealth and renown are not the true ends of exertion, nor their absence the conclusive proof of ill-fortune. Whoever seeks to know if his career has been prosperous and brightning from its outset to its close—if the evening of his days shall be genial and blissful—should ask not for broad acres, or towering edifices, or laden coffers. Perverted old age may grasp these with the unyielding clutch of insanity; but they add to his cares and anxieties, not to his enjoyments. Ask, rather—has he mastered and harmonised his erring passions? Has he lived a true life?

A True Life!—of how many lives does each hour knell the conclusion! and how few of them are true ones! The poor child of shame and sin and crime, who terminates her earthly being in the clouded morning of her scarce budded, yet blighted existence—the desperate feolon whose blood is shed by the community, as the dread penalty of its violated law—the miserable debauchee, who totters down to his loathsome grave in the spring-time of his years, but the fulness of his festering iniquities—these, the world valiantly affirms, have not lived true lives! Fearless and righteous world! how profound, how discriminating are thy judgements! But the base idolator of self, who devotes all his moments, his energies, his thoughts, to schemes which begin and end in personal advantage—the grasper of gold, and lands, and tenements—the devotee of pleasure—the man of ignoble and sinister ambition—the woman of frivolity, extravagance, and fashion—the idler, the gambler, the voluptuary—on all these and their myriad compeers, while borne on the crest of the advancing billow, how gentle is the reproof, how charitable the judgement of the world! Nay, is not even our dead christianity, which picks its way so daintily, cautiously, and inoffensively—which regards with gentle rebuke, and is regarded with amiable toleration by some of the foremost vices of the times; is it not too often oblivious o its paramount duty to teach men how to live worthily and nobly? Are there not thousands to whom its inculcations, so far as duties to man are concerned, are substantially negative in their character?—who are fortified by its teachings, in the belief that to do good is a casuality, and not a frame of being—who are taught by it to feed the hungry and clothe the naked, when they thrust themselves upon the charity of portly affluence, but as an irksome duty, too which they should be rewarded, rather than a blessed privilege for which they should be profoundly grateful? Of the millions now weekly listening to the ministrations of the Christian pulpit, how many are clearly, vividly impressed with the great truth, that each, in his own sphere, should live for mankind, as christ did for the redemption, instruction, and exaltation of the race—and, that the power to do this in his proper sphere abides equally with the humblest as the highest? How many centuries more will be required to teach, even the religious world, so called, the full meaning of the CHRISTIAN?

A true life must be simple in all its elements. Animated by one grand and ennobling impulse, all lesser aspirations find their proper places in harmonious subservience. Simplicity in taste, in appetite, in habits of life, with a corresponding indifference to worldly honors and aggrandizement, is the natural result of the predominance of a divine and unselfish idea. Under the guidance of such a sentiment, Virtue is an effort, but a law of nature, like gravitation. It is Vice alone that seems unaccountable—monstrous—well nigh miraculous. Purity is felt to be as necessary to the mind, as health to the body, and its absence alike, the inevitable source of pain.

A true life must be calm. A life imperfectly directed, is made wretched through distraction. We give up our youth to excitemet, and wonder that a decrepit old age steals upon us so soon.—We wear out our energies in strife for gold or fame, and then wonder alike at the cost and the worthlessness of the meed. "Is not the life more than meat?" Ay, truly! but how few have practically, consistently, so regarded it? And little as it is regarded by the imperfectly virtuous, how much less by the vicious and the worlding? What a chaos of struggling emotions is exhibited by the lives of the multitude? How like to the wars of the infuriated animalculæ in a magnified drop of water, is the strife constantly waged in each little mind! How Sloth is justled by Gluttony, and Pride wrestled with by Meanness! The soul which is not large enough for the indwelling of one virtue, affords lodgment and scope and arena for a hundred vices. But their warfare cannot be indulged with impunity. Agitation and wretchedness are the inevitable consequences, in the midst of which the flame of life burns flaringly and swiftly to its close.

A true life must be genial and joyous. Tell me not, pale anchorite, of your ceaseless vigils, your fastings, your scourgings. These are fit offerins to Moloch, not to our Father. The man who is not happy in the path he has chosen, may be sure he has chosen amiss, or is self deceived. But not merely happier—he should be kinder, gentler, and more elastic in spirits, as well as firmer and truer. "I love God and little children," says a German poet. The good are ever attracted and made happier by the presence of the innocent and lovely. And he who finds his religion adverse to, or a restraint upon, the truly innocent pleasures and gayeties of life, so that the latter do not interfere with and jar upon its sublimer objects, may well doubt whether he has, indeed, "learned Jesus."

KIND HEARTED MISSTRESS.—A lady in Albany is said to be so kind hearted that when her servants do wrong, instead of scolding, she requests her husband to write a reprimand for them, and sends a little black boy to read it to them.

'If good people,' said Archbishop Usher, 'would but make their goodness agreeable, and smile instead of frowning in their virtue, how mand would they win to the good cause?'

NOT MARRIED.—During the sessions at Wakefield, Eng. a witness was asked if he was not a husbandman, when he hesitated for a moment, then cooly replied, amid the laughter of the Court,

'Nae, sir, I'se not married.'

CHEAP TRAVELING—A RICH 'DO.'—The Albany Knickerbocker tells a rich story of 'selling' a constable. They have some very cool wags in New-York.—The circumstances were these:

An officer of the Vermont constabulary force arrived in Hudson, having in custody as he supposed, Moshier, the anti-renter, who stands charged with shooting the sheriff, and for whose arrest and delivery at the Columbia county jail, a large reward has been offered. The prisoner accompanied the officer on the way willingly, and was in remarkably good humor during the entire journey; but when he arrived in Hudson, where Moshier is well known, the good natured genius proved to be neither that individual, nor a whit like him in appearance. The Vermont constable was, of course, taken all aback, as he had confidently imagined the $1000 as good as in his hand. His fellow traveler, being decidely a wag, run him very hard on his mistake, and gave him a few lessons, with due mock gravity, upon the course to be pursued with reference to the weasel, when that animal is caught in a state of profound somnolence. After the officer had put his horses' heads towards the Green mountains, and was fairly homeward bound, the quasi Moshier was asked how he came to be arrested.—He replied he was away down east, and 'dead broke,' and that he wanted to get to Hudson, and in order to accomplish this, under the peculiarly perplexing state of his finances, he gave a fellow his jacket to start a report that he was the absquatulating anti-renter. In less than an hour, he says, he was arrested, placed in a proper nice coach, and drove to Hudson with a speed that he never before accomplished after horse flesh. This (says the Knickerbocker, after alluding to the facts) is one of the most finished 'do's' we have ever met with.

A BEAUTIFUL THOUGHT.—Life is beautifully compared to a fountain fed by a thousand streams, that perish if one be dried. It is a silver cord twisted with a thousand strings that part asunder if one be broken. Frail and thoughtless mortals are surrounded by innumerable dangers, which make it much more strange they escape so long, than that they all perish suddenly at last. We are surrounded by accidents every day, to crush the moldering tenements that we inhabit. The seeds of disease are planted in our constitution by nature. The earth and the atmosphere, whence we draw the breath of life, are pregnant with death—health is made to operate its own destruction!—The food that nourishes contains the elements of decay; the soul that animates it by vivifying fire, tends to wear it out by its own action; death lurks in ambush along our paths. Notwithstanding this is the truth so palpably confirmed by the daily examples before our eyes, how little do we lay it to heart? We see our friends and neighbors perishing among us, but how seldom does it occur to our thoughts that our knell shall, perhaps, give the next fruitless warning to the world!

WHO SMELLS NOW.—On a fish-woman's stall in front of Boylston market, (Boston,) last season, a few live lobsters were exposed for sale. A stranger, unacquainted with icthiology, came along—and turning over the dormant 'animals,' asked the price; at the same time raising one of them to a close proximity with his nose.

Whew! said the fellow—'I'll hev you prosecuted, mum—it smells!'

At this instant, the lobster's claw closing with a 'whack!' fastened it firmly upon the gentleman's nose!

The old woman placed her arms a-kimbo, in triumph—and asked the gentleman, with a chuckle—'who shmells now mister?'

A STRVNGER, one Sunday, took a seat in an empty pew in Grace Church, supposing that he might be accommodated. At length the owner came—a single man with one lady. Now the pew would contain five or six, with great comfort, but a stranger in the pew could not be thought of, so our polite New-Yorker bows the gentleman out of the pew, with an intimation that he had "mistaken the pew!" "I see I have," says the stranger, "I took it for a Christian's!"—Spirit of the Times.

THE RISING GENERATION.—Young Lady.—'Now, you tiresome boy—what is it you wish to say to me that so nearly concerns your happiness?'

Juvenile.—'Why, I love yer' and I can't be appy without yer.'

The ladies now, we are told, wear wired petticoats as a substitute for the bustle. Old maids get them magnetised, to make them attractive.

Education.

As most of our subscribers no doubt have read the Governors Message, ere this (not having received it in time for our last number,) we give only the most important parts.

A very important part in our judgment is on the subject of education. How do the people expect to sustain their liberties without education. Knowledge is power, and if the people neglect this most important of all their interests, tney must expect to lose all power, not all at once, but imperceptably as time steals on in the life of man, and not the less certainly. Men know that in the ordinary affairs of life if they neglect their own interests, there is always some one to take advantage of that neglect, it is not the less so in their public affairs. These things are in your own hands and we trust that calling your attention to the subject will be sufficient, that you will take some action upon it. Why is it that there is not more interest taken in this subject by the young men of our Village. What is the reason there are no evening schools where apprentices and others who have not opportunities to attend day school can improve themselves. Is it because they do not take proper interest in this matter. All the money in the world, expended on this object without your interest in the matter will avail nothing, We trust the Legislature will do all that can be done on this subject but without your aid reader it will not amount to much. If a young man; your interest in this subject is great. You will soon be called on to take the places of the present generation in conducting the affairs of life. On you, will depend the future prosperity of our country, of the liberal and enlightened form of our government, transmitted to us by our forefathers, who fought, and bled, and died that we might be free. Will you suffer this noble boon to wither and die through your neglect, it cannot, it must not be. Think on this subject, before it is to late, when you have matured your thoughts let it lead to action. It is a most lamentable fact, and with sorrow do we say it, that in many townships throughout the state, the people are most shamefully ignorant on the most ordinary yet most important subjects concerning their own interests. How many there are who cannot make out even an ordinary bill for work done, or draw up a note, but must get some one to do it for them. How many even of our public township officers are incapable of conducting in a proper manner the business that comes before them, Why is it that on the days of election there is so much what is called electioneering; so much deception; threats for some, promises for others; all know these things are so; will all lend a hand to remedy this evil. It is a disgrace to men calling themselves freemen.; Men having knowledge, knowing their rights are not thus approached. We might extend this subject, but a word to the wise is sufficient, but it is to those that are deficient in this respect whom we would awake to its importance. How long will you continue to trust to others for that knowledge so essential to the well being of freemen? Do you complain of the usurpation of your rights! Whose fault is it? Do you expect to retain your rights without knowing what those rights are? We call on you to perform a most sacred duty to yourselves, to your children, and to posterity.

Congress.

The reduction of the mileage of members of Congress is a democratic measure and should be advocated by all who have true democracy at heart, the miserable subterfuges which many adopt on this important subject, are certainly ridiculous in this enlightened age Because forsooth a man belongs to this or that party, his opponents oppose any thing he may advance. This is a most needful reform and one in wich all are interested. All who do not advocate a reform of so glaring an abuse of the peoples rights, are not the friends of the peoples rights, call themselves what they may.

Died on the 1st instant. Hon. Ambrose H. Sevier, Ex-Senator from Arkansas, and recently returned from a mission of Peace to Mexico.

The Legislature of Michigan have nominated Gen. Lewis Cass for U. S. Senator.

In this number of our paper will be found the Message of Jerome Bonaparte, first President of France! how strange the sound. What a lesson to the crowned heads of the old world! Will the people now they have eaten of the fruit of the tree of Liberty be satisfied short of having it planted in ever kingdom. They divine right of Kings is departing, we trust never to return, may the people who are the true source of all political power, appreciate and enjoy the great blessing of civil and religious liberty.

Fatal Accident.

On Monday Jan. 15th. Lewis French, son of David French of Stony Hill, fell from some part of the Wagon-house in which he was at work, which caused his death in a few hours.

Enos L. Blue a resident of this Village, in going home on Sunday Evening last, fell on the ice and broke his leg.

Too much of a good thing.—Gold is now more plenty than money in California, it is worth only eight dollars per ounce, payable in coin. The time of suffering we fear will soon come. Pork is said to be worth $200 per barrel, and other things in proportion. The people are in hopes of getting a speedy supply of food from Mexico. Vessels at San Francisco, which had been abandoned or neglected, were once more in request. to proceed along the coast for food, the latter having become more valuable than gold. Whale ships were selling off their outfits at enormous profits.

Newspaper Reading.

Speaking of the power of the press, it would be considerably greater if there were not so much of it. A neighbor of mine, at my late residence in the backwoods of Pensylvania, had seen but one paper(i.e. one no.) for six months; but that he had carefully read; and made up his mind to vote for Gen. Taylor. Such was the effect of one paper; but had he read more, (i. e. whig papers) it is quite likely he might have been left in doubt; as the most are, in respect to the princrpal topics of newspaper discussion.

The above extract except in the last bracket is from the Newark Daily Advertiser of 15 inst. Would it have us infer from the above that Gen. Taylor's majority was composed of such voters; we knew this to be the case in some instances, but was not before aware that it was held to be a merit by whig editors Murder by a Boy In a Coffee-cellar, No. 5 Spruce-st. kept by Richard Marshall. In the cellar, upon one of the tables, lay a boy about 18 years of age, his breast covered with blood from a stab in the heart. The author of this deed, a small boy about 15 years of age, named Cornelius, who attends to the customers in the cellar, is already in custody.

A Coroners inquest was held, the Jury, which was composed of twelve of our most respectable merchants, returned a verdict that deceased came to his death by a wound inflicted by the boy, Cornelius Cuddy, and the same wound was inflicted without malice and in self-defence. —N. Y. Tribune.

Cleaveland, Jan. 15.

A fearful epidemic is raging at the Capitol of Michigan. The Legislature of that State are discussing a motion to adjourn to Detroit, one member has already died of the disease.

Illinois for Free Territory.—A dispatch from the West says the Illinois Legislature have passed resolutions instructing their Senators and requesting their Representatives to use all honerable means to procure the enactment of such laws by Congress as to expressly prohibit the extension of Slavery in newly acquired Territories. The vote in the Senate stood, 14 Yeas to 11 Nays; in the House, 38 Yeas to 34 Nays.

Housing Manure --That manure exposed to rains and the scorching rays of the sun, must lose a portion of its enriching qualities, no reflecting mind can doubt. Ashes, exposed to the weather, become leached after a few soaking rains, and are nearly worthless for their alkaline qualities. Although manure probably does not waste in the same ratio, yet that it does waste any person must be satisfied who has observed the drainings of his manure heaps and yard after a rain, the water being nearly black with the most valuable part leached from the manure. Add to this, the color imparted from the manure heaps to the snow in the spring, often being stained with the drainings for a number of rods, and who can doubt but that much of the soluble part of the manure has escaped?

John Bull believes Brother Johnathan's story about California, and admits that it is a 'splendid acquisition.'

LEGISLATIVE SUMMARY,

Jan. 12. 1849.

The usual committees were appointed.

Mr. Pickel offered the following:

Resolved, That the Joint Committe on Public Printing be instructed to receive proposals for supplying the two Houses withcurrent printing; the printing of the Journals of the two Houses, the Law and Chancery Reports, and all other printing done under the authority of the two Houses, and that said Committee report in favor of such persons as shall bid lowest and give bond with sufficient security for the faithful performance of their contract.

—That the Committee be instructed to give notice in the daily papers of Trenton and Newark of the time and mode of presenting such proposals.

On motion of Mr. Ryerson, the resolution that no new application for private laws be entertained after 30 days from the first day session, was adopted.

Assembly.—Mr. Grover, from the Judiciary Committee, to which had been referred the documents accompanying the Governor's Message reported in favor of printing the report of the Keeper of the State Prison; report of the Education Committee of the last session: report of the Adjutant General; report of the Quarter-Master General; and of the Commissioners of Pilotage. Accepted.

Mr. Hoyt offered a resolution to furnish each new member with a copy of the Revised Statutes.

Mr. Grover opposed it—there were 30 new members and the books were worth $4 each, making a $120 in all.

Mr. Bowne said there was a large number left in the Treasurer's office which were of no use unless distributed.

The resolution was adopted.

Mr. Condit, from the Joint Committee on the Treasurer's accounts, reported that they have examined the same and found them correct. Accepted. [The balance in the Treasury is $10,823, deposited in sundry Banks.]

Mr. Pickel introduced a bill to equalize taxes.

Mr. Smith another to incorporate the Dover Manufacturing Co.

Mr. Van Fleet, one to abolish the freehold qualification in township and county officers.

Mr. Ryerson to offer a substitute for Mr. Pickel's Resolution, that the Printing Committee be instructed to report as early as possible on the propriety of having the Public Printing, Journals, laws, and Chancery Reports done by contract by the lowest bidder.

This amendment was accepted by Mr. Pickel, and the resolution adopted.

Monday, Jan 15.

Senate.—Mr. Gill presented a bill to recharter the State bank at Camden. Ordered 2nd reading.

Also, a bill to incorporate the West Jersey Ferry Co. Ordered 2nd reading.

Mr. Ryerson offered a resolution to refer that part of the Governor's Mesage relating to an increase of pay to the Judges of Court of Errors and Appeals, the Committee on Judiciary, to investigate the justice and propriety of such increase.—Adopted.

Assembly.—Mr. Martin presented petitions from 85 citizens of Morris and Somerset for a railroad from Morristown to Elizabeth and N. York.

Mr. Cooper two more on the same subject.

Mr. Van Wagenen, from Passaic and Bergen for a railroad to Hackensac and Hudson Rivers. Also from Paterson, to incorporate the Passaic Watar Co.

Mr Cooper gave notice of a bill to incorporate the Elizabeth, New York and Morris Railroad Co.

Mr. Grover gave notice of a supplement to the act relative to the abolishment of imprisonment for debt in cases of fraud.

The bill to incorporate the Newark Orphan's Asylum Association was taken up its 2nd reading.

Mr. Grover moved the addition of a section to give the act immediate effect; adopted, and the bill ordered to a third reading.

A Summary of the proceedings of Congress.

Jan. 12. 1849.

Mr. Hilliard, of Alabama, gave notice that he would introduce certain bills on Monday next, one authorizing the citizens of California to frame a Government preparatory to its admission into the Union as a State, and another for estalbishing the boundary lines of Texas and extending them over the Territory of New Mexico.

Jan. 16.

Senate —Mr. Douglass of Ill. submitted an amendment to his bill for the admission of California as a state; which he said, would obviate many of the objections which had been urged against the bill. The amendment was read, and ordered to be printed.

House.—Mr. King of Ga. from the Committee on Naval Affairs, reported a bill for the transportation of troops across the Isthmus of Panama, and for promoting and extending American commerce; a map accompanying the bill. Mr. King moved to print 10,000 copies. The latter motion lies over.

Mr. Schenck of O. from the Committee on Naval Affairs, reported a bill providing for furnishing certain books for the use of the officers of the Navy. A motion was made to lay the resolution on the table. On this the Yeas and Nays were demanded and resulted in the negative.

Mr. Greely of N. Y. said that he embraced this opportunity to explain his course on those Congressional books He said that he voted every time but one against them, and then voted under a mistake, but contended that the appropriation was a good one.

The mileage of members was still the subject of debate, but no action was had thereon.

Extract from the GOVERNOR'S MESSAGE.

By the report of the Treasurry you will perceive that

The balance in the Treasury at the end of the year 1847, was		$12,314 78
That there has been received during the fiscal year ending Dec. 31, 1848, from the ordinary resources, viz:
Transit Duties,	$65,615 84
Dividends on stocks	24.000 00
Pedlers' Licenses,	712 00
Tax on capital stock of New Jersey and Paterson R. R. Co.,	5,250 00
		$95,577 84
From Extraordinary sources, viz
Balance of tax of the year 1847,	$15,402 00
Interest	1,900 13
Tax on Insurance premiums,	30 56
State Prison earnings,	2,160 37
Principal of Bond and Mortgage,	771 27
Incidental,	10 00
		20,274 45
Making the funds of the year		$128,167 07
There has been disbursed for ordinary expenses,		$72,688 79
Being less than those of the previous year, by	2,292 47
For Extraordinary expenses, viz:
For Lunatic Asylum,	42,278 71
New wing of State Prison	2,734 39
		$45,013 10
Making the total expenditure during the year,		$117.101 89
The estimated condition of the Treasury on the 1st Jan. 1849, is as follows
Cash on Deposit in sundry Banks		$10,822 53
Bonds or Mortgages on government lots sold,		5,397 53
Joint Companies' Bonds and Interest thereon,		17,510 00
Transit duties of Delaware and Raritan Canal and Camden & Amboy R. R. Co.,		15,156 32
Dividends on Stock,		18,000 00
Tax on Capital Stock of New Jersey and Paterson Rail Road Companies,		5,250 00
Amount available,		$72,136 38

The usual annual expenses at		75,000 00
Leaving for the purposes of the State, without the necessity of a state tax, a balance of		$20,000 00
The amount of the school fund is		$380,448 33
By deducting the amount of it on Dec. 31' 1847,		370, 742 95
There is exhibited for its increase during the year over all disbursements,		$9,705 38

The subjecs of popular education, so important alike to the welfare of the community and to the happiness of individuals, has heretofore received much attention and excited much debate —But it is to be feared that in the conflict of opinions, the cause will lose many of the advantages which it might otherwise enjoy. That much is required to be done is painfully proved by the fact, that not many more than one-half of the children in the State received instruction in the schools. By the report of the State Superintendent, for the year 1847, it appears that of the 102,412 children between the ages of 5 and 16 years, capable of attending school, only 52,795 attended for any period of the year.—With a liberal allowance for the number who attend select and denominational schools, a very large proportion must be growing up in ignorance.

If puclic policy did not demand the education of youth, common benevolence might seem to require it.

What we most need in my judgment is that which will arouse the public mind to the importance of the subject; that which will satisfy parents that the success and happiness of their children can be best promoted by proper education; that which will convince citizens that the true policy of the State requires it to secure to every child the advantages of suitable instruction.

The New Jersey Pilots, it is pleasing to say, continue to posess, and it is believed, to merit public confidence. By the report of the Commissioners, it seems that they have had in service four cruising pilot boats and one station boat, and twenty one branch pilots, and four deputy pilots, who have brought in port six hundred and seventy-five vessels, and taken five hundred and ninety-seven to sea. The system commends itself to the fostering care of the State.

New and Important Discovery.

The Washington Union of Tuesday contains a letter from Lieutenant Maury, of the Observatory to the Secretary of the Navy, describing a new discovery:

National Observatory
Washington, Jan. 5.

Sir:—I have the honor of making known to you a most important discovery for astronomy which has been made by Dr. Locke of Ohio, and of asking authority from you to avail myself of it for the use and purposes of the Observatory.

The discovery consists in the invention of a "magnetic clock," by means of which seconds are divided into hundredths with as much accuracy and precision as the machinist, with rule and compass, can subdivide an inch of space.

Nor do its powers end here, they are such that the astronomer in New Orleans, St. Louis, Boston, and of every other place which the magnetic telegraph reaches may make his observation, and at the same moment cause this clock, here in Washington, to record the instant with wonderful precission.

Thus, the astronomer in Boston, observes the transit of a star as it flits through the field of his instrument, and crosses the meridian of that place. Instead of looking at a clock before him, and noting time in the usual way, he touches a key, and the clock here subdivides his seconds to the minutest fraction, and records the time with unerring accuracy.

The astronomer in Washington waits for the same star to cross his meridian; as it does, Dr. Locke's magnetic clock is again touched: it divides the seconds and records the time for him with equal precision.

The difference between these two times is the longitude of Boston from the meridian of Washington.

The astronimers in New Orleans and St. Louis, and every other place within the reach of the magnetic wires, may wait for the same star; and as it comes to their meredian, they have but to touch a key, and straightway this central magnetic clock tells their longitude.

And thus the problem, which has vexed astronomers and navigators and perplexed the world for ages, is reduced at once, by American ingenuty, to a form and method the most simple and accurate.

While the process is so much simplified, the results are greatly refused. In one night the longitude may now be determined with far more accuracy by means of the magnetic telegraph and clock, than by years of observation according to any other method that has ever been tried.

It is, therefore, well entitled to be called a most important discovery; and it belongs to that class of achievments by which the most beautiful and enduring moments are erected to national honor and greatness. It is a national triumph; and my feelings of professional pride will not allow me to pass it by without calling your attention to the garland that has been hung about it by the navy.

To the navy belongs the honor of having first applied the magnetic telegraph to the determination of longitude. Five or six years ago Capt. Wilkes, of the navy, used it for determining the difference of longitude between this city and Baltimore. This was the first time it had been applied to such purpose; and it was a great improvement upon the methods which, up to that time, had been used for finding the longitude, for it reduced the results down to the accuracy with which the time between the ticks of the secnod hand could be measured on the face of the clock by the eye and ear.

And thus the honor of being the first to convert the magnetic telegraph into an astronomical instrument, and that too into one of great practical value and importance, was secured by one of its officers to the American navy. Though the errors of the problem were greatly reduced by this discovery, there were, however, small sources of error still remaining, and it was left for Dr. Locke, formerly an officer of the navy also, to devise a means of elimanating them so completely, that now there is scarce a "trace" left in the results—so free are they from doubt and uncertainty. The probable error of longitude determined with Dr. Locke's clock, is brought within such narrow limits, that if, while the astronomer in St. Louis or elsewhere were operating with the magnetic clock here for his longitude, the observer in Washington were to move from one instrument to another in this building, the fact that he had moved would be made known at once, and whether he had moved to the east or the west would be told by the clock, and appear in the resulting longitude.

[FOR THE GAZETTE.]

The newspaper affords a convenient medium by which a person who has anything of interest to his fellow men, may communicate with them. I think its advantages to society, in this respect, are not properly appreciated. I believe that the newspaper press is one of the most efficient instruments for the promulgation of truth which the world affords. It is true, SOME papers are inefficiently conducted; others are even unworthy of attention; but the great body of our public journals are edited and controlled by men who, in every quality which causes man to respect his fellows, are second to none. The press is ever foremost in advocating all those great reforms, which, in our day, are attracting so much attention. Resistance to tyranny, in all its forms, is the spirit of those who move this great moral lever. The cause of education, now so popular with all classes, has long been advocated with signal ability by newspaper editors, who well understand the necessity of a general diffusion of knowledge if we would secure a continuance of our liberties.

The well conducted newspaper is of great utility in creating a taste for reading in the young. Who does not remember when, in his young days, he got hold of a paper, perhaps a week or ten days old, with what eagerness he read it? Perhaps it contained an account of some disastrous shipwreck. If so, how he was affected with the recital of the sufferings of those who escaped a watery grave, perhaps only to meet death in the more fearful form of starvation on some inhospitable island. Or, it may be, a vessel at sea had been destroyed by fire! How the tender mind was affected with the thrilling narrative of the survivors of the dreadful scene! Of all calamities, a vessel on fire on the ocean, with no friendly sail in sight, is the most awful which the human mind can conceive.

Subjects of this nature naturally attract the attention of children, and even if they are very young, they will soon seek to read the narrative for themselves.

There are also a great many other incidents in the newspapers which attract the attention of young children, and which cause them to THINK as well as read.—Here is a paragraph which my little girl has found, and in which she has been much interested. It is very brief, but well adapted to awaken the sympathies of the young: "Officer Ayres was last evening called on by a family living at No. — Cherry-street, to furnish relief to a widow and her children who resided in the basement of that building. The woman, however, died before his arrival; and the children, five in number, were reduced by want and cold to the most miserable condition. The youngest, a babe of ten months, was lying on the cold bosom of the mother, vainly endeavoring to obtain its usual nourishment."

—But the great charm to the young is the miscellany which all well-edited family newspapers contain. Here is great scope for an editor to exhibit his taste. It is an easy matter to fill a newspaper with light reading—and many papers have articles which are LIGHT enough, that's a fact. But the editor who is fit for his station will make this department of his paper attractive and instructive. While he will give many articles which are really humorous, he will take good care that nothing containing indelicate ideas or improper words will find admission. He will intersperse these humorous articles with paragraphs of a moral and scientific character.

The well-written tale is a great attraction to the young, and is a necessary item in making up a good paper. Many of the stories which are given in the newspapers contain important moral lessons, which are worthy of the attention of the philanthropist and Christian. Among writers of this class of stories, Mrs. Ann S. Stephens and Maria L. Child stand pre-eminent. No one, I think, can read the works of these gifted ladies without being benefitted and instructed, and induced to do something for the well-being of mankind.

Although I have extended these desultory remarks to a greater length than I intended, I cannot close without expressing the opinion that The Gazette will prove a valuable auxiliary to the cause of knowledge; and I trust its editors may be sustained in their labors by a community favorably known for its devotion to every good work. TEN DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

Arrival of the America, &c.

FRANCE.

The President's Speech.

Citizen Repuplicans:—

The suffrages of the nation and the oath I have just taken trace out for me my future conduct. I shall follow it as a man of honor. I shall regard as enemies of our country all those who shall attempt to change by illegal means what all France has established. Between you and me, Citizen Representatives, there cannot be any real difference of opinion. Our wishes, our desires, are the same. I wish like you, to place society on its true basis, to strengthen democratic institutions and to alleviate the miseries of that generous and intelligint people which have just given me such a striking proof of its confidence.

The majority which I have obtained not only penetrates me with gratitude, but it will give to the new government that moral force without which there is no authority. With peace and order our country can again improve—can cure its wounds—bring back the men that have been misled—and calm down passions. Animated by a sincere spirit of concilation I have called around me capable and patriotic men who, in spite of the diversity of their politicial origin, are ready to devote themselves, with you, to the application of the constitution, the improvement of the laws, and the glory of the Republic. A government coming into power owes a debt of thanks to its predecessors when the deposit of its authority is handed over to it intact, and in particular I owe it to the Hon. Gen. Cavaignac to say that his conduct is worthy of the generosity of his character and that sentiment of duty which is the first quality of a statesman. (Hear, hear.)

We have, citizen Representatives, a grand mission to fulfil—to found a Republic is the interest of all, and a quiet and firm government which shall be animated by a sincere desire of progress without being either re-actionary or Utopian. Let it be the men of the conntry, not the men of a part, and with the aid of God we will at least do good if we cannot achieve great things.

Already M. Ledru Rollin and his party have commenced an attack on the new Government. The National editors form also a sort of opposition out of doors.

Amidst these changes a marked improvement has taken place in the value of all public securities.

Louis Napoleon has named his Ministry, as follows:

M. Odillon Barrot, Minister of Justice, charged with the Presidency of the Council of Ministers, in the absence of the Vice President of the Republic.

M. Drouyn de Shuys, Minister of Foreign Affairs.

M. Leon de Malleville, Minister of the Interior.

M. Retheres, Minister of War.

M. de Tracy, Minister of the Marine and Colonies.

M. Talloux, Minister of Public Instruction and Worship.

M. Leon Gaucher, Minister of the Public Works.

M. Bixio, Minister of Agriculture.

M. Passy Hyppolite, Minister of the Finances.

The proclaiming of President was hurried on a day in advance of Gen. Changranier having obtained full information respecting a plot which was formed to seize Prince Louis on his passage from the Assembly to the Palais Elysee Bourbon, and conduct him to the Tuilleries, to the cry of 'Vive l'Emperor!' The Prince of Montfort, Jerome Bonaparte, has been appointed Governor of the Invalides. Jerome Bonaparte met the new President, on his return from the National Assembly. On meeting they cordially embraced. The prince de Monfort was greatly moved, and shed tears. It was of the same spot he had parted with the Emperor Napoleon for the last time, when he quitted Paris, after the battle of Waterloo.

ENGLAND.

We regret to state that the Cholera still hovers over the metropolis; in the Provinces it has not made any very alarmming results.

ROME.

The interest still felt for the position of the Pope continues predominant. His Holiness still remains at Gaeta, from which point all kinds of intrigues and negotiations have sprung up, conferring a great celebrity on this almost unknown spot.

HORACE GREELY, THE TRIBUNE EDITOR, IN CONGRESS.—Mr. Greeley's appearance on the floor of Congress created quite a sensation.—A Hoosier member, after taking a goodly look at Horace, walked off, muttering in an abstracted sort of a way—'No, I've never seen anything exactly like him out west. I've seen a man without any trowsers at all but he wan't nobody.'

MAKING A WHISTLE OF A PIG'S TAIL.—Married, on the 7th ult, in Chestnut Grove, N. Y., by Rev. Mr. Solvable, Mr. Jonithan Whistle to Miss Jedutha Pigtail. Of course there will be music.

GOLD DOLLARS.—The project of coining a gold dollar piece is before Congress, and we hope it will pass.

THE ANTI-TAKING-BABIES-INTO-PUBLIC-ASSEMBLIES SOCIETY.—At a meeting of this highly respectable association which was held at their rooms. Mr. Job Smith a worthy and athletic bachelor, was called to the chair, and the usual quantity of vices and secretaries appointed. The committee, appointed at a previous meeting, reported the following as the principles of the society:

We consider the practice of taking infants into public assemblies, concerts, as an evil that cries aloud for remedy. 2. While we would not breathe the faintest reproach towards the highly respectable class of the community who officiate as nurses, we stongly protest against their taking babies into public meetings, knowing as we do that it can only be done by a resort to arms. 3. While we acknowledge that a large majority of our fellow creatures are, or have once been babies, we consider it to be a fact that it is a very small minority who support these crying evils. 4. We cannot shut our ears to the numerous evidences of this evil; indeed, we have known instances of late where it was found impossible with the largest church organ to drown (not the child itself) but the shrill, oragnic notes of the child We protest against those notes.—5. We pledge ourselves to use our utmost exertions to carry out the above principles. After reading the principles of the society, Mr. Dunn rose from an inverted cradle, on which he was sitting, and moved their adoption, which motion was unanimously carried, amid the shouts of the assembled bachelors. A committee of fonrteen was then appointed, whose duty it is to carry out the objects of the society. It is to be hoped that not a single man will be found in the city who will not join this interesting association.

Sly's African Journal.

A CUTTING REPLY.—An avaricious divine seeing a poor boy in a deplorable condition, called him to the door and giving him a mouldy piece of bread, asked him if he could read, to which he answered in the negative; to the question whether he could say the Belief and the Lord's Prayer, the answer was the same. 'Well,' said the divine, 'I will teach you that: 'Our Farther,' said the instructor—'Our Father!' repeated the boy—'what, your Father as well as mine?' 'Yes, certainly.' 'Then we are brothers.' 'To be sure we are,' was the ready reply. 'Why, then, replied the boy, pulling the crust from behind his coat, 'how could you give your poor brother this mouldy piece of bread?'

Two gentlemen standing together, as a young lady passed them, one of them said, 'There goes the handsomest woman I ever saw.' She hearing, turned back, and observing him to be very ugly, answered, 'I wish Sir, I could in return, say as much of you.' 'So you may, Madam, (says he) and lie as I did.'

Two country attorneys, overtaking a waggoner on the road, and thinking to be witty upon him, asked why his fore horse was so fat, and the rest so lean? The waggoner knowing them, answered 'that his fore horse was a lawyer, and the rest were his clients.'

A person asked an Irishman, why he wore his stockings the wrong side out? He answered, 'Because there was a hole on the other side.'

PO-E-TRY.

Lines on the Sorrowful Death of the two Lovyers.

My song is of a nice young man,
Whose name was Peter Gray,
The State where Peter Gray was born
Was Pennsylvani-a.

This Peter Gray did fall in love
All with a nice young girl;
The name of her I'm positive
Was Lizianny Querl.

When they were going to be wed,
Her father, he said "No!"
And brutally did send her off,
Beyond the Ohi-o.

When Peter found his love was lost,
He knew not what to say;
He'd half a mind to jump into
The Susquehanni-a

A trading he went to the west,
For furs and other skins,
And there he was in crimson drest,
By blooddy In-ji-ins.

When Lizianny heard the news,
She straightway went to bed,
And never did get off of it
Until she d-i-ed!

Ye fathers all a warning take—
Each one as has a girl—
And think upon Poor Peter Gray
And Lizianny Querl.

SLOW POWDER.—'Speaking of that powder which men burnt up before the owner could put the fire out,' said an Old-town gunner the other day, 'puts me in mind of some I once had: 'twas slow but 'dredful sure.' My fowling-piece had been loaded with some of it for a day or two, in anticipation of a lick at some kind of wild fowl, when one morning 'in the fall,' about daybreak, I discovered a large flock of ducks, twenty-five at least, (gunners are proverbial for large stories,) in a pond, distant from my house one-fourth of a mile. I took my gun, and started for them, and keeping under cover of a stone wall, soon got as near as I wanted to be, when I pulled trigger, but no report followed. She flashed in the pan. I had forgotten to take my priming with me, so I was forced to go back to the house for my powder-horn, which I did in no pleasant mood, I tell you; but just as I got most home, I heard a slight commotion in the barrel of my piece, and looking into the muzzle, found the charge was making its way slowly out. I started back to my old position, and resting the gun upon the wall, took a good aim at the ducks, and in about five minutes after, she went off, and killed every mother's son of them!'

TIGHT LACING.—The fact of diseases of the lungs and heart being more prevalent among the fair sex may be partly accounted for from the baneful practice of tight lacing, which happily has now often been exposed. The importance of a regular and full expansion of the chest for preserving the organs it contains, as well as the influence through these organs on the entire system, must be at once evident to any one who will give the subject one moment's consideration. The lungs require a healthful exercise equally with the limbs and other parts; and if we desire to maintain them in a vigorous state, they must be unfettered in their action, either by dress or position, to ensure the healthy fulfilment of their allotted functions. But how can the chest perform its required duties when impacted in the common stay? When thus dressed, the muscles which expand and contract the chest, cannot be brought into action, and the due dilation of the lungs is prevented; the respiratory and circulating organs being impeded, congestions take place in the vessels of the lung and the heart, and elsewhere, as in the arteries of the head from which a numerous train of diseases follow.

There are a few operations which one has to attend to in life, that require more delicate management, more truly scientific skill, than that of courting. One of the most perplexing questions about the business, is, how long shall one's labors in this line be protracted? There are some lovers who carry the heart they wish to capture, at once, by storm; while others besiege the flint-walled affections of their mistresses for a period greater than the Greeks required to siege and sack Illium. We think a modern writer hits the happy medium. "A man," he says, "should not be too cowardly nor too bold in his courtships. The Bonapartean system of tatics may be used advantageously. Concentrate the forces of your charms on the enemy's weakest points, and depend upon it her human nature cannot resist you long." That's the idea!

BENEVOLENCE.—As the sweetness of the rose exhales perfume from its own nature, so the generous heart of the benevolent man sheds delight amongst mankind.

There is a young one in this town so pright that his mother has to look at him through a smoked glass?

AMERICAN METROPOLITAN,

Devoted to American Literature and Art.

Edited by WILLIAM LANDON.

And composed of Contributions from the most Eminent Writers of the Country; Together with

SPLENDID ENGRAVINGS,

Executed by the first Artists, from Original Designs made expressly for this Periodical, by celebrated American Painters, generally illustrative of some point in the History of our Country, or peculiar feature in American character.

THE LETTER-PRESS

Will be profusely illustrated by numerous wood Engravings, executed in the best manner by Engravers of note from ORIGINAL DESIGNS. These Wood Cuts will not be caricatures of the Art so often presented, which have served to create a distaste for this artistic style of engraving; but will be executed by eminent engravers who have been employed at liberal prices to ensure the production of the best specimens of their skill.

A new feature in this Magazine will be a Serial Illustration of

THE LIFE OF WASHINGTON;

To be continued through twelve numbers. The pictures to be made expressly for this Magazine, by T. H. MATTESON, whose "Spirit of '76," "First Prayer in Congress," &c. &c. have already stamped him pre-eminent as an Historical Painter.

The text descriptive of these paintings will be from the powerful pen of J. T. HEADLEY, the well known author of "Napoleon and His Marshalls," "Washington and His Generals," &c. &c. making when completed, the ever given to the Public.

The determination to produce a monthly periodical which shall be eminently American and exclusively original in every department, we feel assured will meet the approbation of a liberal Public, and its practical fulfilment secure a patronage indicative of the warm interest which is universally taken in this country for the advance of American Literature and Art.

Holden's Dollar Magazine!

Largest! Cheapest!! Best!!!

8 to 20 Splendid wood Engravings each month!

This unrivalled Family Magazine, universally acknowledged by the Press as the best American Periodical published, offers at the commencement of the 3d volume unusual inducements to subscribers. Its features hereafter will be entirely American, including American Views, American Portraits, American Tales, American Sketches. A series of Engravings, from the paintings of our best artists, including Cole, Gignoux, Durand, Edmonds and others, is in vigorous preparation, and the facile pencil of the inimitable Darley is now actively engaged in enriching Holden with his Portraits of the Public Men of America.

The Portraits of Distinguished American Divines will be continued in every No., as heretofore, with life like sketches of their lives and ministry. Each No. will be filled with Tales, Poems, Essays, Reviews, Sketches, Translations, Topics of the Month, and will embrace everything Amusing, Instructive, and Readable now in progress in the world.

As a Family Magazine, the Editor is confident that no rivalry can affect, or opposition lessen its value and worth and he offers it to the world as in tone, character, literary merit, and illustrative beauty, The model Magazine of the Nineteenth Century!

No family in the land can afford to be without Holden in its circle; for when such a periodical can be obtained one year for the trifle of one dollar, who will not wish to subscribe?

The great feature of Holden is, that, while being peculiarly American in sentiment and feeling, it gathers and embodies all the beauties of the French, English and American Periodicals, while discarding their follies and vices. A combination of the Encyclopedia, the Gazetteer the Quarterly Review, and the Weekly Newspaper, it is yet separate and distinct from all, but possessing enough of their various qualifications to commend itself to every reader.

See what the press says of Holden.

* * 'The Editor's table is very rich and amusing—in some respects equal to that of the Knickerbocker.'—[N. Y. Evangelist.

☞ Holden's Dollar Magazine for September is an excellent number. The literary contents are varied and interesting; the sketches of living American Poets and Divines cannot fail of giving the work a very popular character. The Editor's table is lively and piquant, and the book notices copious and candid. We understand the circulation of this Magazine is rapidly increasing.—Horace Greely, of the N. Y. Tribune.

Holden's Dollar Magazine.—The September number of this work has been received, and to simply say that it is a valuable publication, would not be doing justice to its merits. It is the best of Magazines and must soon assume its place at the head of the literary Press.—[Democrat, Bloomsbury N. Y.

Holden's Dollar Magazine.—The August No. of this sterling journal is now upon our table. In glancing over its contents we are forcibly struck at the superior arrangement of everything appertaining to Literature and Art.—the articles are all of a high order—far surpassing any-thing that appears in "Graham's," or "Godey's Lady's Book." The typography of the No. before us, is most excellent, vieing in whiteness of paper and clearness and distinctness of type, with any similar work published in the United States.—[Republican, Jackson, Tenn.

Holden's Dollar Magazine is the most interesting introduction of popular literature that we know. The price, as its name implies, is but one dollar a year, and we reccommend everybody to subscribe for it. —Advertiser Lowell, Mass.

'We believe there is no periodical published in America that contains so nuch choice reading matter and such excellent engravings, for so little money.'—Star, Houston, Texas.

Over three thousand, five hundred similar notices have been received, but these must suffice.

The object of the Editor has been to give a Three Dollar Magazine for one third price, and a glance at Holden's will show the result. Now, he only asks the support of the community, and in return will give improvements as they are demanded.

☞ Now is the time to subscribe, as those sending first will receive the first impressions of the engravings. The No.'s can be furnished from July, 1848 if wished by subscribers—that month commencing the previous volume.

TERMS FOR 1849.—(IN ADVANCE.)

1 copy, one year $1 00. 5 copies, one year $4 00. 20 copies, one year $15 00.

Premium!—Postmasters, or others, sending 20 names and $15 will receive Vol. II of Holden's Magazine, handsomely bound in muslin and gilt-edged! Address (post paid) CHARLES W. HOLDEN,

CAUTION EXTRA

A man by the name of CLAPP has engaged with a young man of the name of S. P. Townsend, and uses his name to put up a Sarsaparilla, which they call Dr. Townsend's Sarsaparilla, denominating it GENUINE, Original, etc. This Townsend is no doctor, and never was; but was formerly a worker on railroads, canals, and the like. Yet he assumes the title of Dr., for the purpose of gaining credit for what he is not. This is to caution the public not to be deceived, and purchase none but the GENUINE ORIGINAL OLD Dr. Jacob Townsend's Sarsaparilla, having on it the Old Dr's. likeness, his family coat of arms, and his signature across the coat of arms.

Principal Office, 102 Nassau st., New York City

OLD DR. JACOB TOWNSEND,

THE ORIGINAL DISCOVERER OF THE

Genuine Townsend Sarsaparilla.

Old Dr. Townsend is now about 70 years of age, and has long been known as the AUTHOR and DISCOVERER of the GENUINE ORIGINAL "TOWNSEND SARSAPARILLA." Being poor, he was compelled to limit its manufacture, by which means it has been kept out of market, and the sales circumscribed to those only who had proved its worth, and known its value. It had reached the ears of many, nevertheless, as those persons who had been healed of sore diseases, and saved from death, proclaimed its excellence and wonderful

HEALING POWER.

Knowing, many years ago, that he had, by his skill, science and experience, devised an article which would be of incalculable advantage to mankind when the means would be furnished to bring it into universal notice, when its inestimable virtues would be known and appreciated. This time has come, the means are supplied; this GRAND AND UNEQUALLED PREPARATION is manufactured on the largest scale, and is called for throughout the length and breadth of the land, especially as it is found incapable of degeneration or deterioration.

Unlike young S. P. Townsend's, it improves with age, and never changes, but for the better: because it is prepared on scientific principles by a scientific man. The highest knowledge of Chemistry, and the latest discoveries of the art, have all been brought into requisition in the manufacture of the Old Dr's Sarsaparilla. The Sarsaparilla root, it is well known to medical men, contains many medicinal properties, and some properties which are inert or useless, and others, which if retained in preparing it for use, produce fermentation and acid, which is injurious to the system. Some of the properties of Sarsaparilla are so volatile, that they entirely evaporate and are lost in the preparation, if they are not preserved by a scientific process, known only to those experienced in its manufacture. Moreover, these volatile principles, which fly off in vapor, or as an exhalation, under heat, are the very essential medical properties of the root, which give to it all its value.

Any person can boil or stew the root till they get a dark-colored liquid, which is more from the coloring matter in the root than from any thing else; they can then strain this insipid or vapid liquid, sweeten with sour molasses, and then call it "SARSAPARILLA EXTRACT or SYRUP." But such is not the article known as the

GENUINE OLD DR. JACOB TOWNSEND'S SARSAPARILLA.

This is so prepared, that all the inert properties of the Sarsaparilla root are first removed, every thing capable of becoming acid or of fermentation, is extracted and rejected; then every particle of medical virtue is secured in a pure and concentrated form; and thus it is rendered incapable of losing any of its valuable and healing properties. Prepared in this way, it is made the most powerful agent in the

Cure of innumerable diseases.

Hence the reason why we hear commendations on every side in its favor by men, women, and children. We find it doing wonders in the cure of CONSUMPTION, DYSPEPSIA, and LIVER COMPLAINT, and in RHEUMATISM, SCROFULA, PILES, COSTIVENESS, all CUTANEOUS ERUPTIONS, PIMPLES, BLOTCHES, and all affections arising from

IMPURITY OF THE BLOOD.

It possesses a marvellous efficacy in all complaints arising from Indigestion, from Acidity of the Stomach, from unequal circulation, determination of blood to the head, palpitation of the heart, cold feet and hands, cold chills and hot flashes over the body. It has not its equal in Colds and Coughs; and promotes easy expectoration and gentle perspiration, relaxing stricture of the lungs, throat, and every other part.

But in nothing is its excellence more manifestly seen and acknowledged than in all kinds and stages of

FEMALE COMPLAINTS.

It works wonders in cases of Fluor Albus or Whites, Falling of the Womb, Obstructed, Suppressed, or Painful Menses, Irregularity of the menstrual periods, and the like; and is as effectual in curing all the forms of Kidney Diseases.

By removing obstructions, and regulating the general system, it gives tone and strength to the whole body, and thus cures all forms of

Nervous diseases and debility,

and thus prevents or relieves a great variety of other maladies, as Spinal irritation, Neuralgia, St. Vitus' Dance Swooning, Epileptic Fits, Convulsions, &c.

It cleanses the blood, excites the liver to healthy action, tones the stomach, and gives good digestion, relieves the bowels of torpor and constipation, allays inflammation, purifies the skin, equalises the circulation of the blood, producing gentle warmth equally all over the body, and the insensible perspiration; relaxes all strictures and tightness, removes all obstructions, and invigorates the entire nervous system. Is not this then

The medicine you pre-eminently need?

But can any of these things be said of S. P. Townsend's inferior article? This young man's liquid is not to be

COMPARED WITH THE OLD DR'S,

because of one GRAND FACT, that the one is INCAPABLE of DETERIORATION, and

NEVER SPOILS,

while the other DOES; souring, fermenting, and blowing the bottles containing it into fragments; the sour, acid liquid exploding, and damaging other goods! Must not this horrible compound be poisonous to the system?—What! put acid into a system already diseased with acid! What causes Dyspepsia but acid? Do we not all know that when food sours in our stomachs, what mischiefs it produces? flatulence, heartburn, palpitation of the heart, liver complaint, diarrhœa, dysentery, colic, and corruption of the blood? What is Scrofula but an acid humor in the body? What produces all the humors which bring on Eruptions of the Skin, Scald Head, Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, White Swellings, Fever Sores, and all ulcerations, internal and external? It is nothing under heaven, but an acid substance, which sours, and thus spoils all the fluids of the body, more or less. What causes Rheumatism but a sour or acid fluid which insinuates itself between the joints and elsewhere, irritating and inflaming the delicate tissues upon which it acts? So of nervous diseases, of impurity of the blood, or deranged circulations, and nearly all the ailments which afflict human nature.

Now is it not horrible to make and sell, and infinitely worse to use this

and yet he would fain have it understood that Old Dr. Jacob Townsend's Genuine Original Sarsaparilla, is an IMITATION of his inferior preparation!!

Heaven forbid that we should deal in an article which would bear the most distant resemblance to S. P. Townsend's articles! and which should bring down upon the Old Dr. such a mountain load of complaints and criminations from Agents who have sold, and purchasers who have used S. P. Townsend's FERMENTING COMPOUND.

We wish it understood, because it is the absolute truth, that S. P. Townsend's article and Old Dr. Jacob Townsend's Sarsaparilla are heaven-wide apart, and infinitely dissimilar; that they are unlike in every particular, having not one single thing in common.

As S. P. Townsend is no doctor, and never was, is no chemist, no pharmaceutist—knows no more of medicine or disease than any other common, unscientific, unprofessional man, what guarantee can the public have that they are receiving a genuine scientific medicine, containing all the virtues of the articles used in preparing it, and which are incapable of changes which might render them the AGENTS of Disease instead of health.

But what else should be expected from one who knows nothing comparatively of medicine or disease! It requires a person of some experience to cook and serve up even a common decent meal. How much more important is it that the persons who manufacture medicine, designed for

should know well the medical properties of plants, the best manner of securing and concentrating their healing virtues, also an extensive knowledge of the various diseases which affect the human system, and how to adapt remedies to these diseases!

It is to arrest frauds upon the unfortunate, to pour balm into wounded humanity, to kindle hope in the despairing bosom, to restore health and bloom, and vigor into the crushed and broken, and to banish infirmity that OLD DR. JACOB TOWNSEND has SOUGHT and FOUND the opportunity and means to bring his

within the reach, and to the knowledge of all who need it, that they may learn and know, by joyful experience, its

Transcendent Power to Heal.

DR. JACOB TOWNSEND. NEW YORK, Oct. 5, 1848.

WALKED ACROSS THE ROOM

with the aid of crutches. Since then, I have walked in the street: have gone alone from 36 Spruce street to the Park; thence to Lovejoy's Hotel and back. I have been to 85 Nassau-street two different times, and am now frequently visiting my neighbors. During all this time, I have taken but two bottles of Old Dr. Townsend's Sarsaparilla. Oct. 4, I procured another bottle to-day (5th Oct.) I walked twice across the floor without the aid of crutches. I have also nearly recovered from obstruction of water, which gave me great distress. The pain in my back has likewise left me. I and my family have no earthly reason to ascribe my recovery to any other cause but to

OLD DR. JACOB TOWNSEND'S SARSAPARILLA.

ALEX. WELSH, 36 Spruce-st.

P. S.—Several able physicians despaired of my ever walking or even raising myself from my bed again.

From Dr. Mackay's Town Lyrics.

What Might be Done.

What might be done if men were wise—
What glorious deeds, my suffering brother
Would they unite,
In love and right,
And cease their scorn of one another?

Oppression's heart might be imbued
With kindling drops of loving kindness,
And knowledge pour,
From shore to shore,
Light on the eyes of mental blindness.

All slavery, warfare, lies and wrongs,
All vice and crime might die together;
And wine and corn,
To each man born,
Be free as warmth in summer weather.

The meanest wretch that ever trod,
The deepest sunk in guilt and sorrow,
Might stand erect,
In self-respect,
And share the teeming worldto-morrow.

What might be done? This might be done,
And more than this, my suffering brother;
More than the tongue
Ever said or sung,
If men were wise and loved each other.

Black Eyes and Blue.

Blue eyes and jet
Fell out one morn;
Azure cried in pet,
"Away dark scorn!
"We are brilliant and blue,
"As the waves of the sea:"
"And as cold and untrue,
"And as changeable, ye.

"We are born of the sky,
"Of a summer night,
"When first stars lie
"In a bed of blue light,
"From the cloudy zone
Round the setting sun,
Like an angel's throne
"Are our glories won.

"Pretty ladies, hold,"
Cupid said to the eyes:
"For beauties that scold,
"Are seldom wise;
" 'Tis not colour I seek,
"Love's fires to impart—
"Give me eyes that can speak
"From the depths of the heart."

A SURE CHARGE.—A merchant of Mississippi during a day,s business in which he had been crowded with customers, sold a saddle of the value of forty dollars, but had neglected to make the charge. Next day he missed the saddle and recollected the fact of the sale' but not the individual who had bought it. After racking his memory for some time to no purpose, he directed his clerk Jim' to turn to his letter alphabet and read off W,s' then the S's, the B's, the C's and other letters in succession' but all to no purpose.

Tired out with the mental exercise' and as the readiest way of settling the difficulty,' Jim,' said he, 'charge a saddle to every one of the customers.' This was accordingly done. When the planters had got their cotton in, and settling time come round, the bills were presented; and if occasionally one man more prudent than his neighbors went through the drudgery of examining a long list of sundries got by different members of the family, he might possibly discover a saddle he had not got' and objecting to the item, it would of course be struck out, saying it was a mistake.

When all the accounts had been settled up, 'Well, Jim,' said the shopkeeper, 'how many customers paid you for that saddle?' Jim examined, and reported, thirty-one! 'Little enough" exclaimed his employer, 'for the trouble we have had to find out who got it.'

A countryman, at Bury assizes, was indicted and arraigned for stealing a goose; but the accusation was false, for he brought a neighbor of his, who swore positively, that he remembered that very goose in his posesion ever since it was a goslin—An Irishman, who was a prisioner for stealing a gun, hearing this successful defence, prevailed on a fellow countryman of his, to swear that he remembered the gun in his posession ever since it was a pistol.

MASSACHUSETTS AND CONNECTICUT PEDLERS.

'One day,' said the bay state pedler, 'as I was driving along, a fellow with a load of tin came out of a by-road, and followed right along in my tracks. 'Mister, which way are you going?' said I.

'Going ahead! don't you see?' said he.

'Yes,' said I. 'I reckon we had better take different roads, else only one of us will sell any tin. What say you?'

'Yes, we will. You may go ahead and sell all you can, and then I'll sell as much again as you.'

'Why? Will you sell much cheaper?'

'No—I'll get more for every article.'

'Well, I don't see how you can do it.'

'Try it, and I'll show you. I'll stop here while you drive to the house yonder, and sell all you can. Start on your team a little, and then come back for your whip or something you have dropped, and you can see how I sell.'

'Well,' said I. 'So I drove up to the house and went in, and spoke to the gentleman, who was reading the newspaper. 'How de du?' say I. But he did'nt mind anything about me.

'Want to buy any tin pans, pails, or cups, or anything?'

'No.'

'I'll sell cheap, and take almost anything in pay.,

'Don't wan't none.'

'But just look at my lot, it is the completest you ever saw.'

'Don't want to.'

'Well, I really wish I could sell you something. You really think you can't buy?'

'No; dont want nothing.'

So I went out and started on my horse. Whoa, says I—now I'll see what that Connecticut fellow can do. So I walks back to the house.

'I didn't leave my whip here, did I?'

'Haint seen it,' said the old man, keeping on reading advertisements. Then the Connecticut fellow came in.

'How far is it to a tavern?'

'Half a mile,' said the old man.

'I'm as dry as a codfish. I'll take some of your water,' walking up to a table, and taking up a pewter mug. 'Oh,' said he, 'it is cider;' making believe he was going to set it down.

'Drink it,' said the old man; and he did.

'That's royal cider; you make that for your own use; can't buy such as that.—If I had a barrel of that in Boston, I'd get five dollars for it. How did you make it?'

'Made it out of apples.'

'Did you? Well, they must have been extraordinary good ones—every one fit to make mince pies of. Got a large orchard, haint you, Squire?'

'No.'

'First-rate, what there is on it, then.' Got a snug house here too; haven't seen many houses I like as well as this; and I've seen a good many in my day. Real snug house,' said he, looking round as if hunting a fly. 'How many rooms up stairs?'

'Four, and all finished off,' said the old woman, who was ironing. On that he turned right around, and made all his talk to her.

'Four, and all finished off, and furnished! You are thriving like all natur! Got smart girls enough to fill them all up?'

'No, only one.'

'Well, one good one is enough—better than three or four ordinary ones. How old is she?'

'Eighteen.'

'Eighteen? She'll be married before long, I reckon. Not many girls like yours live to be an old maid.'

'I don't think she'll be an old maid'

'She looks like you, don't she now?—I've heard of her—she's handsome as a picture. What a handsome setting out you'll give her!'

'Yes, I've got five pair of linen sheets and four coverlids that I made for her this summer. I mean, if ever she does get married, that she shall have as good a setting out as any body.'

'So I would, and you are able to do it. Now I think of it, I've got a few first-rate things that I mean to carry home to somebody, you can guess who, (winking) I've been offered more than they are worth, but I would not sell them; but I've a mind to let you have them for that girl of yours. I don't know, though, as I can let 'em go. Betsey will expect them. But come, you may look at them.'

So the old woman put on her specs, and went out with him to his wagon.—He dug to the bottom, and handed out some pans and pails just like those on top.

'Here they are; I keep them stowed away out of sight; the genuine Lafayette tin, come from France. The more you use them the brighter they grow; they never need scouring.'

'What's the price of these common ones?' pointing to some just like those in his hand.

'Five shillings; and these are ten; the Lafayette tin costs nine shillings and six pence; but for that pretty girl's sake—that looks like you they say—I'll let you have a few for seven shillings.'

So he went on talking, till he had sold her more than five dollars worth of ware not nigh as good as mine, and at a good deal higher prices. When he started on, says he:

'How much did you sell?'

'None.'

'Ah! you didn't come from Connecticut.'

'No, I didn't,' says I; and then in a low voice, 'and I don't want to, if they all lie as you do.'

Killing Mosquitoes with Ink.

We heard an amusing story the other day of an incident which happened to a lady in a neighboring town. Her aversion to those lttle annoyances yclept mosquitoes is only equalled by their attachment to her person. Particularly affectionate are they during the time when the faculties of man are generally locked in sleep. To counteract this tendency, Mrs. Smith, for so we will call her, has usually had recourse to a bottle of camphor, which so tickled the nose of the mosquetoes, that they generally took themselves off, humming at the same time a complaint of unfair and ungrateful treatments from the fair object of their attachment.

One night after retiring, Mrs Smith being rather more than usually annoyed, rose from her bed, and in the dark went to the place in which the camphor bottle was usually deposited, and, to her chagrin found that it was entirely empty.—What was to be done? Unless she could obtain some article which would be offensive to their mosquitoeships, sleep and herself would be strangers for the night. To another closet she rushed, in which were several bottles, among which was one containing lavender; and seizing it at a venture, she extracted the cork to try the odor. The inspection seemed to her satisfactory, although the sequel proved that unfortunately for herself her olfactory nerves were not in the most perfect order, and she went to work immediately sprinkling the liquid about her chamber, and over the bedclothes.

Taking a quantity in her hands she bathed freely her face, and that of her husband, who was sleeping in total unconsciousness of all annoyance. Then with the thoughts of having done a laudable deed, she returned to her bed, and was soon sleeping sound as her lord and master.

Mr. Smith, who was an early riser—awoke the next morning just as the sun was poking his nose into the window, and casting his eyes upon his spouse, uttered an exclamation of surprise and sprang from the bed. The noise he made awakened Mrs. Smith, who screamed with affright at seeing a man with a coal black face standing at her bedside; but her fright was changed to mirth to catching a glimpse at her own countenance in the looking glass. Matters were soon explained, and she found that the fluid she had mistaken for cologne was a bottle of very fine ink, which Mr. Smith had just obtained and placed in the closet for safe keeping. The carpet, bed clothes, and furniture showed conclusively that the ink was, as warranted, one of the best articles in the market. Six mosquitoes were found dead, or in an expireing condition; but although the effect on them was so decided, Mrs. S has not been to try the sable liquid since, and shudders whenever she sees an ink-stand.—N. O. Picayune.

No man should be ashamed of the occupation which secures to him an honest livelyhood.

'Young men taken in here,' is the playcard upon a cheap boarding house in New-York.

The frost came to the flower and sought to marry—'Wilt thou?' said the frost, and the flower wilted.

Time is the smartest thief on record; notwithstanding there are so many watches set for him—he is continually stealing away.

Married in spite of their teeth.

Old Govener Saltonstall of Connecticut, who flourished some forty years since, was a man of some humor, as well as perseverance, in effecting the ends he desired. Among other anecdotes told of him by the New-London people, the place where he resided, is the following:

Of the various sects which have flourished for their day, and then ceased to exist, was one known as the Rogerites, so called from their founder, a John or a Tom, or some other Rogers, who settled not far from the goodly town aforesaid.

The distinguishing tenent of the sect was their denial of the propriety and scripturality of form of marriage. 'It is not good for man to be alone. This they believed, and also that one wife only should cleave to her husband,' but then this should be a matter of agreement merely, and then the couple should come together and live as man and wife' dispensing with all forms of the marriage convenant. The old Governer used frequently to call upon Rogers, and talk the matter over with him, and endeavor to convince him of the impropriety of living with Sarah as he did. But neither John or Sarah would give up the argument.

It was a matter of conscience with them, they were very happy together as they were; of what use then could a mere form be? Suppose they would thereby escape scandal; were they not bound 'to take up the cross,' and live according to the rules they professed? The governor's logic was powerless.

He was in the neighborhood of Rogers one day, and meeting with him, accepted an invitation to dine with him. The conversation as usual turned upon the old subject.

,Now, John,' said the governor, after a debate of the point, ,why will you not marry Sarah? Have you not taken her for your lawful wife?'

'Yes, certainly,' replied John, 'but my concience will not permit me to marry her, in the forms of the world's people.'

'Very well. But you love her?'

'Yes.'

'And respect her?'

'Yes'

'And cherish her as bone of your bone, and flesh of your flesh?'

'Yes, certainly, I do.'

Turning to her, the governor said:

'And you love him, and obey him, and respect him, and cherish him?'

'Certainly I do.'

'Then,' cried the governer, rising, 'in the name of the laws of God, and of the Common wealth of Connecticut, I pronounce you to be husband and wife!,

The ravings and rage of John and Sarah were of no avail—the knot was tied by the highest authority of the State.

A BETTER HALF.—A very small man, who is blessed [?] with a very large wife, that instead of looking up to him with admiration, is in the habit of looking down upon him with something akin to contempt, called her yesterday in her presence, by way of compliment, 'my better half.' 'Your better half!' said she, with a disdainful toss of the head, 'you had better say your best three-quarters, you are not more than one-fourth of the joint concern no how.'

'I never complained of my condition,' says the Persian poet Sadi, 'but once, when my feet were bare, and I had no money to buy shoes; but I met a man without feet, and I was satisfied with my lot.'

'My lad,' said a lady to a boy, carrying an empty mail bag, 'are you a mail boy?'

'You don't think I'se a female boy, doz ye?'

PLAINFIELD GAZETTE.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Thursday, January, 25, 1849.

Equal Rights is what the constitution guarantees to every individual, and in this enlightened age, no person should be satisfied with any-thing short of equal rights.

But what are the facts? Why from the signing of the first act of incorporation, giving the first man, or sompany of men, any privilege which the constitution did not before guarantee to him or them, was a usurpation of the people's rights, unconstitutional and unjust.

If at any time the legislature had passed a law to the following effect for the the benefit of Plainfield, or any other town, viz: An act for the better supplying the inhabitants of Plainfield with provisions and water. It is hereby enacted that A. B. of the town of Plainfield, he being the richest man among you, and therefore best able to supply your wants, shall have, and by this act is declared to have the exclusive right to furnish to the inhabitants of the town of Plainfield, Flour, Potatoes, Corn, Pork &c. and that the inhabitants of the town aforesaid, each and every one, shall repair unto the aforesaid A. B's. house for the above mentioned articles, and shall pay unto the said A. B. whatever he in his clemency may ask for the same, he being known to us as a just man. And it is also enacted, that the aforesaid inhabitants shall repair unto the aforesaid A. B's. well, with such sized buckets as the said A. B. shall say will be sufficient for each persons use. All persons not complying with the above act, shall be sent to the District of Columbia, the seat of Government of the United States, and there sold as a slave to the highest bidder, and the proceeds of said sale to be paid over to the aforesaid A. B.

What would be the effect of such a law? Why they would instantly have said this shall not be so, and would also have resisted unto death, any person or persons attempting to carry the above law into effect.

Yet the inhabitants of Plainfield, and of the State at large have looked calmly on and suffered equally important rights to be lost. But because those rights do not bear directly on each individual as they would in the above case of A. B. no one has thougt them of sufficient interest for him to resist. Because our rights have been taken at different times and always on some pretext to benefit the people, they have imperceptably glided away from us like the dew from off the grass in a summers morning, and we now find ourselves burthened with R. Road monopolies, Banks, Ferry Company's &c. &c. which have all been granted upon the pretext of benefit to the people.

By what right did those having the peoples interest in charge, grant the unjust monopoly of the Deleware and Raritan Canal and Camden and Amboy R. Road Companies, the right to traverse the State we believe forever, with the privilege to purchase the road at the end of thirty years after its completion!—What would A. B's privilege in Plainfild amount to in comparison with this? Yet the one they would resist, while the other is suffered, aye, and the principle advocated by many. Yet in our judgment the R. Road monopoly is worse than A. B's would be, only in the one case we would be directly the sufferers, and by the other we suffer indirectly, transfer A. B's right to the town of Rahway, and the inhabitants of Plainfield would suffer indirectly as they now do by the R. Road monopoly.

We contend the Legislature has the same right to pass such a law in favor of A. B. as they had to grant this Canal and R. Road Companies.

Can it be supposed for a moment that the people of this State will suffer any company to enjoy the exclusive right to traverse this State forever! We predict that not only will the people of this State, but of the U. States will destroy not only this but all other monopolies before the earth makes fifty more revolutions around the Sun, or be themselves destroyed, i. e. slaves. This is not the only monopoly, there are thousands of others, and all and each, that enjoy any exclusive right, no matter for what, whether for evil or for good, are no less monopolies and deprive men of equal rights.

We subjoin a paragraph in illustrstion from an exchange paper, which states "Joining the shakers in New-Hampshire deprives a man of his property, according to a law passed by the Legislatnre, which adjourned last week. This is the last edition we have seen of Salem Witchcraft, and is a stretch of power, and a disgrace to the Legislature which passed it. We do not know which they deserve most, our pity or contempt.

Let us have general laws on every subject which requires any law, that all may have equal rights, let them fall like the dews of heaven on the just and unjust, by having special laws, it becomes necessary to make one to suit each case, hence there are so many, but for special laws one half, perhaps two-thirds, of the laws we have would not be wanted.

We contend that every special law, granting to one man or company of men, any exclusive right, no matter what the pretext is, is an usurpation of the rights of the people, and are unconstitutional, and should and will be declared by the people, null and void.

MECHANICS.—To the mechanics themselves, perhaps, it may be well enough to hold the language that it is their own fault that they sustain no higher position in society; it may stimulate them to the exertion necessary to change it. But when they are viewed as they should be, as a portion of the community upon whom so much depends in order to render us a nation a little more independant of foreign influences, the mechanic will cease to be looked upon as an unimportant member of society, or reproached for the humble station he occupies.

Concert

A Concert will be given on Tuesday Evening the 6th of February at the M. E. Church in this Village, by the Choir of the Broadway Tabernacle N. Y. City, under the direction of Mr. Andrews, to aid in liqidation of the debts contracted in building said Church; the gratification of all will be doubled by aiding a laudable object, and at the same time hearing good music, let all who can attend.

Tickets can be had at the following places: J. Briant's, P. M. French's, D. Bullman's, Titsworth Dunn & Co, H A Cory's, Titsworth & Dunham's, J. W. Laing's and Frazee's Hotel, and at this Office.

Postage Reform

If the difficulty of pre-paymet for drop letters can be overcome, we say adopt it by all means, as pre-payment will do much for cheap postage, as no doubt the net revenue would be as large as under the old system; cheap postage has long been demanded by the people and should at once be adopted.

☞ Thirty-six thousand letters for various points in Europe, were despatched from N. York on Wednesday, by the Europea The largest number heretofore carried out by any one ship, it is said, has not exceeded 13,000. This astonishing increase is attributed to the reduction of the rates of postage.

COL. DUNCAN has been nominated to the Senate as Inspector General of the Army, in place of Col. Croghan, deceased, and will, no doubt, be unanimously confirmed. He fought in every battle but one of the war with Mexico, beginning with Palo Alto and Resaca de la Palma, and finishing with the last struggle at the gates of the City of Mexico.

Monday Jan. 22.

Seabury Ford, the newly elected Whig Governor of Ohio, was inaugurated this afternoon.

A rumor is current that Gen. Lewis Cass has been elected United Statet Senator for the State of Michigan.

The Reform in the present outtageous Mileage system we regret to learn, was killed.

The sober second thought of a very large number of persons who were at first all eagerness to be off for the gold regions, is to stay where they are, and let well enough alone.

SOUTH-CAROLINA.—Gen. John McQueen has been elected to Congress from the Georgetown District of S. C. to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Mr. Sims. His majority is upward of 700 votes. Mr Mc Queen is elected both for the unexpired terms of the present Conress and for the next Congress. He is reported to be a Taylor Loco-Foco.—N. Y. Tribune.

A California Damper

We are told that Messas. Savage & Hawkins, gold assayers at 128 William st. have received a lump of what was supposed to be California gold, weighing 20 ounces Troy weight, to be assayed. It proved to be sulphuret of iron.

After all the noise, and bluster about tariffs and the manufacturing interest of the country, if any one will take the trouble to examine a map of the United States, and examine a little into the history of each state, and especially of its production, we think that any one not prejudiced in favor of any particular interest must acknowledge that the great interest of these United States is Agriculture.—Look carefully over the map and examine the small area and the few States engaged in manufactures in comparison to those making agriculture the basis of their prosperity, and he must see at a glance as it were, the preponderency of the agricultural interest.

From the annual report of the commissioner of patents we make the following extract:

"In surveying the agriculture productions of the Union, we are not only struck with their abundance, but with their great variety and value. Its territorial domain extends from the frigid regions of the north to the genial climate of the tropics, affording almost every variety of temperature, and every kind of grain and vegetable. In the north we have rich and abundant pasturage, giving for the valuable products of the flock and dairy; in the midle and western regions of the Union, corn in all its varieties is produced in superabundant quantities; and in the south, rice, cotton and sugar grow luxuriantly; and nearly all in sufficient quantities to supply our domestic consumption, and furnish large surpluses for exportation, thus furnishing nearly all the value as well as bulk of our foreign commerce.—When contemplating the extent and the value of its products, the number of persons engaged, and the capital employed, the agriculturist may well believe that agriculture is the great transcendent interest of the Union, upon which all other interests are dependent.

And he has equal reason to console himself with the honerable character and exalted dignity of the pursuit in which he is engaged. No occupation offers a greater field for experiment, and for the application of science directed by sound judgment. Experience has proved that every grain, vegetable, and fruit, is susceptible of improvement by scientific cultivation.

The amount of butter in the State of New York alone made in one year was 79,501,770 lbs wich at 9 1-2 cents would amount to $9'937,716, again the quantity of milk not less than 15,000,000 or 16,000,00, quarts a year, beside the enormous quantities of eggs.

The cost of raising a pushel of wheat in Michigan is given for four years actual experiment as follow: 1st year 67 1-2 cents, 2nd year 36 4-5 cts. 3d year 28 cts 4th year 30 cents. In view of these facts it is stated that the grain growers of the United States can successfully compete with those of any other nation in the great corn marts of the world.

Further the report states that the American grain grower can deliver grain or flour at as low a price in England as the grain growers of any other country, not excepting Russia on the Black Sea."

All this with agriculture in its infancy, what may we expect when agriculture is advanced as it is continually doing, until the various states which are now engaged in it shall come up to some counties of the state of New York, the produce would be beyond anything which we have heretofore imagined possible, without saying anything about the vast amount of public lands wich every year are coming under cultivation, talk about a protective tarrff to benefit this vast interest, is like the fly on the coach wheel fancying itself the cause of the dust that was raised. The great foundation of the prosperity of these United States is and always must continue to be agriculture and commerce.

Post-Office Revenue—Mail Carriage.

The Northern States defray by far the greater proportion of the cost of transporting the public mails. During the year 1846-7, it cost $256,464 to transport the mails through New-England; the revenue raised from postages was $443,648; the expense of mail transportation in N. Y. and Penn., was only $384,719; the revenue raised from postages in these two States, $746,933. In Virginia, Maryland, the Carolinas and Georgia, on the other hand, $770,044 were paid for mail transportation, while only $311,569 were raised as revenue at all the Post Offices in these five States. Alabama raises under $50,000 revenue, while over $136,000 are paid to convey the mails throughout, and the new State of Texas raises but $8,246 in part of $24,102 expended. Wisconsin pays $56,703 of postage, while its mail conveyance costs but $15,043; Iowa, even, is within $500 of meeting all charges. The United States Senators from South Carolina and other Southern States, were the chief opponents of cheap postage, when the 5 and 10 cent rates were adopted; yet the South, where education is discouraged, and hundreds of thousands of the white people are unable to read and write, throws the heavy burden of mail carriage upon the North and East.

For the Gazette.

GENTLEMEN:—I am gratified that you have commenced the publication of a Democratic paper in Plainfield. The cause of equal rights needs but a fair hearing to commend itself to the approbation of a majority of our townsmen. The doctrines taught by Jefferson are well adapted to reach the hearts and affect the actions of all right-minded men. As you advocate "Equal justice to all—exclusive privileges to none," I trust that all—no matter what may be their political opinions—who are in favor of free discussion will give The Gazette an efficient support. It is an encouraging sign to the patriot to witness the attention which the mass of our people give to State affairs. This is because political subjects are freely discussed in the newspapers. A people can never love their liberties while they are so well acquainted with political principles.

Thermometer.

What is a Thermometer? An instrument for measuring degrees of heat by the expansion and compression of some fluid contained in the bulb.

From what is the word Thermometer derived? From two Greek words 'therme' heat and 'metreo' to measure. A heat measure. When was the Thermometer invented? In 1610. Who invented the Thermometer? Galileo. Whose Thermometer is now used? Farenheit's. How is a Thermometer made? After the air is taken out of the tube some quicksilver is put into it, the tube is then put into some pounded ice, and the place where the quicksilver sinks to is marked 32°.

What is the point called? The freezing point. What is next done? The tube is put into some boiling water and marked 212° How is the space between these two points divided? Into 180 equal parts called degrees. How many degrees below freezing point is zero? 32° From what is the word zero derived? From the Arabic word 'tsapher' empty space. What other word is derived from it? Cipher. What is the greatest extent can be ascertained by the Thermometer? 40° below zero and 660° above. Why? Because quicksilver freezes at 40° below zero and boils at 660° above.

When will water boil? At 210° When will brandy boil? 190° When will spirits of wine boil? 174° When will tallow melt? 127° When is summer heat in the E. Indies? 110° When is it very hot in England? 80° When is it temperate in England? 55° What is the common heat of spring water? 50° When will Olive Oil begin to stiffen? 43° When does water freeze? 32° When is it very cold in England? 20° When is it winter in Canada? 5° What is sometimes the cold of Iceland? 20° below zero. What is fever heat? 112° What is blood heat? 98° What is Summer heat? 76° What is the greatest heat known? That of an air furnace 22000°. What is the greatest cold known? 91° below zero. When will tin melt? 442° When will lead melt? 594° When will iron be a bright red in day-light? 1077° When will silver melt? 4717° When will gold melt? 5237° When will cast iron melt? From 18° to 21000.°

California Gold.

It is said California will export yearly nearly or quite a half a million of ounces of gold, twenty-two or twenty-four carats fine; some pieces of that will weigh 16 pounds, very many one pound. Many men who began last June to dig gold with a capital of $50, can now show 5,000 to $15,000. I saw a man to-day making purchaces of dry goods, &c. for his family, lay on the counter a bag made of raw hide, well sewed up, containing one hundred ounces. I observed, that is a good way to pack gold dust. He very innocently replied—"All the bags I brought down are that way; I like the size!" Five such bags in New-York would bring near $10,000. This man left his family last August. Three months digging and washing producing four or five bags of 100 ounces each, is better than being mate of a vessel at $40 per month, as the man formerly was. His companion, a Mexican, who camped and worked with him, only had two or three cowhide bags of gold.

CALIFORNIA.—We notice in the Christian Advocate of the 11th inst. that a joint stock company of 100 is now forming in this City, to consist of members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. We are acquainted with the projector of the Association, and can recommend him as worthy the confidence of all interested. We understand about 40 have already agreed to join the Association.

LEGISLATIVE SUMMARY,

TRENTON, Jan. 16.

In Assembly.—A large number of petitions, signed by 2000 citizens, were presented from Sussex for a Bank at Deckertown.

Mr. Bishop gave notice of a bill to incorporate the city of New Brunswick.

Mr. Martin presented several petitions for, and gave notice of a bill to annex the part of Somerset included in New Brunswick to Middlesex. As the county line now runs through the city, it is extremely inconvenient, hence the desired change.

Jan. 19.

In Senate. Dr. Craig gave notice of a bill to charter the Somerville and New-Brunswick R. R. Company.

Assembly.—Mr. Day introduced a supplement to the Easton and Somerville R. R. Co.—Allowing it to purchase the Elizabethtown and Somerville Railroad.

The bill to abolish the freehold qualification of county and township officers was passed, 41 to 10.

A petition was presented to restrict the the hours of labor to 10: children 8. Also that, the revenue of the chartered companies be appropriated to schools.

The following appointments were made:

Treasurer—Samuel Mairs. Keeper of State Prison—Jacob B. Gaddis. Inspectors of the State Prison—Joshua Wright, John S. McCully, John Acken, Emley Olden, James Skirm. Librarian—Wm. De Hart.

Essex Co.—Judge—Dr. Charles Davis of Elizabeth.

Gloucester Co.—Judge—Joseph C. Gill for the unexpired term of Charles Reeves, elected Senator.

Camden Co.—Judge—James W. Lamb, for the unexpired term of Charles H. French, dec'd.

Jan. 22.

Senate.—Mr. Craig, the Assembly bill for the relief of the Rahway School for colored children.

The resolution relative to charges against the Camden & Amboy Railroad, was ordered to a 2d reading.

Mr. Craig presented the Annual Report of the State Superintendant of Public Schools; 350 copies ordered to be printed.

Assembly.—Mr. Sutphin, from Monmouth, against a division of Shrewsbury. Also for a railroad from Freehold to West Turn Out.

Mr. Nixon presented the Report of the Superintendant of Public Schools, Dr. T. F. King, which was read, and on motion of Mr. Nixon 2000 copies ordered to be printed.

Jan. 23.

Senate.—Mr. Morford, one against the division of Upper Freehold.

Mr. Walker, one from Atlantic to prevent sale of spirituous liquors on election days.

House.—Mr. Sutphin, from Monmouth for a Railroad from Freehold to Jamesburg. Also for another from South Amboy to Middletown Point. Mr. Hooper, another on the same subject.

Mr. H. Voorhees offered a resolution to adjourn sine die on the 17th of February.

Mr. Bowne moved to lay it on the table; lost, and the resolution adopted.

Mr. Martin gave notice of a bill to pension Mrs. Stelle, of Somerset, a widow of the Revolution.

NEWSPAPERS.—Dr. Franklin remarks that a man as often gets two dollars for the one he spends informing his mind as he does for a dollar he lays out in any other way. A man eats up a pound of shugar and it is gone, and the pleasure he has enjoyed is ended; but the information he gets from a newspaper is treasured up to be enjoyed anew, and to be used whenever occasion or inclination call for it.—A newspaper is not the wisdom of one man or two men, it is the wisdom of the age, and of past ages, too. A family without a newspaper is always half an age behind the times in general information; besides they can never think much nor find much to talk about. And then there are the little ones growing up in ignorance without any taste for reading. Who, then would be without a newspaper?

NEVER TOO LATE.—Ah! that I could be heard by all oppressed, dejected souls! I would cry to them—Lift up your heads and confide still in the future, and believe that it is never too late! See! I too was bowed down by long suffering, and old age had moreover overtaken me, and I believed that all my strength had vanished, that my life and my sufferings were in vain; and behold my heart appeased, my soul strengthened; and now in my fiftieth year, I advance into a new future, attended by all that life has of the beautiful and worthy of love.

The change in my soul has enabled me better to comprehend life and suffering, and I am now firmly convinced that there is no fruitless suffering, and that no virtuous endeavor is in vain. Winter days and nights may bury beneath their pall of snow the sown corn; but when the spring arrives, it will be found equally true, that 'there grows much bread in the winter night.'—[Miss Bremer.

'Oh, mother,' said a very little child, 'Mr. S. does love aunt Lucy—he sits by her—he whispers to her, and he hugs her.' 'Why, Edward, your aunt does not suffer that, does she?' 'Suffer it! no, mother, she loves it.'

Our speech forms the picture by which others see the character of our mind.

A Summary of the proceedings of Congress.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.

The Senate was engaged on the bill to reduce postage.

HOUSE.—A Joint Resolution was offered to extend the revenue laws over California, and establish a mint there.

The Senate Bill of last session was reported, to ascertain and pay the claims of Americans against Mexicans.

The discussion of the General Appropriation Bill was continued in committee of the whole. After much debate an amendment was adopted allowing each member of Congress $2000 salary, and 10 cents a mile for travelling.

Jan. 18.

The House, in Committee, continued the discussion of the General Appropriation Bill. An amendment was adopted appropriating $14,000 for additional furniture for the President's house.

Flogging in the Navy was abolished.

Jan. 19.

SENATE.—The bill to organize the Minesota Territory was passed.

HOUSE.—The Pacheco Claim Bill was reconsidered then passed, 96 to 94, and sent to the Senate.

Both Houses adjourned to Monday.

Jan. 22.

SENATE.—The Vice-President presented a memoriol from the citizens of Brooklyn for the establishment of a Branch Mint in that city.

Mr. Dix presented the resolutions of the New-York Legislature instructing her Representatives to go against the Extension of Slavery in the new Territories, against the Slave Trade in the District of Columbia. Mr. Dix moved that the Resolutions lie on the table, which was adopted.

Mr. Rusk of Texas moved to print them, for the purpose of getting an opportunity to speak, and proceeded to denounce the Resolutions at some length.

Mr. Yulee of Fla. said that the Resolutions was an insult to fifteen States of the Union.

Mr. Flournoy moved to suspend the rules in order to introduce a bill for retroceding the District of Columbia to Maryland. The question of suspension was taken by Yeas and Naes, and decided in the negative, by Yeas 77 and Nays 114.

Mr. Gaines asked leave to introduce the petition of Cyrus Hill and others of the City Government of Washington, praying the abolition of the Slave Trade in the District of Columbia. Objections being made, Mr. Gaines withdrew his motion, when the House adjourned.

Coal Trade.

The Secretary of the Treasury on a recent occasion sent to the House of Representative, in reply to a call to that effect, a statement of the quantity and value of the Coal imported into the United States from foreign countries. Comparing these quantities with those mines in Pensylvania, we have constructed the following table:

Coal imported into the United States.

	Imported tons	Value.
1830	47,000	$204,773
1844	87,073	236,963
1845	95,776	223,919
1846	156,853	378,597
1847	148,021	370,985
1848	196,251	461,140

Coal mined in Pennsylvania.

	Mined tons	Value.
1830	174,734	$870,000
1844	1'631,660	6,155,000
1845	2,021,647	10,105,000
1846	2,331.013	11,653,000
1847	2,967,405	14,835,000
1848	3,068,132	15,345,000

1846 was the last year of the old tariff, which charged $1,75 per ton duty. In 1830 the duty was 6 cents per bushel, equal to 45 per cent, on the then price. Since then, it will be seen, the consumption of the United States has increased from 221,735 tons to 3,264,383 tons, an increase of more than 3,000,000 tons, of which 140,000 tons, or five per cent, is foreign. The result is altogether one of the most marvellous developments of national resource that ever took place in any country. Eighteen years ago the coal of Pensylvania reposed in barren masses in her exhaustless basins. It is now produces $15,000,000 per annum, and employs thousands of men, and six great avenues to market, the construction of which cost not less than $30,000,000, and these supply fuel for the whole Atlantic sea board.

In contemplating this trade, it is gratifying to see that it is now altogether beyond the reach of foreign competition.

'OF course, C and his newly married wife live happily together?' asked an inquisitive lady of a wag. The gentleman gave a significant turn to his countenance, but said nothing. 'La' you don't mean that?' pursued his interrogator. The wag gave another look of direful import, and sadly shook his head. 'You don't mean to say they quarrel?' 'Worse than that, ma'am,' said the wag, for the first time using his tongue. 'What! does he beat her?' 'Oh! far worse, she—she beats him.' 'Oh! my gracious,' said the lady, starting back—'beats him! Well, I never She was about to dart off with the news to a select circle of tabbies, when the wag called her back, and assuming a mock heroic tone, added: 'Yes, ma'am, she beats him—at chess!'

Food for Cattle

That much depends not only on the kind of food but also on the manner in which it is fed out to milch cows, as respects the milk-production, is universally acknowledged. 'The softer the fodder for the milch cow, the more the milk,' is a common proverb in Saxony, and it is asserted on the best authority that cows which receive for drink luke-warm water, give much more milk than those which drink cold water; especially is this important in winter.

The great importance of warmth, in respect to cattle, is becoming more and more understood. There can be little doubt that a due attention to this particular might aid in saving millions of bushels of food in the course of a year or two, while at the same time the actual benefit of the food given would be greater.

The following calculation gives the relative value of certain kinds of food, in a little different form from what is sometimes stated:

Crops.	Average produce per acre of tubers and grain.
Beet, Mangel Wurtzel and turnips,	30 tons.
Beans,	30 bush.
Potatoes,	8 tons.
Peas,	20 bush.
Barley,	36 bush.
Jerusalem Artichokes,	10 tons.
Wheat,	25 bush.
Oats,	30 bush.

A writer in the London Gardeners' Chronicle gives the following direction to make the hens lay all winter, which would appear to be worthy of consideration by those who may be engaged in the buisiness of raising poultry:

'Keep no roosters; give the hens fresh meat, chopped up like sausage meat, once a day, a very small portion, say one-half an ounce a day, to each hen, during the winter or from the time insects disappear in the fall till they appear again in the spring. Never allow any eggs to remain in the nest for what are called nest eggs. When the rooster do not run with the hens, and no nest eggs are left in the nest, the hens will not cease laying after the production of 12 or 15 eggs, as they always do when roosters, and nest eggs are allowed—but continue laying perpetually. My hens lay all winter, and each from 70 to 100 eggs in succession. The only reason why hens do not lay in winter as freely as in summer, is the want of animal food which they get in the summer in abundance in the form of insects. I have for several winters reduced my theory to practice, and proved its entire correctness'

It is stated that a bushel of corn will last twice as long for hens as a bushel of buckwheat, but the latter will make hens lay eggs more than any other grain, and the profit overcalances the cost.

A prudent and well disposed member of the 'Society of Friends' once gave the following friendly advice:

'John,' said he, 'I hear thou art going to be married.'

'Yes,' replied John, 'I am.'

'Well,' replied the man of drab, 'I have a little piece of advice to give the, and that is, never marry a woman worth more than thou art. When I married my wife, I was worth just fifty cents, and she was worth sixty-two cents; and whenever any difference has occurred between us since, she has always thrown up the odd shilling.'

COURTSHIP.—A gentleman feeling a strong partiality for a young lady whose name was Noyes, was desirous, without the ceremony of a formal courtship, to ascertain her sentiments. For this purpose, he said to her one day—with that kind of air and manner which means either jest or earnest, as you choose to take it—'If I were to ask you whether you are under matrimonial engagements to any one, which part of your name—No-yes—might I take for an answer?'—'The first,' said she, in the same tone.—'And were I to ask if you were inclined to form such an engagement, should a person offer who loved you, and was not indifferent to yourself; what part of your name might I then take for an answer?'—'The last.'—'And if I tell you that I love you, and ask you to form such an engagement with me; then what part of your name might I take?' 'Oh, then,' replied the blushing girl, 'take the whole name; as in such a case I would cheerfully resign it for yours.'—It is almost needless to add, that they were soon after married.—Albany Chronicle.

'My wife tells the truth three times a day, remarked a jocose old fellow, at the same time casting a mischievous glance at her. 'Before rising in the morning she says, 'O, dear, I must get up, but I don't want to.' After breakfast she adds, 'Well I suppose I must go to work, but I don't want to' and she goes to bed saying, 'There' I have been passing all the day, and haven't done anything.'

'Dick, where were you yesterday?' 'Oh moving.' What, moving again?' 'Yes; I find, it cheaper to pay a hand-cartman for moving than it is to pay rent.'

If a miss is as good as a mile' how many young ladies will it take to make a league? Three.

Take-great care to fix right principles in your mind, and often review them.

☞ The true Whigs of every section of the country will rejoice to learn, as will be seen by Telegraph, that Henry Clay is nominated for Senator of the United States from Kentucky.

Another dispatch says Mr. Clay has accepted the nomination, and that it was unanimous.—N. Y. Tribune.

G.R. GRAHAM, J.R. CHANDLER, J.B. TAYLOR, EDITORS.

Terms.—Great inducements to Postmasters and clubs, unequalled by those of any other establishment. For Three Dollars in advance, (par money, in the States from which it is remitted,) one copy of Graham for one year, and Mezzotint Portraits on proof sheets, of Gen. TAYLOR, Gen. BUTLER, Gen. SCOTT, Gen. WORTH, and Capt. WALKER. These pictures properly framed, will make a valuable set of parlor or library pictures. They are engraved from undoubted originals, by the best artists, and are, of themselves, worthy the price of a year's subscription to Graham's Magazine. Or, at the option of the subscriber, remitting $3, we will send any three of Miss Pickering's or Mrs. Grey's popular works, or a magnificent Print, from the burin of a celebrated English Artist. For $5, Two Copies yearly, and a set of the Portraits above named to each subscriber. For $10, five copies yearly, and a copy of the Magazine to the Postmaster or other persons forming the Club. For $20, eleven copies, and a set of the Portraits, to each subscriber, and a copy of the Magazine to the person forming the Club.

☞ For the convenience of those desiring to form clubs in connection with other publications we will send one copy of the Magazine, and one copy of the Saturday Evening Post, for $4. One copy of the Magazine, and two of the Post for $5. Three copies of the Magazine, and four of the Post for $10. Four copies of the Magazine and two of the Post for $10. Six copies of the Magazine, and nine of the Post for $20.

A PREMIUM OFFER.

The Post Office of any town in the Union, from which we shall receive the greatest number of subscribers to Graham's Magazine, during the year between the 1st of December, 1848, and the 1st of December, 1849, (the Magazine to be mailed to such Post Office, or to subscribers through it,) shall be entitled to a continuance of the whole number of the subscriptions, GRATUITOUSLY, for one year after the expiration of the year for which their subscriptions shall have been paid. The Magazine will be continued on either to the subscribers themselves, or to the agents, through whom we may receive the orders for quantities, and to whom the package or packages may be directed, or to both, if there should both in the same town as the case may be. ☞ Postage on all letters to be pre-paid. UNDERTAKING IN GENERAL.

IT is an old maxim "a bird in the hand is worth two in the bush," ie. an advantage, to the Public to have Coffins ready made, of all sizes and descriptions, trimmed and polished in the latest styles. The undersigned having been connected with the undertaking and furnishing business for five years, (having furnished five hundred Coffins in that time,) We would refer to our former patrons that the public may be satisfied we have given entire satisfaction in every case; also having had private instruction from the most experienced undertaker in the city of New York in his styles of making and trimming; We now flatter ourselves, we are prepared to give entire satisfaction to the Citizens of Plainfield and vicinity.

We have been to considerable expense in fitting up, that none may be disappointed we would respectfully solicil the Public generally to give us a call before purchasing elsewhere.

J. W. S. MARTIN, Principal.

Also, Cabinet, Chair, & Sofa,

MANUFACTORY.

We would inform the Citizens of Plainfield and vicinity that we have from a thousand to fifteen hundred dollars worth of ready made Furniture on hand, consisting of Black Walnut, Maple, and Mahogony, to suit the taste, and pocket.

Our motto is Cheap for the "Chemicals."

Thankful for the encouragement we have already received; having had a perfect rush ever since we refused that proposal which was directly opposed to the peoples interests: We are going through the world on our own hook, without any incumbrance.

☞ General jobbing in Furniture and Chairs, at the shortest notice.

A Desperate Rogue at Large.

We have ever given due credit to our admirable police, which under the organization and discipline of its most capable and efficient head, has fully come up to the expectation of the community. Of course some wards are better manned and disciplined than others, and we are sorry to be compelled to make an exception of the Twelfth Ward. Why, the following narrative, which we had only second hand will abundantly show. Some few weeks since, a gentleman from Wall-street, who owns and inhabits a lovely residence on the banks of the Hudson, not many miles above the 'Abbey,' retired to rest at his usual respectable hour, and himself and wife were soon fast locked in the arms of Somnus, the gentleman, however, remaining awake much the longest, having read himself drowsy. About one, or it might have been a quarter past one—for we cannot be particular about the hour, he was aroused by his better half, who was shaking him and endeavoring to awaken him to full conciousness, exclaiming at the same time in a smothered tone, 'Do for goodness sake wake up, there's somebody getting in the house.' This was repeated at least half a dozen times, before the gentleman's faculties were fully aroused to a droper sense of the danger which was causing his wife to tremble in every limb.'

'What is the matter?' he exclaimed, rather petulantly, for he had not yet got over his first nap, and was not very pleasant about it

'Matter enough—don't you hear some one at the window,' and now listen eagerly, and sure enough he did hear some one, but before he could get out of bed, the window of their room, which fronted on the piaza was opened to its full height, and a large dark form was seen crawling in head foremost. It was the form and face (for there was a light burning in the chimney, so that he could see) of a huge negro, and the gentleman began to feel rather awkward, for he was the only male about the house, and all of his deadly weapons were in another part of the house.

As good luck would have it, a large stone spittoon was standing close by the head of the bed, and stooping down very gently, he managed to reach and secure it, just as the negro had made good his entry, and before he had time to look about him. Quick as thought, he threw it with all his force, (he stands plump six feet) and such another crashing of wood and glass have not been heard in that vicinity for many a day. The negro disappeared in a twinkling, und the lady sprang out of bed, half terrified to death, and screaming with all the power of a frightened woman's lungs.

'What on earth is the matter, Mr.——,' she exclaimed at last, as he sat up in bed, rubbing his eyes and lost in amazement at the scene.

'Matter—why, didn't you see him?'

'See what? what noise was that? Do tell me, Mr. ——, or I shall die, I'm sure I shall.'

'Why, didn't you see the burglar—that big negro?'

'Big fiddlesticks, said the lady.'

'Why, didn't you wake me up? and didn't I see him getting in at the window and didn't I ——'

'Yes, you did, and a pretty mess you have made of it.'

'Why it ain't possible that I have been dreaming.'

'I don't know what you've been doing, except that you've broken that window-sash in pieces.'

'It must have been that confounded book,' muttered Mr.——, half angry and half sheepish.

And sure enough, it was that confounded book, added to a confounded hearty supper which he ate at a late hour, winding up by reading himself to sleep, and dreaming of the big black burglar, whom he would have demolished if he had seen him. As he wasn't there at all, the only damage done, was ascertained to be the smashing of eight large panes of plate glass—ditto, one window-sash—ditto, one pair shades—ditto, one pair of outside blinds? for the spitton discharged by his vigorous arm, had performed its duty most faithfully. If the policemen of the Twelfth Ward permit that 'big negro' to prowl about unmolested, committing such unheard of depredations, and causing such a terrible crashing of wood and glass, they will lose their character entirely. The captin will please attend to it at the earliest possible moment, and if he requires a fuller description of the burglar by calling on the editor of this paper, he will refer him to the sufferer in question.

N. B.—This 'burglary' has never appeared on the returns from the Twelfth Ward at the chief's office, an omission to which we would respectfully invite the attention of His Honor the Mayor, who will doubtless investigate it.--Family Companion.

AMERICAN METROPOLITAN,

Devoted to American Literature and Art.

Edited by WILLIAM LANDON.

And composed of Contributions from the most Eminent Writers of the Country; Together with

SPLENDID ENGRAVINGS,

Executed by the first Artists, from Original Designs made expressly for this Periodical, by celebrated American Painters, generally illustrative of some point in the History of our Country, or peculiar feature in American character.

THE LETTER-PRESS

Will be profusely illustrated by numerous wood Engravings, executed in the best manner by Engravers of note from ORIGINAL DESIGNS. These Wood Cuts will not be caricatures of the Art so often presented, which have served to create a distaste for this artistic style of engraving; but will be executed by eminent engravers who have been employed at liberal prices to ensure the production of the best specimens of their skill.

A new feature in this Magazine will be a Serial Illustration of

THE LIFE OF WASHINGTON;

To be continued through twelve numbers. The pictures to be made expressly for this Magazine, by T. H. MATTESON, whose "Spirit of '76," "First Prayer in Congress," &c. &c. have already stamped him pre-eminent as an Historical Painter.

The text descriptive of these paintings will be from the powerful pen of J. T. HEADLEY, the well known author of "Napoleon and His Marshalls," "Washington and His Generals," &c. &c. making when completed, the ever given to the Public.

The determination to produce a monthly periodical which shall be eminently American and exclusively original in every department, we feel assured will meet the approbation of a liberal Public, and its practical fulfilment secure a patronage indicative of the warm interest which is universally taken in this country for the advance of American Literature and Art.

The Cheapest Periodical in America!

Sears Pictorial Dollar Magazine For 1849.

48 Large octavo pages, Embellished with NUMEROUS ENGRAVINGS.

TO NEW AND OLD SUBSCRIBES.

Now ready for Subscribers and agents throughout the country, the January Number of a re-issue of this Popular Monthly Periodical. This work is too well known to require any lengthy prospectus of its merits. The contents are of a strictly moral and religous character, embellished with numerous plates alone worth more than the reduced subscription price. It is the duty of all men to advance the Moral as well as the Intellectual character of of their fellows, and thus to lend a helping hand, however feeble, in promoting the advancement of man. It is our wish to dedicate this Periodical to such a cause; and most unfeignedly shall we rejoice, if we attain the smallest influence, and prove of the slightest use. And to all who have at heart the progress of the race, and who wish to see man becoming a wiser and better being, we say, not in the spirit of arrogance and presumption, but with the perfect consiousness of being among the humblest of the humble workers of the cause "Come over and help us."

Terms.—Great inducements to Postmasters and clubs, unequalled by those of any other establishment in the Union, for a Magazine of this size.

One copy, one year	$1 00
Six copies, one year	5 00
Twenty-five copies, one year	20 00

and present the Postmaster or Agent, sending the Twenty-five names, with one copy either of our 'Annual,' 'Revolution,' or 'Philadelphia Courier,' for one year, and Sears' Family Receipt-Book.

In addition to the above liberal offer, we have determined to hold out additional inducements, in the form of the most unparalleled

Premiums for 1849.

In order to procure our present patrons, and to give an increased circulation to our Magazine, we shall hereafter furnish it to all at the low price of

☞ ONE DOLLAR PER ANNUM.☜

We would call special attention to the Premiums that we now offer to ALL subscribers, both new and old, for the year 1849; especially would we call the readers attention to the splendid PICTORIAL FAMILY ANNUAL, with Two Hundred Engravings; a copy of which (or any of our $2 50 works) we offer to give each person, sending Eleven Names and ten dollars free of postage. Let each one of our present subscribers or agents devote but one day to getting up a club and he will find himself the owner of this valuable work.

Extraordinary Inducements.

All persons subscribing to the New Volume for 1849, and sending One Dollar, free of postage shall receive, in addition to the Magazine, one copy of Sears' Family Receipt-Book.

Read This!

What Family will be without them?

The Magazine for one year, and the Pictorial History of the American Revolution, or the splendid American Courier, published every week at Philadelphia, for one year, together with the Family Receipt-Book—making three pnblications—will be sent for two Dollars.

The Magazine for one year, and one copy of either the Pictorial Sunday-Book, Description of great Britain and Ireland, Bible Biography, Scenes and Sketches in Continental Europe, Information for the People, or the Wonders of the World, will be sent for $3. The Pictorial Annual for 1849, and all the above works offered as Premiums, are in paper covers to send by mail, and will not cost more than 25 or 30 cents postage to any part of the Union.

A LIBERAL OFFER.

The Postoffice of that town in the Union, from which we shall receive the greatest number of Subscribers to Sears' Magazine, during the year between the 1st of December 1848, and the 1st of December 1849 (the Magazine to be mailed to such postoffice, or to subscribers through it.) shall be entitled to a continuanee of the whole number of the subscriptions gratuitously, for one year after the expiration of the year for which their subscriptions shall have beeen paid.

CAUTION EXTRA

A man by the name of CLAPP has engaged with a young man of the name of S. P. Townsend, and uses his name to put up a Sarsaparilla, which they call Dr. Townsend's Sarsaparilla, denominating it GENUINE, Original, etc. This Townsend is no doctor, and never was; but was formerly a worker on railroads, canals, and the like. Yet he assumes the title of Dr., for the purpose of gaining credit for what he is not. This is to caution the public not to be deceived, and purchase none but the GENUINE ORIGINAL OLD Dr. Jacob Townsend's Sarsaparilla, having on it the Old Dr's. likeness, his family coat of arms, and his signature across the coat of arms.

Principal Office, 102 Nassau-st., New York City

OLD DR. JACOB TOWNSEND,

THE ORIGINAL DISCOVERER OF THE

Genuine Townsend Sarsaparilla.

Old Dr. Townsend is now about 70 years of age, and has long been known as the AUTHOR and DISCOVERER of the GENUINE ORIGINAL "TOWNSEND SARSAPARILLA." Being poor, he was compelled to limit its manufacture, by which means it has been kept out of market, and the sales circumscribed to those only who had proved its worth, and known its value. It had reached the ears of many, nevertheless, as those persons who had been healed of sore disease, and saved from death, proclaimed its excellence and wonderful

HEALING POWER.

Knowing, many years ago, that he had, by his skill, science and experience, devised an article which would be of incalculable advantage to mankind when the means would be furnished to bring it into universal notice, when its inestimable virtues would be known and appreciated. This time has come, the means are supplied; this GRAND AND UNEQUALLED PREPARATION is manufactured on the largest scale, and is called for throughout the length and breadth of the land, especially as it is found incapable of degeneration or deterioration.

Unlike young S. P. Townsend's, it improves with age, and never changes, but for the better: because it is prepared on scientific principles by a scientific man. The highest knowledge of Chemistry, and the latest discoveries of the art, have all been brought into requisition in the manufacture of the Old Dr's Sarsaparilla. The Sarsaparilla root, it is well known to medical men, contains many medicinal properties, and some properties which are inert or useless, and others, which if retained in preparing it for use, produce fermentation and acid, which is injurious to the system. Some of the properties of Sarsaparilla are so volatile, that they entirely evaporate and are lost in the preparation, if they are not preserved by a scientific process, known only to those experienced in its manufacture. Moreover, these volatile principles, which fly off in vapor, or as an exhalation, under heat, are the very essential medical properties of the root, which give to it all its value.

Any person can boil or stew the root till they get a dark-colored liquid, which is more from the coloring matter in the root than from any thing else; they can then strain this lasipid or vapid liquid, sweeten with sour molasses, and then call it "SARSAPARILLA EXTRACT or SYRUP." But such is not the article known as the

GENUINE OLD DR. JACOB TOWNSEND'S SARSAPARILLA.

This is so prepared, that all the inert properties of the Sarsaparilla root are first removed, every thing capable of becoming acid or of fermentation, is extracted and rejected; then every particle of medical virtue is secured in a pure and concentrated form; and thus it is rendered incapable of losing any of its valuable and healing properties. Prepared in this way, it is made the most powerful agent in the

Cure of innumerable diseases.

Hence the reason why we hear commendations on every side in its favor by men, women, and children. We find it doing wonders in the cure of

CONSUMPTION, DYSPEPSIA, and LIVER COMPLAINT, and in RHEUMATISM, SCROFULA, PILES, COSTIVENESS, all CUTANEOUS ERUPTIONS, PIMPLES, BLOCTHES, and all affections arising from

IMPURITY OF THE BLOOD.

It possesses a marvellous efficacy in all complaints arising from Indigestion, from Acidity of the Stomach, from unequal circulation, determination of blood to the head, palpitation of the heart, cold feet and hands, cold chills and hot flashes over the body. It has not its equal in Colds and Coughs; and promotes easy expectoration and gentle perspiration, relaxing stricture of the lungs, throat, and every other part.

But in nothing is its excellence more manifestly seen and acknowledged than in all kinds and stages of

FEMALE COMPLAINTS.

It works wonders in cases of Fluor Albus or Whites, Falling of the Womb, Obstructed, Suppressed, or Painful Menses, Irregularity of the menstrual periods, and the like; and is as effectual in curing all the forms of Kidney Diseases.

By removing obstructions, and regulating the general system, it gives tone and strength to the whole body, and thus cures all forms of

Nervous diseases and debility,

and thus prevents or relieves a great variety of other maladies, as Spinal irritation, Neuralgia, St. Vitus' Dance Swooning, Epileptic Fits, Convulsions, &c.

It cleanses the blood, excites the liver to healthy action, tones the stomach, and gives good digestion, relieves the bowels of torpor and constipation, allays inflammation, purifies the skin, equalises the circulation of the blood, producing gentle warmth equally all over the body, and the insensible perspiration; relaxes all sinctures and tightness; removes all obstructions, and invigorates the entire nervous system. Is not this then

The medicine you pre-eminently need!

But can any of these things be said of S. P. Townsend's inferior article? This young man's liquid is not to be

COMPARED WITH THE OLD DR'S,

because of one GRAND FACT, that the one is INCAPABLE of DETERIORATION, and

NEVER SPOILS,

while the other DOES; souring, fermenting, and blowing the bottles containing it into fragments; the sour, acid liquid exploding and damaging other goods! Must not this horrible compound be poisonous to the system?—What! put acid into a system already diseased with acid! What causes Dyspepsia but acid? Do we not all know that when food sours in our stomachs, what mischiefs it produces? flatulence, heartburn, palpitation of the heart, liver complaint, diarrhœa, dysentery, colic, and corruption of the blood? What is Scrofula but an acid humor in the body? What produces all the humors which bring on Eruptions of the Skin, Scald Head, Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, White Swellings, Fever Sores, and all ulcerations internal and external? It is nothing under heaven, but an acid substance, which sours, and thus spoils all the fluids of the body, more or less. What causes Rheumatism but a sour or acid fluid which insinuates itself between the joints and elsewhere, irritating and inflaming the delicate tissues upon which it acts? So of nervous diseases, of impurity of the blood, or deranged circulations, and nearly all the ailments which afflict human nature.

Now is if not horrible to make and sell, and infinitely worse to use this

SOURING, FERMENTING, ACID "COMPOUND" OF S. P. TOWNSEND,

and yet he would fain have it understood that Old Dr. Jacob Townsend's Genuine Original Sarsaparilla, is an IMITATION of his inferior preparation!!

Heaven forbid that we should deal in an article which would bear the most distant resemblance to S. P. Townsend's article! and which should bring down upon the Old Dr. such a mountain load of complaints and criminations from Agents who have sold, and purchasers who have used S. P. Townsend's FERMENTING COMPOUND.

We wish it understood, because it is the absolute truth, that S. P. Townsend's article and Old Dr. Jacob Townsend's Sarsaparilla are heaven-wide apart, and infinitely dissimilar; that they are unlike in every particular, having not one single thing in common.

As S. P. Townsend is no doctor, and never was, is no chemist, no pharmaceutist—knows no more of medicine or disease than any other common, unscientific, unprofessional man, what guarantee can the public have that they are receiving a genuine scientific medicine, containing all the virtues of the articles used in preparing it, and which are incapable of changes which might render them the AGENTS of Disease instead of health.

But what else should be expected from one who knows nothing comparatively of medicine or disease! It requires a person of some experience to cook and serve up even a common decent meal. How much more important is it that the persons who manufacture medicine, designed for

should know well the medical properties of plants, the best manner of securing and concentrating their healing virtues, also an extensive knowledge of the various diseases which affect the human system, and how to adapt remedies to these diseases!

It is to arrest frauds upon the unfortunate, to pour balm into wounded humanity, to kindle hope in the despairing bosom, to restore health and bloom, and vigor into the crushed and broken, and to banish infirmity that OLD DR. JACOB TOWNSEND has SOUGHT and FOUND the opportunity and means to bring his

within the reach, and to the knowledge of all who need it, that they may learn and know, by joyful experience, its

Transcendent Power to Heal.

DR. JACOB TOWNSEND. NEW YORK, Oct. 5, 1848.

WALKED across THE ROOM

with the aid of crutches. Since then, I have walked in the street: have gone alone from 36 Spruce-street to the Park; thence to Lovejoy's Hotel and back. I have been to 85 Nassau-street two different times, and am now frequently visiting my neighbors. During all this time, I have taken but two bottles of Old Dr. Townsend's Sarsaparilla. Oct. 4. I procured another bottle to-day (5th Oct.) I walked twice across the floor without the aid of crutches. I have also nearly recovered from obstruction of water, which gave me great distress. The pain in my back has likewise left me. I and my family have no earthly reason to ascribe my recovery to any other cause but to

OLD DR. JACOB TOWNSEND'S SARSAPARILLA.

ALEX. WELSH, 36 Spruce-st.

P. S.—Several able physicians despaired of my ever walking or even raising myself from my bed again.

The Starving Boy's Appeal to his Mother.

BY NILLA.

'What is it makes you cry, mother?
What is it makes you groan?
For ever since the dawn, mother,
I've listened to your moan.
Do let us make some fire, mother,
And haste to get some food;
I've gathered just as brother did,
Some little sticks of wood;

'And laid them close beside the hearth;
The kettle too is there;
Then do, dear mother, make a cake,
And let me have a share;
For oh, I am so hungry now,
You know that yesterday
I only had one little crust
To last me all the day.

'What makes your cheek so thin, mother?
What makes your eyes so red?
Is it because my father, mother,
And Ann, and Patrick's dead?
I saw dear father's grave, mother,
The grass was fresh and green;
And little sister's grave is near,
With Patrick's just between.

'What! not a grain of Meal, mother,
Or single ear of corn?
Was that hard crust the last you had
You gave me yester morn?
Some one will bring us food, mother,
They sure will hear our cry;
And those who have so much, mother,
Will never let us die.

'Last night I had a Dream, mother,
Methought an agel came;
And stooping to my ear, mother,
He whispered soft my name;
And then he took me in his arms,
And bore me far away,
And sung so sweet, I fell asleep,
Ank when I woke—'twas day.

'Your arm was over me, mother,
And prest me to your heart,
As though you knew, dear mother mine,
We could not live apart.
Then do not let us weep, mother,
For God is very good;
And when we get to Heaven, mother,
Will give us angel's food.

Better than Beauty.

My love is not a beauty
To other eyes than mine:
Her curls are not tbe fairest,
Her eyes are not divine:
Nor yet like rose-buds parted,
Her lips of love may be;
But though she's not a beauty,
She's dear as one to me.

Her neck is far from swan-like,
Her bosom unlike snow;
Nor walks she like a deity
This breathing world below;
Yet there's a light of happiness
Within, which all may see;
And though she's not a beauty,
She's dear as one to me.

I would not give the kindness,
The grace that dwells in her,
For all that Cupids Blindness
In others might prefer!
I would not change her sweetness
For pearls of any sea;
For better far than beauty
Is one kind heart to me.

TRUTH AND FICTION.—The Archbishop of Canterbury said one day to Garrick:—'Pray, inform me, Mr. Garrick, how it is that you, gentlemen of the stage, can affect your auditory with things imaginary as if they where real; while we of the church speak of things real, which many of our congregation receive as things imaginary?' 'Why, my lord bishop,' replied Garrick' 'the reason is plain: we actors speak of things imaginary as if they were real, while too many in the pulpit speak of things real as if they were imaginary.' The bishop tacitly acknowedged the justice of the remark, and bowed to the reproof of the actor.

An Allegory.

"Miserable man that I am!" sighed Benjamin, as he sat at the porch of his door, at the going down of the sun; "miserable man that I am!"——

"What aileth thee, friend?" said a person who stood near him, though unperceived before. "Hast thou not health? Hast thou not friends? Hast thou not plenty? Thou hast sheep feeding on the hills—thy numerous herds graze in the valley, and thy grain-fields teem with abundance."

"True," answered Benjamin; "but the shortness and uncertainty of hnman life are to me sources of constant wretchedness. I know not at what hour I may be called to leave all these blessings. A few live to the good old age of three score years—but how few! They, to be sure, are blessed; but I have no assurance that I shall live again to see my orchards in blossom, and to hear the bleating of my early lambs. I am miserable!"

"And dost thou think that it would contribute to thy happiness, to have removed the uncertainty of thy exit from this life, and to have the assurance that thou shouldst live to the age of four score and ten years?"

"Undoubtedly," said Benjamin; "I could then proceed on my course with a light heart. I could plan my business for future years. I could plant orchards with the certainty of enjoying the fruits thereof. I could"——

"Enough," said his guest, interrupting him.—"Thy wish shall be granted. I am the spirit that presides over thy years, and am commissioned to fix the date of thy existence. Thou shalt live until the fifth of the fifth month in the year that thou shalt have numbered four score years and ten; in that day, at the going down of the sun, thou shalt die."

Benjamin raised his eyes, and the person had disappeared; but he felt a full consciousness of the truth of what he had said, and he resolved to be happy. A thousand plans for amassing wealth, planting orchards and forest trees, building houses and mills, for a while crowded upon his imagination. But ever and anon, the fifth of the fifth month of the year that he should be ninety, recurred with renewed uneasiness to his mind. It was too far off to be worth thinking of, and yet would it return uncalled for, with the most alarming acuteness.

Benjamin was then twenty-seven, and he took his slate and pencil to calculate. He had sixty-three years to live. He redneed the time to months, to days, and even to minutes. The day was fixed in his mind as certainly as in the records of fate. He looked at his watch. Three hours had already elapsed, when one notified him that it was later than usual for him to return to rest. The sleep of Benjamin was disturbed, and the first thought of the morning was, the fifth of the fifth month, at the going down of the sun, in the year 1890. But he rose resolved to put in execution the plans he had formed. Some difficulties intervened; but, as he had time enough, he postponed from day to day the commencement of his improvements.

A thousand new troubles now crowded on his mind. He was certain of life. His days might drag on heavily in pain and disease. He was not certain that his plans for making money would succeed. He might become a pauper.

Instead of stimulating his exertions, he found that the certainty of long life relaxed them. In the midst of business and pleasure, the day certainly fixed for his death would come, like a dark cloud, overshadowing his soul, paralyzing his exertions, and damping his joys. He felt it like the iron belt of the criminal before his execution; and from the very knowledge, which he expected to prove the source of happiness, he derived nothing but uneasinees, and, at length, the most unceasing misery.

A year had passed away, when, at the same hour of the same day of the same month, Benjamin sat at his porch, his beard long, his face pale, and his whole body emaciated.

"Miserable man that I am!" exclaimed he.—"The day of my death is fixed, and the time ascertained with an awful certainty. I am like a criminal under condemnation, and I feel the distance of time is only an aggravation, by procrastinating my misery Oh that my guardian angel would return and restore me to the state of other men."

"Thy wish shall be granted," answered the same person whom he had seen the year before. "But, my friend," added he, "let this learn thee to repress thy passions, and limit thy desires. Use exercise, that thou mayest enjoy rest; be temperate, that thou mayest possess health; cherish a cheerful reliance upon heaven, and obey the dictates of an enlightened conscience, and thou wilt enjoy a happiness which neither the certainty of long life, nor of great possessions, can ever bestow." Q.

How she did it.

'I never undertook but once,' said Tom, 'to set at naught the authority of my wife. You know her way—cool, quiet, but determined as ever. Just after we were married, and all was nice and cozy, she got me into the habit of doing all the churning. She never asked me to do it, you know, but then the why it was done was just in this way. She finished breakfast before me one moreing, and slipping away from the table, she filled the churn with cream, and sat it just where I couldn't help seeing what was wanted. So I took hold regularly enough, and churned till the butter had come. She didn't thank me, but looked so nice and sweet about, it, that I felt well paid. Well, when the next churning day came along, she did the same thing, and I followed suit fotched the butter. Again and again it was done just so, and I was regularly in for it every time. Not a word said, you know, of course. Well, by and by, this began to be rather irksome. I wanted she should ask me, but she never did, and I couldn't say anything about it, to save my soul; so on we went. At last I made a resolve that I would not churn another time unless she asked me. Churning day came, and when my breaktast—she always got nice breakfast—when that was swallowed, there stood the churn. I got up, and standing a few minutes, just to give her a chance, put on my hat and walked out of doors. I stopped in the yard, to give her time to call me, but never a word said she, and so, with a palpitating heart I moved on. I went down town, and all over town, and my foot was as restless as was that of Noah's dove. I felt as if I had done a wrong, I did n't exactly feel how, but there was an indescribable sensatiou of guilt resting upon me all the forenoon. It seemed as if dinner time never would come, and as for going home one minute before dinner, I would as soon have cut my ears off. So I went fretting and moping around town till dinner hour came. Home I went, feeling very much as a criminal must when the jury is out, having in their hand his destiny for life or death. I could n't make up my mind exactly how she would meet me, but some kind of a storm I expected. Will you believe it? she never greeted me with a sweeter smile, never had a better dinner for me than on that day; but there stood the churn, just where I left it! Not a word was said: I felt confoundedly cut, and every mouthful of that dinner seemed as if it would choke me. She didn't pay any regaad to it, however, but went on just as if nothing had happened. Before dinner was over I had again resolved, and, shoving back my chair, I marched to the churn, and went at it in the old way. Splash, begun the butter-paddle, splash, splash; but as if in spite, the butter never was so long coming! I suppose the cream standing so long, had got warm and so I redoubled my efforts. Obstinate matter—the afternoon wore away while I was churning. I paused at last, from real exhaustion, when she spoke for the first time:—'Come Tom my dear, you have rattled that buttermilk quite long enough, if it's only for fun you are doing it!' I knew how it was: in a flash she had brought the butter in the forenoon, and left the churn standiug with the buttermilk in, for me to exercize with. I never set up myself in household matters, after that.'

How that calf got through the auger hole.—The proprietor of a tan yard adjacent to a certain town in Virginia, concluded to build a stand, or sort of store, on one of the main streets, for the purpose of vending his leather, buying raw hides and the like After completing his building, he began to consider what sort of a sign it would be best to put up for the purpose of attracting attention to his new establishment; and for days and weeks he was sorely puzzled on this subject. Several devices were adopted, and on further consideration, rejected. At last a happy idea struck him. He bored an auger hole through the door and stuck a calf's tail into it, with the bushy end flaunting out. After a while he noticed a grave looking personage standing near the door, with his spectacles on, gazing intently on the sign. And there he continued to stand, gazing and gazing until the curiosity of the Tanner was greatly excited in turn. He stepped out and addressed the individual:

'Good morning,' said he. 'Morning,' said the other without moving his eyes from the sign. 'You want to buy leather? said the storekeeper. 'No.' 'Do you wish to sell hides?' 'No.' 'Are you a farmer?, 'No.' Are you a merchant?' 'No.' 'Are you a lawyer?' 'No.' 'Are you a doctor?' ,No.' What are you then?' 'I'm a Philosopher. I have been standing here for an hour, trying to see if I could ascertain how that calf got through that auger hole, and I can,t make it out to save my life.

GOOD AND BAD LUCK.—I may here, as well as anywhere, impart the secret of what is called good and bad luck. There are men who, supposing Providence to have an implacable spite against them, bemoan, in the poverty of a wretched old age, the misfortunes of their lives. Luck for ever ran against them, and for others. One, with a good profession, lost his luck in the river, where he idled away his time a fishing, when he should have been in the office. Another, with a good trade, perpetually burnt up his luck by his hot temper, which provoked all his employers to leave him. Another, with a lucrative business, lost his luck by amazing diligence at everything but his business. Another, who steadily followed his trade, as steadily followed his bottle. Another, who was honest and constant to his work, erred by perpetual misjudgments—he lacked discretion Hundreds lose their luck by indorsing, by sanguine speculations, by trusting fraudulent men, and by dishonest gains. A man never has good luck who has a bad wife. I never knew an early-rising, hard-working, prudent man, careful of his earnings, and strictly honest, who complained of bad luck. A good character, good habits, and iron industry, are impregnable to the assaults of all the ill luck that fools ever dreamt of. But when I see a tatterdemalion creeping out of a tavern late in the forenoon, with his hands stuck into his pockets, the rim of his hat turned up, and the crown knocked in, I know he has had bad luck—for the worst of all luck is to be a sluggard, a knave, or a tippler.—Lectures for Young Men, by H. W. Beecher.

A CHANGE.—An editor of a paper in Pennsylvania says he wants a wife, and he thus enumerates the necessary qualifications of the lady:

"She must be a gal whose eyes beams with love, tenderness and pity: twinkle with fun, frolic and mischief; and lighten up the flash with the immortal part of its frail tenement; whose countenance is illuminated with virgin innocence and purity, chastened by humility, and happy from the practice of every homely virtue; with a heart to feel, a hand to relieve and a bosom to sympathize with misfortune; one who can mend breeches, make shirts, scrub floors, peel taters and cook dinner."

Old Jethro Tull said, if a man was too lazy to do anything else on his field, at least he ought to take a stick and keep sturring the soil!

The other day at the central criminal court, a prisoner was upon his trial, and at the conclusion of it he was told that the jury had found him guilty. 'Exactly,' replied the culprit, 'that is just my conviction.'

IN SPITE OF HER TEETH.—A young lady, named Moses, fell over a pile of stones, in one of the streets of Boston, and knocked out two of her front teeth.—She got up and pursued her way, in spite of her teeth!

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Democratic Principles.

The universal, and unconditional, inalienable right of the whole human race to freedom.

That freedom consists in the inalienable, unconditional, right of all men everywhere to a voice and a vote in all public affairs, whereby his rights, either real or imaginary are in any way affected.

And that no man owes any allegiance to any government wherein he is deprived of that right.

And that all men are morally and constitutionally bound to abide by the voice and the votes of a majority of such freemen.

This is the only true foundation of government, and the universal tendency of all things is towards such a result; tyrants, ignorance, national prejudices, and bigotry, all retard but cannot prevent such a result.

The Steam Engine, and the Electric Telegraph, are accomplishing mighty results, by annihilating space between the most distant points on the earth's surface; and in bringing the thoughts of the free in contact with those of the tyrant, the thoughts of the liberal and enlightened, with those of the superstitious and the bigot, and its tendency is to break down those illiberal and contracted views of political and religious bigotry and sectarianism.

It remains but for those, all over the world who are determined to be free, to sustain the liberal and enlightened dissemination of all democratic principles whether emanating from the Press the Pulpit or the Bar, all should sustain equal rights. Look to acts not professions, names are not principles, many profess but all do not practice democratic principles.

We believe it is universally admitted that the people of the United States can compete with those of any other nation on the face of the earth, in Manufactures of almost every kind; in the arts and sciences, either in war or peace. At least this said, written, sung, and believed, from one end of the Union to the other, yet there are some in the face of all this who ask for a prohibatory or protective tariff.

We believe that in the manufacture of any article from a locofoco match to a steam ship, or from a wooden cucumber-seed to a locomotive, or the application of the telegraph to the determination of Longitude; we can manufacture a better article of the same material and in less time than any other people under heaven, or more properly speaking on the earth.

There is not a single individual out of this whole universal yankee nation, but what can do anything that ever yet was done, from the making of the aforesaid locofoco match, to the application of the telegraph to the determination of longitude, from the building of a church to the preaching in it, and from the manufacture of type, to the elaboration of thoughts to be expressed by them; talk about protection, ha, ha, it is enough to excite the risibility of a lamp post. We call ourselves but a very modest specimen of the aforesaid yankee nation, yet we can compete in the above mentioned, with universaldom; and all the protection we ask is our health and strength, a clear conscience, a shilling and a sheet of paper.

Concert.

In consequence of the death of Mr. David Hale, a leading member of the society at the Broadway Tabernacle, and a member of the Choir, the Concert at the M. E. Church in this Village, is therefore postponed until further notice.

We would be obliged to the Hunterdon Democrat if he will point out a word of ours wherein he can infer that we are opposed to Temperance houses.

We do not see the necessity of Legislative action to establish Temperance houses. We go for having all Temperance houses.

"Be ye temperate in all things."

California Gold.

The Gold fever: The most important effect of the gold fever, will be the settlement of California, but for this it would have taken a much longer time to have settled that country, Trade and Commerce will immediately receive the benefit.

☞'Owe no man anything, but love one another.'

Agriculture and Manufactures.

Agriculture is the first, the most extensive, and the most important of all the occupations of our race—but without commerce and manufactures a nation cannot become thriving, prosperous, refined, powerful, wealthy or influential. It must necessarily be so from the nature of the case, for where all are farmers, all will have agricultural produce to sell, and there will be none to buy. It is idle to talk of selling any great amount to other nations, for there is scarcely a nation on earth that does not raise enough for its own consumption.

To make the matter worse, these Free Traders, the worst of them, we mean, oppose all chartered monopolies and special privileges, such as railroads, canals, and other Internal improvements, by which this ruinous cost of transportation might be lessened. Our plan is, and we are confident it is the right one, to build up manufactures by a good stiff Tariff, diversify the employments of the people, use our own iron and coal, manufacture our own cloths and cottons, and consume the produce of our farmers at home—for if we do not create a home market for agricultural products by a proper duty on all manufactures that need it, the farmer can have no reliable market any where. —Plainfield Union.

From the commencement of the above extract to the second period we believe no one will dispute; but from the inferences and conclusions, of the remainder we beg leave to differ.

Although nothing but broad assumptions and assertions are given we offer a few facts in reply.

We would recommend to our friend the perusal of the report of the Secretary of the Treasury of wich the following are extracts.

The whole net revenue from duties during the entire period of four years and three months of the operation of the tariff of 1842, (per table D,) was $101,554,-653 12, being an annual average of $23,-895,208 32. The net revenue received from the tariff of 1846, during its entire operation from 1st of December, 1846, to 30th of September, 1848, (per table E,) was $56,654,563 79, or an average of $30,902,489 28 per annum, being an average of $7,007 280 96 more per annum under the tariff of 1846 than was received under the tariff of 1842.

We exported last year (per table F,) $130,203,709 in value of domestic products and fabrics, exclusive of specie' and under low duties this must go on angmenting. But how can foreign countries pay for these exports if we will take no imports, or very few, in return!

The British empire (per table G) took from us (not during the year of famine, as it is called, of 1847, but in 1848) our domestic exports, including cotton, rice, tobacco, breadstuffs and provisions, and other domestic articles, exclusive of specie, of the value of $78,741,416, and Great Brittain and Ireland of the value of $64,-222,268; and this is the trade of our best foreign customer, which protectionists propose to sacrifice by high or prohibitory duties.

It appears that for the year ending June 30, 1848—not of famine but of abundant crops in Europe—our exports of breadstuffs and provisions (per table 1) amounted to the sum of $37,472,751, being largely more than double the average annual export during the the tariff of 1842.

Our tonnage having increased during the last year (per table F) from 2,839,046 to 3,150,502 tons, being more than three times the incrasee we ever realized in the same time under any protective tariff, and making the whole increased tonnage under the tariff of 1846, 588,419 tons.

It appears that our exports the last year exceeded our imports from the United Kingdom of great Britian, by upwards of twelve millions of dollars, and including the colonies by twenty two millions of dollars!

If foreign importations cease, so must nearly $31,000,000 of revenue derived therefrom.

If exportations and importations cease, so must commerce.

Think of this ye tax paying Hatters, Shoemakers, Tailors, Carriage Makers, Farmers, Shipwrights, Loco-Motive builders, Merchants, and so on to the end of the chapter. Ye who are able to compete with all creation; for instance, do you want to be taxed, that some company can have the exclusive right to manufacture silk, which we believe is a favoite scheme with protectioists, have you forgotten the Multigulises.

If like causes produce like results, then will a prohibatory or protective tariff here, produce that beautiful state of things which they have in England. A purse proud and lordly aristocracy rolling in their wealth; no independant farmers and mechanics, the bone and sinew of a country, as we now have, but a starving, down trod, and despised lower orders; as their lordly masters call them, with their necks ready in the yoke to do their masters bidding, with no souls they dare call their own.

Protection is the cause, and the above is the effect, England has been protected, in every thing; what an example to follow.

Whether we are meant in the last extract as "the worst of them" it matters not, we are flatfooted against all special priviliges, and we can only account for the anomaly of the Union advocating special priviliges, but by its over zeal in ingratiating itself with the party in power, come out, be a man, advocate the rights of all men, and all men will support you.

Why friend, Slavery is a special privilege, why do you oppose that, go the whole figure, act consistent, petition the Legislature for the exclusive privilege of supplying Plainfield with the Union, to the exclusion of all other papers, according to your doctrine you have the right, but whether the people would submit to it or is another question.

Most exclusive priviliges are obtained on some pretext to benefit the people; but that any should be found bold enough to come forward in the nineteenth century and advocate "chartered monopolies and special priviliges," is more than we were prepared for.

Longitude.

What is Longitude? Distance from any given meridian either E. or W.

What does the word Longitude come from? The Latin 'longus' length. Why was it so called? Because the ancients thought the globe to be longer from N. to S. than from E. to W. What are Meridians? They are circles passing from pole to pole cutting the Equator at right angles. What is the meaning of 'Meridian'? Mid-day or noon. Why are they called Meridians? Because as the earth turns towards the sun in its diurnal motion, all places through which the same meridian passes have noon or mid-day at the same time the sun is over that meridian. Which way do meridians extend? N. by S.—From where do most nations reckon their longitude? From the metropolis of their own country.

What is t he meaning of metropolis? Chief city. What is the name of the place from which the French reckon? from Paris. Where do the English reckon from? The observatory of Greenwich. Where is Greenwich? 5 miles N. of London. Whan is an observatory? An elevated place from which observations are made. What is the meridian marked that passes through Greenwich? 0. or no longitude. Why is it marked 0? Because it is the one from which we reckon our Longitude. Where do we sometimes in the U. S. reckon from? Wasdington. How is longitude expressed on maps? By figures on the top and bottom. If the figures increase from right to left how is the Longitude? West. If the figures increase from left to right how is the longitude? East. Where are degrees found on the map of the world? At the Equator.—What is the greatest extent a place can have in Longitude? 180°. Why? Because each meridian divides the world into halves, one half can only contain 180°. How long does it take the sun to pass over 360°? 24 hours. How long does it take the sun to pass over 180°? 12 hours. over 90°? 6 hours. Over 15°? 1 hour Over 1°? 4 minutes. Over 1 minute? 4 seconds. What is the longitude of N. Jersey? 75° 8′ West from Greenwich. What is the longitude of N. Jersey from Washington? 1° 52′ East.

The difference of longitude between two places being given to find the difference in time? Rule: Multiply the number of degrees by 4 and the answer will be in minutes. What is the difference of time between Washington and Harmony a Missionary station west of Missouri, the difference of longitude being 18°? 1 hour 12 minutes. The difference in time between any two places being given, to find the difference of longitude? Rule: Divide the degrees by 4 and the answer will be in degrees.

N. Orleans lies 15° W. of Philadelphia what is the difference of time between the two places? 1 hour.

The Steamship United States is now twenty-two days out. It is supposed that the great storm commencing on the night of the 9th inst., the date on which she sailed, retarded her progress.

Repeal of the Black Laws.—Columbus, Ohio, Jan 30.—The House to-day have passed a bill declaring the black laws of this State unconstitutional, and repealing them, by a vote of 52 to 11. If the Senate does not arrest the bill, those odious enactments will be erased from the statute book.—N. Y. Sun.

Mr Editor:—One great cause of complaint of the citizens of New Jersey, and of the traveling community generally, is the gross conduct of the Rail Road Monopoly Co. Their acts of late toward the people have grown to be a daily complaint. The Company have already violated all good faith in assuming to dictate to its supporters as they please They advertise trains to run to different points at stated times, but they comply only so far as their own interests are concerned, without regard to the public convenience or accommodation; discontinuing trains without an hours notice, as was ths case of the 6 o,clock train from New York to Rahway, only one or two trains accomplishing their trips in the specified time, causing great detention, without any certainty of arriving at your destined point, in time to transact buisness for the the return trains. These defects as well as many others in the management of the Road can readily be remedied, and ought to be as soon as possible.

Owing their existence to the good will of the people of New Jersey it is no more than reasonable to suppose that the citizens should be freely accommodated.

If the Company are not to be influenced by the honorable requests and petitioning of the people, most certainly they should be faithful in their own regulations publically advertised. One thing is positive if the monopoly do not show some regard to the citizens of New Jersey, a vote will be taken whether we shall have a 'Monopoly or no monopoly.' M.

For the Plainfield Gazette.

It is an encouaging sign to notice the attention which the yonng now give to intellectual pursuits. A few years have made a great change in this respect.—Now, a large portion of our young men are in the habit of reading at least two or three hours per day, formerly, they hardly read as many minutes. Nor is their reading confined to romances; but History, Biography, and Travels, forms a good share of the matters which engage their attention. Not that I would have works of fiction with-held from the young; for I believe that there are many novels which may be read with much profit.—Still, it is desirable that a course of more solid reading should also be persued. If "Knowledge is power," it is the interest of the young man, particularly, to improve his mind at every opportunity. There are very few but have some time to read useful books, and attend to their necessary duties. An hour each day devoted to reading would be time enough to enable a young man to learn much that would be of great value during his whole life. A.

Important from Yucatan.

New-Orleans, Thursday, Jan. 25.

Highly important news has just been received from Yucatan. A great battle has been fought between 8,000 Indians on one side and 500 American volunteers on the other. The Indians were d riven back after a desperate struggle, and American valor was again triumphunt. The American loss was severe; they had 43 killed and a large number wonnded, many mortally. The Indian loss was supposed to be immense. The Indian town of Tila was captured and burnt. The Americans were on the eve of marching towards Basalus, where a decisive battle was anticipated. The next news was looked for with much anxsety.

Two Weeks Later FROM EUROPE.

Arrival of the Canada, &c.

By the arrival of the Canada we have two weeks later news from Europe.

There is nothing especially important, a slight advance in cotton, and a decline in breadstuffs, a mere nominal duty on corn is proposed. The Cholera has begun to rage in London with great virulence, while in Glasglow the mortality is appaling.

Great excitement prevails in England respecting the California Gold-mines.

France, all is quiet.

The Pope is in great despondency at Gatea; Spain is endeavoring to aid him. It is said an intervention on behalf of the Pope will immediately be made by the Catholic powers of Europe.

Elevated—A farmer was elected to a corporalship in a militia company. His wife, after discoursing with him some time upon the advantages he would derive from his exaltation, inquired, in a doubtful tone, 'husband, will it be proper to let our children play with the neighbors' now?'

Legislative Summary.

Trenton, Jan. 24. 1849.

Senate.—A petition was presented by Dr. Craig, of citizens of Somerset Co, for investigation of the affairs of the Joint Companies.

Assembly.—Many petitions were presented for the Morris and Elizabeth Railroad.

The Deckertown Bank bill was passed, 48 to 7.

Both Houses adjourned at noon to visit the Lunatic Asylum in the afternoon.

Jan. 26.

A bill was reported to authorize practical surveyors to take acknowledgement of deeds. Also, one to prevent the destruction of small and harmless birds.

The committee reported adversely to petitions to annex part of Somerset Co. to South Brunswick, Middlesex Co.

In the House of Assembly, on Wednesday, Mr. Day presented a romonstrance against the renewal of the character of the Union Bank at Dover.

Jan 30.

Assembly.—Mr. Day from the vicinity of the Dover Bank against its recharter, stating that it is not conducted according to the provissions of its charter, that it is owned by one Mr. Phelps in New York, who appoints the cashier; that the directors are only not in fact but in name, and praying an investigation of its affairs.

Mr. Hoyt, from Sussex and Morris, for the bank, stating their belief of the value and usefulness of the bank.

Mr. Day, another remonstrance on the same subject.

Mr. French, for a turnpike from Morristown to Camden.

Passed—The bill to set off the township of Hohokus and to renew the charter of the Sussex bank.

A Summary of the proceedings of Congress.

Washington, Jan. 26. 1849.

Senate.—There were twenty-six petitions presented from Ohio and Newhampshire, praying that Slavery may be prohibited in all new Territories.

Jan. 27.

House.—66 Private bills were passed.

Both Houses adjourned to Monday.

Jan. 29.

Senate.—The Whitney and the Panama Rail Road projects were defeated and were postponed till Monday next.

A number of petitions were presented, among which was one by the Vice Presi- which attracted considerable attention, praying for the construction of a Telegraph across the Atlantic Ocean. The petition was referred to the Comittee on Commerce.

Mr. Douglass, of Illinois, from the Committee on the subject, reported a bill for the admission of California as a State, and also providing for the admission ot New Moxico, when she shall have acquired a sufficient population. The bill was ordered to be printed.

Mr. Embree, of Indiana, moved to suspend the rules, in order to make the bill providing for the reduction of Postage to a cheap and uniform rate, and for a modification of the franking privilege, the special order for 1 o'clock, to day. After a few words of explanation, the question was put and carried, by ayes 121, nays 47.

Only lost a little.—'Samivel, my darling little sonny,' says the aged mother, 'I've not seen your book for several days or more—where is it?'

'I know where it is.'

'Well, Where?'

'Why it's only lost, a little—kinder—in the barn, or round out doors, summers, I guess: pre'rps up garret, or ahind the wood-pile.'

The eccentric John Randolph once ascended a lofty point of the Blue Ridge to see the sun rise. The scene was one of great sublimity, and it overwhelmed him with the sense of a present deity.—'Jack,' said Randolph to the servant who accompanied him, 'if anybody hereafter says that there is no God, tell him he lies.'

From the St. Louis Republican.

The Delights of an Overland Journey to California.

Permit me to caution your over-zeal in going after gold. Remember, and take warning before you engage in an enterprise beyound your age, and strength, and means.

A long dreary road, of upward of 2,000 miles lies before you, without houses, without meat or flour, and in many pla, ces without wood, water or grass. You that start across the plains, by the time you reach Santa Fe, N. M.—a distance of notless than 1,200 miles from St. Louis—will find your ambition and courage fail; and yet through Santa Fe is a paradise to what you will see afterward. By the time you have been fifty days out, which will be the time you will be in going there, (or kill all your oxen and mules,) you will wish yourselves back again at your work in St. Louis—mark my words. You must cook your own meals, which will be fun and sport for a few days, where wood, water and grass are plenty, but after you get 100 miles beyond Council Grove, you will hunt in vain for wood, and often for water and grass.

Instead of wood, get your blanket and two of you go out, take a circle of one mile, and pick up all the buffolo chips (manure) you can find, which will be scarce, make your fires and cook by the blaze. While two are hunting for fuel, some will have to go for water, others picket out your mules or watch your oxen, others attend to the cooking, some attend to fixing your tent.—Be sure and cook enough at night to do the next day, leaving nothing to do in the morning but boil your coffee, harness up and be off.

Twenty miles is a good day's travel.

Two men will use a barrel of flour before getting to Santa Fe, and 200 lbs. good bacon, about 30 lbs. coffee, and if you drink whiskey (a very necessary article, by the way,) two men cannot miss using 10 gallons. You can travel on foot better thant be troubled with a horse, for you certainly can keep up with an ox-wagon, and in few days become used to it which will harden you for the labor, when called to use the pick, crowbar, spade or shovel.

You want a good ax, hatchet, pick-ax crowbar, spade and shovel; an auger, inch chisel or two. You will want tin or pewter plates, tin cups, a good knife or two, spoon or two, coffee boiler, tea kettle, frying pan, spider, bake oven and canteen; a little salt, pepper, salaratus, mustard, red pepper; plenty of pickles, and a good supply of vinegar; molasses tastes quite sweet on the plains—get plenty of matches, both lucifer and wax; get two large blankets as your bedding; a cap is better than a hat. It matters not about the sun, you'll get used to it; your hat is blown by the wind into a 'cocked hat,' and then the sun has all advantages; wear shoes instead of boots for walking (unless you are afraid of snakes, of which you will see plenty of the biggest kind of rattlesnakes.) You can kill dogs enough for fresh meat as you arrive in their cities and towns; they always sit at the doors of their houses, and are always either shot or caught. They are very palatable and in eating them; at first, one is apt to get too easily down at a meal (especialy at supper time,) which causes considerable noise in the lower regions, about the time one wants to sleep, but cannot for the constant barking of the dogs To prevent this, take along some No. 6; a few drops put all to rest again. A good file would be useful when you arrive in the Buffalo Range, for you can't help killing an old bull, and, while the boys are skinning, you can be filing your teeth, to be ready to enter on duty. As wild meat is of a running breed and you of a tame one, you need n't be surprised to find yourselves running the day after eating it. In case your run is more than you are used to, take a few drops of No. 6, and all is quiet.

You can see a great way ahead; in some places a week's march in advance--mounds and the like. You will be apt to have rain and water plenty if you start early, and, consequently, get your jackets and blankets wet through, day and night; then comes the trying time with the buffalo chips. They will neither burn nor blaze—so make up your mind to eat a raw dog, or any other raw meat, without hot coffe or warm stuff (except No. 6). If the weather continues rainy, so that you become tired of eating raw dogs or buffalo bull just turn up one of your wagons, and cook enough under it to last several days, and pack your load on your mules, or oxen, or your own back. Don't back out; gold is ahead, and you are in—'go it, boots'—'live or die'—'a faint heart never won fair lady.' If you get sick on the road, or your wagon burned up, don't give out as long as you can toddle along and when you cannot proceed any farther, just lay down and rest, then up and travel by the moon till you overtake your companions. Then, if so be you lay several days, an Indian may come along and examine your head; if bald he will respect your age and not scalp you but hand you to the squaws for a plaything. If you have a good head of hair, he will only cut a little piece out, just about the crown, as a token of remembrance, which will either cure you or make the wolves come to prayers. You may have to swim some creeks, as Uncle Sam has not bridged the road yet, and there are a great many creeks. You will be very apt to pass ten or twelve of these a day, so that before your clothes get dry from one, you will be in another. This frequent cold bath causes cold chills on a fellow without any heat, and often death; when a little hole is dug, three or four feet deep, and the dead fellow rolled in, clothes and all—the dirt thrown over him; the wolves hold a council over his cold home, and soon tear him up and have a feast. It will be all the same a thousand years hence.

With these naked truths staring each in the face, if you go, you must take a copy of these broken sentences along with you; and if you live to come back, prove or disprove the sayings and warnings of EZEL.

A Fair Prospect.—'I set out with a sair prospect in life,' said a loafer, the other day.

'Can that be possible?' was the answer.—'I thought that all your connexions were very poor.

'I set out with a fair prospect for all that,' was the reply,' for the window of the room where I was born, looked out upon a beautiful landscape, and so I began the world with a fair prospect.'

The other gave him his hat. He needed it.

UNDERTAKING IN GENERAL.

IT is an old maxim "a bird in the hand is worth two in the bush," ie. an advantage, to the Public to have Coffins ready made, of all sizes and descriptions, trimmed and polished in the latest styles. The undersigned having been connected with the undertaking and furnishing business for five years, (having furnished five hundred Coffins in that time,) We would refer to our former patrons that the public may be satisfied we have given entire satisfaction in every case; also having had private instruction from the most experienced undertaker in the city of New York in his styles of making and trimming; We now flatter ourselves, we are prepared to give entire satisfaction to the Citizens of Plainfield and vicinity.

We have been to considerable expense in fitting up, that none may be disappointed we would respectfully solicil the Public generally to give us a call before purchasing elsewhere.

J. W. S. MARTIN, Principal.

Also, Cabinet, Chair, & Sofa,

MANUFACTORY.

We would inform the Citizens of Plainfield and vicinity that we have from a thousand to fifteen hundred dollars worth of ready made furniture on hand, consisting of Black Walnut, Maple, and Mahogony, to suit the taste, and pocket.

Our motto is Cheap for the "Chemicals."

Thankful for the encouragement we have already received; having had a perfect rush ever since we refused that proposal which was directly opposed to the peoples interests: We are going through the world on our own hook, without any incumbrance.

Niagara Falls Suspension Bridge.

Let the reader suppose that twisted ropes of iron wire could be so fixed to the Trinity Church steeple, New York, near the top, and to some other edifice of equal height, eight hundred feet distant therefrom, as that a carriage-way, eight feet wide, would be formed under the wires, without railing at the sides; and that some citizen should be so daring as to ride along that road in a carriage, from steeple to steeple, and back again; he will in this way have a faint idea of the size and situation of the bridge near the Falls.

The bridge is an experiment; another will be constructed, 32 feet wide, at a cost of $300,000; it is built at the narrowest part of the river, where its banks are highest; they seem as if cut out of the solid rock. From the bridge to the bottom of the river, the depth is nearly 470 feet, the river there being nearly 230 feet deep.

Upon the top of the bank on each shore of the Niagara, a tower is built 50 feet high. Some 60 or 80 feet in the rear, the wire cables are firmly fastened; thence they pass over the top of the tower, across the chasm, over the top of the other tower, and are fastened beyond it, in the rocks. From these cables the bridge or pathway below is suspended by strands of wire. The architect built a bridge at Wheeling, across the Ohio, having a span of 1,000 feet. The suspenders are interlaid with rails on each side. Such a bridge might be built between Brooklyn Heights and N. York, for foot passengers only. It would be one of the wonders of N. York, and a delightful aerial promenade.

The wires are drawn across nearly 800 feet, from bank to bank of the Niagara, 240 feet above the foaming flood, which is thundering through the narrow gorge, and nearly two miles below the Falls, but in sight of them, where the stream of the mighty St. Lawrence is dashing onward, with the swiftness of 24 miles in an hour, toward Lake Ontario. The bridge is eight feet wide, its floor being light planks laid across scantling, with a temporary railing, made of wires and slats of wood, at each side. The strands of wire are firmly fastened to the rocks on the river's banks, which are from 250 to 300 feet higher than its bed, notched all the distance from the cataract down to Queenston. Mr. Ellet, the truly scientific and very courageous architect, rode across the chasm in a two-horse carriage, and back, on the 29th of July, 1848; passing above such a foaming torrent of pent up waters as can not be seen elsewhere. Here is to be located the terminus of a railroad, through the western counties of Canada, to Detroit, &c.

The bridge had at first a sort of vibratory motion, not unlike that of the springboard of vaulters and tumblers; but since guys have been fastened to the rocks below and on each side of the river, the oscillation is but slight. The view upward is truly sublime and beautiful; and floating on the surge beneath, may be seen the "Maid of the Mist," a pretty little steamboat—owned, we believe, by Col. John Fisk, a very enterprising, manly, and truly generous citizen of Rochester—which sails between the bridge and the Falls, passing the spot where Sam Patch leaped 128 feet perpendicular, in a region where reality is delightfully combined with romance. The Falls, the Whirlpool, the Rapids, Navy Island, Brock's Column, Fort Niagara, Noah's Ararat, Lundy's Lane, Queenston Heights, Fort Erie, Bridgewater, Goat or Iris Island, Manchester, the terminus of the Erie canal, Forts George & Mississauga, Fort Schlosser, Chippewa, the Wire bridge, the lakes, Lewiston, Buffalo, Black Rock, the railroad, the Niagara river with its majestic windings, the Devil's Hole, the Hogback, the Observatory, the Rainbow over the Horse Shoe, the Maid of the Mist, Nichol's Rock, and the Burning Spring, are among the numerous objects which will interest the intelligent tourist, while passing over a space of about 30 miles, between Erie and Ontario.

THE WAY TO TEND A BABY.—A Chippewa Indian has been lecturing in Hartford, where, in a lecture, according to the Times, he advised the ladies to tie their babies, as soon as they were born, to a board, bind them down tight, and keep them there most of the time, till they are ten months old. 'Put a hoop round the head,' he says, 'and then when the board gets knocked over, it won't break the child's nose.' He sums up other advantages, as follows: 'You see; ladies, (holding up a specimen,) the child's hands are tied down, so it cannot scratch its own eyes out, and can't scratch it's mother's breast, too; it can't wriggle about and get very tired; it can't bend over and must grow strait; when the mother goes out after herbs, she can hang it on a tree and snakes can't bite it; when it cries, the mother can swing it across her back, and rock it so, (swaying his body to and fro.) and can carry it a great distance in this manner, too, can sit up side of the whigwam, very handy; and when canoe turns over, the child swim off on the board, and don't drown; and its back don't break across its mother's arm, because the board supports it; the child can't crawl into the fire and burn up, too—can leave it long time, all safe—so I think this much best way, ladies—much best.' the ladies gave in their assent by a general langh.

Beauty deserts us, but virtue and talents, the faithful companions of our lives, accompany us even to the grave.

CHARGE IT AS SUGAR.—'Mr. Green,' said a tolerable dressed female the other day, entering a grocery in which there were several customers, have you any fresh corned pork?'

'Yes, ma'am.'

'How much is this sugar a pound?'

'One shilling, ma'am.'

'Let me have,' she continued, lowering her voice, 'half a pint of gin, and charge it as sugar on the book.'

What will you take? asked the sheriff, to the culprit he was about to hang. 'Not a drop,' was the quaint reply.

THE

AMERICAN METROPOLITAN,

Devoted to American Literature and Art.

Edited by WILLIAM LANDON.

And composed of Contributions from the most Eminent Writers of the Country; Together with

SPLENDID ENGRAVINGS,

Executed by the first Artists, from Original Designs made expressly for this Periodical, by celebrated American Painters, generally illustrative of some point in the History of our Country, or peculiar feature in American character.

THE LETTER-PRESS

Will be profusely illustrated by numerous wood Engravings, executed in the best manner by Engravers of note from ORIGINAL DESIGNS. These Wood Cuts will not be caricatures of the Art so often presented, which have served to create a distaste for this artistic style of engraving; but will be executed by eminent engravers who have been employed at liberal prices to ensure the production of the best specimens of their skill.

A new feature in this Magazine will be a Serial Illustration of

THE LIFE OF WASHINGTON;

To be continued through twelve numbers. The pictures to be made expressly for this Magazine, by T. H MATTESON, whose "Spirit of '76," "First Prayer in Congress," &c. &c. have already stamped him pre-eminent as an Historical Painter.

The text descriptive of these paintings will be from the powerful pen of J. T. HEADLEY, the well known author of "Napoleon and His Marshalls," "Washington and His Generals," &c. &c. making when completed, the ever given to the Public.

The determination to produce a monthly periodical which shall be eminently American and exclusively original in every department, we feel assured will meet the approbation of a liberal Public, and its practical fulfilment secure a patronage indicative of the warm interest which is universally taken in this country for the advance of American Literature and Art.

Sears 'Pictorial Dollar Magazine For 1849.

TO NEW AND OLD SUBSCRIBES.

Now ready for Subscribers and agents throughout the country, the January Number of a re-issue of this Popular Monthly Periodical. This work is too well known to require any lengthy prospectus of its merits. The contents are of a strictly moral and religous character, embellished with numerous plates alone worth more than the reduced subscription price. It is the duty of all men to advance the Moral as well as the Intellectual character of of their fellows, and thus to lend a helping hand, however feeble, in promoting the advancement of man. It is our wish to dedicate this Periodical to such a cause; and most unfeignedly shall we rejoice, if we attain the smallest influence, and prove of the slightest use. And to all who have at heart the progress of the race, and who wish to see man becoming a wiser and better being, we say, not in the spirit of arrogance and presumption, but with the perfect consiousness of being among the humblest of the humble workers of the cause "Come over and help us."

Terms.—Great inducements to Postmasters and clubs, unequalled by those of any other establishment in the Union, for a Magazine of this size.

One copy, one year	$1 00
Six copies, one year	5 00
Twenty-five copies, one year	20 00

and present the Postmaster or Agent, sending the Twenty-five names, with one copy either of our 'Annual,' 'Revolution,' or 'Philadelphia Courier,' for one year, and Sears' Family Receipt-Book.

In addition to the above liberal offer, we have determined to hold out additional inducements, in the form of the most unparalleled

Premiums for 1849.

In order to procure our present patrons, and to give an increased circulation to our Magazine, we shall hereafter furnish it to all at the low price of

☞ ONE DOLLAR PER ANNUM. ☜

We would call special attention to the Premiums that we now offer to ALL subscribers, both new and old, for the year 1849; especially would we call the readers attention to the splendid PICTORIAL FAMILY ANNUAL, with Two Hundred Engravings; a copy of which (or any of our $2 50 works) we offer to give each person, sending Eleven Names and ten dollars free of postage. Let each one of our present subscribers or agents devote but one day to getting up a club and he will find himself the owner of this valuable work.

Extraordinary Inducements.

All persons subscribing to the New Volume for 1849, and sending One Dollar, free of postage shall receive, in addition to the Magazine, one copy of Sears' Family Receipt-Book.

Read This!

What Family will be without them?

CAUTION EXTRA

A man by the name of CLAPP has engaged with a young man of the name of S. P. Townsend, and uses his name to put up a Sarsaparilla, which they call Dr. Townsend's Sarsaparilla, denominating it GENUINE, Original, etc. This Townsend is no doctor, and never was; but was formerly a worker on railroads, canals, and the like. Yet he assumes the title of Dr., for the purpose of gaining credit for what he is not. This is to caution the public not to be deceived, and purchase none but the GENUINE ORIGINAL OLD Dr. Jacob Townsend's Sarsaparilla, having on it the Old Dr's. likeness, his family coat of arms, and his signature across the coat of arms.

Principal Office, 102 Nassau st., New York City

OLD DR. JACOB TOWNSEND,

THE ORIGINAL DISCOVERER OF THE

Genuine Townsend Sarsaparilla.

Old Dr. Townsend is now about 70 years of age, and has long been known as the AUTHOR and DISCOVERER of the GENUINE ORIGINAL "TOWNSEND SARSAPARILLA." Being poor, he was compelled to limit its manufacture, by which means it has been kept out of market, and the sales circumscribed to those only who had proved its worth, and known its value. It had reached the ears of many, nevertheless, as those persons who had been healed of sore diseases, and saved from death, proclaimed its excellence and wonderful

HEALING POWER.

Knowing, many years ago, that he had, by his skill, science and experience, devised an article which would be of incalculable advantage to mankind when the means would be furnished to bring it into universal notice, when its inestimable virtues would be known and appreciated. This time has come, the means are supplied; this GRAND AND UNEQUALLED PREPARATION is manufactured on the largest scale, and is called for throughout the length and breadth of the land, especially as it is found incapable of degeneration or deterioration.

Unlike young S. P. Townsend's, it improves with age, and never changes, but for the better; because it is prepared on scientific principles by a scientific man. The highest knowledge of Chemistry, and the latest discoveries of the art, have all been brought into requisition in the manufacture of the Old Dr's Sarsaparilla. The Sarsaparilla root, it is well known to medical men, contains many medicinal properties, and some properties which are inert or useless, and others, which if retained in preparing it for use, produce fermentation and acid, which is injurious to the system. Some of the properties of Sarsaparilla are so volatile, that they entirely evaporate and are lost in the preparation, if they are not preserved by a scientific process, known only to those experienced in its manufacture. Moreover, these volatile principles, which fly off in vapor, or as an exhalation, under heat, are the very essential medical properties of the root, which give to it all its value.

Any person can boil or stew the root till they get a dark-colored liquid, which is more from the coloring matter in the root than from any thing else; they can then strain this insipid or vapid liquid, sweeten with sour molasses, and then call it "SARSAPARILLA EXTRACT or SYRUP." But such is not the article known as the

GENUINE OLD DR. JACOB TOWNSEND'S SARSAPARILLA.

This is so prepared, that all the inert properties of the Sarsaparilla root are first removed, every thing capable of becoming acid or of fermentation, is extracted and rejected; then every particle of medical virtue is secured in a pure and concentrated form; and thus it is rendered incapable of losing any of its valuable and healing properties. Prepared in this way, it is made the most powerful agent in the

Cure of innumerable diseases.

Hence the reason why we hear commendations on every side in its favor by men, women, and children. We find it doing wonders in the cure of

CONSUMPTION, DYSPEPSIA, and LIVER COMPLAINT, and in RHEUMATISM, SCROFULA, PILES, COSTIVENESS, all CUTANEOUS ERUPTIONS, PIMPLES, BLOCTHES, and all affections arising from

IMPURITY OF THE BLOOD.

It possesses a marvellous efficacy in all complaints arising from Indigestion, from Acidity of the Stomach, from unequal circulation, determination of blood to the head, palpitation of the heart, cold feet and hands, cold chills and hot flashes over the body. It has not its equal in Colds and Coughs; and promotes easy expectoration and gentle perspiration, relaxing stricture of the lungs, throat, and every other part. But in nothing is its excellence more manifestly seen and acknowledged than in all kinds and stages of

FEMALE COMPLAINTS.

It works wonders in cases of Fluor Albus or Whites, Falling of the Womb, Obstructed, Suppressed, or Painful Menses, Irregularity of the menstrual periods, and the like; and is as effectual in curing all the forms of Kidney Diseases.

By removing obstructions, and regulating the general system, it gives tone and strength to the whole body, and thus cures all forms of

Nervous diseases and debility,

and thus prevents or relieves a great variety of other maladies, as Spinal irritation, Neuralgia, St. Vitus' Dance Spooning, Epileptic Fits, Convulsions, &c.

It cleanses the blood, excites the liver to healthy action, tones the stomach, and gives good digestion, relieves the bowels of torpor and constipation, allays inflammation, purifies the skin, equalises the circulation of the blood, producing gentle warmth equally all over the body, and the insensible perspiration; relaxes all strictures and tightness, removes all obstructions, and invigorates the entire nervous system. Is not this then

The medicine you pre-eminently need?

But can any of these things be said of S. P. Townsend's inferior article? This young man's liquid is not to be

COMPARED WITH THE OLD DR

because of one GRAND FACT, that the one is INCAPABLE of DETERIORATION, and

NEVER SPOILS,

while the other DOES; souring, fermenting, and blowing the bottles containing it into fragments; the sour, acid liquid exploding and damaging other goods! Must not this horrible compound be poisonous to the system?—What! put acid into a system already diseased with acid! What causes Dyspepsia but acid? Do we not all know that when food sours in our stomachs, what mischiefs it produces? flatulence, heartburn palpitation of the heart, liver complaint, diarrhœa, dysentery, colic, and corruption of the blood? What is Scrofula but an acid humor in the body? What produces all the humors which bring on Eruptions of the Skin, Scald Head, Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, White Swellings, Fever Sores, and all ulcerations internal and external? It is nothing under heaven, but an acid substance, which sours, and thus spoils all the fluids of the body, more or less. What causes Rheumatism but a sour or acid fluid which insinuates itself between the joints and elsewhere, irritating and inflaming the delicate tissues upon which it acts? So of nervous diseases, of impurity of the blood, or deranged circulations, and nearly all the ailments which afflict human nature.

Now is it not horrible to make and sell, and [illegible] to use this

and yet he would fain have it understood that Old Dr. Jacob Townsend's Genuine Original Sarsaparilla, is an IMITATION of his inferior preparation!!

Heaven forbid that we should deal in an article which would bear the most distant resemblance to S. P. Townsend's article! and which should bring down upon the Old Dr, such a mountain load of complaints and criminations from Agents who have sold, and purchasers who have used S. P. Townsend's FERMENTING COMPOUND.

We wish it understood, because it is the absolute truth, that S. P. Townsend's article and Old Dr. Jacob Townsend's Sarsaparilla are heaven-wide apart, and infinitely dissimilar; that they are unlike in every particular, having not one single thing in common.

As S. P. Townsend is no doctor, and never was, is no chemist, no pharmaceutist—knows no more of medicine or disease than any other common, unscientific, unprofessional man, what guarantee can the public have that they are receiving a genuine scientific medicine, containing all the virtues of the articles used in preparing it, and which are incapable of changes which might render them the AGENTS of Disease instead of health.

But what else should be expected from one who knows nothing comparatively of medicine or disease! It requires a person of some experience to cook and serve up even a common decent meal. How much more important is it that the persons who manufacture medicine, designed for

should know well the medical properties of plants, the best manner of securing and concentrating their healing virtues, also an extensive knowledge of the various diseases which affect the human system, and how to adapt remedies to these diseases!

It is to arrest frauds upon the unfortunate, to pour balm into wounded humanity, to kindle hope in the despairing bosom, to restore health and bloom, and vigor into the crushed and broken, and to banish infirmity that OLD DR. JACOB TOWNSEND has SOUGHT and FOUND the opportunity and means to bring his

within the reach, and to the knowledge of all who need it, that they may learn and know, by joyful experience, its

Transcendent Power to Heal.

DR. JACOB TOWNSEND. NEW YORK, Oct. 5, 1848.

WALKED ACROSS THE ROOM

with the aid of crutches. Since then, I have walked in the street: have gone alone from 36 Spruce street to the Park; thence to Lovejoy's Hotel and back. I have been to 85 Nassau street two different times, and am now frequently visiting my neighbors. During all this time, I have taken but two bottles of Old Dr. Townsend's Sarsaparilla, Oct. 4. I procured another bottle to-day (5th Oct.) I walked twice across the floor without the aid of crutches. I have also nearly recovered from obstruction of water, which gave me great distress. The pain in my back has likewise left me. I and my family have no earthly reason to ascribe my recovery to any other cause but to

OLD DR. JACOB TOWNSEND'S SARSAPARILLA.

ALEX. WELSH, 36 Spruce-st.

P. S.—Several able physicians despaired of my ever walking or even raising myself from my bed again.

The True Secret of Success.

BY ARTHUR DE VERE.

I called the other day to see
My neighbor Jaques Mickelby,
A noble farmer, robust, hale,
As ever swung an axe or flail,
Of wealth he has a goodly store
His cup of blessings running o'er.

His cottage stands beside a hill;
His garden watered by a rill
Is filled with plants and pleasant flowers
Adorned with walks and shady bowers
Planned by a daughter's skillful art
To lure and cheer the farmer's heart.

His wife devoted to her task
Is all to him that he can ask;
Bidding affection, truth and grace
Are mirrored in her cheerful face;
Her smile, as if an angel sent,
Would banish aught of discontent.

And Jacques is an honest man!
Seek where you will or where you can
A better one you may not find,
So well disposed so free and kind,
For much he gives to feed the poor
'And want goes smiling from his door.'

I found him laboring in the field
Gathering in his harvest yield,
The golden sheaves stood thick around
And swaths lay spread upon the ground
All promising, the sum well told
'Some sixty, some an hundred fold.'

Three sturdy sons themselves a host,
The father's pride, the farmer's boast,
Push on the work with willing hands
As active as the 'Tyrian bands,
A manly part they each sustain
Nor is their industry in vain.

I asked my worthy friend to tell
The secret why he thrived so well,
While neighbors earnest toil seemed vain
His was a source of constant gain,
Though early showers and summers sun
No more for him than other's done.

'The secret this he quick replied,
'Let spendthrifts if they will deride,
Three steadfast friends have heaped my store
And yearly they contribute more,
Economy and Industry
And unimpeached Integrity.

THE DEACON FOR ME.—'Papa,' said one of the boys to the deacon.

'I had a funny dream last night.'

'Well Tommy, what was your dream?'

'I dreamed the devil came into your store.'

'The devil!'

'Yes Pa, the devil!—that he found you drawing a glass of gin for poor Ambre James, who had fits, and broke a little baby's arm the other day, because she cried when he came home drunk. And I thought the devil came up to the counter, and laid the end of his tail on the chair, and leaned over the barrel where you where stooping to draw it, and asked you if you was a deacon. And I thought you didn't look up, but said you was, and he grinned and shock his tail like a cat, that has a rat, and says he to me 'that's the deacon for me!' and run out of the shop laughing so loud that I put my fingers in my ears and woke up.'

The deacon quit the trafic and joined the Washingtonian Temperance Society.

BOTHERING A WITNESS.—A Little Rock (Arkansas) paper tells a story of a youth put upon the witness' stand, who was bothered to death by the counsel on the opposite side—one complaining that he could not understand the witness, and the other claiming the protection of the court against such interruptions. Losing his patience at last, the witness addressed himself to the court.—'If you'll just stop 'em both, I'll tell my story so that the biggest fool in the house will understand it all?'

An 'independant man' is he who blacks his own boots and shoes, who can live without whiskey and tobacco, shave himself with brown soap and cold water, who eats brown bread when he cannot get wheat, who flatters no man for his vices, and stoops to no man for his favors.

A BAD BUSINESS.—A gentleman of our acquaintence has asked our advice on the subject of his pecuniary affairs, which he says have become so deranged that all his liabilities have gone out of his mind.

A Squinting Jury.

Once upon a time, or to be a little more particular, nearly half a century ago, (for the editor of this paper well remembers the time, place, and scene, which are firmly fixed upon his boyish recollections) there dwelt in the town of ———, in old England, a remarkable oddity, in the person, of an attorney at law, who although not fair to look upon, (was withal a person of sound judgment, great benevolence, varied learning, a poet, a painter, and a wit of no mean order.

It so happened that the aforesaid gentleman, G——G, Esq., was appointed High Sheriff of the town of———. He was a man of fortune, and had a kind heart, as many a poor prisoner could testify, who partook of the good cheer with which the prisoners were liberally supplied at Christmas, and other well known festivals, from the private purse of the High Sheriff.

It was of course the duty of the High Sheriff to summon Grand and Petit Jury, to attend at the Quarter Sessions of which the Recorder, Mayor, and Alderman of the Borough composed the Court. In the performance of his official duty in summoning the Petit Jury, our High Sheriff indulged in some of the strangest and drollest freaks that have probably ever been heard of in any other town or country. In the first place he summoned for the October Court, a jury consisting of twelve of the fattest men he could find in the Borough, and when they came to the book to be sworn, it appeared that only nine jurors could sit comfortably in the box! After a great deal of sweating, squeezing and scolding, the panel was literally jammed into the box, and when seated, they presented to the eye of the Court, the harrister, and the audience, "the tightest fit" of a jury that was ever seen in a court-room. Literally they became, much to the astonishment of the Court and its robed advocates, "a packed jury." and no mistake!

For the January term, our facetious High Sheriff (in consequence, it was said, of some hint from the Recorder, that there should be no more fat panels summoned to his Court) went into the opposite extreme. He summoned twelve of the leanest and tallest men he could find in the Borough; and when they took their seats in the box, it appeared comparatively empty—there was indeed room for twelve more of the same sort and dimensions.

For the April term of the Court, our humorous functionary summoned a jury consisting of twelve barbers! Now it so happened that among the latter were the very perruquiers who dressed the Recorder's and Barrister's wigs, and some of the latter, arriving late at the bar had to appear that morning in Court with their wigs undressed or half dressed, so as to cut a very ridiculous figure amidst the smile and half suppressed laughter of the by-standers. The High Sheriff enjoyed the fun amazingly, but looked "grave as a judge,' while he tried to keep silence in the Court room. But the crowning joke of this waggish functionary occurred at the summoning of his fourth and last jury, at the Summer Session, in July. For that term of the court, the High Sheriff not having the fear of the Recorder, the Mayor, and the Alderman before his eyes, actually summoned a Squinting Jury!—Twelve as queer looking bipeds as ever took their seats in a jury box—a jury that was probably more looked at, and laughed at, than any of the appointed twelve that ever were sworn, to "well and truly try and true deliverance make between their Sovereign Lord and King, and the prisoner at the bar."

But the scene was so irresistibly droll that the learned Recorder could not maintain his gravity. The Mayor and Aldermen followed suit. The barristers laughed while their wigs became bald, powderless; nay even the poor prisoners in the dock, who were to be put upon their trial, and some of them undergo transportation, could not refrain from joining in the general cachination! And when the learned recorder commanded the High Sheriff to bring the court room to order, and intimated, with a half suppressed laugh, that the latter ought to be ashamed of himself for summoning such a jury, the drollery of this court scene was heightened considerably by the quick, ready, and sonorous response of the High Sheriff, who looking at the same time at the squinting jury, exclaimed—"All good and lawful men, your Honor."

There are now but five among all the kings and queens of Europe, who reign over so many people as are included in the State of New-York; and there are but three Emperors in that quarter of the world who claim so many subjects. There is but one Republic there whose Chief Magistrate has a constituency so numerous, wealthy, and powerful. This is a great country; and New-York is a great State.

Disobedience to Parents.

Young man, that was your father. How could you make use of lanuage so disputeful? You don't care? You will talk as you please, no matter who hears you? If we were in want of a clerk, and there was not another young man within ten hundred miles that we could engage, we would not consent to take you. We should be afraid to trust a boy who is so disobedient to his parent—who shows so little respect for his father. A youth who was saucy to his parents we never knew to turn out well. He respects nobody. If your father is in the wrong, and you are certain of it, there is no excuse for such language. No one will respect you for it. Every body will condemn you. A parent should be treated with the utmost respect by his children, no matter how poor he may be, or how large his children may have grown.

There is too little respect paid to parental authority at the present day. It is grievous to go into many families and hear the language daily used by the children. 'I will,'—'I wont,—'I don't care,'—'It's none of your business: I am old enough to know what is right,'—and the like expresions, are painfully common. Large boys and grown up girls even, do not hesitate to give their mothers the lie and break away from their express commands. They will do as they please, and go where they have a mind. We wish such children could only see how they appear in the eyes of their acquaintance, and if they have any shame it must flush their cheeks. There is truth as well as rhyme in a couplet by Randolph:

'Whoever makes his parent's heart to bleed,
Shall have a child that will revenge the deed'

Of one thing we are certain: an undutiful son and a disobedient daughter, cannot long prosper.

For a season they may appear well to the eye of a stranger; but their self-will and stubborness are soon discovered, and they are despised. A child who disobeys his parent will not hesitate to abuse any body.—Neither age nor talents receive respect from him.—Port. Bulletin.

Sealed Orders.

Early this week, a gentleman of our acquaintance, and an attache of the Press—who sports a heavy pair of whiskers, which are not black, nor it must be confessed of any well defined, decided color—found himself at one of our neighboring towns. While there he made the pleasant acquaintance of a very agreeable young school mistress and was invited to visit her school. He did so, observed the progress of the scholars as well as the beauty of their mistress' face; and rising to go at the end of half an hour, was asked for his opinion of the school. Feeling the fit upon him, he sat down and wrote several stanzas very complimentary to the scholars, but much more so to their instructress. Giving the lady these he solicited from her in exchange some similar expression of sentiment.

She promised to give him one in the evening.—Bearing with what fortitude he might, the weariness of "hope deferred," he awaited the approach of the twilight hour, and then examined the promised token. He received it: but vexatious delay! only on one condition—that he could not look at it until he had left the town. This was hard to bear; but, thought he, how modest! She could not bear that I should read her tender confession while near enough to see her blushes. Curbing his impatience as well as he could, he put the delicate note away carefully unopened. Morning came. He was on the way. With trembling hand and beating heart he broke the seal, and read—oh horror!—he read only, "Cut off your Whiskers!" The disappointment was astounding; but he rallied. Philosophy triumphed; and he laughed till the hills rung with the echo.—Cin. Atlas.

THE GALLOWS.—It is asserted in a late English paper that since the year 1800, not less than fourteen persons have suffered death for crimes in that country, for which it was afterwards clearly shown that they were innocent.

A Chapter on Printing.

'Can't you print me a Bible?" said a good old lady, who, some years ago came into a printing office in the country.

'Certainly,' said a man at the case who was dabbing at the types like a hen picking up corn—'certainly madam; but not just at present, it'll take some time to do it."

'Oh,' returned the lady, 'for that matter I'm in no great hurry—any time to day will answer.'

'To-day,' said the printer in astonish- 'why ma'am you don't think———'

'Oh yes,' said the good woman, seating herself on a bench, and taking out her knitting—'I can wait just as well as not. It's only about one o'clock now, and I spose you'll get it done by tea time.'

'What! print a Bible in one afternoon? Why ma'am, it would take me and my devil a whole year to print a Bible.

'Oh my gracious! exclaimed the old lady, starting up in astonishment—'you don't have the evil one to work for you do you?'

"Evil One? Yes, he's evil enough, the lazy dog.'

'I wouldn't have him to print a Bible for me on no account. I shouldn't believe a word on't if he did—for he's a liar and the father of liars.'

'I don't know whether he's the father of lies, or not. But he is true enough, a lying little devil—there's no trusting him, I mean to cancel his indentures.'

'Well, good bye, Mr. Printer—I could not think of having a good book done in such a bad office. Employ the devil! Oh dear.'

The old lady made way with all haste out of the office; and when it is considered that she was unacquainted with the technical language of typographers and did not know the difference between the printer's devil and old Nicholas himself, it must be owned that her horror was very natural.

HOW TO MAKE A MATCH.—Catch a young gentleman and lady in good condition; let the gentleman be green, and the lady tender. Place them at the dinner-table, and baste the gentleman with a good quantity of wine. While he is soaking, stick in a good word every now and then about miss; this will help to make him boil. When he begins to change color and turn red, take him into the drawing-room, set him and the lady side by side, stuff them with sweet cakes and strong green tea. Then place them at the piano, and blow the flame till the lady sings; when you hear the gentleman sigh, it is time to remove them, as they are then warm enough. Now, put them by themselves in a corner of the room, or on the sofa, and there let them simmer together for the rest of the evening. This sort of game is not cooked at one dressing, but if repeated two or three times, care being taken to keep them together as much as convenient, they will be ready for matrimony whenever they are wanted

N. B. After marriage they will require looking to now and then, as they are apt to become sour.

Every hour a man is in debt, is a year spent in slavery. Your creditor is your master; it matters not whether a kind or severe one, the sense of obligation you incur, saps the feeling of manly independence, which is the first charm of youth: and it is always through the rents in moral feeling, that our happiness oozes out the most effectually.

MRS. PARTINGTON——, A dozen children may seem a large family with our folks, who are moderate,' remarked Mrs. Partington; 'but my poor dear husband used to tell a story of a woman in some part of the world where he stopped one night, who had nineteen children in five years; or five children in nineteen years, I don,t reccollect which; but I remember well it was one or t'other.'—Boston Post.

The Christian cannot tell in the morning what opportunities he may have of doing good during the day; but he can tell that he will try to keep his heart open, his mind prepared, his affections alive to do whatever may occur in the way of duty. He will, as it were, stand in the way to receive the orders of Providence, doing good in his vacation.

If you are courting a young lady, and wish, before you take her, to ascertain her temper, tear her ball dress, as if by accident. If she keeps her equanimity, lose not a moment in popping the 'momentious question.' She will do, and you may account yourself a happy man.

PLAINFIELD GAZETTE.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Thursday, February, 8, 1849.

Congress has now been in session over sixty days, and none of the great measures of reform of which we have heard so much and which all admit the necessity of, are apparently no nearer being accomplished than they were at the commencement of the session. How much longer will they be defered.

The Whigs complained long and loudly of the abuses of the government, and partly through their promises, and partly through the popularity of Gen. Taylor in a popular war against Mexico, they succeeded in getting into power. Will they redeem any of their promises, it does not yet appear like it, perhaps we are to have them all in a lump when the Gen. takes the helm, perhaps so, we shall see. We prefer having them one at a time, they will last the longer, suppose they begin now on some of the following.

First begin at home, and reform the mileage. We believe there are none but what are willing that Members of Congress should be liberally paid for their services and expenses in going to and returning from the seat of Government.

We believe also that there is not a disinterested one who will not say, as it at present exists, it is an abuse of the peoples rights, unequal and therefore unjust, a tax upon the people worse in principle than any the king of England ever imposed on our country when it was a colony of Great Britain, and a mark, our mark, shall be put on all who oppose so just a reformation.

Shall we have anything done towards a reduction of Postage, this also has long been demanded by the people, and we see nothing to prevent something like the following being adopted, the peoples interest would be promoted, and we doubt not the revenue in a short time would increase.

Let the postage on all letters prepaid not exceeding have an ounce in weight, any distance not exceeding 300 miles be two and a half cents, any distance exceeding 300 miles five cents, with an increase of weight a corresponding increase of postage.

If advertised in a newspaper one cent additional; each drop letter not to be mailed one cent; each Newspaper not exceeding 1,000 square inches any distance not exceeding 100 miles half a cent, exceeding 100 miles one cent, and the unjust distinction in favor of publishers to be done away, those who are accommodated on credit and at all hours can afford to pay the old rates.

We want also in connection with a reduction of postage and for the convenience of the people, and an extension of the decimal currency, a two and a half cent piece coined, and not a three cent piece as we have seen elsewhere recommended, as that would tend to keep those small spanish coins in circulation, and the other to drive them out, they should pass for only ten and five cents if suffered to pass at all also a Gold dollar which we have heard something about, as there is now plenty of gold, there can be no excuse on that score, let's have it by all means

There is some noise made by the Whig papers about secret articles of the Treaty with Mexico. We have not yet seen the other side of the story, but doubt very much however anything having been done that was not justifiable under the circumstances, we shall see

We are indebted to the Hon. Horace Greely for valuable public documents.

We have received the January and February numbers of Grahams Magazine and so far as we have had time to examine their contents they will compare favorable with any with which we are acquainted; the engravings are splendid, all who want an agreeable and interesting monthly visitor should subscribe immediately while the first numbers can be had.

We notice in the Tribune of Monday a sermon preached by Stephen H. Cone, D. D. in the first Baptist Church N. Y. City, it appears to us worthy of a perusal its length precludes our publishing it.

Michigan State Paper.—The Legislature of Michigan has appointed the Lansing State Journal, (Free Soil Democrat,) the State Paper. Messrs. Munger & Patterson, the proprielors of the Detroit Bulletin and The Journal, had previously secured the State printing.

For the Plainfield Gazette.

The large number of applications to our Legislature for acts of incorporation, for different objects, is calculated to cause us to inquire, why is it necessary that the greater part of these objects cannot be accomplished as well without acts of incorporation as with them? Will any one say that a number of men cannot unite and form a manufacturing company, and produce goods cheaply and of good quality without first getting permission from the State? Who does not know that some of the largest and most profitable factories in the Union are owned by private individuals?

The fact is, an individual can conduct any business cheaper and more efficiently than a company can. This is perfectly philosophical. The private individual will devote his best efforts to his business, because he knows that the profits and loss are his. The company's business, on the other hand, is conducted by men who have very little (if any) interest in the matter, and hence they will not give it their individual attention.

This system of granting acts of incorporation for projects of all kinds, is un-democratic and absurb, and must be reformed I am glad that so much attention has been given to this subject, and I hope that the time will soon come when a company of men will no sooner seek for an act of incorporation to manufacture goods, than they would apply to our State Legislature for permission to eat when they are hungry, or drink when they are dry. A.

Kit Carson.

A writer in the Boston Post asks:

Can you inform me through your columns of the whereabouts or address of Kit Carson? or can you see in any of your exchange papers any notice of him, or whether it is supposed he is to conduct a company to California from Independence or not? If you can find any information at all on the subject it would confer a great favor on one anxious to go, if you would publish it; or any information of any company that is to start via that route with a good guide?

We learn from the Western journals that the renewned Kit—the guide of Fremont in all his expeditions, and the hero of many a marvellous exploit in the California war—has been chosen to conduct a company to the Gold Region, from Independence, Mo.—His caravan will leave in April, and if we were ready to start on the overland journey, we should choose no other captain than him

We have in hand the manuscript of a thrilling adventure among the Rocky Mountains, in which he shared, and we shall soon give it to our readers.—N. Y. Tribune.

Arrival of the United States.

This long-expected steamship reached Sandy Hook at 6 o'clock yesterday morning, but, owing to the snow storm, did not get up to her dock till late in the afternoon. Her passage—27 days from Cowes—was boisterous beyond precedent. The first 17 days were one constant hurricane, in the face of which she made her difficult way. Old sailors on board of her assured us that they had never known storms of such a length of time. Amid the whole, the brave ship bore herself gallently, passing through the most violent tempests as firmly and securely as if she were navigating a Summer's sea.—The concurrent testimony of her passengers, many of them old stagers on the Atlantic, is that a finer sea-boat never floated.

Discovery of a New Mountain Pass.

A Texan hunter—one of those wild, roving characters peculiar to the unsetled wilderness of the West and South—gives the following account of a new pass through the great chains of mountains which traverse the continent. He has suggested a new route for a military road or a railroad across the continent that is perhaps entitled to as much consideration as the celebrated project of Mr. Whitney. He states that there is a broad pass between the vast ranges of the Anahuac Mountains on the south and the Rocky Mountains or Cordilleras on the north. that extends quite across the continent, from the valley of the Rio Grande to the valley of the Rio Hiaqui. This pass, he says, resembles the Southwest Pass discovered by Fremont, and the access to the summit of the table lands of Mexico is there so gradual, that it appears like an extended plain, and carriages and loaded wagons can pass from the valley of the Rio Grande to the valley of the Hiaqui as easily as they can pass over the undulating prairies of Western Texas.—The distance from one valley to the other he estimates at only five hundred miles.—This pass, he says, about in the latitude of twenty-nine degrees, extends between the valleys of Monclova and the Cochos. —Houston Telegraph, Jan. 2.

Destructive Conflagration—Burning of Hoe & Co's Manufactory.—A little before 11 o'clock, last night, a fire broke out in the third story of R. Hoe & Co's Manufactory and depot of presses and Printing Materials, 29 Gold-st. between John and Fulton sts which were totally destroyed with its contents.

✓ One of the most curious of the investments about to be made in California for this city, is an hotel. A building has been prepared, complete in all its parts, and shipped on board a vessel bound for San Francisco. It will accomodate 200 persons when finished. All its furniture goes with it, beds and bedding, carpets and the complete fixtures of a first rate hotel. The entire cost of this venture is $70,000. A gentleman of high worth and much experience goes out in charge of it. We can imagine the satisfaction with which the new hotel will be hailed by the millionaires of California.

Can it be that our Legislature will again adjourn without passing an act requiring the public laws to be published in all the newspapers of the State; and the local laws in the newspapers of their respective localities? We hope not, certainly. This is a matter that is demanded by every consideration of public interest and convenience. Laws are required to be obeyed, and yet their provisions are virtually withheld from the people.—Is this right?—Monmouth Inquirer.

A Summary of the proceedings of Congress.

Washington, Feb. 1. 1849.

House.—The Spirit Ration in the Navy was abolished, and a commutation of $1 20 per. month additional in lieu thereof was passed with a clause prohibiting the Officers of the Navy having any intoxicating liquors on ship-board 64 to 57.

Monday, Feb. 5.

The Vice-President laid before the Senate several communications from the President.

Mr. Mangum submitted a resolution similar to that proposed by Mr. Stephens in the House on Saturday, calling upon the President to communicate to the Senate certain documents supposed to be in existence relative to the secret history of the Treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo; inquiring of him whether there is not a Protocol extant which nullifies the amendments of the Senate to the Treaty, &c. After an informal discussion, in which no facts of importance were elicited, the resolution was laid over.

Mr. Hunter presented a series of resolutions passed by the Legislature of Virginia reaffirming the resolutions which were passed by the same body in the year 1847 with regard to the Wilmot Proviso and the question of Slavery in the Territories Mr. H. commended the resolutions in a few appropriate remarks, when on motion they were ordered to be printed.

Mr. Clayton, from the Joint Committee having the subject in charge, presented a report reccommending that the two Houses meet on the 14 inst. and proceed to count the votes cast during the late election for President and Vice-Presideot of the United States; also recomending that one teller be appointed on the part of the Senate and two for the House. The report was adopted, and Mr. Clayton was appointed Teller on the part of the Senate.

Extracts from the Report on Public Schools.

I. That $10,000 be paid by the Treasurer out of monies not otherwise appropriated, to the Trustees of the School Fund, to be appropriated by them, in addition to the $30,000 which they are already required to appropriate out of the annual income of the Fund.

II. That the inhabitants of townships be authorized to raise by taxation, or otherwise, any sum for the support of Schools that they think proper, provided such sum shall not exceed four times the amount received from the State through the board of chosen Freeholders.

III. That no township shall be permitted to draw its apportionment of the school fund, which neglects or refuses to raise at least an equal amount by taxation or otherwise.

IV. That the Trustees of the School Districts be authorized to appropriate as much of the money raised for school purposes as may be necessary for heating, and repairing School Houses.

Bones.—That world renowned chemist, Liebig, says that a single pound of bone dust contains as much phosphoric acid as one hundred pounds of wheat. From this we can easily, perceive that there are bones wasted on every farm in this state sufficient to manure the entire wheat crop.

There is a time for all things,' said a crusty old fellow to his wife. 'I'll believe that,' answered his wife in a sharp vinegar voice, 'when you pay for your newspaper.' Hit him again old woman.

Prevalence of the English Language.—Notwithstanding the popular notion in regard to the French, our language is spoken at present, by a greater number than any other. We give below the number of persons speaking each of the principal European languages:

Speak Russian.	45,000,000
" German.	40,000,000
" French.	35,000,000
In Great Britain,	28,800,000
In British N. Am. Provinces,	2,100,000
In W. I., Guiana & Bermuda,	1,000,000
In Australia and India,	500,000
In Africa,	300,000
In the United States,	22,300,000
Total. English.	55,000,000

In Central Asia there are many distinct dialects, although from a common Sanscrit stock; and in China the people in different provinces do not understand each other. The influence of American and English Missionaries; the extent of colonization, by which the most fertile parts of the world are falling into the hands of those who speak English; and the rapid increase of American population,—will hasten the time when our language shall be used by half the people of the globe.

Rights of Married Women.—The Judiciary Committee of the Senate of this State have reported the following amendment to the bill passed at the last session for the protection of the property of married women:

'Any married female may take by inheritance, or by gift, grant, devise or bequest, from any person other than her husband, and hold to her sole and seperate use, and convey and devise real and personal property, and any interest or estate therein, by grant from her husband and the rents, issues and profits thereof, and hold the same in the same manner, and with like effect as if such husband and wife were unmarried; and such property shall not be subject to the disposal of such husband, nor be liable for any debts contracted or libilities incurred by him after the evidence or deed of such grant shall be recorded in the office of the Clerk of the County where such property is situated.'

Odd Fellows and the Catholics.—It will be remembered that some time since the Catholic Bishops or some other authority of the church, issued letters against secret societies of all kinds; and the clergy prohibited from encouraging them in any way. Yesterday at the funerel of Mr. Ray Marsh several lodges of Odd Fellows, with their usual badges, followed his body into St. Patrick's Church Father O'Reilly, however, before proceeding with the funeral services, gave notice that the rules of the church forbade the tolerance of such badges, and unless they were removed, the ceremonies could not proceed. Whereupon the Odd Eellows left in a body, followed by several of the citizens who sympathized with them and repaired to their lodge rooms.—[Rochester Democrat, Friday.

Rules For Business-Men.

Let the business of others alone, and attend to your own.

Don't buy what you don't want—use every hour to the best advantage, and study even to make leisure hours useful.

Buy fair—sell fair—and take care of the profits.

Should misfortune overtake you, retrench—work harder—but never fly the track—confront difficulties with unflinching persevereance; should you then fail you will be honored, but shrink and you'll be despised.

Consider the causes of the good standing of some, and the decline and fall and want of success of others, and regulate your conduct accordingly.

Invention.—Will no genius take the balloon out of the hands of the bunglers? Is the air never to be traversed but by the lightning? Who can doubt but that Science would enable men to move with speed from place to place, through the air, if the question were thoroughly considered, and ingenuity duly set to work? Bain, who invented the sub-marine telegraph and the electric clock, set up one of his clocks some years ago in Edinburgh, with an apparatus which told the hours at the same time in that city and Glasgow. Cannot somebody invent a tube wire that will convey the sound of the human voice as a piece of wood will do, the distant ends being held in the teeth of those that whisper through it? The tin tubes, for conversation from one part of a large building to another, might supply new ideas to the ingenious of this inquiring age.

An ounce of Quicksilver, beat up with the whites of two eggs, and put on with a feather, is the cleanest and surest bed bug poison.

Gutta Percha.

GUTTA PERCHA was accidentally discovered by Dr. Montgomerie, while at Singapore. He first noticed the handle of an axe made from it, and upon questioning the Maylay woodsman, was told that the material of which it was formed could be moulded into any other shape by dipping it into boiling water until it was heated through, when it became plastic as clay, regaining its original hardness when cold. The Dr. purchased the axe handle, sent for more of the substance, and commenced trying experiments, the result of which was, to introduce this valuable material to the commercial world

The Percha is one of the largest trees of India, attaining a diameter of three or four feet, the fruit yielding a concrete oil, used by the natives with their food, and the gum being the sap. Since it has came into demand, the people cut down the tree, strip off its bark and collect its milky juice in a trough formed of the hollow stem of the plantain leaf, when, being exposed to the air it coagulates. It is composed of carbon 87.8; hydrogen 12 3.

In the abstract of the new patents given in the October number of the Magazine of Science and the Arts, we notice that C. Hancock, Esq., has taken out a patent for improving the manufacture of Gutta Percha. He would combine Gutta Percha with caoutchouc, and a substance called gintawan, (we have no clue to what this gintawan may be,) in order to form an elastic material impervious to water; varying the proportions according to the greater or less degree of hardness or elasticity required for making elastic bands, a compound is used where 50 parts of Gutta Percha are combined with 24 of gintawan, 20 of caoutchouc, and 6 of orpiment. From a mixture of these, Mr. Hancock also prepares a light, porous and spongy material suited for stuffing or forming the seats of chairs, cushions, mattresses, saddles, &c; likewise, springs of clocks, clasps, belts, garters, and strings. Wherever the requisite is flexibility and elasticity, then the quantity of Gutta Percha should be diminished, and increased where firmness is wanted. By prolonging the process much hardness may be acquired, and moulds and balls of Gutta Percha will bear turning in the lathe, like wood or ivory. The material is also applicable to useful and ornamental purposes, as picture frames, door handles, walking sticks, chessmen, handles of swords, and knives, buttons, combs, flutes, &c; &c. By the admixture of sulphuric acid, or of a tenth or larger part of vegetable wax or tallow, any degree of solubility, pliancy and softness may be acquired; or the composition may be used as varnish to cover other materials, concealing any odor, and imparting a surface impervious to water. In printing and painting of silk or cotton, it seems applicable to many uses, for it amalgamates readily with colors; when interposed between two thin sheets of gold leaf or tin foil, it combines them firmly in one.

HOW TO CATCH HAWKS.—The following ingenious method for destroying these pests to the farmer is given by S. Webb, Esq. of Wall do county, Maine, in a late number of the Belfast Republican:

'Erect a pole twelve or fifteen feet high in a place where there will not be anything else near for them to light upon, and upon it set a common fox-trap, on which they will light. A strong rat trap will answer the purpose, by tying it to the pole lengthwise, with the jaws raised above the end the pole being a little leaning, so that the jaws will not fall together. When one hawk is taken, tie it on the ground near the pole and its mate will be in the trap in a short time. The season is near for the hawks to reappear, and if farmers do not wish to have their chickens destroyed by them, they will do well to adopt this method of putting a stop to their depredation. Printers in the United States, by giving this an insertion, will circulate valuable information.'

A REMEDY FOR THE NIGHTMARE.—The Boston Cultivator tells a good story on this subject. It was that one of its subscribers was much troubled with the nightmare, and applied several remedies to no effect, till his good lady asked him if he had paid for his newspaper! On going to see, he found that he was in arrears two years. He at once paid up and returned and slept soundly for three or four nights, but fearing the trouble would come on again, he went back to the office and payed one year in advance. This has proved an effectual cure!

SLANDER.—'My dear friend, that woman has been talking about you again! She has been telling the awfullest lies you ever heard. Why she railed away at you for an hour?' 'And you heard it all, did you?' 'Yes.' Well, after this, just bear in mind that it takes two to make a slander; one to tell it, and one to listen to it.,

DUTCH JUSTICE.—Justice.—'Brisoner, be you guilty or not guilty?'

Prisioner.—'Guilty, your worship.'

Justice.—'Sigs months in der hause of correction.' Tudder brisoner—'Be you guilty or not guilty?'

Prisioner.—'Not guilty.'

Justice.—'Den what der duyvel did you come here for? Go pout your business! Court oop. Shentleman let's go over to Ike Hagerman's and dake someding warm for de stomach's sake.'

LOGIC.—'Dad,' said a hopeful sprig 'how many fowls are there on the table?'

'Why,' said the old gentleman, as he looked complacently on a pair of finely roasted chickens that were smoking on the dinner table, 'why my son there are two.'

'Two!' replied yonng smartness' 'there are three sir, and I'll prove it.'

'Three!' replied the old gentleman, who was a plain matter of fact man, and who understood things as he saw them, 'I'd like to have you prove that.'

'Easily done sir, easliy done! Ain't that one?' laying his knife on the first.

'Yes that's certain,' said his dad.

'And aint that two?' pointing to the second, 'and don't 1 and 2 make three?'

'Readily?' said the father, turning to the old lady who was in amazement at the immense learning of her son, 'really, wife, this boy is a genius, and deserves to be encouraged for it. Here old lady, do you take one fowl, and I'll take the second, John may have the third for his learning.'

LEARNING PUT IN A HOLE.—A knot of rustical worthies were convened round the fire in the bar-room of a small village tavern. The blacksmith, the barber, the constable and school master, all were there. After they had guzzled and smoked to their heart's content, and when all the current topics of the day had been exhausted the school master proposed a new kind of game to relieve the monotony of the evening. Each one was to propound a puzzle to his neighbor, and whoever should ask a question that he himself could not solve, was to pay the reckoning for the whole. The idea pleased, and the school master, by virtue of his station called on Dick Dolt whom most folks thought a fool, and a few to be a knave, to put the first question.

'Neighbors,' said Dick Dolt, drawling and looking ineffably stupid;' you've seen squirrels dig their holes Can any of you tell me the reason why they never throw out dirt?'

This was a poser, and after a long cogitation, even the 'master' was obliged to give it up. It now devolved on Dick to explain.

'The reason is' said Dick, 'that they begin at the bottom of the hole.'

'Stop, Stop,' cried the Pedagogue, startled out of all his prudence and propriety by so monstrous an assertion: 'pray how does the squirrel get there?'

'Ah! master,' replied Dick grinning, 'that's a question of your own wise asking. You're in for the reckoning.'

FRIGHTENING A ROGUE.—In the St. Louis Recorder's Court, recently, Alexander McNanus was fined $5 for stealing wood from the steamer Hannibal, and was asked to 'fork up' by his honor.

'C-c-c-can't do it,' stuttered he, 'a-a-aaint got th-th-the p-p-pewter, your honor.'

'Are you a married man?' enquired the Recorder.

'N-n-n-not exactly s-s-s-so far gone yet sir.'

'Well, I will have to send you to the workhouse,' said the Recorder.

''T-t-t-taint nothing, t-t-t-to go th-th-there,' said Alick, 'I-I-I'm used to it; b-b-but when you t-t-t-talked about m-m-marriage old fellow, you f-f-f-frightened me!'

INCONVENIENCE OF A BAD CHARACTER.—A mortal fever prevailed on board a ship at sea, and a negro man was appointed to throw the bodies of those who died from time to time, overboard. One day when the captin was on deck, he saw the negro dragging out of the forecastle a sick man who was struggling violently to extricate himself from the negro's grasp, and remonstrating bitterly against the cruelty of being buried alive.

'What are you doing with that man, you black rascal?' said the captin.

'Going to throw him overboard, massa, cause he dead.'

'Dead! you scoundrel, 'said the captin,' don't you see he moves and speaks?'

'Yes, massa, I know he says he not dead, but he always lie so, nobody neber know when to believe him.'

'OLD SCRATCH.'—SATAN.—This old gentleman, although considered rather sharp than otherwise, has been served some very acute tricks Amone the rest, we have heard of a poor cobbler who made a league with him, and after enjoying every earthly blessing, he was waited upon at the end of the term by his brimstone majesty, who demanded his soul.—The cobbler took a sharp knife, and ripping off the sole of his shoe, threw it at the feet of his illustrious guest.

'What does this mean?' cried the latter.

'Look at the contract?' cried the cobbler.

Satan examined the writing, and found that the word was spelt sole, which only entitled him to a piece of leather. He turned on his heel and went off scratching his head: and he has been called 'Old Scratch' ever since.

FATHER, what do printers live on?'

'Why, child?'

'You said you had not paid him for two or three years, and yet you have his paper every week?'

'Take the child out of the room, what does he know about right and wrong?'

The Axe-Thrower.

Not long since, on board a Mississipi steamer there were many passengers, among whom was an athletic model of humanity, hoosierly dressed, who boasted of his high social abilities' and his skill in throwing an axe—a gymnastic amusement, now nearly obsolete. During a promiscuous conversation by the crowd in the social hall—the centre of which was the consequential axe-man, who was relating personal anecdotes of sundry great men, upon his individual authority—it was suggested that he might be acquainted with Henry Clay.

'Clay!' said he—Henry Clay—know him—why, gentleman, him and me's in correspondence; I expect a letter from him at the next town.'

No particular inquiry was made as to the nature of his correspondence—whether it related to the tarriff or to throwing an axe—but the crowd enjoying the character, followed with the names of other luminaries, and that of Tom Benton was mentioned.

'Tom Benton—big-nose Tom—huh! he drives two horses that I sent him.' He uttered this with an air, that was brookless of all dispute, and when Tom Corwn's name was mentioned, a smile lit up his face, and a wink darkened up one of his eyes, as he said.

'Now you've hit on the man. We were chidren together—smoked the pipe that Gen. Jackson sent me, together, and went to the same school. I was counted on as being as smart a boy as him, and when spelling took us at the head, I was there, as often and sometimes oftener. Then when we got all the education out of that school, we went to the College together, and both on us graduated on the same day. All the difference, gentleman atwixt me and Tom was, he went to Congress, and I went down the river; but I'll bet a thousand, that I can throw an axe further than Tom Corwin, Tom Benton, or any other white man on this boat.' So saying, he strode to his bunk.

Landlord and the Dog.

We were travelling through Canada, says a contemporary, in the winter of 1839, and after a very long day's ride, stopped at the Lion Inn, and the contents of the stage, numbering about nine persons, soon gathered around the cheerful fire. Among the occupants of the room, we we observed an ill-looking cur, who had shown his wit by taken up his quarters in so comfortable an apartment. After a few minutes, the landlord entered, and observing the specimen of the canine species, remarked—

'Fine dog, that!—Is he yours, sir?' appealing to one of the passengers.

'No, sir.'

'Beautiful dog!—Yours, sir?' addressing himself to a second.

'No!' was the blunt reply.

'Come here, Pup!—Perhaps he is yours, sir?'

'No,' was the reply

'Very sagacious animal!—Belongs to you, I suppose, sir?'

'No he doesn't,' was the answer.

'Then he is yours, and you have a trea ure,' (throwi g the animal a cracker.)

'Nothing of the kind.'

'Oh! (with a smile,) he belongs to you as a matter of course?' addressing himself to the last passenger.

'Wouldn't have him as a gift'

'Then you dirty, mean, contemptible whelp, get out!' and with that, the host gave the poor dog such a kick, as sent the animal yelling into the street, amid the roars of the company!

SHARP SHOOTING.—'Down East,' observed a Southerner to a Yankee, 'a cow, a calf, and a calico frock, is said to be a girl's portion—and thats the place you come from.'

'Well,' replied the Yankee, 'people have to be born pretty much as other people say, barrin' accideuts, and you're from the place, ain't ye, where a potatoe patch with cracks in it so wide that grasshoppers are picked up at the bottom by handfuls, their necks broke in trying to jump over—is a portion for the eldest son. My father told me,' continued the Down-Easter, 'he was once riding by one of your great farms. Observing the wretchedness of the land, he said, 'that fellow must be plaguy poor.' 'Not so poor as you think for!' answered a voice from the blackbery bushes, 'for I don't own but one third on't—my father gin away one-third to get a man to take t'other.'

THE NUPTIALS.—A young Scotchman having wooed a pretty buxom damsel, persuaded her to accompany him to a Scottish Justice of the Peace, to have the ceremony performed. They stood very meekly under the operation, until the magistrate was laying the damsel under the obligations to obey her husband. 'Say no more about that, sir,' said the half-made husband, 'if this band remains upon this body, I'll make her obey me!' 'Are we married yet?' said the exasperated maiden to the ratifier of covenants between man and woman. 'No,' said the wondering justice 'Ah! very well,' cried she, 'we will finish the remainder to-morrow!' and away skipped the damsel congratulating herself on her narrow escape.

A TAILOR 'DONE BROWN.'—The N. Y. 'Spirit,' that perennmall fountain of good things, has the following nice little story by a Boston correspondent, showing just how it was, 'once on a time,' that a certain knight of the shears in this city was 'done brown.' A most beautiful 'brown' it was truly.

Not many years since there lived in the 'moral' city of Boston, two young bucks, rather waggish in their ways, and who were in the habit of patronizing, rather extensively, a tailor by the name of Smith. Well, one day, into Smith's shop these two young bloods strolled. Says one of them—

'Smith, we've been making a bet; now we want you to make each of us a suit of clothes—wait till the bet is decided, and then the one that loses will pay the whole.'

'Certainly, gentlemen; I shall be most happy to serve you,' says Smith, and forthwith their measures were taken, and in due course of time the clothes were sent home.

A month or two passed by, and yet our friend, the tailor, saw nothing of his two customers. One day, however, he met them in Washington street, and thinking it almost time the bet was decided; he made up to them, and asked them how their clothes fitted.

'Oh! excellently, 'says one;' 'bye the bye Smith, our bet isn't decided yet.'

'Ah!' says Smith, 'what is it?'

'Why, I bet that when Bunker Hill Monument falls, it will fall towards the South! Bill here took me up, and when the bet is decided, we'll call and pay you that little bill.'

Smith's face stretched to double its usual length, but he soon recovered his wanted good humor, and says he—

'Boys, I'm sold; let's go to Brigham's and take a 'snifter,—and I'll tell you what, boys, say nothing about it, and I'll send you receipted bills this afternoon.'

JOHN SMITH LOST.—We mention this gentlemans cognomen with some reluctance' for the same reason that there were two persons of the same name in Gotham. John Smith was returning to town on one occasion about midnight, in a dark snow storm. He was 'full of new wine,' and was quite unable, after riding for an hour to find his own dwelling; but he drove up to a house which he thought must be at least in his neighborhhood, and almost wrenched the bell-pull off with his hurried and repeated ringings. At length a neighbor's head peered from an upper window.

'What do you want, down there?' said not the best-natured voice in the world? 'what the deuce do you want!—ringing the bell as if the house was afire! what do you want!'

'Can tell me where John Smith lives?'

'J-o-h-n S-m-i-t-h [illegible]' answered the recognizing neighbor, with a kind of exclamatory interrogation, 'why, you are John Smith yourself!'

'I know tha', as well as you do,' hiccupped John, 'but I don't know where I live!—want to know w-h-e-r-e I l-i-v-e.'

Somebody show'd him.—lb.

CAUTION EXTRA

A man by the name of CLAPP has engaged with a young man of the name of S. P. Townsend, and uses his name to put up a Sarsaparilla, which they call Dr. Townsend's Sarsaparilla, denominating it GENUINE, Original, etc. This Townsend is no doctor, and never was; but was formerly a worker on railroads, canals, and the like. Yet he assumes the title of Dr., for the purpose of gaining credit for what he is not. This is to caution the public not to be deceived, and purchase none but the GENUINE ORIGINAL OLD Dr. Jacob Townsend's Sarsaparilla, having on it the Old Dr's. likeness, his family coat of arms, and his signature across the coat of arms.

Principal Office, 102 Nassau-st., New York City.

OLD DR. JACOB TOWNSEND,

THE ORIGINAL DISCOVERER OF THE

Genuine Townsend Sarsaparilla.

Old Dr. Townsend is now about 70 years of age, and has long been known as the AUTHOR and DISCOVERER of the GENUINE ORIGINAL "TOWNSEND SARSAPARILLA." Being poor, he was compelled to limit its manufacture, by which means it has been kept out of market, and the sales circumscribed to those only who had proved its worth, and known its value. It had reached the ears of many, nevertheless, as those persons who had been healed of sore diseases, and saved from death, proclaimed its excellence and wonderful

HEALING POWER.

Knowing, many years ago, that he had, by his skill, science and experience, devised an article which would be of incalculable advantage to mankind when the means would be furnished to bring it into universal notice, when its inestimable virtues would be known and appreciated. This time has come, the means are supplied; this GRAND AND UNEQUALLED PREPARATION is manufactured on the largest scale, and is called for throughout the length and breadth of the land, especially as it is found incapable of degeneration or deterioration.

Unlike young S. P. Townsend's, it improves with age, and never changes, but for the better; because it is prepared on scientific principles by a scientific man. The highest knowledge of Chemistry, and the latest discoveries of the art, have all been brought into requisition in the manufacture of the Old Dr's Sarsaparilla. The Sarsaparilla root, it is well known to medical men, contains many medicinal properties, and some properties which are inert or useless, and others, which if retained in preparing it for use, produce fermentation and acid, which is injurious to the system. Some of the properties of Sarsaparilla are so volatile, that they entirely evaporate and are lost in the preparation, if they are not preserved by a scientific process, known only to those experienced in its manufacture. Moreover, these volatile principles, which fly off in vapor, or as an exhalation, under heat, are the very essential medical properties of the root, which give to it all its value.

Any person can boil or stew the root till they get a dark-colored liquid, which is more from the coloring matter in the root than from any thing else; they can then strain this insipid or vapid liquid, sweeten with sour molasses, and then call it "SARSAPARILLA EXTRACT or SYRUP." But such is not the article known as the

GENUINE OLD DR. JACOB TOWNSEND'S SARSAPARILLA.

This is so prepared, that all the inert properties of the Sarsaparilla root are first removed, every thing capable of becoming acid or of fermentation, is extracted and rejected; then every particle of medical virtue is secured in a pure and concentrated form; and thus it is rendered incapable of losing any of its valuable and healing properties. Prepared in this way, it is made the most powerful agent in the

Cure of innumerable diseases.

Hence the reason why we hear commendations on every side in its favor by men, women, and children. We find it doing wonders in the cure of CONSUMPTION, DYSPEPSIA, and LIVER COMPLAINT, and in RHEUMATISM, SCROFULA, PILES, COSTIVENESS, all CUTANEOUS ERUPTIONS, PIMPLES, BLOCTHES, and all affections arising from

IMPURITY OF THE BLOOD.

It possesses a marvellous efficacy in all complaints arising from Indigestion, from Acidity of the Stomach, from unequal circulation, determination of blood to the head, palpitation of the heart, cold feet and hands, cold chills and hot flashes over the body. It has not its equal in Colds and Coughs; and promotes easy expectoration and gentle perspiration, relaxing stricture of the lungs, throat, and every other part.

But in nothing is its excellence more manifestly seen and acknowledged than in all kinds and stages of

FEMALE COMPLAINTS.

It works wonders in cases of Fluor Albus or Whites, Falling of the Womb, Obstructed, Suppressed, or Painful Menses, Irregularity of the menstrual periods, and the like; and is as effectual in curing all the forms of Kidney Diseases.

By removing obstructions, and regulating the general system, it gives tone and strength to the whole body, and thus cures all forms of

Nervous diseases and debility,

and thus prevents or relieves a great variety of other maladies, as Spinal irritation, Neuralgia, St. Vitus' Dance Swooning, Epileptic Fits, Convulsions, &c.

It cleanses the blood, excites the liver to healthy action, tones the stomach, and gives good digestion, relieves the bowels of torpor and constipation, allays inflammation, purifies the skin, equalises the circulation of the blood, producing gentle warmth equally all over the body, and the insensible perspiration; relaxes all strictures and tightness, removes all obstructions, and invigorates the entire nervous system. Is not this then

The medicine you pre-eminently need?

But can any of these things be said of S. P. Townsend's inferior article? This young man's liquid is not to be

COMPARED WITH THE OLD DR'S,

because of one GRAND FACT, that the one is INCAPABLE of DETERIORATION, and

NEVER SPOILS,

while the other DOES; souring, fermenting, and blowing the bottles containing it into fragments; the sour, acid liquid exploding and damaging other goods! Must not this horrible compound be poisonous to the system?—What! put acid into a system already diseased with acid! What causes Dyspepsia but acid? Do we not all know that when food sours in our stomachs, what mischiefs it produces? flatulence, heartburn palpitation of the heart, liver complaint, diarrhœa, dysentery, colic, and corruption of the blood? What is Scrofula but an acid humor in the body? What produces all the humors which bring on Eruptions of the Skin, Scald Head, Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, White Swellings, Fever Sores, and all ulcerations internal and external? It is nothing under heaven, but an acid substance, which sours, and thus spoils all the fluids of the body, more or less. What causes Rheumatism but a sour or acid fluid which insinuates itself between the joints and elsewhere, irritating and inflaming the delicate tissues upon which it acts? So of nervous diseases, of impurity of the blood, or deranged circulations, and nearly all the ailments which afflict human nature.

Now is it not horrible to make and sell, and infinitely worse to use this

and yet he would fain have it understood that Old Dr. Jacob Townsend's Genuine Original Sarsaparilla, is an IMITATION of his inferior preparation!!

Heaven forbid that we should deal in an article which would bear the most distant resemblance to S. P. Townsend's article! and which should bring down upon the Old Dr. such a mountain load of complaints and criminations from Agents who have sold, and purchasers who have used S. P. Townsend's FERMENTING COMPOUND.

We wish it understood, because it is the absolute truth, that S. P. Townsend's article and Old Dr. Jacob Townsend's Sarsaparilla are heaven-wide apart, and infinitely dissimilar; that they are unlike in every particular, having not one single thing in common.

As S. P. Townsend is no doctor, and never was, is no chemist, no pharmaceutist—knows no more of medicine or disease than any other common, unscientific, unprofessional man, what guarantee can the public have that they are receiving a genuine scientific medicine, containing all the virtues of the articles used in preparing it, and which are incapable of changes which might render them the AGENTS of Disease instead of health.

But what else should be expected from one who knows nothing comparatively of medicine or disease! It requires a person of some experience to cook and serve up even a common decent meal. How much more important is it that the persons who manufacture medicine, designed for

should know well the medical properties of plants, the best manner of securing and concentrating their healing virtues, also an extensive knowledge of the various diseases which affect the human system, and how to adapt remedies to these diseases!

It is to arrest frauds upon the unfortunate, to pour balm into wounded humanity, to kindle hope in the despairing bosom, to restore health and bloom, and vigor into the crushed and broken, and to banish infirmity that OLD DR. JACOB TOWNSEND has SOUGHT and FOUND the opportunity and means to bring his

within the reach, and to the knowledge of all who need it, that they may learn and know, by joyful experience, its

Transcendent Power to Heal.

DR. JACOB TOWNSEND. NEW YORK, Oct. 5, 1848.

WALKED ACROSS THE ROOM

with the aid of crutches. Since then, I have walked in the street: have gone alone from 36 Spruce-street to the Park: thence to Lovejoy's Hotel and back. I have been to 85 Nassau-street two different times, and am now frequently visiting my neighbors. During all this time, I have taken but two bottles of Old Dr. Townsend's Sarsaparilla, Oct. 4. I procured another bottle to-day (5th Oct.) I walked twice across the floor without the aid of crutches. I have also nearly recovered from obstruction of water, which gave me great distress. The pain in my back has likewise left me. I and my family have no earthly reason to ascribe my recovery to any other cause but to

OLD DR. JACOB TOWNSEND'S SARSAPARILLA.

ALEX. WELSH, 36 Spruce-st.

P. S.—Several able physicians despaired of my ever walking or even raising myself from my bed again.

For the Plainfield Gazette.

The Cot of the Christain Painter and Infidel Poet.

Within this cot a Painter dwelt,
Who touched with magic brush;
Within this cot a Poet felt
The stream of fancy rush.

The Painter sough another home
To try his skillful hand;
To make burst forth the steepled dome,
To trace the flowery land

And well that Painter plies his art,
And bids the scenery rise;
Sends a thrill thro' every heart,
A pleasure to the eyes.

The Poet keeps his steady place,
Seeking Appollo's stream.—
Nature hath denied the grace,
To make his fancy gleam.

Low and languid is the sound,
That should immortal be—
No fibres of the heart rebound,
At his minstrelsy.

At midnights sad and solumn hour
Burns the taper low and dim;
But hovers round no mystic power
To make immortal him.

When peeps Aurora in the east
With mantle bright and clear,
Gazing on the slumbering rest,
Of this our sinfull sphere.

The Poet walks with languid eye,
Viewing the burst of day—
Attempts to paint the flushing sky,
Bright in his saddened lay.

'Tempt to catch the brilliant glance
Flashing from Aurora', eye,
Like lightnings in the wide expanse,
That smoothly onward fly.

He cannot! from his inert gaze
The beauties dart away;
Aurora swiftly upward plays,
Nor aids his tuneless lay.

He to his room again returns,
Dips deep in Grecian lore;
Within his spirit fiercely burns
But cannot upward soar.

Oh could that spirit take its flight
And mount the cloud clap'd sky;
Dwell with Cherubims of purest light
On wings ambrosial fly!

Or roam the Paradisal grove
Where forms angelic tread;
Where playfull darts the spirit love
With golden wings outspread.

Or dips within the silvered stream,
Where groves are mantled round;
Where glances of the Saviour gleam—
Dip life-everlasting's found.

'Tis only, on this earthly sphere
"Enfranchised he can roam;"
His spirit must not seek to stear,
"Unto yon starry dome."

'Tis only forms of purest dye
That join the immortal train;
Their antheus shake the vaulted sky
Of him the Saviour slain.

There freely the harp-sichord is strung
Unto a Savior dear—
Loudly the living lyre is rung
In hallujahs clear.

The Painter he may seek the bower
Dwell in eternal light;
But Poet hapless be thy hour,
To sink in forgetful night.

Perhaps futurity will break
The spirit from its cell;
Then its glad flight high upward take,
On wings celestial dwell.

As yet the Painter draws the scene
And pleasure with it flows;
Waving round the living green,
Blushes the beauteous rose.

The Poet trembling strikes the lyre,
No ecstacies break forth;
Still grows the soul that should aspire
To stir the hearts of North.

How does grass feel when it is mowed? It feels very much cut down.

For the Plainfield Gazette.

A sick bed, though one of the greatest afflictions to which man is subject, is often, to the philanthropist and christian, a cause of good.

There are very few (if any) persons who—while they are in perfect health and strength—live entirely a just life; who live in the discharge of all their duties to their Creator, and to their fellow creatures; who continually do to others as they would that others should do unto them; who feel it a duty and esteem it a privilege to feed the hungry, clothe the naked, and instruct the ignorant. There are daily many temptations to omit some duty; perhaps when the opportunity offers of doing a good action we feel indolent, and by the time we feel like doing it, the chance is gone. It may be, a poor neighbor wished us to do him some favor, which to be of any service to him, required immediate attention. We are very apt to overlook the fact that any good act we may perform, is doubled in value if promptly done. We perhaps generally mean well, and when we see something that we should do to benefit our fellow man, we think we will certainly do it—perhaps in an hour or two; or at any rate, in a day or two, when some apparently desirable object is gained, then we will attend to the higher and holier aspirations of our souls. But, alas! perhaps some new object takes possession of our mind; and our consciences—which would always lead us in the path of duty if we would but heed their teachings—having been wronged before, now make a less effectual warning, and we are more than ever absorbed in our own selfish schemes; while the great duties of life are slighted and neglected as of minor importance.

But when we are prostrated by an illness which we know will bring us near, if not quite, to the borders of the grave, we feel it is high time to arouse ourselves from the apathy which has so long oppressed us. The sophistries which have, perhaps for a long time, perverted our better judgment are now dissipated. We feel forcibly that the transient things of time and sense will not satisfy the cravings of our spirits, and we turn from them to thoughts of immortality and eternal life. We now see the vanity of many objects on which we had placed our affections; we feel how far they were incapable of rendering us happiness. We realize that we can be permanently happy only by living in such a manner that the end of our creation will be attained. Thoughts concerning the manner in which we have discharged the duties of life—inquiries addressed to our souls as to whether we have fulfilled the object of our creation—reflections on the opportunities of doing good we have enjoyed but have not improved—the want of charity we have manifested in our intercourse with our fellow men, children of the same heavenly Parent—throng our aching heads; and strongly do we feel how far short have we fallen in imitating the example of our Savior. The harsh word we have hastily spoken—the unjust thought we have entertained—the jealous suspicion—the cruel, unfeeling indifference—the want of sympathy—the cold neglect—the scornful contempt—the wicked answer we have returned when the Master has inquired of us concerning one of his subjects, who is our erring neighbor. "Am I my brother's keeper?"—all these and other sins have we committed against our brother; and our common Father, we now feel, has brought them forcibly to our minds that we may be reconciled to our brother ere our Father assumes the character of the Judge.

If the sick bed is the means of awakening thoughts like these, the individual who is prostrated with illness, though he may suffer much in body, if he resolves henceforth to live imitating the example of his Savior, is greatly blessed. The vows he takes to live in future as a christian and philanthropist should live, give peace to his troubled soul. The wild waves of passion which but recently dashed violently against his happiness, now subside; the fierce strife of the world, in which he formerly delighted, no longer pleases his ear, but jars upon his feelings if he hears it at a distance. He now looks forward to days which, if his probationary state is continued, he will spend in a rational manner—in doing good to the souls and bodies of his fellow men, which he now feels to be the great duty of life. He looks upon all men—no matter how ignorant and depraved they may be—as brethren; accountable to the same Master, having the same race to run, animated by the same hopes and fears, feeling the same aspirations after happiness, suffering the same ills, encountering death in the same frightful forms; with souls as deathless, and having bodies with the same infirmities With thoughts like these, if the sufferer is restored to bodily health, he will be a blessing to himself and to the world. It is true he may not occupy a commanding position in society; he may be neither learned nor great, as these phrases are generally understood; he may not be eminent in the pulpit, at the bar, nor on the bench; he may not, perhaps, be a leader in church or state; nay, he may even be among the poor and humble of the earth—yet with the views of duty he possesses he will find means of accomplishing much good. He cannot, of course, build hospitals for the sick, but he can occasionally minister at the bedside of a sick and dying neighbor, who may not have friends and means to make him comfortable; and while he may hold the cup of cold water to cool the feverish lip, he can speak of that country whose inhabitants sicken not, and where there are springs which are eternal. If his spirit is properly affected on occasions like this, he will not only wipe the cold sweats from the brow of the dying, but he will speak of that Hand which is able and willing to wipe away the tears from all faces. Nor will the Christian philanthropist at such a time as this, if his suffering brother does not realize his critical state, fail to warn him in a proper spirit of his rapid approach to the borders of the grave, and urge him to put his house in order that he may be prepared to die.

Yes, the character we are endeavoring to describe will seek opportunities of doing good. If he cannot clothe all the naked he may encounter, he can at least spare a garment to some destitute brother and solicit from his wealthy neighbor a few articles for the relief of the more needy. If he has not the opportunity, or the talent, to address in eloquent strains his fellow men on subjects of temporal or eternal importance, he can at least teach the ignorant, and excite in their minds a taste for the sublime and beautiful.

It is not always the most learned and eloquent who are the most useful. The philanthropist is rarely an orator. While we may admire the eloquence of a Sheridan, our hearts are most affected at the quiet and unostentatious labors of love of a Howard, or a Mrs. Fry The self-denying and arduous exertions of these devoted philanthropists, among the most abject, ignorant, and degraded of our race have won for them names more imperishable than adamant, and are glorious illustrations of our capability of doing good If but one in a hundred of those who call themselves christians would only make one-quarter the effort that these worthies did, to relieve the miseries of mankind, vice and its consequence, suffering, would be almost entirely banished from our world; and "the good time" of which we sometimes dream, and for which we occasionally pray, would burst upon our vision in all the glories of the perfect day If this period ever arrives—as I fully believe it will, and that speedily—it will not be till they leave the cold dogmas which they now cherish, and cease the controversies in which they now so much delight—it will not, cannot take place till christians become so in fact as well as name; and embracing with all their souls the precepts of Him who "went about doing good," be willing to be guided by his Spirit, and devote themselves to the work of banishing misery from our world This is all the return we can possibly render to our Creator for all his goodness to us. He is holy and happy in and of himself, without any service of ours; but he has many children on his footstool who are poor and needy; and although he could by a word supply all their wants, yet in his infinite wisdom he has left them to the care of his more fortunate brethren; and has enjoined upon them in the most emphatic manner to regard their necessities. Nor has he required this duty without promising us his blessing if we comply, and he regards every act of kindness to his creatures—if performed with a proper motive—as done to himself. "Inasmuch," says our Savior, "as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." What greater inducement could we have for discharging our duty?

BUTTON HOLDERS.—Some years ago there was a religious revival not a thousand miles from Owego, under the preaching of a certain celebrated and somewhat eccentric clergyman. One evening, at the close of the sermon, the awful solemnity which pervaded the congregation, was suddenly changed to uncontroleable merriment by the following incident:—The choir rose to sing that beautiful hymn, 'I love to steal awhile away,' &c, the chorister repeating the first four words three times in succession without getting the pitch to suit him, stopping adruptly and additional emphasis each time at the word steal. When he came to a dead halt the third time with, 'I love to steal———,' the clergyman becoming impatient looked the embarrassed chorister full in the face and said, 'I am very sorry to hear it—let us pray!' The investigation to 'mourners' found few responses that night.—Owego Gazette.

COOL.—Admiral Howe, when a Captin, was once hastily awakened in the middle of the night, by the lieutenant of the watch, who informed him with great agitation that the ship was on fire near the magazine. 'If that be the case,' said he, rising leisurely to put on his clothes, 'we shall soon hear another report of the matter.' The lieutenant flew back to the scene of danger, and almost instantly returning, exclamed, 'You need not be afraid; the fire is extinguished.' 'Afraid!' exclaimed Howe, 'what do you mean by that, sir? I never was afraid in my life,' and looking the lieutenant full in the face, he added, 'Pray, how does a man feel, sir, when he is afraid? I need not ask how he looks.'

PRETTY GOOD.—An Arkansas hero was lately convicted of horse-stealing, and when sentence had peen passed on him he took a survey of the court room, and gave vent to his feelings after the following manner: 'Well, this is rather the briskest place I ever did see. Traveled fifteen miles this morning—stood an election, and unanimously voted by twelve men, to be maintained at the public expense for ten years.'

PRETTY GOOD.—The sacetious editor of the Yankee Blade gives the following among other 'Hints on Matrimony,:

Don't be suprised, if, after you have sailed smoothly eight or ten months on the voyage of matrimony, you are suddenly overtaken by squalls.'

VERY AMUSING.—The thieves are getting funny—A gentleman in Cincinnati had all his champagne stolen the other day by one of them, who left this note:—Dear Mr. S.—I tried your wine. It wasn't hard to take!'

A wag of our acquaintance sawing with a saw saw that was not the sharpest saw in the world, after vainly trying to saw with it, broke out at last, as follows: 'Of all the saws that I ever saw saw, I never saw a saw saw like that saw saws.'

There can be no christianity where there is no charity; but the cencorious cultivate the forms of religion that they may more freely indulge in the only pleasure of their lives that of calumniating those who to their other failing add not the sin of hypocracy.—Ladon.

'Why don't your father take a newspaper?' said a man to a little urchin whom he caught pilfering his paper from the door-step. 'He sends me to take it,' cried the little boy.

A Yankee praising the climate away down east, said it was so healthy that people had to move some where else to die.

'John, I fear you are forgetting me,' said a bright-eyed girl to her lover, the other day. 'Yes, Sue, I've been for getting you these two years.'

PLAINFIELD GAZETTE.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Thursday, February, 15, 1849.

USURY.—Considerable debate has been had in the Legislature on the subject of Usury. With all due deferance to the superior wisdom of our Legislators, we say abolish all laws on the subject, as all the laws that ever have been, or ever will be passed on the subject, will never prevent parties from giving and taking more or less than six per cent, according as money is plenty or scarce. Why not pass a law to prevent a man's taking more than fifty cents for a bushel of corn, or twenty five cents for a bushel of potatoes, the one is just as absurd as the other.

And while their hand is in just abolish all laws for the collection of debts hereafter contracted, as the rogues are the only persons who receive any benefit from it, except a few drippings to the lawyers.

We subjoin a few quite important facts from official documents, which seems to show the operation of the Tariff of 1846 in a way impossible to be misunderstood by the lowest capacity

In the year ending the 30th of June last the last fiscal year, there were imported into the United States, not including specie, goods to the value of $148,637,644, under the Tariff of '46. In the same year, we exported goods not including specie, to the value of $138,186, 615; leaving a balance against us of $10,451,029!—Plainfield Union.

We would like to know from what official documents the above is copied, as from the tabular statements marked F. of the imports and exports during the year 1848 accompanying the secretary of the Treasury's report signed Daniel Graham Register the reverse is the fact, we cannot make ourselves believe the Union would mistate facts to sustain its argument.

The table marked F. above referred to makes the

Exports exclusive of specie for the year 1848.	$130,203,709
Imports exclusive of specie for the year 1848.	127,490,012
Exports exceeds our imports for the year	2,713,697
To wich add foreign merchandize exported	7,986,806
	10,700,503

Wich makes the exports exceed the imports by $10,700,503 a little more than the Union has it the other way; we must suppose he has taken the exports for the imports.

And if we take it for three years back 1846, '7 and '8, we shall have

Exports exclusive of specie	$382,496,595
Imports in the same time	353,797,181
Which leaves a balance in our favor of	28,699,414
To wich add foreign merchandize exported	22,018,051
	$50,717,465

Which leaves a ballance in our favor of nearly $17,000,000 annually.

As we stated in a former number, assumptions and assertions are not arguments, cannot the Union find some facts to base its assertions on in future, if not we can lend some. Which are the best friends of the people, facts or assumptions.

We are indebted to the Hon. Wm. L. Dayton for a copy of a Geographical Memoir and Map in illustration of Oregon and Calfornia by J C. Fremont.

We are indebted to the Hon. J. P. Hale for important Public documents.

We would call attention to a communication on our first page signed J. A. Surely no man can read this in the right spirit who will not be benefited thereby, how much better calculated are such sentiments than those of the sectarian, to awaken man to his true interests, to induce him to do unto others as he would have others do unto him. Christ nor his apostles were neither Methodists Baptists Presbyterians Quakers nor Catholics, but went about feeding the hungry, clothing the naked, healing the sick, and exhorting men every where to repent. Hold, enough, it is so much easier preaching than practising the precepts of the Gospel, if we keep on we shall be like the Pharisees of old who were fond of making long prayers, will J. A. favor us with more on kindred subjects notwithstanding these remarks.

The Ohio House of Representatives has, by a decisive vote, instructed a commitee to report a bill repealing all laws granting licenses to sell intoxicating liquors.

Legislature.

Mr ——— gave notice that he should bring in a bill to authorize Exclusive Privilege to exercise the business of Grocer, as the following preambulatory petition would more fully set forth.

Whereas, I Exclusive Privilege of the Village of Plainfield, in the County of Essex, and State of New Jersey, being of full age, and possessed of common sense, do wish to enter into business of Grocer in the Village aforesaid. But being a prudent man and wishing to act according to law, and having an idea that by a special act to that effect, I could make an independent fortune, which by the by is only a secondary consideration, it being for the especial benefit of the people that I make this application. I have observed in looking over the applications and laws that have been passed from time to time that no respectable man or company of men enter into any respectable business without a special act to that effect. As witness the application of the inhabitants of——— ———for an act to erect a Temperance Hall and Market, also of the inhabitants of Mount Holly for an act to prevent swine running at large. Also, an act of incorporation to enable the ladies of Newark to be charitable &c.

I also observes thist o be thecase in other states as in the case of citizens of New-York who have a law passed to permit them to save the lives of their fellow men when drowning &c., and as I am of a very benevolent disposition, I would suggest the propriety of a special act in this State to rescue my fellow men from being run over by trains of cars which traverse this State in all directions, and also when they are being drowned if any person being near and by a little exertion could save the life of a person, a special act permiting him to do so. With the above precedents I think your honorable body can have no hesitation in granting the necessary power. I thought it the more prudent course to apply for a special act to suit my particular business of Grocer for the benefit of the people aforesaid. The more particular clause of which I would pray your honorable body to make secure is that I may have the exclusive right in the Village of Plainfield aforesaid, to the benefit of the people aforesaid, to cut up Hams lengthwise instead of crosswise as has been the absurd custom heretofore, to the damage of sundry saws, knives &c. and likewise more especially that I may keep the meat so cut off, and sell the bones to the people as aforesaid, at one shilling per pound to the bettering my fortune, that is as a secondary consideration as aforesaid, it being my whole object to benefit the people of Plainfield as aforesaid, and as in duty bound I will ever pray.

We cannot see any reasonable objection to granting Mr. Privilege the desired power, we certainly have a claim for some act of special legislation, and cannot see why the above is not as good as any other.

We would suggest the propriety of adding a clause to the above to prevent swine and all other four footed beasts running at large in this Village, and also a clause authorizing men to flog their wife's as it is now done without a special act, men feel rather doubtful of the power. While asking for favors we may as well have whatever is desirable.

We have been informed that a number of Colered children have been excluded from a public school in Plainfield, a school supported by a tax levied upon all the inhabitants of that Town, colered as well as white. When the colered children, whose Parents are compelled to help support the school by law, went to the school, they were placed in a seperate room without fire, alone, and an assistant teacher visited them twice a day to instruct them.

It is said their parents took them away on account of the cold, but fire having been provided for them in their seperate room, they have returned again to be kept alone except on occasional visits of the assistant teacher. We hope this may turn out to be a mistake and will withhold our comments until we hear farther. Will the Plainfield Gazette which claims to be a friend of Equal rights give us the particulars.—N. J. Freeman.

Will the Trustees or School Superintendent oblige us with the particular facts.

The business of the House of Delegates of Virginia was brought to a close on Thursday by an awful event, which overwhelmed the members wite grief. Col. John W. Thompson, of Botetourt, was on the floor, advocating a bill: Suddenly, after speaking a few minutes, he sunk in his chair, with his head on his desk, and called for water. This was instantly brought, and after an ineffectual effort by Dr. Yerby to bleed him, he fell back and died.

On the admission of California as a State.

It appears to us that it is time California had a government. All must admit this necessity. The question then arises what kind of a government shall it have? Shall Congress pass such laws, and make such appointments as shall be necessary to constitute a territorial government, or shall California be admitted as one of the States of the Union? We think the latter notwithstanding the report of the majority that it is inexpedient.

It certainly is an important matter that it should have a government of some kind. Thousands are flocking thither and a majority of those are from the free states of the Union. It would be the most natural and easy way in our opinion to do away with the excitement of free or slave territory. Our word for it the present inhabitants together with those that are going would never form a Constitution admiting Slavery. With these preliminary undigested remarks we introduce a few extracts from the minority of the Committee on the Judiciary, together with a bill on the subject. We have not the least hesitation in saying admit California as a State. The importance of our trade with California in the future, independant of a single ounce of gold would seem to call for some action on the subject. Gold or no gold, notwithstanding the opposition to its acquisition it will be of more value to the Union than all our previous acquisitions, so we think.

It would appear from the report of the committee that there is not wanting plenty of precedents for its admission as a state.

"As the bill does not propose to create a new State, but merely to admit into the Union as a State, the people inhabiting a certain district, precisely what has been done seventeen times in our history, the undersigned cannot perceive the application and force of that part of the majority report on the creation of new States. Certainly neither the author of the bill, nor the writer of this, ever intended to insinuate that Congress could create a constitution for California, or a State there, without the action of the people.

The length of this proposed State is about 550 miles, its average breadth about 175 miles, and its area may be estimated at 96,250 square miles, or 61,600,000 acres.

We thus have a State of noble proportions, to bear, perhaps, the proud appellation of the western empire State; unsurpassed in climate, and in mineral wealth, and destined at some future day to rival her eastern empire sister in expanded and active commercial enterprise, with all the internal resources which can contribute to the happiness of man.

It includes nearly all the seacoast and population in Upper California, leaving only a small space on the coast and the town of San Diego and a few missions or settlements, to form an outlet for the vast territory, most of it yet unexplored, which lies to the north and east. It has a well defined natural boundary on every side of mountain and sea, except the north, where the Oregon line is the limit. But if it be deemed proper to include the whole territory on the Pacific in the new State, this can easily be done by a line drawn direct from the southern point of the Sierra Nevada to that point on the Rio Colerado where the river Gila enters it, and the boundary line with Mexico crosses it, as represented on the map from the surveys of Col. Fremont, mentioned in the bill. It avaids all difficulty about a future division of the State, and a still greater difficulty of the boundary of Texas.

It is presumed there can be no serious objection to investing the persons mentioned in this bill with such limited legislative powers as may be found necessary to enable the people of the new State to call a convention to form a constitution. Such powers have frequently been conferred, in the case of Louisiana and in other instances, and was, he believes, contained in a bill which passed the Senate last session. The undersigned therefore submits herewith an amended bill, which he will offer as a substitute for the original one when taken up. S. W. DOWNS.

January 15, 1849.

A Bill for the admission of California into the Union as a State.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That all that portion of the territory of the United States, acquired by the "treaty of peace, friendship, limit and settlement with the republic of Mexico," concluded February 2, 1848, which lies west and north of a line drawn along the summit of the Sierra Nevada, or California mountains, to the latitude of thirty-four degrees and thirty minutes north; thence due west to the Pacific ocean, as represented on the "map of Oregon and upper California from the surveys of John Charles Fremont," published by order of the Senate, shall be one State by the name and title of the State of California; and the same is hereby declared to be one of the United States of America on an equal footing with the original States in all respects whatsoever, with the unconditional resurvation to the United States of all right of property in the public domain, and other property ceded by the said treaty, free from taxes or assessments of any kind by said State, and also the power of disposing of the same, including the right of adjusting all claims and titles to lands derived from foreign governments, in such manner as Congress shall prescribe.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That all the laws of the United States that are not locally inapplicable, shall have the same force and effect within the said State of California, as elsewhere in the United States. The said State shall form a judicial district. A district court shall be held in said district, to consist of one judge, to be called the district judge. The said judge shall hold three sessions of his court viz: on the first Mondays in June, October and February in each year; and he shall, in all things in his district, have and exercise the same jurisdiction and powers which were given by law to the judge of the Kentucky district, under an act entitled "an act to establish judicial courts of the United States," and "an act entitled 'an act in addition to an act establishing the judicial courts of the United States,'" approved 2d March 1793, and the act ssupplementary thereto. The said judge shall appoint his own clerk, who shall reside and keep the records of the court at the place of holding the same, and shall receive, for services performed by him, the same fees to which the clerk of the Kentucky district is entitled for similar services.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That there shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate for said district, a district judge and attorney for the United States, and a marshal. The judge shall receive an annual salary of two thousand dollars, to commence from the date of appointment, and be paid at the treasury of the United States. The district attorney shall, in addition to his stated fees, as allowed to other United States attorneys, be paid by the United States two hundred dollars annually, as a full conpensation for extra services. The marshal shall perform the same duties, be subject to the same regulations and penalties, and be entitled to the same fees as are provided for and prescribed to marshals in other districts; and shall, moreover, be entitled to the sum of two hundred dollars annually, as a compensation for all extra services.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That the district judge, attorney, and marshal, herein provided to be appointed, and the officer of the United States army commanding in California, and seven such other good and discreet citizens of the United States, residing in said State, as may be selected by him or a majority of them, are hereby authorized and empowered to lay off said territory into election tion districts, for the election of fifty delegates to a convention, to form a constitution for said State of California, and to apportion the number of delegates to said districts according to the number of votes in each, according to the best information they may be able to obtain, to prescribe the time and places of holding the elections, and to designate the persons who shall conduct the same, and also to prescribe the time and place for the assembly of said convention and the compensation of its members.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That all citizens of the United States, resident within the limits of said territory, idcluding all Mexican citizens who have become citizens of the United States, under the eighth asticle of the treaty referred to in the first section of this act, shall be entitled to vote at said election of delegates to the constitutional convention: Provided, That no person shall vote at said election except white male inhabitants, who shall have attained the age of twenty-one years.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That until the next general census and apportionment, the said State shall be entitled to one representative in the Congress of the United States.

SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That the sum of one hundred thousand dollars be, and the same is hereby, appropriated, for the purpose of defraying the expenses of the convention, and other expenses necessary to carry into effect this act, to be paid under the direction of the President of the United States

Supreme Court-Decision Against Tax on Emigrants.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, Feb. 7.

Justice McLean to-day pronounced the decision of the Supreme Court against the States of New-York and Massachusetts in the matter of the Constitutionality of the Tax on Emigrant passengers. The Court stood 5 to 4, Chief Justice Taney being in the minority.

The Benefits of Cheap Postage.

For a man to be well informed of the system of his own government it becomes him as a dutiful citizen—to use his influence in establishing a cheap rate of postage—so that the expense of gaining intelligence from the Public Press may be cheap, so that the community at large may profit greatly by this new system.

It is a plain matter of fact, that all information that is gained on political questions is gained mainly through that great National instructor—the Public Press.

The republic of Greece instructed her citizens by collecting a body of them together in their capital which was at the city of Athens, and there they were instructed by Demosthenes and other great orators of Greece. So we can easily perceive by the wisdom of Demosthenes acts, that he thought it was essential to the welfare of all Republican governments, to keep instruction progressing, and be very careful to put nothing in the way that would retard its progress, or by putting on high Postage. PRESENTATION OF SWORDS.—In the New-Jersey Legislature, Thursday, the interesting ceremony took place of presenting swords to several Jerseymen, Officers in the Army, who distinguished themselves in the late war with Mexico. The Officers thus honored were Lieut. Col. Wm R. Montgomery, Brevet Major N. Beakes Rossell, Capt. S. C French and Major Fowler Hamilton. The ceremony took place in the Assembly Room a little before 1 o'clock. The swords were presented by Gov. Haines, on behalf of the State. Col. Montgomery and Maj Rossel received theirs in person, and those for the other officers who were not present were received for them by Gen. S. R, Hamilton and R. P. Thompson, Esq. The scene was highly interesting, and was witnessed by a great crowd of both sexes The swords are all of the same pattern—cut and thrust—the scabcard and guard of solid silver, burnished with gold and beautifully chased. Upon the front side of the guard are the arms of the State in silver, on the inner side a Latin inscription. There are also inscriptions upon the scabbards. Each sword is placed in a neat rose wood box, with brass plates at the corners and centre of the lid.

Black laws of Ohio Repealed.—The Ohio State Journal gives the following synopsis of a bill which passed the Legislature of that State on the 6th inst:

Sec. I provides for the creation of school districts for colored schools, and creates the office of trustee for them.

Sec. II provides for the election of trustees, by the colored tax-payers.

Sec. III dedicates the taxes paid by colored persons to the support of the colored schools.

Sec. IV provides that the districts for colored persons shall be deemed distinct bodies politic.

Sec. V defines who shall be deemed to be colored.

Sec. VI repeals all laws creating disabilities, or conferring priviliges on account of color.

The blacks under this law have not the right to sit on juries, or the benefit of the poor laws

CALIFORNIA STAGE LINE.—THROUGH IN EIGHTEEN DAYS!—Eight stages are building in the city to run between Vera Cruz and Mazatlan. Steamers on both oceans are to connect with the line, so that passengers can go from New Orleans to San Francisco in eighteen days! or from New York in twenty-seven days! This enterprise will completely anihilate the Panama Route. The stages are to be completed in about six weeks and until steamers have arrived out in the Pacific, sailing vessles will be employed to carry passengers between Mazatalan and San Francisco.—*N. Y. A gentleman reading a paper in an Albany Hotel, on Wednesday morning, was accosted by a little half-naked girl, who asked him for a penny. He handed her half a dolllar by mistake. The girl went out was absent a few minutes, and returned with 49 cents, which she handed the astonished man, saying, 'here is your change, sir.' The gentleman immediately took measures to have the little innocent clothed and provided for.

Legislative Summary.

TRENTON, Feb. 12.

HOUSE.—Mr. Day, from Elizabethtown, complaining of high charges on the railroads and steamboats to N. Y. and asking authority to erect a free Ferry and Plank road to said city.

Reported.—By Mr. Redmond, the bills to incorporate the Morris Public Hall Association; Joint Resolution to extend the time for completing Belvidere R. R.

Mr. Pickel, from the minority of the Committee, reported a bill establishing a General Banking Law. Ordered 2d reading.

Mr. Redmond gave notice of a bill to incorporate Useful Loan Associations.

Feb. 13.

Reports.—Mr. Grover, from the Judiciary Committee reported the bill for the regulation of Wharves; and for the suppression of railroad travelling on the Sabbath.

Also on the bill for a homestead exemption from executions, that no further legislation was necessary.

A Summary of the proceedings of Congress.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.

SENATE.—Mr. Hale presented a memorial from citizens of Niagara County reference to the abscence of members of Congress from Washington and asking that deductions may be made from their pay on account thereof.

HOUSE.—Mr. Edward reported a bill to prevent the obtaining of patents for quack medicines, which was read a first and second time, and, pending a motion to refer it to the Committee of the Whole.

Feb. 7.

HOUSE.—Mr Westcott of Fla. submitted a resolution requesting the Secretary of the Navy to report to the Senate the result of the late examinations of the Dead Sea and its vici...y—which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to.

In the course of the day Mr. Webster offered a resolution instructing the Committee on the Judiciary to enquire into the expediency of passing a law authorizing State authorities to exact security from emigrant paupers, so as to prevent them from becoming chargeable upon the Public Treasury. The resolution lies over.

Feb. 8.

Mr. Benton's magnificent and stupendous plan of a road from St. Louis to the Pacific, treated of in my letter of yesterday, and based principally upon a conversation had with him upon the subject, has stated up numerous other plans.—Among the speculations in favor is Baxard & Co.'s proposition for building the California Railroad from the Mississippi River, at the mouth of the Ohio, to the Pacific. The distance, according to Lieut. Maury, is 1,550 miles, requiring but the finishing of 250 miles between Charleston and the mouth of the Ohio to complete that road, and about 175 miles between Manchester and Williamsburg, to complate the whole line of railroad from New-York to Ohio City, at the mouth of the Ohio River. With an average speed of 20 miles an hour, a person can reach the latter from the former city in 53 hours, and from Ohio City to California in 90 hours, making the whole journey from New York to San Francisco in less than six days!

Feb. 9.

SENATE.—Mr. Hale presented numerous petitons from Syracuse, Rochester, Buffalo, Troy and other places in New-York, for abolishing spirits and flogging from the Army and Navy Mr Hale spoke at some length on the subject, enforcing the views of the petitoners, the petitions were then appropriately refered.

Feb. 12.

HOUSE.—Mr. Benton, of Missouri, presented a petition signed by numerous and respectable citizens praying that Congress may authorize the employment of adequate military forces to accompany and protect expeditions to California The petition was referred to the Committee on Military affairs

Civil and Diplomatic Appropriation Bill.—The bill contains a provision for the abolition of flogging in the Navy, which the Finance Committee recomend to be stricken out.

Mr. Hale, of New Hampshire, was opposed to this recomendation, and made an eloquent speech against the whole system of flogging

Messrs. Brease, of Illinois, Clayton of Delaware Phelps, of Vermont, and Calhoun continued the debate, and agred in favor of striking out the clause referred to. They were generally opposed to the abolition of flogging. Mr. Hale then moved an amendment to the bill, repealing all laws which authorize flogging in the navy, which was rejected; yeas 17, nays 32. The Senate then adjourned.

HOUSE.—Mr. Wallace presented a series of reselutions passed by the Legislature of South Carolina respecting Southern rights, and with the consent of the House proceeded to make a speech upon the subject, concluding with a motion to lay the resolutions on the table to be printed. The motion prevailed.

ENGLAND.

The ratification of the postal convention between the United States and England has been received with general satisfaction by all the trading communities of Europe.

IRELAND.

Case of Smith O'Brien.

Ireland was again attracting no inconsiderable share of public attention. The Queen's Bench had over-ruled the errors assigned in the cases of Wm. Smith O'Brien and his fellow prisoner. The Court was unanimous in its decision, and it remains to be seen whether they will persevere in carrying their hopeless appeal to the House of Lords. It was confidently stated that applications had been made for the requisite permission from the Lord Lieutenant in the case of Mr. O'Brien, but that Mr. Meagher declines to proceed farther, and is resolved to submit to his fate. Any hope of overturning the verdict must prove delusive.

FRANCE.

Dissolution of the Assembly.

The preliminary motion upon the question of the dissolution of the National Assembly, so much admired by the nation, has been carried by a slender majority of 400 against 396, and had been referred to the Bureaux to report upon. The reporters appointed by the various committees upon the question, were almost all adverse to the dissolution, and it was said that they had decided upon moving the order of the day whenever the proposition was moved in the Assembly.

It would be some days before the report was made, and the forms of the Assembly would prevent the question from being carried through so as to allow the election to take place before April.

The Election of Vice-President.

M. Marrast has again been permitted to retain his seat as President of the Assembly, and, to the astonishment of all parties, M. Boulay de la Meurthe had been elected Vice-President of the Republic by the Assembly. M. Vivien and General Baraguay d'Hilliers were the other candidates; and the only inference to be drawn from this strange choice is that the Government is still in a state of Transition.

An Interesting discovery has been made in the Artic Ocean, one that may possibly lead to a new tropic. Captain, Boyce a whaleman of Sag Harbor, has recently returned from a voyage in which he explored a new whaling ground and made important discoveries North of Bhering's Straits. During his cruise in July and August he saw no ice, and the weather was ordinarily so pleasant that his men could work in light clothing, and it was so light through the night, that whaling might have been carried on during the entire 24 hours. Capt. B. found the whales numerous, and, of a different species from any he had before seen, and of three different kinds—all very tame. Both the American and Asiatic shores he found inhabited by numerous tribes of Indians; some of whom he saw wading from one continent to the other, in large canoes. Good anchorage was found in most parts of the ocean, from 15 to 35 fathoms. Capt. Boyce was induced to seek this new ocean by the representations of Capt Reechy, who visited this region in 1827, and describes it in his voyages.

Message of the President.

In reply to the call of the House of Representatives for the Protocal to the Mexican Treaty.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 8, 1849.

The following is an abstract of the President's Message, sent to the House to-day, in reply to the call for information in relation to the secret history of the Mexican treaty and the Protocol:—

The President says that he had declined when called upon by the House at the last session, to furnish a copy of the instructions to our Commissioners, because he then deemed it incompatible with the public interest. He did not think it proper to make public such instructions until some time thereafter; but as he was now again called upon for them in connection with the correspondence and other matters appertaining to the treaty, he has deemed it proper to comply with the request.

The instructions to our Commissioners were, that none of the amendments made by the Senate could be modified. They might be explained in conformity with the dispatch of the Secretary of State to the Mexican Minister on Foreign Affairs, but not modified. Their instructions were confined to this, and on this letter of Mr. Buchanan's the treaty, as amended, was submitted to the Mexican Congress, and approved by both houses. The next day the 26th of May, our Commissioners were introduced to the Mexican President, and addresses were made on both sides.

In a subsequent despatch from our Commissioners to the Secretary of State, the Commissioners state that the amendments have been agreed to and ratifications exchanged and enclose a copy of the protocol. The proclamation of the first was made here on the 4th of July last, and the protocol and correspondence were not then communicated, because it was not deemed necessary, as the treaty had been ratified as amended, and it was not competent in the President and Senate to abrogate it and restore war, except by a declaration of war by Congress

The Commissioners did not regard the protocol as part of the treaty; they knew that they had no authority to alter the treaty or modify the amendments, nor could the president of the mexican republic have regarded the protocol as modifying the treaty as amended by the Senate of the United States for no reference is made to it by him on its final consummation.

The Message of Mr. Polk, explaining the potocol to the late Mexican treaty as far as received by telegraph, is perfectly triumphant. The conduct of the whig party, in both houses, on this subject, appears not only unneccessary, but completely absurd and ridiculous. What do the whig leaders in Congress want? Do they want to make 'Judys' of themselves? Do they want to break the treaty? Do they want to reopen the war? Do they want to add embarassments to General Taylor's administration? It really would appear as if their object was to establish all these issues.—N. Y Herald.

Truth and dyspepsia never yet dwelt together. Fat or lean, young or old, male or female, there was never yet a consumer of tea, or coffee, or tobacco who was not more or less dyspeptic Tobacco and dyspepsia are synonymous. Did you ever see or hear of a tobacco smoker whose pipe or cigar did not serve to settle his stomach, always in an emeute after dinner? Troubled he is with a watery brain. Settle the stomach! Why, without tea, coffee, beer, wine alcahol, tobacco, opium and such deadly drugs, men never would have known they had stomachs. They might have digested ham sole leather, tenpenny-nails and mince-pies with perfect impunity, if they had not scalded and fumigated all the tone out of their digestive organs by hot tea and smoke.

MAKE HOME INTERESTING.—Let parents make the hearthstone more alluring than the bowling-alley, and their children will be found at home, instead of wandering about, seeking street entertainments, which their natures demand but which is not to be found under the parental roof. Intresting, entertaing and useful books and newspapers are the best means of giving employment to the youthful mind. Let children and youth be supplied with instructive reading, and the instances are rare, indeed, where they will not avail themselves of it.

Col. Crocket in a Quandary.

"I never but once," said the Colonel, "was in what I call a real genuine quandary. It was during my electioneering campaign for Congress, at which time I strolled about in the woods, so particularly pestered by politics, that I forgot my rifle. Any one may forget his rifle, you know; but it isn't every man can make amends for his forgetfulness by his inventive faculties, I guess. It chanced, as I was strolling along, considerable deep in congressionals, the first thing that took my fancy was the snarling of some young bears, which proceeded from a hollow tree, the entrance being more than forty feet from the ground. I mounted the tree, but I soon found that I could not reach the cubs with my hand, so I went feet foremost, to see if I could draw them out with my toes. I hung on, at the top of the hole, straining with all my might to reach them, until at last my hands slipped and down I went, more than twenty feet to the bottom of that black hole and there I found myself hip deep in a family of fine young bears. I soon found that I might as well undertake to climb up the greatest part of a rainbow as to get back, the hole in the tree being so large, and its sides so smooth and slippery from the rain. Now this was a real, genuine, regular quandary. If so be I was to shout, it would have been doubtful whether they would hear me at the settlement; and if they did hear me, the story would ruin my election, for they were a quantity too cute to vote for a man that had ventured into a place that he couldnt get himself out of. Well, now, while I was calculating whether it was best to shout for help, or to wait in the hole until after the election, I heard a kind of fumbling and grumbling over head, and looking up I saw the old bear coming down stern foremost upon me. My motto is always "go a head!" and as soon as she had lowered herself within my reach I got a tight grip of her tail in my left hand, and with my little buck-horn-hafted penknife in the other, I commenced spurring her forward—I'll be shot if ever member of Congress rose quicker in the world than I did. She took me out in the shake of a lamb's tail."

A Worsted Tradesman.

An English paper says that a short time since, a "navy," some six feet three inches in height, and of Herculean build, went into the shop of one of the Worcester shopkeepers, and asked if they had got any 'whirlers'—that is, stockings without feet.

'No,' quoth the shopkeeper, 'but we've got some famous big and strong stockings, as will just suit such a man as you.'

'Let's ha'e a look at 'em' rejoined the 'navy.'

The counter was immediately covered with a quantity. Our Herculus, selecting out the largest pair, said—

'What's the price o'them?'

'4s. 9d. was the rejoinder.

'Can you cut the feet off of 'em?'

'Oh, certainly,' was the answer.

'Then do,' was the laconic command.

No sooner said than done. The shears were applied, and instantly the stockings were footless.

'And what's the price on 'em now?' quoth our friend of the pickaxe and spade with all the composure imaginable.

'Price on 'em now?' echoed the worsted merchant, surprised beyond measure at the absurdity (as he thought) of the question, 'why 4s. 9d. to be sure.'

'Four shillings and ninepence!' quoth the navy; 'I ne'er guv more than 1s. 6d. (putting the latter sum on the counter) for a pair of whirlers i' my life.'

'Well,' replied the tradesman (chop-fallen, and fairly outwitted) throwing the mutilation at him—"take them and be off with you; you've 'whirled' me this time, but I'll take good care that neither you nor any of your roguish gang shall do it again, as long as I live."

A Good Answer.—A young gentleman who does not live a thousand miles from this city, was in the act of popping the question to a young lady the other evening, when just at the 'wiching time' her father entered the room, and enquired what they were about? 'O?' promptly replied the fair one, 'Mr ——has just explained the question of an-nexation to me, and he is for immediate annexation.' 'Well,' said Papa, 'if you can agree on a treaty, I'll ratify it.'—Boston Times.

JUST PUBLISHED,

SEARS' PICTORIAL FAMILY

ANNUAL, FOR 1849.

An illustrated work, comprising a fine series of embellishment, with interesting descriptions, in one hand-some large octavo of about 400 pages, elegantly bound in gilt, and lettered in the most finished style of modern book making.

Price only Two Dollars.

This splendid volume comprises within itself a Complete Library of Useful and Entertaining Knowledge, condenced in form, familiar in style, copious in information, embracing an extensive range of subjects. The Engravings (over 200 in number) are strictly illustrative being representations of actual Scenery, Costumes, Manners Monuments, &c. &c.

On examination the above work will be pronounced by every intelligent person, under whose observation it may come, as one of the most suitable presents for a father to present to his family, as regards both the quality and number of its embelishments, and the pure character of its contents. In preparing every article for its pages, the greatest caution has been used, to admit nothing but of an amusing and instructive character.

A cheap edition has been prepared, for the mails, in paper covers. Two copies will be sent for Three Dollars; five for Five Dollars: amd ten copies (and one to the person getting up the club) for Ten Dollars. The postage will not exceed 25 or 30 cents on each volume when sent by mail.

 Clergyman, Superintendants of sabbath Schools, Agents of Newspapers and Periodicals, Postmasters and Booksellers throughout the country are respectfully requested to act as our Agents. Should you order any copies of the Pictorial Family Annual to sell again you will please send for them without delay, as each order will be attended to according to the date of its reception. Our fixed terms for the volume will be as follows: and under no circumstances will there be any deviation—the cash in all cases to accompany the order, TEN Copies in elegantly gilt binding, for $15. ONE HUNDRED Copies for $ 100.

To Publishers of Newspapers throughout the United States.

 Newspapers coppying this Advertisement, entire, well displayed, as above, without any alteration or abridgement (including this notice.) and giving it two inside insertions, shall receive a copy of this work, (subject to their order,) by sending direct to the Publisher.

No letter will be taken from the office unless postpaid.

CAUTION!!

A man by the name of CLAPP has engaged with a young man of the name of S. P. Townsend, and uses his name to put up a Sarsaparilla, which they call Dr. Townsend's Sarsaparilla, denominating it GENUINE, Original, etc. This Townsend is no doctor, and never was; but was formerly a worker on railroads, canals, and the like. Yet he assumes the title of Dr., for the purpose of gaining credit for what he is not. This is to caution the public not to be deceived, and purchase none but the GENUINE ORIGINAL OLD Dr. Jacob Townsend's Sarsaparilla, having on it the Old Dr's. likeness, his family coat of arms, and his signature across the coat of arms.

Principal Office, 102 Nassau st., New York City

OLD DR. JACOB TOWNSEND,

THE ORIGINAL DISCOVERER OF THE

Genuine Townsend Sarsaparilla.

Old Dr. Townsend is now about 70 years of age, and has long been known as the AUTHOR and DISCOVERER of the GENUINE ORIGINAL "TOWNSEND SARSAPARILLA." Being poor, he was compelled to limit it manufacture, by which means it has been kept out of market, and the sales circumscribed to those only who had proved its worth, and known its value. It had reached the ears of many, nevertheless, as those persons who had been healed of sore diseases, and saved from death, proclaimed its excellence and wonderful

HEALING POWER.

Knowing many years ago that he had by his skill, science and experience, devised an article which would be of incalculable advantage to mankind when the means would be furnished to bring it into universal notice, when its inestimable virtues would be known and appreciated. This time has come, the means are supplied; this GRAND AND UNEQUALLED PREPARATION is manufactured on the largest scale, and is called for throughout the length and breadth of the land, especially as it is found incapable of degeneration or deterioration.

Unlike young S. P. Townsend's, it improves with age, and never changes, but for the better; because it is prepared on scientific principles by a scientific man. The highest knowledge of Chemistry, and the latest discoveries of the art, have all been brought into requisition in the manufacture of the Old Dr's Sarsaparilla. The Sarsaparilla root, it is well known to medical men, contains many medicinal properties, and some properties which are inert or useless, and others, which if retained in preparing it for use, produce fermentation and acid, which is injurious to the system. Some of the properties of Sarsaparilla are so volatile, that they entirely evaporate and are lost in the preparation, if they are not preserved by a scientific process, known only to those experienced in its manufacture. Moreover, these volatile principles, which fly off in vapor, or as an exhalation, under heat, are the very essential medical properties of the root, which give to it all its value.

Any person can boil or stew the root till they get a dark-colored liquid, which is more from the coloring matter in the root than from any thing else; they can then strain this insipid or vapid liquid, sweeten with sour molasses, and then call it "SARSAPARILLA EXTRACT or SYRUP." But such is not the article known as the

GENUINE OLD DR. JACOB TOWNSEND'S SARSAPARILLA.

This is so prepared, that all the inert properties of the Sarsaparilla root are first removed, every thing capable of becoming acid or of fermentation, is extracted and rejected; then every particle of medical virtue is secured in a pure and concentrated form; and thus it is rendered incapable of losing any of its valuable and healing properties. Prepared in this way, it is made the most powerful agent in the

Cure of innumerable diseases.

Hence the reason why we hear commendations on every side in its favor by men, women, and children. We find it doing wonders in the cure of

CONSUMPTION, DYSPEPSIA, and LIVER COMPLAINT, and in RHEUMATISM, SCROFULA, PILES, COSTIVENESS, all CUTANEOUS ERUPTIONS, PIMPLES, BLOTCHES, and all affections arising from

IMPURITY OF THE BLOOD.

It possesses a marvellous efficacy in all complaints arising from Indigestion, from Acidity of the Stomach, from unequal circulation, determination of blood to the head, palpitation of the heart, cold feet and hands, cold chills and hot flashes over the body. It has not its equal in Colds and Coughs; and promotes easy expectoration and gentle perspiration, relaxing stricture of the lungs, throat, and every other part.

But in nothing is its excellence more manifestly seen and acknowledged than in all kinds and stages of

FEMALE COMPLAINTS.

It works wonders in cases of Fluor Albus or Whites, Falling of the Womb, Obstructed, Suppressed, or Painful Menses, Irregularity of the menstrual periods, and the like; and is as effectual in curing all the forms of Kidney Diseases.

By removing obstructions, and regulating the general system it gives tone and strength to the whole body, and thus cures all forms of

Nervous diseases and debility,

and thus prevents or relieves a great variety of other maladies, as Spinal irritation, Neuralgia, St. Vitus' Dance Swooning, Epileptic Fits, Convulsions, &c.

It cleanses the blood, excites the liver to healthy action, tones the stomach, and gives good digestion, relieves the bowels of torpor and constipation, allays inflammation, purifies the skin, equalises the circulation of the blood, producing gentle warmth equally all over the body, and the insensible perspiration; relaxes all strictures and tightness, removes all obstructions, and invigorates the entire nervous system. Is not this then

The medicine you pre-eminently need!

But can any of these things be said of S. P. Townsend's inferior article? This young man's liquid is not to be

COMPARED WITH THE OLD DR'S,

because of one GRAND FACT, that the one is INCAPABLE of DETERIORATION, and

NEVER SPOILS,

while the other DOES; souring, fermenting, and blowing the bottles containing it into fragments; the sour, acid liquid exploding and damaging other goods! Must not this horrible compound be poisonous to the system?—What! put acid into a system already diseased with acid? What causes Dyspepsia but acid? Do we not all know that when food sours in our stomachs what mischiefs it produces! flatulence, heartburn, palpitation of the heart, liver complaint, diarrhœa, dysentery, colic, and corruption of the blood? What is Scrofula but an acid humor in the body? What produces all the humors which bring on Eruptions of the Skin, scald Head, Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, White Swellings, Fever Sores, and all ulcerations internal and external? It is nothing under heaven, but an acid substance, which sours, and thus spoils all the fluids of the body, more or less. What causes Rheumatism but a sour or acid fluid which insinuates itself between the joints and elsewhere, irritating and inflaming the delicate tissues upon which it acts? So of nervous diseases, of impurity of the blood, in deranged circulations, and nearly all the ailments which afflict human nature.

Now is it not horrible to make sad sell, and invariably worse to use this

and yet he would fain have it understood that Old Dr. Jacob Townsend's Genuine Original Sarsaparilla, is an IMITATION of his inferior preparation!!

Heaven forbid that we should deal in an article which would bear the most distant resemblance to S. P. Townsend's article! and which should bring down upon the Old Dr. such a mountain load of complaints and criminations from Agents who have sold, and purchasers who have used S. P. Townsend's FERMENTING COMPOUND.

We wish it understood, because it is the absolute truth, that S. P. Townsend's article and Old Dr. Jacob Townsend's Sarsaparilla are heaven-wide apart, and infinitely dissimilar; that they are unlike in every particular, having not one single thing in common.

As S. P. Townsend is no doctor, and never was, is no chemist, no pharmaceutist—knows no more of medicine or disease than any other common, unscientific, unprofessional man, what guarantee can the public have that they are receiving a genuine scientific medicine, containing all the virtues of the articles used in preparing it, and which are incapable of changes which might render them the AGENTS of Disease instead of health.

But what else should be expected from one who knows nothing comparatively of medicine or disease! It requires a person of some experience to cook and serve up even a common decent meal. How much more important is it that the persons who manufacture medicine, designed for

should know well the medical properties of plants, the best manner of securing and concentrating their healing virtues, also an extensive knowledge of the various diseases which affect the human system, and how to adapt remedies to these diseases!

It is to arrest frauds upon the unfortunate, to pour balm into wounded humanity, to kindle hope in the despairing bosom, to restore health and bloom, and vigor into the enfeebled and broken frame and to banish infirmity that OLD DR. JACOB TOWNSEND has SOUGHT and FOUND the opportunity and means to bring his

within the reach, and to the knowledge of all who need it, that they may learn and know, by joyful experience its

Transcendent Power to Heal.

Dr. Jacob Townsend, New York, Oct. 5, 1848.

WALKED ACROSS THE ROOM

with the aid of crutches. Since then, I have walked in the street; have gone alone from 36 Spruce street to the Park; thence to Lovejoy's Hotel and back. I have been to 85 Nassau street two different times, and am now frequently visiting my neighbors. During all this time, I have taken but two bottles of Old Dr. Townsend's Sarsaparilla. Oct. 4, I procured another bottle to-day (5th Oct.) I walked twice across the floor without the aid of crutches. I have also nearly recovered from obstruction of water, which gave me great distress. The pain in my back has likewise left me. I and my family have no earthly reason to ascribe my recovery to any other cause but to

OLD DR. JACOB TOWNSEND'S SARSAPARILLA.

Labor.

BY T. BUCHANAN READ.

'Labor, Labor!' sounds the anvil,
'Labor, labor, until death!'
And the file with voice discordant,
'Labor, endless labor!' saith.
While the bellows to the embers,
Speaks of labor in each breath.

'Labor, labor!' in the harvest,
Saith the whetting of the scythe;
And the mill-wheel tels of labor,
Under waters falling blithe;
'Labor, labor!' groan the mill-stones,
To the bands that whirl and writhe!

And the woodman tells of labor,
In his echo-waking blows;
In the forest, in the cabin,
'Tis the dearest word he knows!
'Labor, labor!' saith the spirit,
And with labor comes repose.

'Labor!' said the loaded wagon,
Moving towards the distant mart.
'Labor!' groans the heavy steamer.
As she cleaves the waves apart.
Beating like that iron engine,
'Labor, labor!' cries the heart!

Yes the heart of man cries 'labor!'
While it labors in the breast.
Hear the Ancient and Eternal,
In the Word which He hath blest,
Saying, 'Six days shalt thou labor,
On the seventh thou shalt rest!'

Then how beautiful at evening,
When the toilsome week is done,
To behold the blacksmith's embers
Fade together with the sun;
And to think the doors of labor
Are all closing up like one!

For the Plainfield Gazette.

The Somerset.

"I have good reason to remember that apple tree, although I have not seen it for some years," observed my companion as we were travelling from Plainfield to Boundbrook one fine day last summer, as he pointed to a very large tree which stood on the hill side below the road.

'It is certainly a noble tree, and appears to be well loaded with fine fruit,' I replied; 'perhaps you may have formerly stopped in your travels and gathered some of it for your enjoyment while you have been on the road?'

'The apples which that tree produces are certainly very good, as I have often had occasion to know,' continued my friend, 'and many a hat full have I picked up as I have been carting on this road; some of which I have considered so fine that I have taken them home to my family; but it is not the fruit which causes me to remember the tree so familiarly as I do.'

I asked my companion if any incident had occurred near the spot, which had associated the tree with some pleasant recollection.

'An incident did occur near this spot in the winter of 1836, in which I was rather a prominent actor; but I cannot say that it is calculated to revive any very pl asant reflections. I had ought to be very grateful, however, that my life was preserved at the time to which I allude, and that in a very singular manner. I was passing this place with a load of lime, and had just got over that little narrow spot, which, at that time, was rather dangerous to cross; when a man with a large load of grain, who was behind, wished me to stop and assist him. I accordingly halted my team on the side of the road, and proceeded to help my neighbor. He had a load of oats, (near a hundred bushel,) and his sled being top-heavy in consequence, we placed the end of a rail under the sled (fastening it with a rope) while I was to set on the other end, which was on the up-hill side. We supposed that my weight on the end of this lever would keep the load steady and upright, while my companion was to drive over the spot. Unfortunately for our calculations, the sled had no sooner started than the lower runner slipped into a small rut. This sudden jolt caused the load to tip, and before I could think, I found myself flying through the air at a fearful rate. You can easily judge what a start I got from the position I had on the end of the rail, aided by the momentum given to it by a heavy body falling over. Singular as you may deem the story, I was thrown down hill and lit on my back on the top of that apple tree. Its flat top, which you can observe is composed of a great mass of fine limbs and succors, broke my fall; and except a few scratches and having my clothes torn a little, I escaped unharmed. I think you will agree with me that I have good reason to remember the apple tree, as had it not caught me I must have fallen on the frozen ground, which was but lightly covered with a thin coat of snow and sleet. In that event I could hardly have escaped with a whole frame, even if it had not cost me my life.'

I assured my companion that I thought his escape a remarkable one, and promised to communicate the particulars to you for publication. I need hardly assure you that my friend is above fabricating a story about himself or others J. C.

Mrs. Scruggins on Cows.

Mrs. Scruggings has recovered! She has been quite unwell ever since New-Year's day. She caught an 'orful' cold on that day, while sitting in the front parlor. It is whispered that she is rheumatic but she stoutly denies it. When the fat with green spectacles is within hearing, she boasts loudly of her activity. Her private opinion of the stout spectacles is highly complimentary Spectacles is a nice young man, 'only a little wild'—Spectacles does own to forty years, and a slight rheumatisun; and people say—but never mind what people say. Mrs. Scruggins has had great experience in house keeping, and in the matter of keeping cows, she is learned as a pundit. Hear her!

We used to keep a cow, when we lived in Cincinnater, and sich a cow! She used to come up as regular to milk as clock-work. She'd knock at the gate with her horns, jest as sensible! Her name was 'Rose.' I never know'd how she got that name for she was as black as a kittle. One day Rose got sick, and wouldn't eat, poor thing! and a and after, she died, I do b'lieve I cried, when she was gone. Well, we went a little while without a cow, but I told Mr. S. it wouldn't do, no how—we must have another—and he gin in. Whenever I said must, Mr. S. knew that I meant it. Well a few days after, he came home from market with the finest cow and young calf I ever seed. He gave thirty dollars for her and the calf, and two levies to a man to help bring her home. They drove her into the back yard, and Mr. S. told me to come out and see her, and I did. I went up to her jest as I used to do with Rose, and when I said poor Sukey, the nasty brute, would you b'lieve, she kicked me! Her foot caught in my dress, a bran span new one, which cost two levies a yard, and she took a levies' worth right out of it, and then how wicked she struck her head at me. I screamed right out. Mr. S jumped and caught me jest as I was dropping—I wasn't quite as heavy, then—and he carried me to the door, and I went in and sot down. I felt faintish, I was so abominably skeered. Mr. S. said he'd learn her some manners; so hd picked up the poker, and went out; but I hadn't hardly begun to get a little strengthened up afore in rushed my dear husband flourishin' the poker at the wicious cow, who, with her head down and tail up, was running at him, like mad.—Mr. S. jumped into the room, but before he had time to turn round and shut the door, that desp'rate cow was in, too. Mr. S. got up on the dining-table, and I run into the parlor. I thought I'd be safe there, but I was skeered so bad that I forgot to shut the door; and would you b'lieve it, after hooking over the dining-table, and rollin' Mr. S off, in she walked into the, parlor, shakin' her head, jest as much as to say, 'I'll give you a tech, now'

I jumped up on a chair, but thinkin' that not high enough, I got one foot on the brass knob, on the Franklin stove, and put the other on the mantel-piece. I was safe there—she couldn't reach me. You ought to haved seed that cow in our parlor—she looked all round as if she was 'mazed. At last she looked in the large mirror and saw another cow, as she thought, exhibitin' passion like herself. She shuck her head and pawed the carpet, and would you b,lieve it, the orful brute went right into my mirror—the big new one I only had two months. I boo hoo'd right out. I s'pose she thought she heered the calf, for she tried to get out, and in going round the room she poked her head in Mr. S.'s book case—no doubt she smelt the calf-skin covers All this time I was getting agonized. The brass knob on the stove got so hot that I had to sit down on the narrow mantel-piece, and hold on to nothin' I dassint move for fear I'd slip off. Mr. S went round to the front door, but it was locked, and he then came to the window and opened it. I jumped down and run for the window, and hadn't more than got my head out afore I heard her comin' after me. Gracious, but I was in a hurry! 'Mere haste less speed,' always, for the more I tried to climb quick, the longer it took me; and would you believe it, jest as I got ready to jump down, that brute of a cow caught me behind, and turned me clear over and over out of the window. Well, dear, when I got 'right side up,' as they put on lookin'-glass boxes, I looked up at the winder and there stood that cow, with her head jest between the red and white curtains, and with another piece of my dress danglin' on her horns.

Husband and me was just starting for the little alley that run alongside of the house, when that cow giv a bawl, and out of the winder she came. Whiskin' her tail about, it caught fire in the Franklin stove, and it sarved her right. Mr. S. and me run into the alley in such a hurry that we got wedged fast. Husband tried to get ahead, but I had been in the rear long enough, and I wouldn't let him.—Would you b'lieve it, that dreadful cow no sooner seen us in the alley than in it dashed, but thank goodness, it stuck fast, too, and there was nobody inside the house or yard to open it. Mr. S. wanted to climb over and unbolt, it, but I would't let him—I wasn' going to be left alone again with that desp'rate cow, if she was fast, and so I told him. I made him help me over the gate. Ah, dear, climbin' a high gate when you are skeered by a cow is dreadful, and I know it. I got over, left husband in, and then it took him, and me, and four neighbors, to get that dreadful critter out of the alley. She bellowed and kicked, and her calf bellowed and kicked to get at her, and she bawled back agin; but we got her out at last, and sich a time, ah, dear—I had enough of her Husband sold her for twenty dollars, the next day. It cost him seventy-five cents to get her to market; and when he tried to pass one of the five dollar bills he got—would you b'lieve it--the nasty rag was a counterfeit. Mr. Scruggins said, to his dying day, that he b'lieved the brother of the man that sold that cow, bought it back agin. I b'lieve it helped to worry my dear husband to death. Ah, child, I know what cows is!

The old lady's agitation was so great at this point of her story, that she dropped a stich in her knitting — St. Louis Reveille.

CAN ONE NEGRO STEAL ANOTHER NEGRO.—A western paper gives an amusing account of the trial before a Cherokee Judge of a negro for stealing a slave. The counsel for the negro made a very long and irresistable speech of which we give that portion which probably did the business for the accused:

'It is impossible,' said he, 'for one slave to steal another; yes gentlemen of the jury, I say it is impossible for one negro to steal another negro. Suppose, gentlemen of the jury, my horse should get out of the lot and run away, and go by the house of John A Bell, and his horse shoud follow mine off—would you hang my horse for stealing John A. Bell's horse? No-o gentlemen of the jury; you wouldn't do no such thing.'

The President of France is called Prince Louis, and Prince Louis Napoleon, as though the title of Prince were more desirable than that of President!

FALLING FROM GRACE.—Zebekiah Broadhead was a man somewhat less of stature than Golith of Gath, though posessing perhabs as much phisical strength. So the village wrestlers thought wen out of sport, he took up a whole handful of them and dashed them on the ground. During a religious revival, Zebekiah was converted and joined the Methodist church. One evening while on his way from class meeting, he was assailed by half a dozen of his former companions, authorizing:

'Now Zeb has become a Chaistian, and cannot fight; let's give him a thrashing.'

'Hold a moment,' interposed Zeb, putting forth an arm as long as a rail, 'I know a christian connot fight' but I belong to a denomination which believes in falling from grace—and,' continued the new convert, planting his foot more firmly on the earth, and towering up like a giant in the moon-light, his arm falling back to an angle of forty-five degrees. 'If I should fall from grace,' here he lowered his voice to a tone of omnious solemnity and advancing three paces towards his retiring assailants—'If I should fall from grace, wo be to you!'

The scamps, overawed by a doubt of the saint's perseverance decamped with precaution, leaving Zeb as Appollyon let Christian, to go on his way rejoycing.

AND WHAT NEXT?—'And what,' said a gentleman to a young stranger, 'are your plans for the future?'

'I am a clerk,' replied the young man, 'and my hope is to succeed and get into business for myself.'

'And what next?' said the gentleman.

'I intend to marry and set up an establishment of my own,' said the youth.

'And what next?' continued the interrogator.

'Why, to continue the business, and accumelate wealth.'

'And what next?'

'It is the lot of all to die, and I, of course, cannot escape,' replied the young man.

'And what next?' once more asked the gentleman; but the young man had no answer to make—he had no purpose that reached beyond the present life How many young men are in precisely the same condition?

A PRETTY CUTE BOY.—The following dialogue actually occurred between a clergyman and a small lad:

'Well, my lad, what's your name?'

My father's name is W———

'And where do you live?'

'I live with my father.'

'And where does your father live?'

'He lives with mother.'

'And where does yor mother live?'

'Oh! she lives where my father does.'

'You little rogue, where do you all live?'

'I know—we all live at our house, when we are all home.'

It is a bad sign to see a man with his hat off at midnight, explaining the theory and principles of true democracy to a lamp post. It is also a bad sign to see a fellow lie down in the gutter supposing it to be his bed, and commence calling a poor innocent hog all sorts of hard names, mistaking it for his wife.

The Dayton Bulletin asserts it as a curious fact that new born infants weep only in two tones, the boys in A and the girls in E They are said to weep for Adam and Eve, and the commission of the first sin. Grown up girls, it is said weep only in L H, that is for Lovers and Husbands. All old bachelors wail in W W.—for a Wife with Wealth.

Lazy rich girls make rich men poor, while industrious poor girls make poor men rich. Remember this, ye affected fair ones, whose antipathy to putting your hands into cold water is always getting your husbands in hot.

A lady, in the modern acceptaion of the term, is a female with her head stuck into a bonnet, her waist puckered into the shape of a junc bottle, and a hole in the heel of her stocking. A gentleman in the same acceptation, is a fellow with a cigar in his mouth, a sword-cane, two cents in his pocket, and no sense in his head.

QUESTION ANSWERED.—'What is love, Kate?' said a young man to his 'bright particular, the other night. 'Love, Frank, I declare I do not know—unless it is getting married and kissing little babies?' Frank fainted.

BAPTISTS IN MICHIGAN.—A late report gives 10 associations, 178 churches, 81 ministers, 317 baptisms, and 8,079 members.

PLAINFIELD GAZETTE.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Thursday, February, 22, 1849.

Why is it that those who labor almost incessantly cannot command the comforts and conveniences, and but barely the necessaries of life? All must admit that those who thus labor should realize a comfortable and permanent home. But is this so? Have those whose best energies have been exhausted in bringing this country from one vast wilderness to it's present proud state, received their due share of its prosperity? We think not. If this is so, what has beeen the cause, and what is the remedy? The causes no doubt are various, but one great cause is, that they have been cheated out of their rights and earnings by a class who are too proud and too lazy to labor for their own support, and therefore use all kinds of deception to live on the labor of others. They patronize, yes that's the word, they patronize the mechanic, the farmer, the laboring man, and the store-keeper. They generally wear better clothes, have whiter and softer hands, occupy better houses, have better furniture than those they make their dupes. These are the vampires who suck the life blood of the laboring men. They eat and drink up, wear out and run away with the hard earnings of the honest and industrious working men. We appeal to you all if this is not so, and if you could not if you had received from this class your just dues promptly, enjoy the comforts and conveniencies to which your labor justly entitles you. This is an evil of great magnitude, and one of which all complain.

How shall we remedy this evil? We believe an important step towards it would be to abolish all laws for the collection of debts! Let every mans credit stand upon it's own bottom, all who then deserved credit would obtain it then with the same facility they now do, this would do more towards making these bloodsuckers earn their own bread and butter than any other plan which can be adopted. Abolish the law for the collection of debt, and the united credit of the whole of these gentlemen would not be sufficient to buy a loaf of bread, and the consequence would be that they would have to go to work and earn it. This evil extends throughout society.

We are having laws passed in our own and many other States exempting certain amounts of household property from the law, some that the homestead to the value of a certain amount, others that the property of the wife should be free from the debts of the husband &c. In our opinion they will never arrive at the matter more certainly than by abolishing all laws on the subject. Most men know from experience that a law for the collection of debt is only a premium for dishonesty, no honest man would ever suffer a debt to be collected by law, and a rogue all know will not. A man who through misfortune is unable to pay a debt, which he was able to pay when it was contracted for, would not be enabled to pay any sooner by any compulsory law, and by distressing such a man you put it out of his power of ever paying it, hence the application for and passage of the above relief laws. Another branch of this fruitful source of evil growing out of the repugnance to labor is the passage of special laws. Give the honest man an equal chance with the rogues, abolish all laws for the collection of debt, enact none but general laws, on all subjects, let them like the rains of heaven, fall on the just and the unjust, the rich and the poor. But here steps in this powerful interest of these anti-earn-your bread-by-the-sweat-of-your-brow-gentlemen, hence so many after the loaves and fishes, hence our long legislatve and congressional sessions, hence also so many special laws to lengthen out these sessions, when by passing a general law on all subjects requiring legislation, nine tenths of of the necessity for legislation would be done away; but liberal pay and extra mileage, and free rides, and so pleasing an occupation as talking, are strong inducements to neglect or abuse the real interests of the people.

It would not do to give us general laws to keep hogs out of the street, to vote by ballot, for banking and manufacturing purposes, for railroads and canals &c. &c. Oh no! Why there would be nothing to do another year, it be must done in pieces that the time can be lengthened out and create a necessity for more special acts another year, and thus legislation is made a constant round, and what by an act supplement to an act for the better security of the people, none but a lawyer can make a simple charge for a pound of sugar and be sure it is right, i e. legal or according to law.

There are many who advocate the pnblishing of the laws in the newspapers, are they simple enough to think our legislators will thus expose the follies of legislation to the examination of the people, and thus expose its absurdity, it reminds us of the little girl from the city who imagined that cucumbers grew in slices.

Young Men's Lyceum.

We understand the young men have formed a Lyceum in this Village on their own account. We are glad to hear that they have determined to do something for the improvement of their minds, how much better is it to spend time in this way than to be running about night after night forming idle habits; May they live and prosper.

LECTURE —In what way can we gain so much knowledge and in so pleasing a form as through Lectures, we understand those delivered by Dr. Stillman are of a highly instructive and entertaining character, the time and money spent for such purposes will pay compound interest.

We have recieved Graham's Magazine for March, like the two preceding numbers, it is all that talents of the highest order can make it, either in it's literary or artistic departments.

We are indebted to the Hon. J. W. Miller for the Presidents Message and accompanying documents.

The bill to charter the Newark Foster Home Society was taken up on its 2d reading.

Feb. 20.

Senate. The Com. on Education reported bill for the establishment of schools in some townships.

Passed.—Bills to charter the New Brunswick and Princeton Gas Light Cos. —that to annex part of Somerset to Middlesex was postponed to the next session.

A Summary of the proceedings of Congress.

Washington, Feb. 15.

HOUSE.—Mr Vinton's bill creating a Home Department passed, yeas 112 nays 78.

Mr. Rockwell's bill creating a Board of Commissioners for Private Claims, was defeated by yeas 84 to nays 98.

Feb. 17.

SENATE.—The Senate then took up the resolution, previously offered by Mr. Webster, directing an inquiry to be made into the expediency of requiring security from emigrant paupers, in order to prevent them from becoming a public charge. An amendment making provision for printing certain decision of the Supreme Court on the subject, was then submitted and agreed to, and the resolutions adopted.

Mr. Douglass gave notice that he would, on Monday next, move to take up the bill providing a territorial government for California.

HOUSE.—M. Buckner of Kentucky; rose and addressed the Committee on the Slavery Question and the Mexican war in general, dwelling particularly upon the territorial view of the subject, and advocating conservative doctrines. He contended that Slavery would never go to California—that Congress had power and ought to exercise it, to keep Slavery out of the New Territories.

Feb. 19.

Mr Yulee submitted a series of resolutions passed by the Legislature of his state on the subject of Slavery and wrongs, and moved that the paper be received and printed.

In presenting the resolutions, Mr. Yulee remarked that though they were not addressed to Congress by the Legislature of his State he had deemed it proper to present them, in order to show the views which prevailed upon this important subject in his section of the country. For his own part, he was ready to proceed to extreme measures for redressing the wrongs which had been inflicted udon the South —even to the dissolution of the Union.

The resolutions of the Senator from Florida were read and ordered to be printed.

HOUSE.—Mr. smith of Ia, moved to suspend the rules in order to offer a resolution making the California territorial bill the first business in order in Committee of the whole house, after the disposal of the Mexican Indemnity bill. The motion permitting the resolutions was introduced accordingly, and adopted yeas 139, nays 39.

On motion of Mr Vinton, the House then resolved itself into Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union, and Mr Cabell of Fla. being called to the Chair, took up the bill to indemnify Mexico for her claims against the United States.

The question on the passage of the bill was taken and decided In the affirmative: yeas 188, nays, 8.

THINGS IN KENTUCKY.—An intelligent citizen of Louisville, Ky. writes to the National Era as follows:

LOUISVILLE, Feb. 1, 1849

'Dr. Bailey: I have just returned from the first public Emancipation meeting held in this city. It was very large, and its deliberations characterized by great enthusiasm. The friends of Emancipation are encouraged and reanimated, and will go on with redouble vigor.

'The speakers were Hon. W. P. Thomasson, our late member of Congress; James Speed, Esq. our last year's member to the Legislature; Messrs Balard, Smith and Beard, lawyers; Jacob Walter, an old and influential mechanic; Rev. W. L. Breckenridge and Rev. E. P. Humphrey, pastors of the first and second Presbyterian Churches—all in favor of Emancipation.

'Two preambles and sets of resolutions were offered, substantially the same, and one finally disposed of by being referred to a large Committee, to report to an adjourned meeting on Monday, the 12th of Feb. They are also iustructed to report an Address to the people of the State. The resolution will be published in tomorrow's papers, and I will forward you a copy. Yours for the right, &c.

ACITIZEN OF LOUISVILLE.'

PAUPERS IN GREAT BRITAIN.—The number of paupers in Great Britian is about 4,000,000, or a seventh of the population of the whole empire—in Ireland, 2,300,000; England, 1,5000,000; Scotland, 200,000. Since 1816, the people of England have paid £200,000,000 for the relief of the poor.

DURING THE YEAR ending June 39,1848 there were 585 American vessels totally lost at sea. Value of the vessels $2,523,495; and of the cargoes $2,591,771, making a total of $4,528,875. The amount of losses paid by the insurance offices on these vessels was $2,801,319.

The number of passengers from all ports in the Union for California, except New York, amounts to 4339; while those from New York number 4,359, or 20 more than from all other ports put together. The total emigration to California from the United States, amounts only to 5,359 persons, since December last.

THE MOUNTAIN AND THE MOUSE.—The Washington Correspondent of the Baltimore Sun writes that the Message of the President in regard to the Mexican Protocol satisfied the House so completely, covered so entirely the national faith and the national honor, that not a single member rose to move its reference to a special committee, or to the committee on the judiciary, or in ffne to the committee on foreign relations, The message was simply laid on the table and ordered to be printed. The mountain labored and brought forth a mouse!

EIGHTY THOUSAND United States muskets are to be sold at auction on the 27th inst, in New York city.

WITHIN the past two weeks more than five hundred persons have left Lovejoy's Hotel alone for the gold regions.

20 Students, out of the 48 who were elected last July to the Military Academy at West Point, have been dismissed.

Sierra Nevada.

This Sierra is part of the great mountain range, which, under different names and with different elevations, but with much uniformity of direction and general proximity to the coast, extended from the peninsula of California to Russian America, and without a gap in the distance through which the waters of the Rocky Mountains could reach the Pacific ocean, except at the two places where the Columbia and Frazer's river respectively find their passage. This great range is remarkable for its length, its proximity and parallelism to the sea coast, its great elevation, often more lofty than the Rocky Mountains, and its many grand volcanic peaks, reaching high into the region of perpetual snow. Rising singly, like pyramids, from heavily timbered plateaux, to the height of fourteen and seventeen thousand feet above the sea, these snowy peaks constitute the characterizing feature of the range, and distinguish it from the Rocky mountains and all others on our part of the continent.

That part of this range which traverses the ALTA CALIFORNIA is called the Sierra Nevada, (Snowy mountain)—a name in itself implying a great elevation, as it is only applied, in Spanish geography, to the mountains whose summits penetrate the region of perpetual snow. It is a grand feature of California, and a dominating one, and must be well understood before the structure of the country and the character of its different divisions can be comprehended. It divides California into two parts, and exercises a decided influence on the climate, soil, and productions of each. Stretching along the coast, and at the general distance of 150 miles from it, this great mountain wall receives the warm winds, charged with vapor, which sweep across the Pacific ocean, precipitates their accumulated moisture in fertilizing rains and snows upon its western flank, and leaves cold and dry winds to pass on to the east. Hence the characteristic differences of the two regions—mildness, fertility, and a superb vegetable kingdom on one side, comparative barrenness and cold on the other.

The two sides of the Sierra exhibit two distinct climates. The state of vegetation, in connection with some thermometrical observations made during the recent exploring expedition to California, will establish and illustrate this difference. In the beginning of December, 1845, we crossed this Sierra, at latitude 39° 17′ 12″, at the present usual emigrant pass, at the head of Salmon Trout river, 40 miles north of New Helvetia, and made observations at each base, and in the same latitude, to determine the respective temperatures; the two bases being, respectively, the western about 500, and the eastern about 4,000 feet above the level of the sea; and the Pass, 7,200 feet. The mean results of the observations were, on the eastern side, at sunrise, 9°; at noon 44°; at sunset, 30°; the state of vegetation and the appearance of the country being at the same time (second week of December) that of confirmed winter; the rivers frozen over, snow on the ridges, annual plants dead, grass dry, and deciduous trees stripped of their foliage. At the western base, the mean temperature during a corresponding week was, at sunrise 29°, and at sunset 52°; the state of the atmosphere and of vegetation that of advancing spring; grass fresh and green, four to eight inches high, vernal plants in bloom, the air soft, and all the streams free from ice. Thus December, on one side of the mountain, was winter; on the other it was spring.—From J. C. Fremont's Geographical Memoir upon Upper California.

'Mr. Robert Napier is at present building, in his yard at Govan, a floating railway, for the Edinburgh and Nothern Railway Company. It is being built of iron, 180 feet in length and 35 in breadth. It is to have three lines of rails on deck, so as to enable it to take on a railway train of 500 feet in length, and is to be propelled by engines of 250 horse power As the main line of railway on each side of the Tay is considerably above the level of the sea, stationary egines on either side of the Frith are to be employed to draw up or lower the trains. This railroad steamboat is expected to be launched in a few weeks.'

A READY RULE FOR FARMERS.—A 'quarter of wheat' is an English measure of eight standard bushels—so if you see wheat quoted fifty-six shillings, it is seven shillings a bushel. A shilling is twenty-four cents—multiply by seven and you have $1 68c per bushel.

A HOME-MADE VAPOR BATH.—For a person ill in bed, a small lump of unslacked lime, wrapped in a very damp towel, and this put in a dry one, will make as good a vapor both as can be desired.

Several friends were conversing a few evenings since, when the clock struck eleven. 'It is time,' said one, 'that honest men were abed.' 'That may be,' said another, 'but you need not be in a hurry on that account.'

A FEMALE DOCTOR.—Miss Elizabeth Blackwell has received a diploma, from the Geneva Medical College, conferring on her the degree of M. D. She said, on receiving it, 'I thank you, sir. With the help of the Most High it shall be the effort of no life to shed honor on this diploma.'

From the New-York Tribune.

Extract from Mr. Atherton's Lecture on California.

First—The face of the country, climate, productions of California, its healthfulness, River Sacramento and branches, price of freight, launches, government of the country, &c. &c.

Second—The mines, manner of procuring the gold, average quantity per man, probable supply, wet and dry diggings compared, and some instances of success within my own personal observation.

Third—Advice to Emigrants to California, articles necessary for an outfit, &c.

Fourth—The different routes to California, the expenses of each, with full particulars of the route through Mexico (over which I traveled on my return from San Francisco,) with distances, expenses and manner of traveling in Mexico, and which is the most advisable route.

Under the first general division of my subject, I will remark that the soil is generally good and capable of producing all the ordinary grains. It is a good wheat country. The red worm, which destroys so much of the wheat here, is unknown in California, so far as my knowledge extends. When I first went to California, in the month of January, 1847, land at Bodage, which is about thirty miles north of San Francisco, was worth two dollars an acre only—when I left, it was worth $20 an acre. San Francisco, or Yerba Buena, as we call it, stands, as you know, on the large and beautiful bay of San Francisco, and contains the most magnificent harbor in the world, and the only safe harbor in all Upper California, except San Diego. All the navies of the world and its commercial marine could ride in perfect security and repose on its bosom. The harbor is entered from the ocean by a narrow passage about one or two miles wide, with high bluffs on each side. This bay extends about sixty miles to the east of the town of San Francisco, and about one hundred miles to the north-west, and is from five to fifteen miles wide. The town is four or five miles from the ocean. In January 1847, there were about six hundred inhabitants in San Francisco. In April last, just before the gold placers were discovered, there were about one thousand inhabitants there. There were, in May and June, only a few women and children, the majority of the population having gone to the mines. When I left, many had returned. The town was filled by emigrants arriving from Oregon, Sandwich Islands, Valparaiso, and all neighboring places. There are several other towns on this bay. The principal ones are Sonoma, San Raphael, Santa Clara and San Jose. I have visited all these places, but my residence has been at San Francisco from January 1847 up to the 10th day of Dec. 1848.

In relation to the climate of California, I can safely say that it is not an unhealthy country. Fever and ague is somewhat prevalent along the banks of some of the rivers; but I hazard nothing in saying that the valley of the Sacramento is much more healthy than the valley of the Mississippi, or the State of Illinois. I am often asked about the "sickly season." There is what is called a "rainy season," which lasts about four or five months—from November to April—and continued exposure, want of food and irregular habits would, of course, in a rainy or dry season, strongly predispose to disease, and during all seasons it is necessary to exercise ordinary prudence and care in relation to health.—During the "dry season" as it is called, the climate is clear and delightful. The atmosphere is bracing, and though sometimes warm, is not weakening to the system, as it is in some of the Southern states. I would remark, however, that in the summer season heavy fogs are prevalent on the coast. The River Sacramento and San Joaquin are the great rivers of Upper California. The Sacramento is a most beautiful stream. At its mouth it is about two-thirds as wide as the East River at Fulton Ferry. There is a small island in the middle of the River, at its mouth. It has a middle bed, and is navigable for three or four hundred miles above its mouth. I have never been on that river above Sutter's, which is about one hundred and fifty miles above San Francisco. It is navigable for ships drawing eight feet, to the mouth of the American Fork, and a small steamboat drawing two or three feet of water could go two hundred miles still farther up. A branch of the Sacramento called the "American Fork" empties into the Sacramento, about 150 miles from its mouth. Capt. Sutter's Mill is 40 miles above the mouth of, and on, the American Fork. This is the place where the gold was first discovered. The discovery was made by some of Capt. Sutter's men who were employed to dig a race to discharge the waste water from his mill. All articles of merchandise are carried in what are called launches, which are large boats that will carry from eight to fifteen tons. It takes about a week or ten days to go from San Francisco to Sutter's, and back, in one of these launches, and when I left the freight on a barrel of flour was $14. A common steamboat could make the trip in two days.—When I left California, a launch which but a short time before could have been bought for $500, could not be hired for one trip to Sutter's for that sum. The price of passage was $10—each passenger to carry his food and bed with him, if he had any to carry. Nothing is found for the passengers, except passage. Every man has to do as the Irishman did, 'eat himself,' on the passage.—It is quite unnecessary for me to allude to the political regulations of California. You are well aware that, as yet, we have no government there. Congress neglects to provide a Territorial Government for the country, and although the Alcaldes are obeyed, the people are not obliged to obey them.

I now approach that portion of my lecture which will probably be of the greatest interest to you, to wit.: The mines, manner of procuring the gold, average quantity per man, probable supply, wet and dry diggings, and some instances of success within my own personal observation. I may very safely tell you that the accounts you have in the papers, from California, are not exaggerated, however well they may be calculated to stagger belief in them. Gold is found in great abundance over an extent of country 300 miles by 1,000. I have explored only a small portion of this vast area, and new discoveries are constantly being made. The captain of the vessel in which I came from San Francisco to San Blas (Capt. Blanchard) gathered in three weeks gold dust of the value of $10,000, and of this sum $3,000 were gathered by him in the last three days he was at the mines. This amount he had on board the vessel (the brig Laura Ann.) He informed me that in washing out the last, he must have thrown away 2 or 3 ounces from each tin-pan full of earth, as it would pay better not to wash it carefully. The largest lump of pure gold I ever saw weighed seven pounds. It was obtained by some Indians in the employ of a man by the name of Weaver. I saw it weighed, and it was pronounced 19 1-2 carats fine. Those of you who have read the official communication of Commodore Thomas Ap Catesby Jones, of the 22d Dec. 1848, twelve days after I left San Francisco, may have observed the following remark, "Incredible quantities of gold are yet daily collected, and scarcely a week elapses without some new discovery of the precious metal, more startling than any previous one." The Commodore also alludes to the fact that a few days previous to the date of his dispatch a small party of five or six persons obtained, in two days, $30,000 worth of pure gold. I have no more doubt of the truth of the statement by Commodore Jones than I have of the fact of my existence. The gold region, part of which has been explored, embraces as you have observed, a larger area than the State of New-York, and new discoveries are being made daily. There are, I am told, a little less than 50,000 square miles in the State of N. York, and if two persons only were digging on each square mile, you would have 100,000 persons. Now it is possible though hardly probable, to my mind, that during the next summer there may be 100,000 persons in the gold region digging for gold. But they will be scattered over a large extent of territory, and you may depend upon it, gentlemen, that there will be room enough for all. If a Government and a Mint could only be established in California the gold would be as valuable there as in N. York. But such is not the case at present. As an evidence of this, I may say that lots in San Francisco when I left were held and actually sold at prices higher than lots of the same size in Wall-st. Those who fail are generally those who go in too large companies, or those with delicate constitutions, who break down under fatigue and exposure. It is something of a lottery to find good "diggings." When a person or a company has found a right spot, others are not allowed to dig in the same hole, but they may dig near it. The exclusive right to dig in the spot selected is, however, only allowed while actually occupied by the digger. There are but very limited facilities for storing goods at San Francisco. I should by all means recommend that materials for a fire proof building or storehouse be sent around Cape Horn.

I will now speak to you of the articles necessary for an outfit to California. In the first place, an India Rubber Tent is, I consider, indispensable. This can be procured in San Francisco at a less price than it would cost to buy it here and transport it there. Every man who is going to dig wants a pair of India Rubber long stockings. These can be had in San Francisco; also in this City. A pair of thick shoes should be worn over the India Rubber stocking, to prevent the gravel from cutting the feet of the stockings, and thus admitting the water. The India Rubber stocking would prevent perspiration from being checked too suddenly as the labor of digging up the earth will necessarily cause perspiration, which if checked too suddenly, would certainly produce colds and fevers. Every emigrant should take or send furnitue sufficient for his own use but not more than is necessary, for freight is very high to San Francisco and up the River. I would not advise any man to go to California who is doing well here. If he is doing well enough, let him stay. The inconveniences will be very great, such as always attend the settlement of every new country. There will be a great many privations and difficulties; but to such as have good health, who are accustomed to labor and are doing nothing here, or are laying up nothing, I say by all means go to California. The laboring man will succeed best in California.

The following questions were then asked by the audience:

Q. Are the streams small? A. Yes in summer; in Winter they are generally swollen.

Q. Is there any danger of attack from the Indians? A. There is very little where there is a large party.

Q. How is the timber about the Sierra Nevada? A. There is blenty of oak, pine and cypress, and of excellent quality, which can be floated down to the American Fork very easily

Q. How cheap is travelling from Vera Cruz to Mazatlan? A. By providing your own horse and mule your expenses will not exceed $2 per day.

Q. What is the price of horses and mules at Vera Cruz at the present time? A. I don't know; when I left, they were about $30, and saddles and bridles can be bought at any price.

Q. Is there much land sold in California? A.—I understand there was a lot of land sold at $60,000, or as much as the same surface would sell for in Wall-st.

Q. What is the value of horses and mules at the mines? A. Good horses cannot be bought at less than $200, while others may be purchased for $100 or $80; saddles and bridles are very high.

Q. Is it possible sir, to buy any amount of provisions at Mazatlan. A. No, sir; they cannot be procured; you cannot rely on obtaining provisions at Mazatlan.

Q. Which is the best way of ascending to the mines from San Francisco? A Either by the river or by the land; the best route is by the river.

Q. Is the river navigable all the way to Sutter's Fort? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are the horses which you buy at the mines broken? (laughter) A. No; but they are very easily broken in.

Q. What is lumber worth? A. $100 a thousand.

Q. Are there any saw-mills? A.—Yes; there is a steam saw-mill about 30 miles above San Francisco.

Q. Is the timber fit for trimming the inside of a house? A. Yes, I should suppose so.

Q. Is it worth while to carry arms exposed? A It is; and you can get permission from the authority to carry arms.

Q. Is that necessary, sir? A. It is absolutely necessary.

Q. Are there not many articles contraband, or that you are not allowed to carry—for instance, is a man allowed to carry his own tobacco? A. No sir.

Q. Can a man carry his own liquor? [Laughter—and some one cried, "Go it boots."] A. Certainly, sir.

Q. What is the difference between the wet and dry diggings? A. From the wet diggings the fine gold is generally taken; it is necessary to wash it out of the earth. There are other sections of the country where lump gold is found.

YOUTHFUL "JEROMES."—We are informed by Mr. Post, late publisher of the Jersey City Advertiser, that he is indebted to two youths for the preservation of the life of a daughter. So noble an act he considers should not remain unpublished, nor their names unassociated with the names of the noble and daring who have periled their lives in the preservation of the lives of others.

A number of school-children had ventured upon the ice in the river at Rahway, among whom was the above little miss, about twelve years of age. In consequence of the force of the current in one spot the ice was there thin, gave way, and she fell in. She had twice descended, and when about to descend a third time a youth of about sixteen, JOSEPH FOLSOM, notwithstanaing the severe coldness of the weather on Wednesday of last week, jumped in to her rescue. She immediately seized him in such a manner as to prevent the free use of his limbs, but by his being an expert swimmer he sustained her weight by treading water, "determined," as he has since declared, "that she should not again go down unless he went with her." His brother THEODORE a younger lad, was also disposed to follow, but Joseph, with unusual presence of mind in his condition, advised his brother that he could be of no service by so doing, but that by bringing them a rail he might save them. This was as quickly done as possible, and both were saved, not however, without Theodore having ventured some depth into the ice and water to use the rail to advantage. Thus have these two lads secured to themselves an eternal debt of gratitude, and the merit of deserved praise as long as they live. Their father does business in New-York, while they assiduously discharge the duties connected with his farm. With their clothes frozen to their bodies they were compelled to travel probably three quarters of a mile.—Jersey City Sentinel.

American fabries are in good demand abroad. The value of those exported from Boston alone, in 1848, was over $2,266,000. About 5,900 bales of domestics were sent to South America, the East Indias, and various other parts of the world.

Dr. Leonard, a member of the Massachusetts Legislature, says that he has used charcoal as a manure during the last forty years. He takes the dust found in the beds of charcoal pits, and places it near the manure heap. As the manure increases, he throws on a layer of charcoal for every layer of manure. Thus he saves all the ammonia and gases—the essences of the manure—wich would have otherwise escaped. This system greatly increases the fertilizing power of the manure.

There are 779 banks in the United States.

FIRE IN ELIZABETHTOWN.—We learn by the Eveving Post that the Union Hotel, in Elizabethtown, kept by A. Gale, took fire on Saturday evening last, in the basement, and got well under weigh before it was discovered and one time threatened to destroy the whole building, After destroying or injuring all the furniture, carpets, &c. on the first floor and in the basement, the fire was fortunately reduced. The loss is estimated at five or six hundred dollars, The premises belonged to Mr. Gibbons, of Madison.

Mr. Drum, the newly elected Senator from the District lately represented by Gov. Jonston, took his seat in the Pensylvania Senate on the 16th inst. The official, at this special election, is as follows: Johnston, Whig, 4,311; Drum, Loco, 4,517: majority for Drum, 206.

THE LITERARY AMERICAN,

VOL. II., COMMENCING JANUARY 6, 1849.

With the most decided success hitherto, and with the most brilliant prospects for the future, the proprietor of the Literary American announces

A SECOND VOLUME.

Emphatically A FAMILY NEWSPAPER, this periodical will be as hitherto devoted to Poetry, Popular Tales, Sketches of Travel, Extracts from New Books, Reviews, Religious and Scientific Matter, articles of Biography and Natural History, a Ladies' Department, a Juvenile Department, the Spirit of the English Magazines, Editorials on the leading Topics of the day, Notices of works of Art, Original Correspondence, and General Intelligence. A great portion of the contents will be original, and all so varied as to suit every taste. It is intended to make it a MODEL FAMILY NEWSPAPER, of the most elevated, instructive, and interesting character.

The Proprietor would particularly call attention to the features which distinguish the Literary American from all other journals, and, he believes, add materially to its value. First, it contains all the Literary Intelligence of the day—all reliable information about authors and their works. Secondly, under the head of the City Chronicle, it records all the events of our city history, gives an abstract of meetings and remarkable occurrences, and all of importance that is current in the daily papers through the week. Thirdly, it contains a list in every number of all the Marriages and Deaths that are published by the city Press, and also obituary notices of the distinguished men of our own and other lands. These three characteristics, it will be perceived, will not only impart a temporary interest to the paper, but will also afford to each subscriber a valuable record for preservation. The large size of the paper, 24 pages in each number, enables us to attend fully to the above, without encroaching on the Literary Departments.

The form is most convenient for binding, and those who preserve the paper in this way, will have, at the end of the year, two fine volumes, of twelve hundred and forty eight pages—a quantity and quality of reading matter that they would find it difficult to obtain in any other way for the same price.

TERMS.—Three dollars a year: two copies for Five Dollars. Clubs of ten, who receive the paper by mail will be served one year for twenty dollars. Advance payment in all cases required. City subscribers who prefer, may pay the carrier each week 6 1-4 cents.

ADVERTISEMENTS inserted conspicuously and reasonably.

The Opinions and Reflections of the Widow Greene.

The Widow Greene had a fit of the South Carolina 'high strikes,' last Monday: and was half inclined to get up a meeting for the dissolution of the Union.

As she sat in her arm chair; by a sea coal fire, her petticoats slightly raised, either to keep them out of the way of the Maltese kitten, or for some other purpose, she threw her spectacles back, rested her head on her hand, and gave away to philosophical reflection. A strong pinch of Mrs. Miller's Scotch snuff faded to withdraw her from her mental destruction.

As she thus 'resigned herself to thought,' our fair and blue-eyed cousin Julia—God bless the dear creature! how we do love her!—who had been reading the morning Gazette, suddenly dropped the paper, and, at the top of her voice exclaimed:

'Goodness gracious! mercy on us! What a monster! Did you ever! Oh, dear me, aunt, did you ever hear of such a wretch, in all your born days?'

'Dear a-me, child! dear a-me child!' returned the widow, as she rubbed her eyes with one hand and seized her snuff box with the other; 'what is the matter! Pray tell me, Julia, what is the matter?'

'Matter, matter! Matter enough, I can tell you aunt! Only listen, and I'll read to you!'

'Do so, my darling child,' rejoined the widow, 'and let's know all about it!'

Whereupon cousin Julia picked up the offending paper, and read as follows:

'We are credibly informed, and we repeat it boldly, that Gen. Zachary Taylor said to Mrs. Richard Lumpkin, widow of the late and lamented Stephen Lumpkin, at a ball given him at Baton Rogue, that it was his opinion that no one ought to be married but once; and that he agreed with Cobbett, that she who married twice, did little better than commit adultery!'

'What an awful wretch!' exclaimed Julia.

'What an abominable wretch!' exclaimed the widow.

'And that isn't all, dear aunt,' continued Julia 'Listen and I'll read to you:

'And we are further informed, that the General also said that no young woman ought to be married before she was five-and-twenty.'

'Good lord of mercies! did you ever? No, I never!' screamed Julia.

'He's an infidel, and worse than a Camelite,' said the widow; 'and if he's the President the next four years, I kinder guess there'll be a falling off in the census for 1850. The man's mad—he's a fool, and I know it.'

'He's more than a fool—he's a cannibal, a barbarian, a Fegee Islander, a great ugly Shaking Quaker,' continued the excited Julia.

In the meantime the widow wiped her specs, took up the paper, looked it carefully over; and whilst a smile played upon her countenance, she handed it to Julia, and said to her: 'There, child, read that are paragraph. There's comfort in it.'

Julia did as she was bid, and read the following:

'The foregoing is a vile slander. We have it from the best authority that Gen. Taylor loves the ladies, all of them, most dearly. He's a friend of early marriages; and, for those ladies who have lost their lords, why, God bless you, if he had his way, he would imitate the example of Robin Roughhead, and marry all the widows and father all the orphans!'

'I stick to the General after all,' said the widow.

'So do I,' said the blushing Julia; and if the old General were here, wouldn't I kiss him—wouldn't I! I'd smother him with kisses!'—N. Y. Atlas.

SHEEP.—These animals though a source of much profit to the farmer when rightly managed, and of approved breeds, ought never to be permitted to run with cows Their early habits of rising, and the inclination they manifest to rove, are adverse to an equitable 'division of herbage,' as the cow being rather fastidious in relation to her diet, will refuse to partake of the grasses over which they have passed. Every sheep grower should therefore provide a seperate enclosure for his sheep—well and securely fenced, and provided with suitable building as a protection against rains, especially during spring and fall.—Ger. Tel.

Feed no grain to your animals without grinding, and no roots without they are cooked.

REMEDY FOR BURNS SCALDS.—From the number of accidents which have lately taken place, and by which several persons have been so dreadfully burned as to cause death, we reccomend the following simple remedy, by which the pain from either a burn or a scald is instantly relieved. Let clarafied honey be applied on a linnen rag, and in one moment the pain will cease. This remedy has been tried several times, and it always relieved the moment the honey was applied.—Newark Times.

Mr. Lerow of Boston has invented a machine which will sew a yard a minute with the 'fast stitch' made in sewing the seams of pantaloons, &c. The workmanship is excellent; and unlike that of other similar machines, the stitch will not pull out. It seems as strong and perfect as the best sewing by hand.

BAUKE, CRISTOPHER, & Co
Dec 1848.—f Proprietor

[illegible] by the name of CLAPP has engaged with a young man of the name of S. P. Townsend, and uses his name to put up a Sarsaparilla, which they call Dr. Townsend's Sarsaparilla, demonstrating it GENUINE, Original, etc. This Townsend is no doctor, and never was; but was formerly a worker on railroads, canals, and the like. Yet he assumes the title of Dr. for the purpose of gaining credit for what he is not. This is to caution the public not to be deceived, and purchase none but the GENUINE ORIGINAL OLD Dr. Jacob Townsend's Sarsaparilla, having on it the Old Dr's. likeness, his family coat of arms, and his signature across the coat of arms.

Principal Office, 102 Nassau st., New York City

OLD DR. JACOB TOWNSEND

THE ORIGINAL DISCOVERER OF THE

Genuine Townsend Sarsaparilla.

Old Dr. Townsend is now about 70 years of age, and has long been known as the AUTHOR and DISCOVERER of the GENUINE ORIGINAL "TOWNSEND SARSAPARILLA". Being poor he was compelled to limit it manufacture, by which means it has been kept out of market, and the sale circumscribed to those only who have proved its worth, and known its value. It had reached the ears of many, nevertheless, as those persons who have been healed of more diseases, and saved from death, proclaimed its excellence and wonderful

HEALING POWER.

Knowing, many years ago that he had, by his skill, science and experience, devised an article which would be of incalculable advantage to mankind when the means would be furnished to bring it into universal notice, when its inestimable virtues would be known and appreciated This time has come, the means are supplied; this GRAND AND UNEQUALLED PREPARATION is manufactured on the largest scale, and is called for throughout the length and breadth of the land, especially as it is found incapable of deterioration or deterioration.

Unlike young S. P. Townsend's, it improves with age, and never changes, but for the better; because it is prepared on scientific principles by a scientific man. The highest knowledge of Chemistry and the latest discoveries of the art have all been brought into requisition in the manufacture of the Old Dr's Sarsaparilla. The Sarsaparilla root is well known to medical men, contains many medicinal properties, and some properties which are inert or useless, and others, which if retained in preparing it for use, produce fermentation and coal, which is injurious to the system. Some of the properties of Sarsaparilla are so volatile, that they are lost, evaporate and are lost in the preparation, if they are not preserved by a scientific process, known only to those experienced in its manufacture. Moreover these volatile principles, which fly off in vapor, or as an exhalation, under heat, are the very essential medical properties of the root, which give it its value.

Any person can boil or stew the root till they get a dark colored liquid, which is more from the coloring matter in the root than from any thing else; they can then strain this liquid, or vapid liquid, sweeten with our molasses, and then call it "SARSAPARILLA EXTRACT or SYRUP." But such is not the article known as the

GENUINE, OLD DR. JACOB TOWNSEND'S SARSAPARILLA.

This is so prepared, that all the inert properties of the Sarsaparilla root are first removed, every thing capable of becoming acid or of fermentation, is extracted and rejected; then every particle of medicinal virtue is secured in a pure and concentrated form, and thus it is rendered incapable of losing any of its valuable and healing properties. Prepared in this way, it is made the most powerful agent in the

Cure of innumerable diseases.

Hence the reason why we hear commendations on every side in its favor by men, women, and children. We find it doing wonders in the cure of

CONSUMPTION, DYSPEPSIA, and LIVER COMPLAINT, and in RHEUMATISM, SCROFULA, PILES, COSTIVENESS, CUTANEOUS ERUPTIONS, PIMPLES, BLOTCHES, and all affections arising from

IMPURITY OF THE BLOOD.

It possesses a marvellous efficacy in all complaints arising from indigestion, from debility of the stomach, from unequal circulation, determination of blood to the head, palpitation of the heart, cold feet and hands, cold chills, and hot flashes over the body. It has not its equal in Colds and Coughs; and promote easy expectoration, and gentle perspiration, relaxing stricture of the lungs, throat, and every other part. But in nothing is its excellence more manifestly seen and acknowledged than in all kinds of

FEMALE COMPLAINTS.

It works wonders in cases of Fluor Albus or Whites, Falling of the Womb, Obstructed, Suppressed, or Painful Menses, Irregularity, or the menstrual periods, and the like; and is efficacious in curing all the forms of Kidney Diseases.

By removing obstructions, and regulating the general system, it gives tone and strength to the whole body, and thus cures all forms of

Nervous diseases and debility,

and thus prevents or relieves a great variety of other maladies, as Spinal irritation, Neuralgia, St. Vitus' Dance, Somnolency, Epileptic Fits, Convulsions, &c.

It circulates the blood, excites the liver to healthy action, tones the stomach, and gives good digestion, relieves the bowels of torpor and constipation, allays inflammation, purifies the skin, equalises the circulation of the blood, producing gentle warmth equally all over the body, and the blessing perspiration; relaxes all stiffnesses and tightness, removes all obstructions, and invigorates the entire nervous system. Is not this then

The medicine you pre-eminently need?

But can any of these things be said of S. P. Townsend's inferior article? This young man's liquid is said to be

COMPARED WITH THE OLD DR'S.

because of one GRAND FACT, that the one is INCAPABLE of DETERIORATION, and while the other DOES; souring, fermenting, and blowing the bottles or staining it into fragments; the sour, acid liquid exploding and damaging other goods! Must no this horrible compound be poisonous to the system?—What! put acid into a system already diseased with acid! What causes Dyspepsia but acid? Do we not all know that when food sours in our stomachs what mischief it produces? flatulence, heartburn, palpitation of the heart, liver complaint, diarrhœa, dysentery, colic and corruption of the blood? What is scrofula but an acid humor in the body? What produces all the humors which bring on Eruptions of the Skin, scald Head, Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, White Swelling, Fever Sores, and all ulcerations internal and external? It is nothing under heaven, but an acid substance, which sours, and thus spoils all the fluids of the body, more or less. What causes Rheumatism but a sour or acid fluid which insinuates itself between the joints and elsewhere irritating and inflaming the delicate tissues upon which it acts? So of nervous diseases, of impurity of the blood, of deranged circulations, and nearly all the ailments which afflict human nature.

NEVER SPOILS,

Now is it not horrible to make and sell, and infinitely worse to use, this

---

SOURING, FERMENTING, ACID "COMPOUND" OF S. P. TOWNSEND,

and yet he would fain have it understood that Old Dr. Jacob Townsend's Genuine Original Sarsaparilla, is an IMITATION of his inferior preparation!!

Heaven forbid that we should deal in an article which would bear the most distant resemblance to S. P. Townsend's article! and which should bring down upon the Old Dr. such a mountain load of complaints and criminations from Agents who have sold, and purchasers who have used S. P. Townsend's FERMENTING COMPOUND.

We wish it understood, because it is the absolute truth, that S. P. Townsend's article and Old Dr. Jacob Townsend's Sarsaparilla are known as far apart, and infinitely dissimilar; that they are unlike in every particular, having not one single thing in common.

As S. P. Townsend is no doctor, and never was, is no chemist, no pharmaceutist—knows no more of medicine or disease than any other common, unscientific, unprofessional man, what guarantee can the public have that they are receiving a genuine scientific medicine, containing all the virtues of the articles used in preparing it, and which are incapable of changes which might render them the AGENTS of Disease instead of health.

But what else should be expected from one who knows nothing comparatively of medicine or disease! It requires a person of some experience to cook and serve up even a common decent meal How much more important is it that the persons who manufacture medicine, designed for

should know well the medical properties of plants, the best manner of securing and concentrating their healing virtues, also an extensive knowledge of the various diseases which affect the human system, and how to adapt remedies to these diseases!

It is to serve a fraud upon the unfortunate to pour balm into wounded humanity, to kindle hope in the despairing bosom, to restore health and bloom, and vigor unto the shattered and broken, and to banish infirmity that OLD DR. JACOB TOWNSEND has SOUGHT and FOUND the opportunity and means to bring his

within the reach, and to the knowledge of all who need it, that they may learn and know, by joyful experience its

Transcendent Power to Heal.

DR. JACOB TOWNSEND, NEW YORK Oct. 5, 1848.

WALKED ACROSS THE ROOM

with the aid of crutches. Since then, I have walked in the street: have gone alone from 36 Spruce street to the Park; thence to Dorlejoy's Hotel and back. I have been to 85 Nassau street two different times, and am now frequently visiting my neighbors. During all this time, I have taken but two bottles of Old Dr. Townsend's Sarsaparilla. Oct. 4, I poured another bottle to day (5th Oct.) I walked twice across the floor without the aid of crutches. I have also nearly recovered from obstruction of water, which gave me great distress. The pain in my back has likewise left me. I and my family have no earthly reason to ascribe my recovery to any other cause but to

OLD DR. JACOB TOWNSEND'S SARSAPARILLA.

ALEX. WELSH 36 Spruce st.

P. S.—Several able physicians despaired of my ever walking or even raising myself from my bed again.

From the Metropolitan Magazine.

The old Love, and the New;

Or, the Sequel to a Bachelor's Vow.

BY MRS. CAROLINE H. BUTLER.

"Sure there's some wonder in this handkerchief!"—Othello.

A snug bachelor's domicil was the neat two story dwelling, No.—, Hudson St., and there, in all the enjoyment (?) of single blessedness, dwelt Jonathan Everleigh, Esq., a hale, hearty bachelor, on the shady side of forty. With him lived his nephew Walter Lincoln, and a faithful old African rejoicing in the name of Tunis, as black and shining as Day & Martin's best, and who, in his own individual capacity, constituted the factotum of the establishment—namely, cook, scullion, chambermaid, and waiter—for Mr. Everleigh never employed any of the 'woman-kind' about his stronghold of Bachelor-dom; even his clothes were regularly forwarded to his washerwoman by the milkman, as he passed her door every Monday morning, and as regularly returned on Saturday, by the same conveyance. Indeed, the 'oldest inhabitant' could not remember of ever seeing a female either ascend the nicely swept steps to the front door, or descend into the basement below. There was to be sure, one old decrepit woman, who for a time spread her unseemly garments upon the flagging in front; but even she, soon deputized a dirty little urchin all 'tattered and torn,' to receive her daily dole from the well-spread table of the bachelor.

Yet, notwithstanding this more than Monkbarns exclusion of the softer sex, Mr. Everleigh was by no means of the genus morose and crabbed—attributes supposed to belong to the bachelor class of bipeds—but on the contrary, was of a cheerful, generous nature, rejoicing in the happiness and prosperity of others, which he was ever ready to promote as far as he was able. He was not however, a wealthy man in the worldly acceptation of the term, but had enough for all his own wants, and to spare, if need required, for the wants of a friend.

To his nephew he was fondly attached, deeming no expense too great for his education. Young Lincoln graduated with honor from Columbia College, and Mr. Everleigh, averse to his studying a profession, had then admitted him as a partner in the house of Everleigh & Co.

'Well, Walter,' he would say, 'when we have made a little more money, we will wind up business and enjoy ourselves—yes, yes, my boy, we will see a little more of the world, and not spend all our days cramped within the walls of this modern Babel! I am rich enough for both of us; and thank God Walter, when we travel forth, we shall neither of us be encumbered with a woman!'

Now, our bachelor reckoned a little too confidently upon this latter point; for during all these conversations with his uncle, Walter had very pleasing visions of a pair of soft blue eyes, which somehow or other, whenever this journey was spoken of, seemed to be fixed upon him with such a sweet confiding look—nay, he almost felt as it were, the pressure of a dear little head upon his shoulder, and saw, or fancied he saw, long ringlets of the most beautiful golden hair floating around him.

But he took very good care not to reveal these visions to his uncle!

After business hours, Mr. Everleigh and Walter regularly walked home together, where the skill of Tunis had meanwhile prepared the only meal in which Mr. Everleigh indulged, save breakfast—for at such a woman's fol-de-rol drink as tea, the bachelor turned up his nose, although he greatly relished the cup of excellent coffee which Tunis was wont to bring him after dinner, when throwing off his boots and assuming his dressing-gown and slippers, he yielded himself to the indulgence of hit of back-gammon, or a game of all-fours with his nephew.

Assuming the privilege of an old servant, Tunis usually stood by upon these occasions, marking the progress of the game with much apparent interest, and displaying his shining rows of ivory to great advantage. Sometimes he would break out with—

'Hi—Massa Everleigh take care—young Massa he get ebery ting!' or, 'Golly Massa Walter, you not get off dis time—hi—dere go de Jack!'

Sometimes Walter would venture to express his surprise, that one so fond of domestic life as his uncle appeared to be, should have omitted that choicest blessing—a wife; but such a remark never failed to draw down, not only a shower of invectives upon the sex, but also to put Mr. Everleigh into such an exceeding bad humor, that Walter was always glad to withdraw from the scene. Fond of reading, the centre-table was always well supplied with the new publications, and files of daily papers—they also dipped a little into politics, always however espousing different sides for the sake of the argument.

Thus it will be seen, that for a season our two friends lived very cozy and comfortable—but it will also be seen that such happy times could not last. Pity they should. For we should like to know, in the name of woman-kind, whom he so much affected to despise—what a bachelor like Mr. Everleigh has to do with comfort!

Walter began gradually to estrange himself from these family tete-a-tetes, and after allowing himself to be handsomely beaten by his uncle at his favorite games, would plead some trifling errand, or engagement, to absent himself, leaving his respected relative to wile off the hours alone. These absences grew more and more frequent, still Mr. Everleigh contented himself with remarking: 'You were out late last night, Walter;' or, 'I waited until ten for you, boy!' to which Walter would answer hurriedly and in much confusion, that he was very sorry, but had a particular engagement, or was unavoidably detained—while Tunis, chuckling and grinning as he descended into the obscure regions of the kitchen, would remark for his own especial edification, 'Hi! young Massa Walter give old Massa de slip one of dese days—see if he don't!'

Noting, at length, the more growing abstraction of his nephew, that he was more given to the perusal of poetry, that he sighed often, and moreover carried about him very suspicious missives, in the shape of delicately-folded notes, Mr. Everleigh grew uneasy, and resolved to question Walter upon the subject, a resolution that was perhaps the more speedily carried into effect, by observing one evening upon the little finger of the delinquent—a small gold ring! This was enough.

'Puppy!' he muttered, 'it is just as I thought—yes, yes, I'll wager he is playing the fool!'

Then working himself up to the degree of wrath required for the purpose, he began:

"Put down your light, sir—you are not going off in this way—put down your light, I say, young man—we must have a little talk together before we separate!"

And blushing like a girl, Walter placed the lamp upon the table. He saw the hour had come, and that the storm he had so long dreaded, was about to burst upon his head:

'Now tell me, sir,' continued Mr. Everleigh, 'where you have been, and where you spend your evening—hey, Walter, tell me that? You shan't run blindfolded into ruin if I can stop you—speak, sir!—I asked you where you had been!'

'I have been visiting at Mrs. Nesmeth's this evening' uncle,' answered Walter dutifully.

'And who the devil is Mrs. Nesmeth?' asked the bachelor seizing the poker, and thrusting it into the grate.

'A—a particular friend of mine, whom I often call upon,' said walter.

'The deuce you do! hey—what—and why have you not told me this before, you scamp—how old is she, I say?' exclaimed Mr. Everleigh.

'I should judge her to be nearly forty, uncle, although it is difficult fo decid upon a lady's age,' answered Walter.

'Difficult to decide upon, a fiddlestick! Forty is she—wh-e-w! she has a daughter then, I suppose, also a particular friend of yours?'

'Yes, sir. A most charming, amiable girl, sir, only about seventeen,' replied Walter.

With a vigorous poke between the bars of the grate Mr. Everleigh now fixed his gaze upon the countenance of his nephew:

'Well.'

'Sir.'

'I say, why don't you speak, you—you young jackanapes?'

'What shall I say?' said Walter smiling.

'Say—why that you are in love with the girl—that you mean to make a fool of yourself—that you mean to marry her!'

'Well, my dear uncle,' replied Walter firmly, 'then I do say, that I love Miss Nesmeth most tenderly—that our faith stands plighted to one another, and that please God I shall mrrry her.'

Please God you shall marry her! repeated Mr. Everleigh, in a tone of cutting contempt—'I say please God, you shall do no such thing! a pretty fool you'd make of yourself, eh! What business had you to fall in love, I should like to know, without my consent—your faith stands plighted does it?—O you puppy!—well, I'll find a way to un-plight it that's all! don't speak—go to bed—married—wh-e-w!' And seizing a lamp, the excited bachelor bounced out of the room.

When he wreached his chamber, Mr. Everleigh for some moments paced the floor with rapid strides, giving full vent to the passion which agitated him—now bestowing all sorts of invective epithets upon his nephew, now upon the arts of woman-kind. At length throwing himself into a chair, he gradually suffered his anger to abate—his features relaxed—a shade of melancholy stole over them, and finally burying his face in his hands, he remained for a long time in deep, and as it would appear, painful thought. Then slowly rising, he opened a small escritoire which stood upon a table, at the head of his bed, and drew forth the miniature of a young girl, upon which he gazed long and sorrowfully. A hot tear rolled down his cheek, and fell upon his hand. This aroused him, and as if in anger for allowing himself to be thus overcome, he thrust the picture back into its case, turned the key of the desk, and hurriedly brushing his hand across his eyes, exclaimed:

'Fool, fool that I am! Well, God grant that poor Walter may not be made the dupe I was!'

Several days passed, and no further allusion was made to the subject so near the hearts of both uncle and nephew. Walter, it is true, would have gladly introduced this most interesting topic, and essayed at various times to do so—but Mr. Everleigh, perfectly comprehending his object, and willing to punish him, invariably walked off, leaving the lover to his own not very pleasant reflections—for the thought of his uncle's displeasure, who had ever been to him as a father, even the love of his charming Emily could not entirely overbalance.

Now, the truth must be owned, that Mr. Everleigh was quite as unhappy at the state of affairs as Walter; and when he noticed the pale cheek, and sunken eye betokening a sleepless nigt, and the dejected, almost penitent air of his nephew, he could hold out no longer—pity took the place of resentment, and much to the astonishment of Walter, he was the first to introduce the forbidden subject; and expressed his readiness to hear what the 'silly boy,' as he termed him, had to say for himself.

Thus encouraged, Walter opened his his heart freely—Mr. Everleigh listening at first quietly and silently—then, as Walter proceeded, he gradually grew more wrathy—fidgetted upon his seat—kicked the fender—muttering like Squire Burchell, 'Fudge!' and 'Pshaw!' and finally, in the very midst of a most glowing description of his fair inamorata, which Walter was pouring forth, he bade the ardent young lover hold his tonge and not be such a fool!

'But uncle,'' persisted Walter, "I am sure if you once saw Emily, you would no longer rail at my love, but acknowledge how very inferior to her real charms are all the descriptions I would fain give you.'

'Psaw—beauty is but skin deep, you silly fellow, and for the rest, she is just like all her sex, false and fickel as the wind!' said Mr. Everleigh. 'She will jilt you depend upon it.'

'I would stake my life upon her truth!' replied Walter, warmly—'if you knew her, you would be ashamed of such injustice to an angel!'

'Wh-e-w! we are in a passion, are we—eh Mr. Fire-brand—now Walter take my advice, and don't get married. What the —— do you want of a wife, I should like to know—have not you got a pleasant home, you dog, and an old uncle that humors you like a pet monkey! and what on earth do you want to bring a woman into the concern for!'

'Uncle,' replied Walter so long as I was in no condition to support a wife, marriage of course would be highly injudicious; but as, thanks to your kindness, my dearest uncle, I am now established in a good business, with all reasonable prospect of success, why should I longer delay my happiness! No, my dear sir, do not ask it—nothing but your consent is now wanting to make me the happiest of men.'

'The silliest of fools you mean!' interrupted Mr. Everleigh, impatiently. 'Now depend upon it, Walter the moment you put yourself in the power of a woman, you are ruined, body and soul—I would not give a straw for you a mere puppet pushed hither and there, at the will of an artful little hussy! Just look at me, Walter—here I stand six feet in my shoes—a happy, hearty bachelor of five-and-forty—look at my head—not a grey hair in it—my teeth—sound as a roach—think you I should be what I am, had I saddled myself with a wife and a brood of squalling fat babies?—no, no!'

Bnt uncle,' said Walter, rather mischievously, 'if report says true, you were once in a fair way for such a misfortune, for I have heard you were at one time engaged to be married.'

'Hey—what? nonsense—nonsense,' answered the bachelor, stooping suddenly to pick up something from the carpet—'to be sure I was a fool once, a deuced fool—but I was never caught again, ha-ha-ha—never again—and Walter, it is precisely because I know the deceitful sex, that I am so urgent to warn you against them.'

'Then you do admit you were once in love?' said walter—'then how can you blame me, for the passion, which a lovely and amiable girl has inspired!'

Mr. Everleigh arose and walked several times hurrtedly around the room, then approaching Walter, he regarded him seriously and said:

'Walter, you shall now hear from my lips that of which no one person has heard me speak. To you I will confess my folly. Yes walter,' he continued, seating himself and nervously playing with his watch-guard—'when I was of your age, I was silly enough to fall in love with as arrant a piece of coquetry and mischief, as ever Nature turned out. She was a school-mate and intimate friend of your poor Mother, Walter, and came home with her to pass the holidays at the Grange. This was our first meeting. She was then only fifteen—as gay and wild as a young deer, and the most beautiful creature I had ever beheld—nay, that I have ever yet seen. It was my fate to be spending the holidays at the Grange also, and a most fortunate circumstance i then felicitated myself that it was—but it proved otherwise, as you will see. Those six happy weeks flew by as moments—the remembrance even now causes my blood to course more rapidly—and then we parted, with mutual regret, and with mutual wishes that we might soon meet again! And I was such an ass, Walter as to think and dream of nothing else but—but—ah! I cannot speak her name boy!' said Mr. Everleigh his voice trembling wite agitation; 'No matter—she was my star—my idol. All I did all I hoped, was in reference to her and I penned more sonnets to her than would fill a folio. At length we met again. She was again at the Grange. My love became idolatry Walter, nor had I any reason to complain of her coldness. She read with me, sang to me, walked with me, and rode with me—indeed, we were scarcely for a moment separated. Thus encouraged I at length declared my passion, and she—false and perfidious as she proved—she, Walter, fell on my bosom and wept her love!' Mr. Everleigh paused, and wrung the hand of Walter: 'Boy, boy, may you never be deceived as I have been My happiness was 'brief as woman's love.' A few weeks after our engagement witnessed the arrival of a gay, dashing lieuteaant—her cousin, she said—and from that moment my bliss declined. Her attention was no longer given to me—her smiles were for another—walking or riding—at home or abroad, the puppy never left her side. If I remonstrated, she lauged in my face, or turned angrily away from me. He called her by the most endearing names, and one day—yes, boy, one day I found her in his arms—her head resting dove-like upon his glittering epaulette—her little soft hand clasped in his. I saw—yes, I who had never dared to press mp lips upon her snowy brow—I saw it and survived! I could have shot the fellow dead upon the spot, but to save my soul from the sin of another's blood, there was providentially no weapon at hand. That evening I sought an interview with the false one. I accused her of her perfidy and bade her explain, if she could her conduct. This she positively refused to do—angry and bitter words ensued between us, until with consummate boldness she bade me mind my own concerns, and not trouble myself any further about her movements! I then asked her if she loved young Marchmont. Never shall I forget the look she cast upon me. 'Love him!' she exclaimed—'love him!—yes with my whole heart do I love him!' 'It is enough I answered—and although my brain was on fire, and every vein swollen with jealous rage, I coldly bowed, and turning on my heel walked leisurely away humming the air of a fashionable song. I then mounted my horse, and rode over to the house of a relative, some six or eight miles distant, where I remained for near a week, racked it seemed to me by all the torments of the damned. When I returned to the Grange she had gone—yes, gone with the lieutenant. I never saw her after! Now Walter I ask you, have I not reason to heap maledictions upon the faithless sex!'

'No, uncle,' answered walter, 'with all due deference to you, and with all the sympathy I feel for you, pardon me for saying, that if what you have just told me, is all you have to allege against them, your argument is a poor one.'

'Hey—what?—why, what the deuce would you have more?' exclaimed Mr. Everleigh.

'I would have calmness and deliberation uncle,' returned Walter. Allow me to say that judging from your own words, I consider yon were too hasty in codemning the young lady. There may have been reasons—strong palliative reasons why——'

PLAINFIELD GAZETTE.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Thursday, March, 1, 1849.

We observe in the N. Y. Tribune Feb. 24th, an acknowledgment of money received by the N. Y. Cheap Postage Association, to the amount of $225, in sums of $10, and upwards, that that was the fifth acknowledgment for the same object. It states that the Association have two agents at Washington, laying before Members of Congress valuable information, and have issued publications both at Washington and N. Y. City, full of facts in relation to the beneficial effects of cheap postage in England.

Now we protest against using any such influence at Washington or on any other legislative body, even for so beneficial a purpose as cheap postage, there has been too much of this thing done heretofore not only at Washington, but at Trenton also. It forms a precedent to justify an interference with legislation in favor of unworthy and unjustifiable partial and exclusive objects. There has been facts enough published all over the country by the public press of all political parties uninfluenced by any interest save that of the people; if any thing should influence Congress to do their duty in this matter this should be sufficient This using money and personal influence by lobby members on Members of Congress and in our Sate Legislatures to corrupt legislation to private and special purposes, should be frowned down by all men who have the purity and stability of our government at heart. Is it just, is it democratic, is it for the benefit of and demanded by the people; these are the only considerations that should have any weight.

The only serious objection that we have yet seen brought forward, was by the Member from Ga. who stated that he condered the circulation of coppers which would necesarily follow this cheap postage bill demoralizing to the people of the South. Now if Members could only overcome this only serious objection, the people might have hopes that the bill would yet pass.

Whig Editors.—What is the matter with the Whig Editors? Seconded perhaps by those who are seeking for the loaves and fishes; for in these parts we believe the people go alcng smoothly with the curreut; but the Editors some how or other appear in disposition somewhat akin to the dog in the manger. There is but few whig papers that we receive but what displays more or less of this disposition; they have been tinkering at Cabinet Making for some time and cannot seem to fix it to suit themselves, and are also continually speculating as to whether Gen. Taylor will proscribe men for opinion sake or not; before the election this of course was not to be thought of, now the whistle blows more shrill music.

Many, aye most of them still continue to harp on the old thread bare subject of the countries ruin, by the subtreasury and the tariff of '46. Now gentlemen try and suit yourselves about these things if you can, aye there's the rub, the dog in the manger would not eat neither let any other, so it appears to be with the Whig Editors.

They have one thing however to comfort themselves with, their old pet is dead and buried, thankful they certainly are notwithstanding it was the idol of their hearts; so also with a prohibatory tariff, this also is one of the things that were, they have themselves repudiated it: thus also will it be with their protective tariff, they are now glad that it was not made one of the questions of the late election, they doubtlessly will like sensible men that we know a majority of them about these diggins to be, think a revenue tariff sufficient to protect, any thing worthy of protection, and best calculated for the interest of the whole country.

The democrats have ruled and ruined the country for twenty years, they say and if the whigs pursue the same policy they have heretofore done when in power, the democrats will be called on to ruin it once more.

Pursue your own policy gentlemen if you know what that is, for our part we shall commend whatever we discover worth commendation, in the administration of Gen. Taylor, and condemn whatever we believe to be anti-democratic or opposed to what we conceive to be the best interests of the whole people.

Whenever you cannot get along gentlemen call once more on that party whose princples have ruined the country so often and so long. This little episode in their history doubtlessly was and is for the peoples good, they were going a little astray; continued prosperity has been the ruin of thousands of individuals, and the democratic party was composed of individuals who by this will learn that they are not infalliable.

But the fundamental principles of that party were and are right, as is evidenced by the peoples always adopting them, but as we observed before this little episode in their history will tend to prune off whatever was anti democratic.

We are in no hurry gentlemen; take things coolly among yourselves, try hard to unite on some bond of union; we cannot constitutionally resume the helm under four years: you have got a brave old soldier for your captain, a fearless and we trust an honest man; you also have men of the highest talent, suitable as far as that goes to govern any country; but principles gentlemen, without the right principles, the principles of the immortal spirits who have heretofore governed our country you cannot succeed. With all sympathy for whatever you may do in accordance with that charter of our rights, the Constitution and its preamble the Declaration of Independence we bid you God speed.

LEGISLATURE.—It will be perceived by a reference to the proceedings of the Legislature of New Jersey that they have passed a bill to authorize the Easton and Somerville R. R. Co. to purchase the Road to Elizabethtown, and changing its name to Central R. R. Co. requiring them to pass the Legislature, State officers &c. free, was passed, 40 to 0.

By what authority do our legislators take unto themselves the use of others property without compensation? Or do they thus boldly publish to the world that this is the price at wich they do that wich should not be done, to the neglect of that for wich they were sent expressly by the people to do. What a nice sense of honor our legislators must have when on the very face of a bill they publish to the world a most outrageous condition by wich that act was allowed to pass; making use of other peoples property without any compensation therefor, thus declaring to this company and to the people of the State of New Jersey unless we are allowed a free passage on this road in addition to our per diem pay, we will not pass the bill.

What is a poor man called who appropriates to himself a loaf of bread the property of another when on the point perhaps of starvation? Why, a thief! But these gentlemen can appropriate as much of other peoples property as they choose, and give it the sanction of law and still continue to be Honorable Gentlemen.

This kind of legislation is most contemptable, we care not who, nor what they are; not having the yeas and nays by name or we would give them for the benefit of their constituents and posterity! O shame where is thy blush; such legislation is a disgrace to the Legislature wich passed it, and to the State at large.

The Plainfield Lyceum

Will meet in J. W. Laing's Hall on Tuesday Evening March 6th. The question for discussion is as follows: "Is Slaveholding inconsistant with Christian duty."

The question was most ably debated last tuesday evening, and the interest manifested in the debate and the importance of the question, decided the members to continue it next Tuesday Evening. We understand Doct. Stillman will give some interesting experiments in Chemistry at the close of the debate. Ladies and Gentlemen are invited to attend.

Altered Notes of the Somerset County Bank.

One dollar notes altered to five, of the Somerset County Bank, are in circulation. The cheat is well done, but may easily be detected, as the genuine fives have red backs, while ones are white.—Somerset Messenger.

BAPTIST LITERARY INSTITUTION.—The constitution of the New Jersey Baptist Literary Institution, at N. Brunswick, has been so altered as to conform it to the joint stock plan. The $25,000 required, is divided into 1000 shares, and when a certain part shall have been subscribed for, the location is by the stockholders to be determined, and the erection of the buildings is to commence.

☞ The Legislature have resolved to adjourn sine die on Friday of this week.

A Summary of the proceedings of Congress.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.

HOUSE.—Mr. Talmage of New-York offered a resolution directing the Secretary of the Navy to report to the next House the amount of money in his hands belonging to deceased seamen and deserters from the United States Navy, which was adopted.

The House then took up the bill relating the mileage of Members, and providing that the distance for which mileage shall be allowed be computed by the shortest continuous mail route; and likewise restricting the amount to be appropriated to the purchase of books for Members.

After some debate, the yeas and nays were called for and taken on the passage of the bill, and it was decided in the affirmative by the following vote: yeas 157, nays 16.

Feb. 21.

HOUSE.—Mr. Ashmun moved an amendment providing that after the 1st July next postage rates should be uniform for all distances at 2 cents per half ounce if prepaid and double that rate if not prepaid, and directing stamps to be prepared by the Postmaster General.

Mr. Cobb of Ga. said he had opposed the reduction which was made in the rates of Postage, four years ago. He now acknowledged he had done wrong, and was in favor of a farther reduction to a uniform rate of five cents, but he nor the Southern members would never consent to the introduction of rates below the smallest denomination of silver coin, for he thought the circulation of copper coin was demoralizing. He should therefore forever oppose that.

Feb. 22.

SENATE.—The General Apropriation bill being before the Senate—

Mr. Webster rose and submitted a few remarks, principally with reference to the Territorial question, He concluded by exhibiting a paper, which he proposed to offer hereafter, as an amendment to the General Appropriation bill, authorizing the President to mantain posession of New-Mexico and Califarnia and, for the purpose of preserving authority and order in those Territories, directing him to employ such force as may be necessary of the Army and Navy. The existing laws to remain in force there, and officers to be appointed to see that they are properly executed—(martial law not to be broclaimed at any time)—and an appropriation to be made for this object.

The Secretary having read the paper, it was ordered to be printed.

Mr. Dayton then rose and offered a paper of a similar purport, which was also read and ordered to be printed.

The Senate, by unanimous consent, took up for consideration the joint resolution in favor of furnishing emigrants to California with arms and ammunition from the Public Stores, on certain terms.

After a few explanatory remarks, the bill was passed.

HOUSE.—The bill to extend the Revenue laws of the United States over the Territories acquired from Mexico was ordered to be engrossed. Mr. Duer of N. Y. moved to lay the bill on the table, which was decided by yeas and nays in the negative. Yeas 38, Nays 145. The bill was then passed and the House adjourned.

Feb. 23.

SENATE.—Mr. Rusk offered a joint resolution for the establishment of a Branch Mint at San Francisco, California. It was referred to the Committee on Finance.

The Senate took up the bill allowing payment for certain horses lost during the late war, the property of the prisoners taken at Encarnation, Mexico, and after due consideration passed the same.

The Senate next resumed the consideration of the bill making appropriations for the civil and diplomatic expense of the Government for the ensuing fiscal year.

Mr. Dayton now rose and submitted as an amendment to Mr Walker's amendment, the proposition of which he gave notice on Wednesday last. It provides for a temporary Government to be extended over New-Mexico and California.

Mr. Webster spoke about fifteen minutes.

Mr. Foote followed in reply to the remarks of the Senator from New-Jersey. His topics of discourse were Slavery cessation, abolitionism, Southern wrongs politics of the day—all of which he treated in his characteristic style.

Without taking any father action upon the bill the Senate adjourned.

HOUSE.—Mr. Vinton of Ohio, moved that the business upon the Speaker's table be proceeded with—which was lost by Yeas 110, Nays 74: a two-thirds vote being requisite. Mr. Vinton next moved that the House go into Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union—which being taken by Yeas and Nays was agreed to—Yeas 118, Nays 63.

Mr. White being called to the Chair the bill for the support of the Post Office Department was taken up.

Mr. Goggin proposed an amendment for the reduction of letter postage to the uniform rate of 3 cents if prepaid or 5 cents if otherwise on all letters weighing not over half an ounce.

The Chair decided that the amendment was not in order.

Mr. Goggin appealed from the decision, when the Chair was sustained by the House.

Mr. Turner of Ill. made a speech, dwelling chiefly ubon the Territorial and Slavery questions.

Mr. Tallmadge of N. Y. called him to order for irrelevancy, observing that they had had enough of the Slavery discussion.

The Chair decided that the gentleman could go on, and Mr. Turner accordingly resumed his remarks and, stated his views upon the subject at full length.

Mr. McDowell was the next speaker, and gave an elaborate argument in favor of the principles of the California bills of Mr. Douglass in the Senate, and of Mr. Preston in the House. He assumed a conservative position, and called upon all sections to remember and obey the counsel of Washington, and come up to the settlement of the Territorial question like brethren and patriots. The House listened attentively to his remarks. When his hour had expired the House, by acclamation, urged him to go on. He bowed thanks and proceeded in eloquent strains to dilate upon the revolutionary compromises of the Constitution, and the necessity of carrying out the country's destiny like brethren of one mighty Republic. His concluding observations brought tears down many a manly cheek.

Mr. Putnam next obtained the floor, and amid much confusion the Committee rose—but finally, to carry a motion for adjournment, went back into Committee, and the discussion was continued by Mr. Putnam and Mr. Horace Mann in able speeches upon the Nothern side of the question.

At 5 o'clock the Committee rose, and the House adjourned.

Feb. 24.

HOUSE.—On motion of Mr. Harmanson of La. the House took up the bill for draining certain swamp lands in the State of Louisiana

Mr. Vinton, Chairman of the Committee of Ways and Means, moved to lay the bill on the table, which was negatived, by yeas and nays, as follows: Yeas 45, Nays 100.

The bill was then ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, when Mr. Vinton again obtained the floor and proceeded to oppose the final passage of the bill, in an earnest and cogent manner.

Mr. Harmanson replied, with much ability, adducing strenuous reasons for the passage of the bill.

The question on its final passage was then put and carried.

Feb. 26.

SENATE.—The Vice-President announced the appointment of Mr. Webster as a member of the Standing Committee on Finance, in place of Mr. Clayton.

The bill providing a temporary Government for the Territories of California and New-Mexico was taken up and, together with the various broceedings which have taken place on the subject, was discussed by Senators Downs, Bell, Berrien, Dayton, and Underwood.

Legislative Summary.

TRENTON Feb. 20.

Senate.—The bill to annex part of the city of New Brunswick to Middlesex county, coming up on its second reading.

Mr. Craig moved its postponement to the next Legislature. The bill, said he, has been twice defeated in the other House and it seems like coercion to bring the matter up here at this time. He was not opposed to the bill, but under proper circumstnces was prepared to vote for it. The interests of the petitioners could not suffer greatly by its postponement, and by the next session a reconciliation between the advocates and opposers of the bill would probably take place.

The motion to postpone was agreed to.

Passed.—Bill to divide the township of Shrewsbury, in Monmoth county.

Assembly.—Mr. Martin presented a note from E. F. Cooley, Chairman of the Managers of the Lunatic Assylum, stated that they had expended for fixtures, furniture, &c, $35 334,30 and have incurred debts to the amount of $22,420 66; and for completing fixtures &c. the further sum of $4,500, and asking that the Joint Committee would visit the assylum.

Passed.—Act to prohibit swine running at large in Medford, 39 to 1; joint resolution making an additional appropriation of $10,000 for support of Puclic Schools, 48 to 2, supplement to act respecting Public Schools, authorizing townships to raise more than double, and not exceeding four times the amount given them by the State, 42 to 9; act to annex Petty's Island to Deleware township, Camden, 36 to 6; supplement to act to preserve deer, &c, to increase penality for killing grouse out of season, 40 to 2; Senate supplement to act directing notice of applications for incorporations, providing that the six weeks notice required shall terminate on the first day of the session, 31 to 20; to extend the lien law to Lower township, Cape May, 41 to 1; to authorize freeholders of Salem to bridge Alloway's Creek, 50 to 1; supplement to act respecting executions, exempting $150 worth of goods, 39 to 8; act to set off Hoboken township from North Bergen, in Hudson county, 51 to 0.

The bill to authorize the Easton and Somerville R. R. Co. to purchase the Road to Elizabetown, and changing its name to Central R. R. Co. requiring them to pass the Legislature, State officers, &c. free was passed, 40 to 0.

The bill to restore the Farmers and Mechanics' Bank of New Brunswick, was passed, 36 to 13, being its final passage in both Houses.—Its character has yet 5 years to run.

Feb. 21.

Assembly.—The Joint Resolutions against the extension of Slavery, were passed, 39 to 15.

The bill to incorporate the Newark and New York Plank Road Co. was passed.

Feb. 23.

Senate.—The bill appropriating $1500 to the commissioners to investigate the affairs of the Joint Companies, and to allow them $5 per day compensation, was passed.

Assembly.—several Plank Road Cos. and to reconstruct the bridge over the Raritan river at New Brunswick, were passed.

Feb. 26.

Senate.—Passed, the supplement to the Hudson Manufacturing Co.; to incorporate the Bridgeton Town Hall Association; to incorporate the Williamstown and Camden Turnpike or Plank Road Co.; to incorporate the Westfield and Camden Turnpike Co.; the further supplement to the charter of Newark; the supplement to the act consisting courts for the trial of small causes; to annex part of the township of Upper Freehold to Plumstead in Monmouth.

Assembly.—Passed, the bills to ascertain the boundaries of certain lands of Stephen Vreeland of Hudson county, 37 to 0; Pavonia Ferry Co. 36 to 0; to authorize inhabitants of Milleville, Cumberland Co. to raise money for Schools, 34 to 0; to incorporate the Bordentown Water Co. 38 to 0; to incorporate the Public Hall Association of Morristown, 36 to 0; supplement to Orphans' Court act and relative to the authority of Surrogates, 37 to 0; Jersey City Gas Light Co. 37 to 0.

Feb. 27.

Assembly—Mr. Martin, from the Lunatic Asylum Committee, reported that they have examined the accounts, and there is due for furniture, work and labor, &c. about the institution, $22,886 19.—They reccommend an appropriation of $24,288 28 to pay debts, and $4,000 to complete grading the grounns, additional furniture, &c. The purchases of the Managers have been made on the most favorable terms for the state, &c.

COLUMBUS, O. Feb. 22.

Hon. Salmon P. Chase was elected by the Ohio Legislature, to-day, to the Senate of the United States for the term of six years from the 4th of March next, in place of Mr. Allen, whose term expires with the present Congress. He was elected at the 4th ballot, and had 4 majority on the joint ballot.

Mr. Chase is a Liberty party man. He is an able debator, and will be felt in the Senate. Mr. C. is a son-in-law of Judge McLean, is a native of Hopkinton, N. H. a graduate from Dartmouth College, and studied law with William Wirt.

P. P. Spaulding and Wm. R. Caldwell, Democrats, were elected Supreme Judges on first ballot, each receiving 54 votes. Phileman Bliss, Free Soil, elected presiding Judge XIVth Judicial Circuit, receiving 66 votes on first ballot.

APPOINTMENTS.—The Senate on Wednesday in executive session, confirmed the following nominations of the Governor:

For Judge of the Court of Errors and Appeals—Garret D. Wall, for Burlington.

Prosecutors of the Pleas.—For Gloucestor County, Soshila S. Thompson, of Swedesboro.

For Essex County—Benjamin Williamson.

For Camden County—Wm. N. Jeffers.

Commissioners of Deeds—For Pensylvania, at Philadelphia—Morris R. Hamilton.

For Ohio, at Cincinnatti—Wm. H. Lytle, vice Ezekiel S. Haines, resigned.

For Virginia, at Richmond—Wm. M. Fulton.

For South Carolina, at Charleston—Henry. H. Baker.

For Michigan, at Pontsac—Josiah. W. Crain.

NEW INVENTION FOR PEGGING BOOTS.—The Lawrence (Mass.) Messenger says, that Mr. J. Robison, of that place, has invented a patent machine for pegging boots and shoes, with which one man can drive one hundred pegs in a minute. At every revolution it cuts pegs from the sheet, makes the holes, and leaves them neatly and firmly set in the leather.

It is said that our Minister at England Mr. Bancroft, on a recent visit to Paris, succeeded in negotiating a postal treaty with the French Government.

Commercial Intelligence.

In nearly every Department of Trade and Commerce increasing activity prevails, and greater buoyancy and hope abound. Cotton is still advancing slowly, but all the more surely. Sales to a large extent have been going steadily forward during the last two weeks. The Grain trade has been more than usually steady the last fortnight, and prices have been well supported.

Cured Provisions, Ashes, Naval Stores and other articles of American production are in fair demand at remunerating prices.

Iron and Tin Plates continue in very active demand and have farther advanced in price. From the manufacturing districts the accounts are decidedly encouraging.

Holders of goods are firm in their operations and are sanguine as to a good Spring trade.

The Stock and Money markets are unusually buoyant. Public Securities and Railway Shares are on the advance. The demand for United States Six per cent still continues at advancing rates.

Money Matters.

The Bank of Englands accounts do not exhibit any particular featuure worthy of notice. Money continues plentiful, and first-class bills have been readily discounted as low as 2 per cent. Money at call may be said to range at about 1 1-2 per cent. The peaceful tone of our Government, the improved condition of the public revenue, and perhaps the increasing prospects of large remittances of gold from California, have tended to this result.

ENGLAND.

Lord John Russell said in debate that "he had been formerly in favor of a fixed duty on corn; but the House not having chosen to adopt that mode, and having chosen to set corn entirely free, I hope that no attempt, above all I hope that no successful attempt, will be made at renewing any duty upon that main article of sustenance." This settles at once all speculation upon the course and conduct likely to be adopted by the present Administration.

The Right Hon. Sir Henry Lytton Bulwer, R. C. B. recently English Ambassador to Spain, has been appointed to succeed Sir R. Packenham, as British Minister in the United States.

A rebellion of a formidable character has broken out in the Punjaub, and the Governor General of India has been compelled, for the preservation of the peace of the country, to assemble a considerable force, which is now engaged in military operations against the insurgents; but the tranquility of British India has not been affected by these unprovoked disturdances.

House of Commons, Feb. 7.

Sir G. Grey moved for leave to bring in a bill to continue the suspension of the Habeas Corpus Act in Ireland for a limited time, reading to the House a letter to the Lord-Lieutenant on the subject.

The House divided. For the motion 221; against it 18. Majority 203.

The Chancellor of the Exchequor moved for a vote for the relief of the distress in certain Unions in Ireland.

He asked for a vote of £250,000 from the Consolidated Fund, not pledging himself that this would be all he should require; but he was unwilling by requiring a large sum at once to excite extravagant expectations and eager demands.

Case of Mr. Duffy.

A new bill against Mr. Duffy was presented by the city grand Jury of Dublin on the 6th inst. His trial will probably take place at once.

BE FIRM.—The wind and the waves may beat against the rock, planted in a troubled sea, but it remains unmoved. Be you like that rock, young man. Vice may entice, and the song and the cup may invite. Beware. Stand firm at your post. Let your principles shine forth unobscured. There is glory in the thought that you have resisted temptation and conquered. Your bright example will be to the world what the lighthouse is to the mariner on the seashore. It will guide hundreds to the point of virtue and safety.

ETIQUETTE.—A lady who was a strict observer of etiquette, being unable to go to church one Sunday, sent her card.

Only, two ladies have left New York since November last for the Gold Mines.

News Items.

John Wales, Esq. of Wilmington, was chosen U. S. Senator from Delaware to fill the vacancy occasioned by the resignation of Hon. John M. Clayton.

The Wisconsin Legislature have passed a law making legal any rate of interest which may be agreed upon between contracting parties, and in case none is fixed, seven per cent. is the legal rate.

The Missouri Legislature have passed resolutions opposed to the free territory principle, and declaring it a violation of the Constitution, and therefore void.

The Senate of Indiana, on the 6th ult., adopted a resolution instructing the Judiciary Committee to inquire into the expediency of so altering the civil and ecclesiastical laws of the State as to render the marriage covenant void at the option of the parties. The mover of this resolution was Mr. Evans, of Henry county.

A bill has been reported to the House of Delegates of Virginia doing away with public executions, and directing them to be inflicted privately, as in some other State of the Union.

A petition from Portland and Stark Cos. for the dissolution of the Union on account of Slavery, caused some excitement in the Ohio Legislature of the 11th inst.

Mr. Grinnell, of Massachusetts, has introduced a bill in the House of Representatives to abolish imprisonment for debt under the law of the United States, in all cases where it is abolished by the state laws.

SNOW IN THE SOUTH.—The Savanah Republican says of the late snow-storm in that region, that it is the first since March 1837—nearly twelve years.

DEATH-BED CONFESSION.—We learn from the Buffalo Express, that Joseph Kelsey, for twenty years a resident of Buffalo, and for most of the time keeper of an inferior tavern near the foot of Main-st on his deathbed, the other day, confessed a murder, for which he had some years previously been tried and acquitted. He also acknowledged having robbed a number of his guests at different times.

POPULATION OF ST. LOUIS.—The Census of this city, just completed, shows the following results; Total number, 63,381; in 1846, 47,984—increase in two years, 15,397. The population of the city alone exceeds that of the city and county as taken by the late State Census.

ANOTHER EXPEDITION.—Gen. Darcy, of Newark, intends to head an overland expedition for California, proposing to start this month We know not that man who possesses the qualities of a good leader, bravery, generosity, and prudence in a greater degree than Gen. Darcy.

The new mill of the Amoskeag Manufacturing Company, which will partially go into operation next month is 350 feet long, and six stories high. The cost of the building alone is said to have been $176,000, and the total cost, when ready for running, is near $4000,000.

WEAR OF RAILS.—The Syracuse and Utica Railroad is fifty-three miles long forming part of the central line from Albany to Buffalo. The track was originally laid with flat bar-iron, two inches and a-half wide by three quarters of an inch thick. This iron, after being in use nine years, was taken up and sold, and was found to have lost in weight, by wear, 800 out 2,000 tons.

A gentleman in New York, who contemplated going to California, died suddenly from the excitement at seperating from his family.

A Turk was publicly beheaded at Constantinople, lately, for the crime of having, while in a state of intoxication, said that 'he did not care a straw for Allah or the prophet.'

A young lady, tried in the State of Alabama for firing a pistol at her false lover, as he was escorting another fair one to church, was acquitted, on the ground that there was no malice, but, on the contrary, an excess of love.

When a poor loafer is cooped up, with an empty rum-bottle by his side, the papers say: 'Another victim of intemperance.' When a respectable citizen eats a dinner that kills him in a few hours, with or without the help of the doctors, the same papers head their obituary notice, 'Mysterious Providence.'

Fifty years ago, Mrs. Washington knit stockings for the General; now there are not fifty ladies in the city who can play that part, and hundreds know not how the apple gets into the heart of the dumpling.

THE LITERARY AMERICAN,

VOL. II., COMMENCING JANUARY 6, 1849.

With the most decided success hitherto, and with the most brilliant prospects for the future, the proprietor of the Literary American announces

A SECOND VOLUME.

Emphatically A FAMILY NEWSPAPER, this periodical will be as hitherto devoted to Poetry, Popular Tales, Sketches of Travel, Extracts from New Books, Reviews, Religious and Scientific Matter, articles of Biography and Natural History, a Ladies' Department, a Juvenile Department, the Spirit of the English Magazines, Editorials on the leading Topics of the day, Notices of works of Art, Original Correspondence, and General Intelligence. A great portion of the contents will be original, and all so varied as to suit every taste. It is intended to make it a MODEL FAMILY NEWSPAPER, of the most elevated, instructive, and interesting character.

The Proprietor would particularly call attention to the features which distinguish the Literary American from all other journals, and, he believes, add materially to its value. First, it contains all the Literary Intelligence of the day—all reliable information about authors and their works. Secondly, under the head of the City Chronicle, it records all the events of our city history, gives an abstract of meetings and remarkable occurrences, and all of importance that is current in the daily papers through the week. Thirdly, it contains a list in every number of all the Marriages and Deaths that are published by the city Press, and also obituary notices of the distinguished men of our own and other lands. These three characteristics, it will be perceived, will not only impart a temporary interest to the paper, but will also afford to each subscriber a valuable record for preservation. The large size of the paper, 24 pages in each number, enables us to attend fully to the above, without encroaching on the Literary Departments.

The form is most convenient for binding, and those who preserve the paper in this way, will have, at the end of the year, two fine volumes, of twelve hundred and forty eight pages—a quantity and quality of reading matter that they would find it difficult to obtain in any other way for the same price.

TERMS.—Three dollars a year: two copies for Five Dollars. Clubs of ten, who receive the paper by mail will be served one year for twenty dollars. Advance payment in all cases required. City subscribers who prefer, may pay the carrier each week 6 1-4 cents.

The Song of the Socialist Sisters.

(As sung at the Ladies' Democratic Clubs in Paris, with great applause.)

Like Muffs the men to work have gone,
And Europe's sad to see,
With kings a-tottering on the throne,
And empires all a-gee.
The world must be 'got up' again,
Its creases smoothed away;
Uprouse ye the, merry women,
It is our mangling day.

Our husbands they may scold or snore,
Or band, or fry, or stew;
While we this man-spoiled world restore
And make as good as new,
Lords of creation—vice men,
At last we have our way;
Uprous ye then, my merry women,
It is our mangling day.

No husbands mission own we now,
To bully or to bore;
'Obedience' of the marriage vow,
Shall form a part no more.
Till now we've ruled by stratagem,
Henceforth we'll rule by sway;
Uprouse ye then, my merry women,
For this is Lady-day.

The Right of Labor we'll proclaim
In favor of the male;
Our new coleur de rose shall flame
The Red Republic pale.
Latch-keys or Clubs, who dares to name,
With life shall forfeit pay;
Uprouse ye then, my merry women,
For this is lady-day?

Punch.

HOURS OF SLEEP.

Nature requires five,
Custom gives seven!
Laziness takes nine,
And Wickedness eleven.

HARD OF HEARING.—'I have a small bill against you,' said a pertinacious looking collector, as he entered the store of one who had acquired the character of a hard customer.

'Yes, sir, a very fine day, indeed,' was the reply.

'I am not speaking of the weather, but your bill,' replied Peter in a louder key.

'It would be better if we had a little rain.'

'Curse the rain,' continued the collector, and raising his voice, he bawled: 'have you any money on your bill?'

'Beg your pardon, sir, I am a little hard of hearing. I have made it a rule not to loan any money to strangers—and I don't really recognize you.'

'I'am collecting for the Philadelphia Daily Extinguisher, sir, and have a bill against you,' persisted the collector, at the top of his voice, producing the bill and thrusting it into the face of the debtor.

'I've determined to endorce for no one, so put your note in your pocket-book--I really cannot endorse it!'

'Confound your endorsements—will you pay it?'

'You'll pay it! No doubt, sir,—but there is always some risk about these matters, you know, so I must decline it, sir.'

FULL MEASURE.—A Quaker alighting from the Bristol coach, on entering the Inn, called for some beer, and observing the pint deficient in quantity thus addressed the landlord:—

'Pray, friend, how many butts of beer dost thou draw in a month?'

'Ten'sir,' replied Boniface.

'And thou wouldst like to draw eleven?' rejoined Ebenezer.

'Certalnly,' excaimed the smiling landlord

'Then I will tell the how, friend,' added the Quaker. 'Fill the measure.'

AN ODD MISTAKE.—An apothecary's boy was lately sent to leave at one house a box of pills, and at another six live fowls. Confused on the way, he left the pills where the fowls should have gone, and the fowls at the pill place. The folks who received the fowls were astonished at reading the accompanying directions; swallow one every two hours.

TO PREVENT A COW FROM KICKING.—An exchange paper states, that a piece of wood in the shape of the hind leg of the cow, and made to fit the gambel or hock joint, may be strapped and buckled on the leg so as wholly to prevent her from kicking.

A Gipsey woman promised to show to two young ladies their husbands' faces in a pail of water. They looked and exclaimed,

'Why, we only see our own faces.'

'Well,' said the Gipsey, 'those faces will be your husbands,' when you are married.'

'What are political platforms,' said an old lady.

'O,' said her worse half, 'they are platform scales where they weigh Presidents.'

A young widow who edits a paper in a neighboring state, says: 'We do not look so well to-day as usual, on account of the non-arrival of the males.'

THE

AMERICAN METROPOLITAN,

Devoted to American Literature and Art.

Edited by WILLIAM LANDON.

And composed of Contributions from the most Eminent Writers of the Country; Together with

SPLENDID ENGRAVINGS,

Executed by the first Artists, from Original Designs made expressly for this Periodical, by celebrated American Painters, generally illustrative of some point in the History of our Country, or peculiar feature in American character.

THE LETTER-PRESS

Will be profusely illustrated by numerous wood Engravings, executed in the best manner by Engravers of note from ORIGINAL DESIGNS. These Wood Cuts will not be caricatures of the Art so often presented, which have served to create a distaste for this artistic style of engraving; but will be executed by eminent engravers who have been employed at liberal prices to ensure the production of the best specimens of their skill.

A new feature in this Magazine will be a Serial Illustration of

THE LIFE OF WASHINGTON;

To be continued through twelve numbers. The pictures to be made expressly for this Magazine, by T. H. MATTESON, whose "Spirit of '76," "First Prayer in Congress," &c. &c. have already stamped him pre-eminent as an Historical Painter.

The text descriptive of these paintings will be from the powerful pen of J. T. HEADLEY, the well known author of "Napoleon and His Marshalls," "Washington and His Generals," &c. &c. making when completed, the ever given to the Public.

The determination to produce a monthly periodical which shall be eminently American and exclusively original in every department, we feel assured will meet the approbation of a liberal Public, and its practical fulfilment secure a patronage indicative of the warm interest which is universally taken in this country for the advance of American Literature and Art.

REBELLIOUS HENS.—A neighbor of our State says that hog's lard is the best thing he can find to mix with the dough he gives to his hens. He says that one cut of this fat as large as a walnut, will set a hen to laying immediately after she had been broken up from setting, and thus his hens lay through the whole winter.—Poughkeepsie American.

CAUTIONARY NOTICE.

[illegible] by the name of CLAPP has engaged with a young man of the name of S. P. Townsend, and uses his name to put up a Sarsaparilla, which they call Dr. Townsend's Sarsaparilla, denominating it GENUINE, Original, etc. This Townsend is no doctor, and never was; but was formerly a worker on railroads, canals, and the like. Yet he assumes the title of Dr., for the purpose of gaining credit for what he is not. This is to caution the public not to be deceived, and purchase none but the GENUINE ORIGINAL OLD Dr. Jacob Townsend's Sarsaparilla, having on it the Old Dr's. likeness, his family coat of arms, and his signature across the coat of arms.

Principal Office, 102 Nassau st., New York City

OLD DR. JACOB TOWNSEND,

THE ORIGINAL DISCOVERER OF THE

Genuine Townsend Sarsaparilla.

Old Dr. Townsend is now about 70 years of age, and has long been known as the AUTHOR and DISCOVERER of the GENUINE ORIGINAL "TOWNSEND SARSAPARILLA." Being poor, he was compelled to limit its manufacture, by which means it has been kept out of market, and the sales circumscribed to those only who had proved its worth, and known its value. It had reached the ears of many, nevertheless, as those persons who had been healed of sore diseases, and saved from death, proclaimed its excellence and wonderful

HEALING POWER.

Knowing, many years ago, that he had, by his skill, science and experience, devised an article which would be of incalculable advantage to mankind when the means would be furnished to bring it into universal notice, when its inestimable virtues would be known and appreciated. This time has come, the means are supplied; this GRAND AND UNEQUALLED PREPARATION is manufactured on the largest scale, and is called for throughout the length and breadth of the land, especially as it is found incapable of degeneration or deterioration.

Unlike young S. P Townsend's, it improves with age, and never changes, but for the better; because it is prepared on scientific principles by a scientific man. The highest knowledge of Chemistry, and the latest discoveries of the art, have all been brought into requisition in the manufacture of the Old Dr's Sarsaparilla. The Sarsaparilla root, it is well known to medical men, contains many medicinal properties, and some properties which are inert or useless, and others, which if retained in preparing it for use, produce fermentation and acid, which is injurious to the system. Some of the properties of Sarsaparilla are so volatile, that they entirely evaporate and are lost in the preparation, if they are not preserved by a scientific process, known only to those experienced in its manufacture. Moreover, these volatile principles, which fly off in vapor, or as an exhalation, under heat, are the very essential medical properties of the root, which give to it all its value.

Any person can boil or stew the root till they get a dark-colored liquid, which is more from the coloring matter in the root than from any thing else; they can then strain this insipid or vapid liquid, sweeten with sour molasses, and then call it "SARSAPARILLA EXTRACT or SYRUP." But such is not the article known as the

GENUINE OLD DR. JACOB TOWNSEND'S SARSAPARILLA.

This is so prepared, that all the inert properties of the Sarsaparilla root are first removed, every thing capable of becoming acid or of fermentation, is extracted and rejected; then every particle of medical virtue is secured in a pure and concentrated form; and thus it is rendered incapable of losing any of its valuable and healing properties. Prepared in this way, it is made the most powerful agent in the

Cure of innumerable diseases.

Hence the reason why we hear commendations on every side in its favor by men, women, and children. We find it doing wonders in the cure of CONSUMPTION, DYSPEPSIA, and LIVER COMPLAINT; and in RHEUMATISM, SCROFULA, PILES, COSTIVENESS, all CUTANEOUS ERUPTIONS, PIMPLES, BLOCTHES, and all affections arising from

IMPURITY OF THE BLOOD.

It possesses a marvellous efficacy in all complaints arising from Indigestion, from Acidity of the Stomach, from unequal circulation, determination of blood to the head, palpitation of the heart, cold feet and hands, cold chills and hot flashes over the body. It has not its equal in Colds and Coughs; and promotes easy expectoration and gentle perspiration, relaxing stricture of the lungs, throat, and every other part.

But in nothing is its excellence more manifestly seen and acknowledged than in all kinds and stages of

FEMALE COMPLAINTS.

It works wonders in cases of Fluor Albus or Whites, Falling of the Womb, Obstructed, Suppressed, or Painful Menses, Irregularity of the menstrual periods, and the like; and is as effectual in curing all the forms of Kidney Diseases.

By removing obstructions, and regulating the general system, it gives tone and strength to the whole body, and thus cures all forms of

Nervous diseases and debility,

and thus prevents or relieves a great variety of other maladies, as Spinal irritation, Neuralgia, St. Vitus' Dance Swooning, Epileptic Fits, Convulsions, &c.

It cleanses the blood, excites the liver to healthy action, tones the stomach, and gives good digestion, relieves the bowels of torpor and constipation, allays inflammation, purifies the skin, equalises the circulation of the blood, producing gentle warmth equally all over the body, and the insensible perspiration; relaxes all strictures and tightness, removes all obstructions, and invigorates the entire nervous system. Is not this then

The medicine you pre-eminently need?

But can any of these things be said of S. P. Townsend's inferior article? This young man's liquid is not to be

COMPARED WITH THE OLD DR'S,

because of one GRAND FACT, that the one is INCAPABLE of DETERIORATION, and

NEVER SPOILS,

while the other DOES; souring, fermenting, and blowing the bottles containing it into fragments; the sour, acid liquid exploding and damaging other goods! Must not this horrible compound be poisonous to the system?—What! put acid into a system already diseased with acid! What causes Dyspepsia but acid? Do we not all know that when food sours in our stomachs, what mischiefs it produces? flatulence, heartburn, palpitation of the heart, liver complaint, diarrhœa, dysentery, colic, and corruption of the blood? What is Scrofula but an acid humor in the body? What produces all the humors which bring on Eruptions of the Skin, Scald Head, Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, White Swellings, Fever Sores, and all ulcerations internal and external? It is nothing under heaven, but an acid substance, which sours, and thus spoils all the fluids of the body, more or less. What causes Rheumatism but a sour or acid fluid which insinuates itself between the joints and elsewhere, irritating and inflaming the delicate tissues upon which it acts? So of nervous diseases, of impurity of the blood, of deranged circulations, and nearly all the ailments which afflict human nature.

Now is it not horrible to make and sell, and infinitely worse to use this

and yet he would fain have it understood that Old Dr. Jacob Townsend's Genuine Original Sarsaparilla, is an IMITATION of his inferior preparation!!

Heaven forbid that we should deal in an article which would bear the most distant resemblance to S. P. Townsend's article! and which should bring down upon the Old Dr. such a mountain load of complaints and criminations from Agents who have sold, and purchasers who have used S. P. Townsend's FERMENTING COMPOUND.

We wish it understood, because it is the absolute truth, that S. P. Townsend's article and Old Dr. Jacob Townsend's Sarsaparilla are heaven-wide apart, and infinitely dissimilar; that they are unlike in every particular, having not one single thing in common.

As S. P. Townsend is no doctor, and never was, is no chemist, no pharmaceutist—knows no more of medicine or disease than any other common, unscientific, unprofessional man, what guarantee can the public have that they are receiving a genuine scientific medicine, containing all the virtues of the articles used in preparing it, and which are in capable of changes which might render them the AGENTS of Disease instead of health.

But what else should be expected from one who knows nothing comparatively of medicine or disease! It requires a person of some experience to cook and serve up even a common decent meal. How much more important is it that the persons who manufacture medicine, designed for

should know well the medical properties of plants, the best manner of securing and concentrating their healing virtues, also an extensive knowledge of the various diseases which affect the human system, and how to adapt remedies to these diseases!

It is to arrest frauds upon the unfortunate, to pour balm into wounded humanity, to kindle hope in the despairing bosom, to restore health and bloom, and vigor into the crushed and broken, and to banish infirmity that OLD DR. JACOB TOWNSEND has SOUGHT and FOUND the opportunity and means to bring his

within the reach, and to the knowledge of all who need it, that they may learn and know, by joyful experience, its

Transcendent Power to Heal.

DR. JACOB TOWNSEND, NEW YORK, Oct. 5, 1848.

WALKED ACROSS THE ROOM

with the aid of crutches. Since then, I have walked in the street: have gone alone from 36 Spruce street to the Park; thence to Lovejoy's Hotel and back. I have been to 85 Nassau street two different times, and am now frequently visiting my neighbors. During all this time, I have taken but two bottles of Old Dr. Townsend's Sarsaparilla, Oct. 4. I procured another bottle to-day (5th Oct.) I walked twice across the floor without the aid of crutches. I have also nearly recovered from obstruction of water, which gave me great distress. The pain in my back has likewise left me. I and my family have no earthly reason to ascribe my recovery to any other cause but to

OLD DR. JACOB TOWNSEND'S SARSAPARILLA.

ALEX. WELSH, 36 Spruce-st.

P. S.—Several able physicians despaired of my ever walking or even raising myself from my bed again.

BURNS & SCALDS.

I CHALLENGE THE WORLD TO Prove; that in any one single instance, DALLEY'S MAGICAL PAIN EXTRACTOR, that is to say the Genuine article, has, since its first introduction by me, in 1839, up to this period, ever failed to cure the worst cases of Burns and Scalds!! Piles, Erysipelas Rheumatism, Sore Eyes, Broken Breast Sore Nipples, &c &c always yield to the wonderful properties of the Genuine Extractor; and in all cases of Burns or scalds, its effects are instantaneous and it draws out the pain in a few minutes.

The old Love, and the New;

Or, the Sequel to a Bachelor's Vow

BY MRS. CAROLINE H. BUTLER.

"Sure there's some wonder in this handkerchief!"—Othello.

Continued.

'Pshaw, Walter! stuff—stuff!' interrupted the bachelor—'reasons—there were no reasons but those to be traced to the fickle nature of women. And of this I will convince you—for my folly, Walter, did not end here. Time cooled my resentment, and caused me to doubt my proceedings, and the more I reasoned upon the subject, the more I blamed my rashness. At last I resolved to write to her—to acknowledge my error—entreat her forgiveness, and once more offer her my love—yes, fool dolt that I was—I penned one of your puling, sighing, lack-a-daisical love-letters, and sent it to her address. Well—the answer came—and it was such as my engregious folly deserved—saucy, spirited, insulting, and unfeeling!' A few days previous I had been offered a situation in a West India house, and I now gladly and without the least hesitation accepted it. I embarked for Porto-Rico—yes, Walter, that bad, heartless girl drove me an exile from my friends and country! I was absent twelve years. When I returned I casually learned she was married—but I never made any further inquiries about her. Your poor mother, too, dear Walter had paid the debt of nature, leaving you a mere child; and soon after my return your father died also. I swore to be father and mother both to the child of my only treasured sister—and, although but a rough nurse, boy, I kept my vow!'

'Dearest uncle,' interrupted Walter, seized Mr. Everleigh's hand and kissing it, while grateful tears filled his eyes—'dearest uncle, I owe you everything—how can I ever repay such kindness and love!'

Eh! very grateful you are, to be sure, you dog—going to bring a woman here to break up our hapiness!' exclaimed Mr. Everleigh.

'Not so, uncle,' said Walter; 'believe me, it will only render it more secure. Ah, when you once know Emily, for her sake you will renounce all your prejudices against women.'

'Nonsense!' returned Mr. Everleigh; 'however, if you will be such a fool as to get married, why I can't help it. I believe I should be doing you a much greater kindness to give you a halter to hang yourself with, than to consent to such folly as you propose. But you will never see your mistake until it is too late; so there's no use wasting any more breath upon you—get married, then, in heaven's name!—poor fellow!'

'Thank you, thank you, my dear uncle!' cried Walter, his countenance evincing all the joy he felt.

'And, Walter,' continued Mr. Everleigh, speaking slowly, and as if half ashamed at the confession he was making in favor of a woman, 'I can't spare you altogether; though I suppose, at the best I shall have but little of your company; therefore bring your wife home. My house shall be yours—there is room enough for all of us, and for your sake, puppy, I will try to like your—wife—pshaw!'

Walter smiled and shook his uncle warmly by the hand; 'And now, uncle, you will give me the happiness of introducing my beloved Emily to my more than father. You will go with me and see her, uncle!'

'Eh! what—I go to see her—no, no, that is asking too much,' replied Mr. Everleigh. 'I will do no such thing! I will neither go to see her, nor will I go to your wedding; so don't ask me. I will never sanction, by my presence, the sacrifice of a fine, handsome young fellow like yourself to a woman—not I! Draw as much money as you please—go and come as you please—get married when you please—and leave me to do as I please!'

Thus saying, Mr. Everleigh was about to leave the room—already his hand was upon the knob of the door, when, suddenly turning, he walked up to Walter, seized his hand, and pressing it fervently, cried:

'God bless you, my dear, dear Walter, and make you a happy man?'

From this night, there seemed to be a tacit understanding between uncle and nephew, that each should do as they please, without question or remark.

Although professing great indifference, it was easy enough to see, that Mr. Everleigh was more interested in Walter's movement than he would care to make known and as the time approached, when the "sacrifice of this fine handsome young fellow to a woman" was to be completed, it seemed to be his chief desire and study to promote the future comfort and happiness of the young couple.

A suit of rooms were newly and handsomely furnished, and the bachelor even endured uncomplainingly the flitting and rustling up stairs and down stairs of women's garments; the scrubbing brushes, and white-wash brushes, and window brushes, wielded by several respected female friends of old Tunis, who, by the way, chuckled greatly over this invasion of the bachelor's territories.

In looking over the morning papers, Mr Everleigh one day noticed a very fine collection of plants were to be disposed of at auction, in the upper part of the city; and thinking a choice little conservatory would be just the thing for Walter's young bride, he jumped into an omnibus for the purpose of attending the sale.

When he first took his seat there were several passengers. These however, gradually dropped off, until, as they reached Fourth street, there remained but one person in the stage besides himself. This was a young man of dashing air, most fashionably attired, with hair enough on his face to have rendered the clippings quite an object to an upholsterer. For a short distancs they rode on alone, and then the driver suddenly reigning up his horses to the curb stone, a young girl sprang lightly within, and took her seat in the fartherest corner of the stage, but on the same side as the exquisite. She was evidently very young, and the slight glance obtained of her countenance, as she brushed past him, convinced Mr. Everleigh that she was also uncommonly charming.

Yet this dangerous fact, did not in the least disturb his bachelor stoicism; and he would probably have left the omnibus without bestowing another thought upon her, had not his attention been suddenly drawn to the movements of the fashionable fop, who changing his seat to the opposite side of the vehickle, seemed intent upon annoying the young girl with his bold, rude glances. By degrees he had edged himself into the corner directly facing her, and in such close proximity, that the blushing girl could not raise her eyes, without encountering his libertine gaze.

No sooner did Mr. Everleigh note the bearing of this polished blackguard toward the young unprotectod girl, than with all that kindess which marked his character, he resolved he would not leave the omnibus without her; or at any rate, that he would retain his place until the presence of other passengers should prove her safeguard from the fellow's boldness. He had previously ordered the driver where he wished to be set down, and accordingly the stage drew up at the given place. He saw the exalting look of the young man, supposing himself about to be rid of his presence, and met at the same time the appealing look of a pair of soft blue eyes which the young girl bent upon him, as half rising, she seemed prepared to follow his movements.

'I shall ride further,' said Mr. Everleigh to the driver; 'drive on, I will tell you when to stop.'

The exquisite muttered a curse, while, as if divining the motives of Mr. Everleigh, the young girl bestowed such a sweet grateful look upon him, as would have taken captive the heart of any younger man—but 'Joey B—— is tough, sir!'

The driver whipped up his horses, in wrath at the bright sun, which drew the feet of his quondam passengers to thread the gaily bedizzened flaggings, and the stage rattled furiously the length of several squares.

'Is this ——— street?' timidly asked the young girl of Mr. Everleigh.

His reply was cut short by her tormentor, with—

'It is, beautiful creature—allow me the happiness of handing you to the sidewaik, and of seeing you safe home.'

'Puppy!' exclaimed Mr. Everleigh, leaning over and shaking his good-sized fist in the face of the officious scoundrel 'Dare to rise from that seat, or intrude your insults further upon this young girl, and I will pitch you under the horses' hoofs—do you hear me?' and with another flourish in the very teeth of the discomfited Lotharia, he pulled the check rein, and taking the hand of the trembling girl, saw her safely upon the flag-stones.

'Thank you, sir, thank you,' said the young girl, with a sweet smile; 'this is my residence, sir. I will not trouble you further.' Then with another smile and bow, she tripped up the steps of a small two-story house and rang the bell.

Our gallant bachelor waited hat in hand, until he saw his fair charge safely within doors, and then turned to hail some down-town carriage, for his benevolence had led him many squares from his original destination. Now, dear reader do not think that Mr. Everleigh had put himself to all this trouble, merely because the object of his kindness was young and pretty. He would have done the same for any unprotected female in like circumstances, no matter her age or condition, whether she wore a robe of velvet or the homely garb of a washerwoman.

Turning, therefore, as I have said, to persue his original purpose, the boot of Mr. Everleigh came suddenly in contact with a delicate cambric handkerchief. Lifting it from the pavement a small steel purse dropped from it, which he remembered to have seen in the hand of his fair charge, and immediately ascending the steps, in order to restore the prize to its rightful owner, he rang the bell.

While awaiting the answer to his summons, he mechanically turned over the handkerchief. It was of the finest linen cambric, apparently quite old, it was much worn, and in several places bore the marks of skilful darning. It was certainly a pardonable curiosity in our bachelor to cast his eye upon the left hand corner of this delicate mouchoir. There was a name, although nearly effaced.—Why mounts the blood so swiftly to his countenance—and why does an almost ghastly pallor as suddenly succeeded? Why do his hands tremble, and his limbs almost refuse their office? It is because, in those pale, time-worn characters he traces the name of Myra Grey—of Myra Grey, his false, perfidious mistress!

O, the thoughts which swept through his brain, like a rapid, rolling river! the years that were lived over in that one brief moment! That name—how came it there! to whom belonged that fatal handkerchief, which thus, like Othello's had 'magic in the web of it!'

'Did you ring the bell, sir?' asked a little servant-maid, who had stood for some moments holding open the door, yet until she spoke wholly unnoticed by Mr. Everleigh in the deep absorption of his feelings.

Recovering himself by a violent effort he bade the girl ask her young mistress to come to the door, and the next moment, from a back room, with a light step and a smile of pleasure, the young lady came tripping through the hall. Mr. Everleigh bowed; he could not trust himself to speak, and tendered the purse and handkerchief.

'Oh! thank you, thank you!' she exclaimed. 'I had just missed them, and was fearful I had dropped them in the omnibus and of course had little expectation of seeing them again. Indeed, I am very much obliged to you,' she continued artlessly, 'for I would not have lost the handkerchief for the world; it is mama's, and one which she highly values as the gift of a friend, since dead.'

Still Mr. Everleigh spake not a word, and the young girl, now for the first time noticing his agitation and the pallor of his countenance, said;

'You are not well, sir; do walk in, pray do!'

And hardly knowing what he was doing Mr Everleigh followed her through the hall and into a small parlor, where, at a little side table, sat a lady engaged in writing. She might have passed her fortieth year, but she was still eminently handsome, and as she rose to meet the salute of the stranger, her form and bearing were alike graceful aud dignified.

'Mama,' exclaimed the young girl, 'this is the gentlemen who was so kind to me in the omnibus, and here too is the purse and handkerchief which I so carelessly dropped.'

'My daughter is under great obligations to you, sir,' said the lady bowing, yet evidently a little surprised at the intrusion.

Mr. Everleigh advanced—those still beautiful eyes were upon him; he saw before him the only woman he had ever loved; he extended his hand.

'Myra—Myra, don't you know me?'

That voice! It was now the lady's turn to be agitated. She started and a marble hue overspread her features.

Ah, heavens!' she said, 'can it be Everleigh!' And then, forgetting all, save their early love and their long estrangement, Mr. Everleigh caught her to his bosom, and imprinted a long and fervent kiss upon her pallid cheek.

'It is long, very long, since we met!' said Mr. Everleigh, at length, striving to regain some composure.

'It is indeed, many, many long years,' she replied.

'Yes, more than twenty, Myra,' continued Mr. Everleigh in a saddened tone; and this is your daughter?' he said, turning to the fair girl, who had been a surprised spectator of the scene.

'My only child and comfort!' answered Mrs. Nesmith, extending her arms to her daughter. 'Emily, my love, this gentleman is one of my earliest friends and the brother of that boloved Emily Everleigh whose name you bear.

'Is it possible!' exclaimed Mr. Everleigh, a glow of pleasure mantling his countenance, 'then let that dear name secure my pardon,' kissing as he spoke the blushing cheek of Emily.

'And your husband?' he said, turning once more to Mrs. Nesmith.

'I am a widow,' she replied; 'my husband died in the second year of our marriage.'

This announcement caused a very queer feeling about the heart of our bachelor—such in fact as had stirred his bosom in summer twilight's 'lang syne,' when strolling through the haunts of childhood with the lovely Myra Grey! The silence which ensued was somewhat embarrassing, and then the conversation touched upon topics less dangerous, and in which the fair Emily joined. Indeed they were all very rational, and so rapidly passed the moments, that more than an hour had stolen its flight, ere Mr. Eveleigh thought of the necessity of saying adieu.

Somehow his resentment against the sex, and against the widow, in particular had vanished. The jilt trick she had played no longer affected him. He even forgot there ever existed a dashing lieutenant, with the 'front of Jove himself,' and 'an eye like Mars.' True she was an unprotected widow, while from her conversation, and from what he saw, he could plainly discover not in very good circumstances. When we consider this fact, we must of course agree that it would not have been manly to have indulged in any other than the most kindly feelings, toward one thus unfortunately situated. In short, when at length Mr Everleigh rose to depart, he carried the hand of the widow to his lips, promising he would soon call upon her again.

It would be difficult to define the feelings of our doughty bachelor, as he bent his steps homeward. Such was his abstraction, that although late, he forgot to hail a return omnibus; he forgot the business upon which he had that morning left his dwelling; he forgot all about poor Walter's young bride, although he passed directly in front of the store where those same beautiful plants, whose possession he had so lately coveted for her sake, yet embalmed the air with their fragrance; he forgot everything—even to cry, 'Psha! silly boy!' as Walter exhibited a beautiful little work- box which he had just purchased for his betrothed.

Never had Walter known his uncle so complaisant upon the theme of woman; and at length he ventured once more to request the presence of his uncle at the wedding.

'Pooh, pooh, nonsense, boy, nonsense,' was Mr. Everleigh's reply; 'and yet, if your fair one did but resemble the charming girl I saw this morning, then, indeed, I might perhaps consent to see you put on the fetters of matrimony.'

'Ah, who was this young lady, uncle?' asked Walter.

'She was the daughter of—psha—none of your business. Don't be asking about other pretty girls—a pretty husband you'll make, to be sure!' said Mr. Everleigh.—'Fill your glass, boy! here's to the health of my Emily!'

The next evening saw Mr. Everleigh again in the little sitting-room of Mrs. Nesmeth He found the widow alone, Emily having accompanied a friend to the Art-Union Exhibition. A more confidential and interesting tete-a-tete now ensued, in the course of which Mrs. Nesmeth informed him that her daughter was on the eve of marriage with a fine young merchant, with whom she hoped Mr. Everliegh would soon become acquainted.

'She is very young, to be sure—scarcely eighteen,' added Mrs. Nesmith, 'but it will be a great relief to know that should any accident befal me, I shall not leave my dear child unprotected.'

This was a moving theme, undoubtedly and imperceptably the conversation reverted back to olden times, and to the brief season of their love and happiness. Past injuries, or supposed injuries were all explained, and the 'wrong made right'—all that had appeared to the young lover, so heartless and inexcusable in the conduct of Myra Grey, made clear; how, I cannot say; but as it was perfectly satisfactory to the person most interested, it is useless for us to trouble ourselves about it.

It was indeed a lamentable fact, which struck heavily upon the heart of Mr. Everleigh, that through his own rashness he had cheated himself out of a charming wife for a period, perhaps, of twenty years! Just think of it! No wonder he desired to repair the evil; and therefore he once more offered his hand and heart to the acceptance of the widow.

At this critical and interesting moment, they were interrupted by the entrance of Emily and her lover.

'Uncle!'

'Why—what—eh! Walter—Walter!'

'What does this mean, my dear uncle?' exclaimed the surprised Walter.

'Your uncle! O, Walter, is this gentleman that dear kind uncle of whom you have so often spoken?' said Emily.

'And is this the sweet girl that is to be your wife!' asked Mr. Everleigh. 'Then God bless you both, my dear children!' he cried. folding their hands within his own. Then leading Walter to Mrs. Nesmeth, he said:

'Myra, look at this boy; he is the child of our dear lost Emily. And now, Walter he continued, turning to his agitated nephew, 'in the mother of your bride, behold that Myra Grey, the first and only love my heart has ever known.'

A happier circle than was gathered in that small parlor the limits of the city did not enclose. Seeing with half an eye how matters were likely to end, Walter fully revenged himself upon his uncle, and sure of toleration, detailed, with gaeat glee, the estimate of 'womankind,' which his uncle had endeavored to instil into his mind from childhood.

'Yes, yes, boy,' said Mr. Everleigh, laughing, 'take your revenge; I deserve it. Here I stand the inveterate enemy of woman, about to assume the ties of wedded life!'

'Uncle, uncle,' exclaimed Walter gravely, 'you had much better procure yourself a halter! I would not give a straw for you after you are married—a mere puppet to be pushed hither and there by'—a little white hand smothered the rest of the rentence, while a hearty laugh burst from the discomfited bachelor in which the trio merrily joined.

Having thus brought our bachelor to that state of subjection to woman-kind, in which (with all due deference to the fraternity) they must sooner or later arrive, I will now briefly state that more extensive altertions and improvements rapidly took place in the bachelor's domicile.—Other apartments than those intended for Walter Lincoln's young bride were prepared; and while the neighbor's were yet puzzling themselves to discover the meaning of such strange proceedings, an evening paper announced:

'Married, this morning, at Grace Church, by the Rev. ———, Jonathan Everleigh, Esq. of this city, to Mrs. Myra Nesmith; at the same time and place, Walter Lincoln, nephew of Jonathan Everleigh, Esq. to Miss Emily Nesmeth.'

New Melting Process.—A gentleman in the upper part of New York says the Com. Advertiser, seeing the notice that salt thrown upon the ice on the sidewalks would rapidly melt it, resolved to rid himself of the annoyance in front of his own dwelling. On reaching home in the evening, after dark, he entered his store room, took a peck measure, and filled it with what he supposed to be finish granular fragments of genuine salt, and without saying anything to the dwellers in the house; slipped out through the area and scattered it finely on the walk, over an event of some two hundred feet He retired to rest in excellent humor with himself, calculating upon the agreeable surprise awaiting the family and domestics when they discovered that the ice was entirely gone from the walk and steps. Judge then of his surprise on being told by one of his domestics, almost as soon as he got down stairs in the morning that some mischievous persons had been sprinkling rice all over the door steps and the side walk,' conplied with the domestic's sagacious remark that she only wished the policeman had caught the rascal.' The gentleman made no reply, but he came down to business rather earlier than usual that morning, and his family remarked that he must have something on his mind, he was so unusually silent at the breakfast table.'

'You are from the country, are you not, sir?' said a dandy clerk in a book store, to a homely-dressed Quaker, who had given him some trouble.

'Yes.'

'Well, here's an Essay on the Rearing of Calves.'

'That,' said Aminidab, as he turned to leave the store, 'thee had better present to thy mother.'

All men are endowed with inalienable rights—except poor men. All men who do not pay their honest debts, are great scamps—except those who cheat on a large scale. All men are born free and equal—except negroes. All men are sinners—except those who belong to the Church All men are allowed to think and act freely—except those who work for a living. All well dressed and accomplished women are ladies—except factory-girls.

A tailor, who, in skating, fell through the ice, declared that he would never again leave his hot goose for a cold duck.

A friend accosted an honest Quaker, and inquired if he had got the fever. 'Nay, friend,' reblied the Quaker, 'and I fear that those who have now got the fever will have the chills ere they get back.

An Irish knight was once disputing with a French courtier as to the age and standing of their families, when the latter, as a finisher to the argument, said that his ancestors were in the ark with Noah. 'That is nothing,' says the Hibernian, with a rich brogue, 'for at the deluge, my forefathers were crusing about in a boat of their own!'

The Hazel Eye.—Poets often praise, the black and the blue eye of woman—seldom the hazel. Major Noah says: 'A woman with a hazel eye never sacrifices, never elopes from her husband, never chats scandal, never sacrifices her husband's comfort to her own, never finds fault, never talks too much or too little, always is an entertaing, intellectual, agreeable and lovely creature.'

PLAINFIELD GAZETTE.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Thursday, March, 8, 1849.

The Plainfield Lyceum met Tuesday evening March 6th; and proceeded to discuss the adjourned question "Is Slaveholding inconsistent with Christian duty."

The question was most ably and eloquently argued by Messrs. Marsh, Webster, Crandall, Haff, Mauriac, Coriell, Dunn, Mallison, and others; and decided in the affirmative.

They said in substance that it certainly appeared to them inconsistant with the duty of a Christian to break assunder the ties of nature, to tear the child from its parents, the wife from her husband, and to hold them in bondage, under the lash of the over-seer, which over-seer was generally some person who had forfeited the title of man through some crime, and had fled his own country; these were the only persons who could be found wearing the human form, so lost to the principles of freedom and humanity as to become a slave driver: If this the legitimate result of slavery was consistent with the duty of a Christian who professes to act in accordance with those teachings of the Saviour do unto others as you would have them do unto you; If a person compel you to go with him a mile go with him two; If he would have thy coat give him thy cloak also; and of whose practice as well as teachings were any thing else but holding men in bondage.

It was also shown in the case of a vessel being wrecked, that the white master although having children and friends on board would not risk his life in the small boat through the surf to save his own flesh and blood, yet endeavored to force his slaves to go by the lash, by promises of reward, but nothing would tempt the poor slave to risk his life through such a dreadful sea; finally after exhausting all threats and persuasives the offer of freedom was made to any who would make the attempt, instantly the boats was filled and swamped and the slaves lost their lives in an attempt to gain their freedom, and a second attempt was attended with a like result, and a third also; will any one say after such examples as these by the untaught slave, and therefore unable to fully appreciate the full blessing of freedom that slavery is consistent with christian duty.

The Declaration of Independance declares that all men are born free and equal and have certain inalienable rights, among which are Life, LIBERTY, and the pursuit of happiness, and that all men having a spark of the democratic principles contained in that instrument would say that slavery is inconsistent with the spirit of that document even though it should be consistent with christian duty.

The gentlemen on the negative, said all that could be said on so one sided a question, they mainly relying on some passages of the Old Testament, wherein it speaks of purchasing slaves of the nations round about them &c. and also of some passages in the New Testament wherein servants are taught to be obedient to their masters &c. They stated that they were as much opposed to slavery as any man on the affirmative could be, and this from the teachings of their own nature; but yet thought that the holding of slaves was not inconsistent with the duty of a Christian.

We have not time or room to pursue the subject farther, suffice it to say that the good seed of the tree of liberty has been sown and is bringing forth fruit sufficient in this place to finally exterminate slavery from the face of the earth, even if it should so turn out that the seed sown in other places does not bring forth fruit.

The Legislature of New Jersey has adjourned, having been in session 53 days and passed 143 bills, one half of which we venture to say had better not have been passed, being of a special and exclusive character, injuriously affecting the interest of the people at large.

Those things that were necessary to be done are in consequence left undone.—Among which is the interest of the New Jersey Pilots, a very useful and merritorious class of men, and who are identified with the interest of the whole people of New Jersey.—Yes while they were passing laws exempting dogs from tax, permitting ladies to be charitable, incorporating public hall associations and preventing swine running at large in some towns, and a proviso to a railroad bill giving themselves a free passage &c. the rights and interests of the people were passed by. While New York is passing laws injuriously affecting the interests of this State, they were passing these special and injurious acts. Instead of calling on Congress through our delegation there to take some action on this matter (though we believe they were also asleep over our rights,) they were riding to and fro on the railroads (the companies of which seem to know how to manage these gentlemen) on business or pleasure of their own.

Thus it will ever be unless the people send men there who have independence enough to attend to what they were sent there for, the rights and interests of the people.

The inaugural address of President Taylor we have carefully read, and as far as that goes is all that any man can ask for. It is short, sensible and to the point, and if carried out in good faith there is no doubt but that General Taylor will make a very popular President. He pays a high though unconcious compliment to the democratic party.

Not having been elected by the Whigs as there never yet was or ever will be enough of them (we mean those professing whig principles) to elect a President. It is to be hoped that Gen Taylor will follow out the sketch which he has given us for the benefit of the whole country, and the people will as assuredly re-elect him.

For the Plainfield Gazette.

Among the nice distinctions made by our State laws are those which provide that none but freeholders shall be elected to office, or capable of performing jury duty.

Now what particular qualification the ownership of a quarter acre lot—"be the same more or less"—may confer upon a person who is elected to the responsible office of pound-keeper, or constable, I never could imagine; but, of course—as our laws are enacted by wise men, and as law is called "the perfection of human wisdom"—there must be some advantage in it which I have not been able to ascertain.

And how six or twelve men of like qualifications—i. e. owners of quarter acres—can determine the ownership of six old chairs (or any other equally important matter) more correctly than six or twelve men who do not own quarter acres, passes my comprehension.

Why should the law make any distinction between our citizens? Or, if there must be a distinction, why not make the ownership of a horse a necessary qualification in the election of a constable?—Why should not a juryman [illegible] feet in height? Why not enact [illegible] no man shall be voted for as a justice of the peace unless he is the owner of a gown and wig?

To be serious: the distinction the laws make between citizens is anti-democratic and grossly unjust, and must be abolished. Every man, whether a freeholder or not, is compelled to pay taxes for the support of our state government; and therefore should be entitled to all the benefits and priviliges of the most favored. If the freeholder has priviliges more than others, or if he is called on to bear more than his share of the burdens, let him be willing to share with his landless neighbor.

The doctrine that an American citizen must own real estate to qualify him to enjoy the privilege and share in the burdens of his country, is unworthy the age in which we live; and must be tolerated no longer. The liberal of all parties unite in desiring to blot this unequal and unjust law from our statute book. The friends of equal rights—those who desire no advantage from oppressive and unjust laws—should insist strenously on breaking down all artificial distinctions created by special laws which tend to benefit the few at the expense of the many. The man who desires nothing but the peaceable enjoyment of the fruits of his labor, and the welfare of his conntry, should look with alarm upon the encroachments of wealth and power. Such a man is false to his country and his God if he does not strive to repeal every obnoxious law from the statute book of his country. A. C.

REVERDY JOHNSTON of Maryland

A Summary of the proceedings of Congress.

Washington, March 3. 1849.

Senate.—Mr. Douglass presented the credentials of his colleague James Shields, elected Senator of the State of Illinois, for the term of 16 years from the 4th of March next.

Mr Walker arose and remarked, that in justice to Gen. Shields, to the Senate, and the community at large, he would move to refer the credentials to the Judiciary Committee, to inquire into Gen. Shields's eligibility.

Mr. Mangum said that the motion was premature, as the present Congress could not bind the next.

Mr. Walker, perceiving the force of the remark, withdrew his motion.

Gold Coin.—The bill providing for gold coins of one dollar and double eagles, was taken up and passed.

The bill for the relief of a poor soldier, named Lawrence Squires, who lost both his legs in the late war with Mexico, was passed.

The Home Department bill passed—31 to 25.

The bill for the Mexican Treaty stipulations became a law.

At five minutes past 12 a Message was received from the President, which was considered in Executive Session, and at half-past 12 the doors were again opened.

Gen. Cass took his seat at 12 o'clock at night.

President Polk was in the Capital all night engaged in signing bills.

House.—The resolution from the Senate in favor of furnishing the Members with 240 copies of certain American Archieves for distribution among the various literary institutions of the country, was taken up, read a third time, and passed.

Legislative Summary.

Trenton, Feb. 28. 1849.

Joint Meeting—Essex county. Commissioners: S. H. Marsh, Rahway; Z. Webster, Plainfield; W. H. Cleaver, Westfield; John Littel, New Providence.

Middlesex.—Judge: D. F. Randolph.

Somerset.—Commissioner: Daniel Cory, Warren.

March 2.

Senate. The general Manufacturing law was passed.

Assembly.—Postponed till the next Session.—To equalize taxes, and relative to surveys of railroads.

The resolutions to present swords to Gen. Scott and Com. Stockton were reported back, with the latter name stricken out, and finally it was postponed till the next Legislature.

Mr. Van Wagoner presented an abstract of the receipts and expenses of the State (showing that the expenses were $172,-203 74, and the receipts $106,760 27 excess of expenses $65,443 47) and introduced a resolution authorizing the Treasurer to borrow $25,000, which was passed, 37 to 0.

Mr. Day, from the Conference Committee, on the disagreement of the two Houses relative to suppressing Sunday travelling, reported that they could not agree.

Mr. D. made a few remaks, expressing his unwillingness to adjourn without doing something to prevent Rail Road cars from running through the State filled with passengers on the Sabbath.

Mr. Van Wagoner from the Ways and Means committee, introduced a bill to assess the township taxes in the same manner, as by the law of 1837, and some discussion he moved to strike out the enacting clause, which was agreed to.

The General Manufacturing bill was taken up, amended, and ordered to a 3d reading.

Passed.—The bill to extend the powers of the Hudson Manufacturing Co., to the Manufacture of Gutta Percha; to appoint Trustees of the Camden insurance Co.

A resolution was received from the Senate to appoint a Joint Committ to wait upon the Governor and inform him that both Houses are ready for the final adjourment, unless he has further business to communicate. Adopted, and Messrs Day and Mayberry were appointed.

Passed.—The bill to defray Incidental Expenses: supplement to the act incorporating inhabitants of townships &c.: to encourage the establishment of Manufacturing Companies, and for other purposes.

Fat pickings have been obtained from the remains of the old United States Bank. Since 1841, when the assets were assigned, $253,788 67 has been paid out in salaries to trustees, clerks, counsel, etc. At this rate the funds will not last many years longer.

The Two Presidents, with the two Vice Presidents, Cabinet ministers, Senators, &c., &c, assembled around the festive board, at the White House, on Friday. It was President Polk's farewell dinner. Much cordiality and good feeling prevailed. President Polk and family left the mansion on Saturday, and President Taylor and family were to move in during the afternoon.

How to Remove Ink Spots from Linen.—Take a piece of tallow, melt it and dip the spotted part of the linen therein. It may then be washed, and the spots will disappear, without inluning the linen.

The Last Day and Night of Congress.

Our Report of the doings of the XXXth Congress during 24 hours of its existence, though lengthy, is in some respects rather blind, but we are obliged to give the account as the Telegraph brings it to us. The main features of the proceedings are, in the Senate, the bill passed for the Coinage of Gold Dollars and Double Eagles; the defeat of the House amendment to confine the appointment of Surveyors of the Line between the United Staes and Mexico to the Topographical Corps; the passage of a bill introduced by Mr. Breese providing for the translation and publication of the Spanish and Mexican Laws of California in effect at the time of the Treaty; passing the House bill providing for taking next Census; the passage of the Home Department bill, after a very animated opposition, by 31 to 25; the recession from its Cherokee amendment to the Civil bill; the killing of the Branch Mint in New-York by the operation of the rules on Mr. Sturgeon's objection; the passage of the General Appropriation bill, after a long contest with the House to fix and finally taking back Mr. Walker's amendment; and last and most shameful of all the scandalous ezhibition of a personal rencontre between Mr. Cameron of Penn. and Foote of Miss.—a family quarrel, indeed, but one which must inflict deep humiliation npon the whole people. We had hoped that such ruffian exhibitions might be confined to the other wing of the Capitol at least, where they were not long since an almost weekly occurrence.

In the House, the New-York Mint bill was passed, to no purpose, however; the Naval Appropriation bill went through slightly amended; the amendment to fix the 10th of March for the day of effect of the Minesota bill was receded from, and the appointment of all officers under the bill placed at Mr. Polk's discretion by a vote of 105 to 70; the District Slave Trade was shoved by with scarce a recognition; the Walker amendment to the General Appropriation bill was disagreed to, 110 to 104; concurring with Senate to establish a Board for Mexican claims; Extra Compensation to Clerks, &c. went through with a rush; a hundred conflicting motions were made, a fight al-la-foote was got up between Messrs. Root, Giddings, Meade and others, and finally, at 6 3-4 Sunday morning, the XXXth Congress came to a stormy end.—N. Y. Tribune.

Inaugural Ceremonies.

Washington, March, 5th—P. M.

The doors of the Senate Chamber were opened at 10 o'clock this morning, and the ladies' gallery was immediately filled with the fair sex. The Reporters gallery was also crowded to suffocation; there was great strugling and pressing, and thousands were forced to leave without obtaining an entrance. The Senate assembled at 11, and a resolution adopted that Senator Atchinson take the chair. The new members were then all sworn in with the exception of Gen. Shields. A resolution was adopted to refer General Shields' credentials to the Committee on the Judiciary. The Hon. Millard Fillmore and George M. Dallas then came in, arm in arm. Mr. Atchinson swore in Mr. Fillmore, who took the chair and delivered an eloquent address. All the Justices of the Supreme Court and about 40 members of the Diplomatic corps, including the attaches, then came in, the first occupying fifteen seats in the area, at the left of the Vice President, and the latter at the right. Messrs. Buchanan, Johnson, and Toucey, of the old Cabinet, came in and took seats in front of the Diplomatic corps. A lady fainted in the gallery, but in the confusion which prevailed, could not be got out; she, however, soon recovered. It was nearly 12 o'clock, and the President and ex-President had not made their appearance. Considerable impatience was manifested until about half past 12 when the President and ex-President came in, and occupied seats with George M Dallas and R. M. Johnson President Taylor entered into a brief conversation with Chief Justice Sauney and Judge McLean. The President then proceeded to the eastern portico where he delivered the address. The crowd in the Square was immense, and probably numbered 10,000. Great cheering and discharge of cannon, before and after the delivery of the address. It was agreed that a daily hour meeting be held every day at 12 o'clock, until otherwise ordered. Gen. Shield's eligibility will be the first business before them after the Cabinet nominations. It is yet doubtful as to the formation of the Cabinet. On motion of Mr. Dayton the Senate then adjourned.

Mr. Meredith received the Pennsylvania Delegation this morning. It is not yet known who will be appointed to the secretaryship of the Home Department.—Mr. Meredith is talked of for that office, and Mr. Davis, of Massahusetts, for the Treasury, as the latter is ineligible for the Home Department.

The grand Whig Inauguration Ball is a most splendid affair, and therefore an immense crowd is present. The theatre is well filled also. General Zachary Taylor attended both and was brilliantly received.—N. Y. Journal of Commerce.

THE INAUGURAL ADDRESS.

Elected by the American people to the highest office known to our laws, I appear here to take the oath prescribed by the Constitution; and in compliance with a time-honored custom, to address those who are now assembled.

The confidence and respect shown by my countrymen in calling me to be the chief magistrate of a Republic holding a high rank among the nations of the earth, having inspired me with the most profound gratitude; but, when I reflect that the acceptance of the office which their partiality has bestowed imposes the discharge of the most arduous duties, and involves the weightiest obligations, I am conscious that the position which I have been called to fill, though sufficient to satisfy the loftiest ambition, is surrounded by fearful responsibilities. Happily, however, in the performance of my new duties, I shall not be without able co-operation. The legislative and judicial branches of the government present prominent examples of distinguished civil attainments, and matured experience; and it shall be my endeavor to call to my assistance in the Executive Departments individuals whose talents, integrity, and purity of character will furnish ample guarantees for the faithful and honorable performance of the trusts to be committed to their charge.

With such aids and an honest purpose to do whatever is right, I hope to execute diligently, impartially, and for the best interests of the country, the manifold duties devolved upon me. In the discharge of these duties, my guide will be the constitution which I this day swear to "preserve, protect, and defend."

For the interpretation of that instrument I shall look to the decisions of the judicial tribunals established by its authority, and to the practice of the government under the earlier Presidents, who had so large a share in its formation.

To the example of those illustrious patriots I shall always defer, with reverence; and especially to his example who was, by so many titles, "the father of his country."

To command the army and navy of the United States; with the advice and consent of the Senate, to make treaties and to appoint ambassadors and other officers; to give to Congress information of the state of the Union, and recommend such measures as he shall judge to be necessary; and to take care that the laws shall be faithfully executed,—these are the most important functions entrusted to the President by the Constitution, and it may be expected that I shall, briefly, indicate the principles which will control me in their execution.

Chosen by the body of the people under the assurance that my administration would be devoted to the welfare of the whole country, and not to the support of any particular section or merely local interests, I this day renew the declarations I have heretofore made, and proclaim my fixed determination to maintain, to the extent of my ability, the Government in its original purity, and to adopt as the basis of my public policy those great republican doctrines which constitute the strength of our national existence.

In reference to the Army and Navy lately employed with so much distinction on active service care shall be taken to insure the highest condition of efficiency; and, in furtherance of that object, the Military and naval Schools, sustained by the liberality of Congress, shall receive the special attention of the Executive.

As American freemen, we cannot but sympathise in all efforts to extend the blessings of civil and political liberty; but, at the same time, we are warned by the admonitions of history, and the voice of our own beloved Washington, to abstain from entangling alliances with foreign nations.

In all dispute between conflicting Governments, it is our interest not less than our duty, to remain strictly neutral; while our geographical position, the genius of our institutions and our people, the advancing spirit of civilization, and, above all, the dictates of religion, direct us to the cultivation of peaceful and friendly relations with all other Powers.

It is to be hoped that no international question can now arise which a government, confident in its own strength and resolved to protect its own just rights, may not settle by wise negotiation; and it eminently becomes a Government like our own, founded on the morality and intelligence of its citizens, and upheld by their affections, to exhaust every resort of honerable diplomacy before appealing to arms.

In the conduct of our foreign relations I shall conform to these views, as I believe them essential to the best interest and the true honor of the country. The appointing power vested in the President imposes delicate and onerous duties. So far as it is possible to be informed, I shall make Honesty, Capacity and Fidelity indispensable prerequisites to the bestowal of office, and the absence of either of these qualities shall be deemed sufficient cause for removeal. It shall be my study to recommend such constitutional measures to Congress, as may be necessary and proper to secure encouragement and protection to the great interests of agriculture, commerce, and manufactures; improve our rivers and harbors; to provide for the speedy extinguishment of the puelic bebt; to enforce a strict accountability on the part of all officers of the Government, and the utmost economy in all public expenditures.

But it is for the wisdom of Congress itself in which all legislative powers are vested by the Constitution, to regulate these and other matters of domestic policy. I shall look with confidence to the enlightened patriotism of that body to adopt such measures of conciliation as may harmonize conflicting interests, and tend to perpetuate that Union which should be the paramount object of our hopes and affections. In any action calculated to promote an object so near the heart of every one who truly loves his country, I will zealously unite with the co-ordinate branches of the Government.

In conclusion, I congratulate you, my fellow citizens, upon the high state of prosperity to which the goodness of Divine Providence has conducted our common country.

Let us invoke a continuance of the same protecting care, which has led us from small beginnings to the eminence we this day occupy, and let us seek to deserve that continuance by prudence and moderation in our counsels; by well directed attempts to assuage the bitterness which too often marks unavoidable differences of opinion; by the promulgation and practice of just and liberal principles and by an enlarged patriotism which shall acknowledge no limits but those of our own wide spread republic.

On the conclusion of this address, which was received with prolonged cheering by the assembled multitude, the following oath was administered to President Taylor by Chief Justice Taney of the supreme court:

OATH OF OFFICE

"I do most solemnly swear that I will faithfully execute the office of President of the United States, and will, to the best of my ability, preserve, protect, and defend, the constitution of the United States.'

The President returned into the Capitol amidst prolonged and vociferous cheering.

From Chagres, California, &c.

The Steamship Crescent City, Captain Stoddard, arrived at New York on Saturlast.

The steamship California sailed for San Francisco on the 31st of January, with 350 passengers on board. We give here a list of the vessels which have left Panama, or were about leaving, with the number of passengers laken:

California, Jan. 1.	350
Philadelphia Feb. 9.	209
John Ritson, Feb. 13.	120
Total.	670

Another vessel was about to sail in a day or two, which would increase the number of emigrants to about 800. Panama is still overflowing, however, with contiuual arrivals from Chagres and will be crowded for some time to come.

Latest from the Mines.

Apout 800 souls, it is calculated, will Winter at the 'dry diggins' alone. On Juba and Feather Rivers, preparations are being made to pass the Winter by a great number. Houses are constructed and supplies stored, but a scarcity of provisions for the coming seasons prevails in every camp. At Juba a settlement has been formed near the upper 'diggins' —150 houses have been erected, constructed chiefly of logs, and hopes entertained of passing a comfortable Winter. Upon the Middle Fork, at the newly-discovered 'diggins', the worthy citizens of Drydiggins-ville are employed almost to a man, it is said, in mining, and with very fair success. The diggers are mostly of the Oregon emigration. From $5 to five ounces per day is the state yield. The gold is large and extremely beautiful, quite free from sand and pebbles. The usual process of taking it is by throwing up dykes and turning the water from its channel, or draining portions of the river's bed In the eddies of the main stream it can be seen in great abundance, and at a depth of 25 and 30 feet in many places. At this aggregating distance it is quite harmless. Kanakas have dived with a desperation becoming pearl fishers, but 'no go'—the gold yet remains unfingered. Washing for gold has been generally given up for the season. The water is cold, and Jack Frost regular in his morning visits. As we have before stated, very little gold will be gathered after the commencement of the rains.

Scarcity of Dwellings.

Houses and shanties are so scarce that an occupant of a ten by twelve, who has the shanty on a lease of $10 per month was offered $30 per month to move out, by a recent arrival. In consequence of the large number of passengers arriving from abroad by every vessel, we fear that a vast deal of suffering will be experienced by hundreds without shelter, when the rains commence, which must be close at hand. Lumber is scarce, and at the enormous prices of $125 per 1,000 feet, while quantities are lying ready for shipment at all the Embacaderas on this Bay, at Bodega and Santa Cruz. to say nothing of the abundant supplies we might obtain from Columbia River and Sitka if we had the vessles. Our citizens hope to obtain some relief from Com. Jones, by his throwing open the coasting trade of Oregon and California temporarily, to foreign flags, and thereby enabling them to obtain articles of first-rate necessity —lumber and provisions—at moderate cost.

LIVERPOOL, Eep. 10, 1849.

On Wednesday, the 31st ult., a grand banquet was held in Manchester to celebrate the final extinction of the Corn Laws, which terminated on that day. It was held in the Free Trade Hall, which was splendidly and tastefully decorated, and the entertainment was attended by nearly 3000 guests. The chair was occupied by Mr. George Wilson.

From Ireland the news is not of the slightest interests. The trial of Mr. Duffy is undecided. Parliament has voted £50, 000 for the poor of Ireland.

Cincinnati, March 2 1849.—CHOLERA IN INDIVNA.—A report is prevalent, that several cases of cholera have occurred at Madison, Indiana.

COST OL RAILROADS.—It is estimated that the entire expenditure in the construction of railroad in the United States, during the last 25 years, will exceed one thousand million of dollars.

The Fort Smith (Ark.) Herald tells of a German boy, 17 years old, who arrived there on the 17th ult. from New-York, en route for California. He walked from New-York to New-Orleans, and thence to Fort Smith, hoping there to find employment to work his passage in the company about to start from that place for the 'diggins.' The Herald adds that the young man traveled the whole distance without a single dime in his pocket, working his way as best he could. That boy will succeed in the world; you cant stop such folks.

BOOKS FOR THE AMERICAN PEOPLE.

TO BOOK AGENTS AND CANVASSERS.

THE FOLLOWING

VALUABLE NATIONAL WORKS

Are decidedly the best Books that Agents can possibly employ their time in supplying to the people of the United States.

THEY ARE INDISPENSABLE AS BOOKS OF REFERENCE TO OUR

Senators, Representatives in Congress, and State Legislatures,

and should be possessed by all the Young Men of this Great Republic, especially those who are aspiring to distinction and fame in our Halls of Legislation. There is not a city or town in these United States, even those of small importance, but contains many citizens to whom these works are indispensable. They are sacred Archives of our common Country. The Chronicles of American Independence!

Postmasters, Colporteurs, and Book Agents, are invited to secure such districts of country as they are most familiar with and desire to occupy. All applications are requested to be made without delay.

OUR PLAN.

☞ The plan the publisher has so successfully carried on for several years, is the obtaining Responsible Men as Agents, who are well known in their own Counties, Towns, and Villages, and have time and disposition to circulate good and instructive Books among their Neighbors and Friends. By taking a glance at the following list of Books it will easily be discovered that they are adapted to the Christain, the Patriot, the Statesman, and the Domestic Circle. Any person wishing to embark in the enterprise, will risk nothing by sending to the Publisher $20, for which he will receive sample copies of the principal works, affording a very liberal per centage to the Agent for this trouble.

1776!

A Faithful chronicle of the war of American Independence.

1776, OR THE WAR OF INDEPENDENCE.

A History of the Anglo-Americans, from the period of the Union of the Colonies aginst the French, to the Inauguration of WASHINGTON, the first President of the United States. Beautifully illustrated by numerous Engravings, showing the plans of Battles, Prominent events, and Portraits of Distinguished Men of the period. By BENSON J. LOSSING. In handsome emblematical binding. Price $2.50.

☞ To every true-hearted American, this is a most welcome and invaluable work: it is the voice of our Fathers calling upon us to guard most sacredly the precious boon of Freedom; to purchase and secure which, they offered upon their Country's altar, their lives, their fortunes, and their sacred honor.

Opinions of the Press.

(From the American Signal.)

"We have been deeply interested in reading a new and splendid patriotic volume, entitled '1776,' published by E. Walker, of New-York. The embellishments, which are very numerous, are of the most perfect description, and carry the mind of the reader back to the period when the Continental Armies were marshalled to defend our native land We advise all the readers of the Signal to add this book to their libraries, and teach the rising generation to value the priceless lessons it contains so abundantly."

(From the New-York Express.)

"The book is elegantly printed and bound, and the engravings (seventy-eight in number) form in themselves a rare historical gallery of great interest and variety, displaying the originality and taste of the author-artist in this department. As a whole, we have no hesitation in commending this volume as the best popular history of our Revolution yet published."

(From the Evening Mirror.)

"This is the title of a very elegant looking book of some 500 pages published by Edward Walker, 144 Fulton-street. The work is beautifully illustrated with a great number of engravings, and the typography and binding are absolutely faultless. It contains a great amount and variety of information relating to the Revolutionary period of American history, and is a work which will, doubtless, command a very extensive sale."

"With regard to the tone and spirit of the volume, the felicity of the style of narrative and reflections, and the great care taken to insure accuracy, as is shown by the author's frequent reference to the best authorities, I am confident that he is entitled to the reputation of a competent and faithful historian.

EDWIN WILLIAMS."

(From the Albany Spectator.)

"This is a great national work, the beauties and excellencies of which should be studied by every one who would understand the history of human freedom, and the inalienable rights of man."

(From the Knickerbocker Magazine, August, 1847.)

"The enterprising and patriotic-spirited publisher of this exceedingly beautiful volume will find thathe has not misjudged in believing that 'a book in one volume, well written and embracing a faithful chronicle of events which accomplished the laying of the foundation stone of this great republic, would be invaluable to the present and future generations.'"

THE PRESIDENTS OF THE UNITED STATES, THEIR MEMOIRS AND ADMINISTRATIONS.

To which is added, an account of the Inaugurations of each President and a history of the principal political events of his administration, and of the transactions of Congress at each session during the period.

Declaration of Indendence.

Articles of Confederation.

Constitution of the United States, with Notes and References.

A brief history of the events and circumstances which led to the Union of the States, and formation of the Constitution.

A synopsis of the Constitution of the several States.

Tables of Members of the Cabinets of the various administrations, Ministers to Foreign Countries, and other principal public officers.

Chronological Table of Political Events in the United States.

Statistical Tables of Revenue, Commerce and Population.

A Complete List of Members of Congress from 1789 to 1846.

With Portraits of the Presidents, engraved on steel in the best style of the art, from the most approved likenesses. By V. BALSH, Esq. of Johnstown, N. Y. In one large handsomo volume, 8vo. in emblematic binding. Price $2.50.

☞ No expense has been spared in the preparation of these volumes of Documents, History, and Statistics, to render the same worthy of patronage, not only of Statesmen and Legislators, but of the American public generally; who will find them the Treasury of political knowledge and a mass of information indispensable to every intelligent citizen.

STATESMAN'S MANUAL,

COMPRISING THE

LIVES, ADDRESSES, AND MESSAGES OF THE PRESIDENTS OF THE UNITED STATES.

From Washington, to Taylor's Inaugural Message, March, 1849. With a History of their Administrations, and of each Session of Congress.

Also, various Historical, Statistical, and other importantant public Documents, and a complete Index, or Analytical Table of Contents to the whole work. Edited by EDWIN WILLIAMS, Esq.

Illustrated with Portraits of our 12 presdents, engraved on Steel, from the most approved authorities, and in the best style of the art. Printed on the best paper, and handsomely bound in emblamatic style. It will also be embellished with Views of the Capitol, president's House and the Seals of the several States, and the United States. In four large volumes. Price $10.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS, &C.

From the President of the United States

"To Mr. E. WALKER. Dear Sir.—I have found your Statesman's Manual a valuable work, and exceedingly useful and convenient. Yours, J. K. POLK.

(From the Hon. Henry Clay.)

"My Dear Sir: Your Statesman's Manual is a very valuable work for reference."

STATE OF NEW-YORK,
Department of Common Schools,
ALBANY, Sept. 18, 1848.

I have examined the Statesman's Manual, in two volumes octavo, compiled by Edwin Williams, and am of the opinion that it is a proper work for school district libraries, and deserving of a place in these institutions, designed for the diffusion of useful knowledge. Signed, J. S. RANDALL, Dep. State Sup't Com. Schools.

(From the Journal of Commerce.)

"This is one of the most important books published in the United States for a long time."

(From the N. Y. Courier and Enquirer.)

"This is the most important contribution to American political history ever published."

(From the Democratic Review.)

"The whole forms a most complete library in itself, of all that concerns the politics of the country. No individual should be without these volumes at hand for prompt reference. How many hours of idle discussions and senseless debates might be spared to heated partizans, were these books at hand for appeal. We shall have frequent occasion to refer to them."

(From the N.Y. Express, Aug. 21, 1846.)

"This is emphatically a national work, and as such eminently deserving of a national support."

(From the Commercial Advertiser.)

"Such a work is invaluable, and is offered at a comparatively low price, in expectation of a large sale."

(From the Luzerne Democrat.)

"The Statesman's Manual is a valuable work, comprising a complete condensed political history of our country from the formation of our government until the present time"

(From the Washingtonian, Ohio.)

"It is but scanty praise to say, that no work of equal value to the American Statesman, politician, journalist, historian, &c. has ever before appeared."

(From the Harrisburg, (Pa.) Argus.)

"No politician, no man who desires to understand the history of the several administration of the general government, should be without a copy of it. As a book of reference it is invaluable."

REV. DR. DOWLING'S GREAT WORK ON ROMANISM.—A NEW AND ENLARGED EDITION, WITH THE AUTHOR'S LAST ADDITIONS. A BOOK FOR EVERY PROTESTANT!

THE HISTORY OF ROMANISM,

FROM ITS EARLIEST ORIGIN TO THE PRESENT TIME. BY REV. JOHN DOWLING, D.D.

Embellished with upwards of fifty highly finished engravings, chiefly from original designs.

Just published, with the Author's final corrections, a new and enlarged edition of this splendid and popular work, with a copious Supplement, comprising a History of the Life and Reign of the present remarkable Pope, PIUS IX, and a Biographical Sketch of the last Pope, GREGORY XVI.

The best encomium upon this learned, complete and popular History of Romanism, is the fact that SIXTEEN THOUSAND COPIES have been sold in about three years, and still there is a constant demand for it in all parts of the country. In order to meet this demand, and to gratify the public curiosity in relation to the present pope, Pius IX, the present enlarged edition is presented to the public. With the Supplement, the work now forms a splendid octavo volume, for the parlor or for the library, of 732 pages.

Testimonials to former editions, selected from more than a hundred, from all Protestant denominations.

EPISCOPAL.

From the Protestant Churchman.

"This is a beautiful volume of 672 pages. Good service has been done for the cause of truth by its publication, and it certainly ought to secure for its author an enviable reputation among contributors to the standard literature of the day."

From the Episcopal Recorder.

"It traces its subjects from the earliest corruptions of Christianity to the present time. It has a full Chronological Table, with Analytical and Alphabetical Indexes and Glossary. It is a large and beautiful volume, full of valuable information."

METHODIST.

From Zion's Herald.

It is written in a popular style. Its engravings are numerous and finely executed. The book will doubtless be popular and cannot fail to produce a profound conviction of the terrible iniquity of Anti-Christ.

Rev. Geo. Coles, of the Christian Advocate and Journal, says: "I cannot but express my gratitude to Almighty God that such a concise and complete developement of 'the Mystery of Iniquity' is now presented to the public in a form so elegant and attractive."

CONGREGATIONAL.

Rev. Dr. Cheever, in the New-York Evangelist, says: "We ought to have noticed this excellent and beautiful work before. It possesses many and very strong claims for popular favor, and we do not doubt that it is destined to have an extraordinary sale. The work itself is characterized by great research, and a comprehensive and scriptural view of the nature and history of the Popish system."

PRESBYTERIAN.

From the (Philadelphia) Presbyterian.

"Such a work required deep and protracted research, and it affords evidence that diligence, caution and judgment, in the selection and arrangement of materials, have not been wanting. The author has availed himself of the writings of both protestants and papists, and has brought together a greater mass of information on the history, the spirit, and the doings of Popery than we have ever before seen in one volume."

MISCELLANEOUS.

From the Christian Intelligencer, (Dutch Reformed.)

"Those who would see a correct and condensed exhibition of the ten thousand abominations of the Papacy, may find it to their amazement in 'Dowling's History of Romanism.' Its contents form a rich storehouse of historical instruction, which, if could be placed within the reach of every family, would prove an unspeakable blessing to our beloved country. This is the book for Americans. Place it beside your Bibles. Compare its records of crime and the Papal principles it exposes, with the holy doctrines and immaculate life of Jesus of Nazareth. When you have done this, you will have no difficulty in determining whether or not Romanism is christianity."

Rev. Alexander Campbell, president of Bethany college, of the church of the Reformers, says: "In this work are an immense assemblage of facts and documents connected with the development and history of this great mammoth institution of error and iniquity. Popery is developed in this treatise from its birth to the present hour. We desire for this book a very large circulation. It is only necessary to enlighten this community of the true spirit and character of the Papal system, to secure them against its insidious attacks upon everything we as a people hold dear and sacred. Let every one buy this work, communicate freely to all around him the develpement which it reveals, and the facts which it records."

President Cramp, editor of the Montreal Register, and author of the Text Book of Popery, says: "This important work possesses merits of a high order. We are pleased to see that Dr. Dowling furnishes ample references to his authorities. The matter is well arranged; the facts unquestionable; the style lucid; and the spirit Catholic, in the proper sense of the term. Its extensive circulation will be highly advantageous to protestanism."

Notwithstanding the extensive supplement now added to this valuable work, the price will remain the same as the former editions, Three Dollars per copy.

CAUTION EXTRA

A man by the name of CLAPP has engaged with a young man of the name of S. P. Townsend, and uses his name to put up a Sarsaparilla, which they call Dr. Townsend's Sarsaparilla, denominating it GENUINE, Original, etc. This Townsend is no doctor, and never was; but was formerly a worker on railroads, canals, and the like. Yet he assumes the title of Dr., for the purpose of gaining credit for what he is not. This is to caution the public not to be deceived, and purchase none but the GENUINE ORIGINAL OLD Dr. Jacob Townsend's Sarsaparilla, having on it the Old Dr's. likeness, his family coat of arms, and his signature across the coat of arms.

Principal Office, 102 Nassau-st., New York City

OLD DR. JACOB TOWNSEND,

THE ORIGINAL DISCOVERER OF THE

Genuine Townsend Sarsaparilla.

Old Dr. Townsend is now about 70 years of age, and has long been known as the AUTHOR and DISCOVERER of the GENUINE ORIGINAL "TOWNSEND SARSAPARILLA." Being poor, he was compelled to limit its manufacture, by which means it has been kept out of market, and the sales circumscribed to those only who had proved its worth, and known its value. It had reached the ears of many, nevertheless, as those persons who had been healed of sore diseases, and saved from death, proclaimed its excellence and wonderful

HEALING POWER.

Knowing, many years ago, that he had, by his skill, science and experience, devised an article which would be of incalculable advantage to mankind when the means would be furnished to bring it into universal notice, when its inestimable virtues would be known and appreciated. This time has come, the means are supplied; this GRAND AND UNEQUALLED PREPARATION is manufactured on the largest scale, and is called for throughout the length and breadth of the land, especially as it is found incapable of degeneration or deterioration.

Unlike young S. P. Townsend's, it improves with age, and never changes, but for the better; because it is prepared on scientific principles by a scientific man. The highest knowledge of Chemistry, and the latest discoveries of the art, have all been brought into requisition in the manufacture of the Old Dr's Sarsaparilla. The Sarsaparilla root, it is well known to medical men, contains many medicinal properties, and some properties which are inert or useless, and others, which if retained in preparing it for use, produce fermentation and acid, which is injurious to the system. Some of the properties of Sarsaparilla are so volatile, that they entirely evaporate and are lost in the preparation, if they are not preserved by a scientific process, known only to those experienced in its manufacture. Moreover, these volatile principles, which fly off in vapor, or as an exhalation, under heat, are the very essential medical properties of the root, which give to it all its value.

Any person can boil or stew the root till they get a dark-colored liquid, which is more from the coloring matter in the root than from any thing else; they can then strain this insipid or vapid liquid, sweeten with sour molasses, and then call it "SARSAPARILLA EXTRACT or SYRUP." But such is not the article known as the

GENUINE OLD DR. JACOB TOWNSEND'S SARSAPARILLA.

This is so prepared, that all the inert properties of the Sarsaparilla root are first removed, every thing capable of becoming acid or of fermentation, is extracted and rejected; then every particle of medical virtue is secured in a pure and concentrated form; and thus it is rendered incapable of losing any of its valuable and healing properties. Prepared in this way, it is made the most powerful agent in the

Cure of innumerable diseases.

Hence the reason why we hear commendations on every side in its favor by men, women, and children. We find it doing wonders in the cure of CONSUMPTION, DYSPEPSIA, and LIVER COMPLAINT, and in RHEUMATISM, SCROFULA, PILES, COSTIVENESS, all CUTANEOUS ERUPTIONS, PIMPLES, BLOCTHES, and all affections arising from

IMPURITY OF THE BLOOD.

It possesses a marvellous efficacy in all complaints arising from Indigestion, from Acidity of the Stomach, from unequal circulation, determination of blood to the head, palpitation of the heart, cold feet and hands, cold chills and hot flashes over the body. It has not its equal in Colds and Coughs; and promotes easy expectoration and gentle perspiration, relaxing stricture of the lungs, throat, and every other part.

But in nothing is its excellence more manifestly seen and acknowledged than in all kinds and stages of

FEMALE COMPLAINTS.

It works wonders in cases of Fluor Albus or Whites, Falling of the Womb, Obstructed, Suppressed, or Painful Menses, Irregularity of the menstrual periods, and the like; and is as effectual in coring all the forms of Kidney Diseases.

By removing obstructions, and regulating the general system it gives tone and strength to the whole body, and thus cures all forms of

Nervous diseases and debility,

and thus prevents or relieves a great variety of other maladies, as Spinal irritation, Neuralgia, St. Vitus' Dance Swooning, Epileptic Fits, Convulsions, &c.

It cleanses the blood, excites the liver to healthy action, tones the stomach, and gives good digestion, relieves the bowels of torpor and constipation, allays inflammation, purifies the skin, equalises the circulation of the blood, producing gentle warmth equally all over the body, and the insensible perspiration; relaxes all strictures and tightness, removes all obstructions, and invigorates the entire nervous system. Is not this then

The medicine you pre-eminently need?

But can any of these things be said of S. P. Townsend's inferior article? This young man's liquid is not to be

COMPARED WITH THE OLD DR'S,

because of one GRAND FACT, that the one is INCAPABLE of DETERIORATION, and

NEVER SPOILS,

while the other DOES; souring, fermenting, and blowing the bottles containing it into fragments; the sour, acid liquid exploding and damaging other goods? Must not this horrible compound be poisonous to the system?—What! put acid into a system already diseased with acid! What causes Dyspepsia but acid? Do we not all know that when food sours in our stomachs, what mischiefs it produces? flatulence, heartburn, palpitation of the heart, liver complaint, diarrhœa, dysentery, colic, and corruption of the blood? What is Scrofula but an acid humor in the body? What produces all the humors which bring on Eruptions of the Skin, Scald Head, Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, White Swellings, Fever Sores, and all ulcerations internal and external? It is nothing under heaven, but an acid substance, which sours, and thus spoils all the fluids of the body, more or less. What causes Rheumatism but a sour or acid fluid which insinuates itself between the joints and elsewhere, irritating and inflaming the delicate tissues upon which it acts? So of nervous diseases, of impurity of the blood, or deranged circulations, and nearly all the ailments which afflict human nature.

Now is it not horrible to make and sell, and infinitely worse to use this

and yet he would fain have it understood that Old Dr. Jacob Townsend's Genuine Original Sarsaparilla, is an IMITATION of his inferior preparation!!

Heaven forbid that we should deal in an article which would bear the most distant resemblance to S. P. Townsend's article! and which should bring down upon the Old Dr. such a mountain load of complaints and criminations from Agents who have sold, and purchasers who have used S. P. Townsend's FERMENTING COMPOUND.

We wish it understood, because it is the absolute truth, that S. P. Townsend's article and Old Dr. Jacob Townsend's Sarsaparilla are heaven-wide apart, and infinitely dissimilar; that they are unlike in every particular, having not one single thing in common.

As S. P. Townsend is no doctor, and never was, is no chemist, no pharmaceutist—knows no more of medicine or disease than any other common, unscientific, unprofessional man, what guarantee can the public have that they are receiving a genuine scientific medicine, containing all the virtues of the articles used in preparing it, and which are incapable of changes which might render them the AGENTS of Disease instead of health.

But what else should be expected from one who knows nothing comparatively of medicine or disease! It requires a person of some experience to cook and serve up even a common decent meal. How much more important is it that the persons who manufacture medicine, designed for

should know well the medical properties of plants, the best manner of securing and concentrating their healing virtues, also an extensive knowledge of the various diseases which affect the human system, and how to adapt remedies to those diseases!

It is to arrest frauds upon the unfortunate, to pour balm into wounded humanity, to kindle hope in the despairing bosom, to restore health and bloom, and vigor into the enfeebled and broken, and to banish infirmity that OLD DR. JACOB TOWNSEND has SOUGHT and FOUND the opportunity and means to bring his

within the reach, and to the knowledge of all who need it, that they may learn and know, by joyful experience, its

Transcendent Power to Heal.

DR. JACOB TOWNSEND. NEW YORK, Oct. 5, 1848.

WALKED ACROSS THE ROOM

with the aid of crutches. Since then, I have walked in the street: have gone alone from 36 Spruce-street to the Park; thence to Lovejoy's Hotel and back. I have been to 85 Nassau street two different times, and am now frequently visiting my neighbors. During all this time, I have taken but two bottles of Old Dr. Townsend's Sarsaparilla. Oct. 4, I procured another bottle to-day (5th Oct.) I walked twice across the floor without the aid of crutches. I have also nearly recovered from obstruction of water, which gave me great distress. The pain in my back has likewise left me. I and my family have no earthly reason to ascribe my recovery to any other cause but to

OLD DR. JACOB TOWNSEND'S SARSAPARILLA.

P. S.—Several able physicians despaired of my ever walking or even raising myself from my bed again.

For the Plainfield Gazette.

It is very fashionable to ascribe a great deal of the miseries of mankind to the agency of God. This idea always appeared to me to savor strongly of blasphemy. The truth is, instead of charging our sufferings upon our creator—who is a being of unbounded benevolence and inflexible justice, and therefore incapable of doing wrong—we should look upon ourselves as our only enemies.

What are the facts? God has created man a rational, accountable creature; and endowed him with judgment that he might chose what was good, and avoid everything evil. If man lived in accordance with the law of his being, he would do nothing which would injure his health, or expose him to unnecessary danger, and consequently he would rarely be sick, or meet with an accident.

If however, a man does any act which perverts his judgment, and renders him incapable of choosing between good and evil, he sins against himself; and exposes himself to all the evils which result from his violating his makers command. It is true, God is able to preserve a man from harm even when he foolishly exposes himself to great danger; but he does not often interfere with the operation of those laws which he has ordained to regulate the works of his hand. He has made it a law of our being, that if we put our hand in the fire it will be burned. We have no right, therefore, to do that, or any other act, which is contrary to our comfort and safety; and we tempt God if we rush heedlessly into danger, and expect him to interfere with the laws of nature to shield us from the consequences of our foolish conduct.

The great principles on which God governs all his creatures, and administers the affairs of the universe are lost sight of by the unthinking. Hence they are continually charging him with folly; and find fault with him for the sufferings and misfortunes which they encounter, when the fact is generally speaking, these are the result of their own carelessness or wickedness. For instance, if a man who has been carousing until he is an inebriate, in driving a spirited horse should be thrown forcibly from his seat, and thereby be severely injured. His friends will gather around him, and console him by saying that "Providence has greatly afflicted you;" "God has some wise end in view in causing your sufferings," &c.

If the man dies in consequence of his injuries, we hear a great deal said about the way in which "an inscruiable Providence has removed our brother;" that "the dealings of God with his creatures are mysterious;" and we are exhorted to submit with resignation to all the evils which our heavenly Father sends upon us!

Now I cannot help thinking that God had but little to do with the sufferings and death of this person. The man partook freely of intoxicating drink—the effect of which he well knew—which deprived him of his usual good judgment, and rendered him incapable of managing his horse. The result was perfectly natural—it could not well be otherwise. No one doubts that the Almighty could have saved the individual from harm if he had thought proper to interfere; but it pleased him to let the man's act be followed with its consequence, painful as it was to suffer.

Again; is a person defrauded by an unprincipled scoundrel, and in consequece suffering, it may be, for the comforts of life? Many will mock him (what is it but mockery?) by telling him that God was fearful that if he continued to enjoy uninterrupted prosperity, he would forget the Author of all his mercies. Now it is undoubtedly true that God permitted this man to be defrauded by his neighbor; but can we justly charge the Just One with causing the wicked act? It may be true that the injured person has been taught a useful lesson; perhaps he has resolved to lay up his treasures "where thieves break not through nor steal." Even if this be the case, I cannot for a moment admit that it was necessary that evil should be done that good might follow. No, we should be careful how we charge the wickedness of man upon his Creator. He permits mankind to do good or evil as they see fit—reserving to himself the right to reward or punish according to their acts—and rarely interferes with their plans, whether they be good or evil. If he should be constantly interrupting them, they would no longer be moral agents; and, of course not capable of choosing good or evil.

"But," says one, "this is downright infidelity." Not so fast my friend! I admit that not the slightest event can take place without the knowledge of the Creator—a sparrow, St. Matthew assures us, shall not fall on the ground without his permission—and a human being is certainly worth many sparrows—but all this does not intefere with the fact, that the works of God all move in harmony with certain fixed laws which he has established for their government. "Order is heaven's first law," and we cannot conceive that an all-wise Creator has left anything to be regulated by chance. And as in the material, so in the moral world. Man was created a free moral agent—capable of choosing between good and evil—with the admonition given to him that as he should sow so should he also reap. If he lives in accordance with the law of his being—which law is necessary for his highest good—he will enjoy all the happiness of which his nature is susceptible, and will be a scource of happiness to all around him. If he lives thus, the Creator will regard him with favor; and the blessing of those who are ready to perish will rest upon him. If, on the contrary, he lives at variance with those great moral principles which his Maker has prescribed for the government of his intelligent creatures, he will be unhappy himself and a curse to those with whom he comes in contact. As a consequence of his evil choice, he will constantly be running into a thousand dangers, and will live at war with those laws which regulate his health, and indulge in excesses of various kinds; which if persevered in for any great length of time, will certainly undermine his constitution, and hurry him to a premature grave. These are the necessary consequences of deviating from the path of virtue.

Let us act like rational beings in all our employment and pleasures, and we shall have no cause to find fault with our Maker. If afflictions are sent occasionally—and there are afflictions to be borne, which occur without our doing wrong—they are sent for our good, by him who "maketh his sun to rise on the evil and on the good, and sendeth rain on the just and on the unjust."

Liberty And Equality.

It is not generally known or understood that the blacks, in addition to liberty, are strong advocates for equality, and are aiming at securing the latter as much as they are bent on enjoying the former, and they argue very reasonably on the subject, 'If you consider slavery of men revolting,' say they, 'and inconsistent with our free institutions, you must mean to place them all upon an equality'—so they insist upon carrying out the principle in extenso Now for the touchstone. Will the 'free soilers,' the political abolitionists, and the most clamorous for putting down slavery in the south, recognise this doctrine of the blacks? Unquestionably not. In the south, where slavery exists, if a black man is seated in a public stage, no one notices the circumstance. If such an occurrence should take place in the north, the driver would be required forthwith to turn him out. The fair daughters of a white slaveholder love their black nurse as their second mother. If a black woman was to offer for a wet nurse's place in the north, she would be fortunate in being civilly dismissed for the impudent pretensions. If a slave at the south is sick, the doctor is sent for, and the master, mistress, son, and daughter, call to see, and send him comfortable aid and attendence. If a black free servant falls ill at the north, he is sent to the hospital, and no one asks what has become of him. If a negro enters a pew in church here at the north, he is of course turned out by the friends of liberty and religion, and told that in a back corner there are seats assigned to persons of color. A southern man talks to his slave in a friendly, confiding manner: in the north, to be seen talking to a black would be deemed quite a solecism in good manners. Here is the difference between profession and practice. The liberty men, the abolitionists, and free soil men of the north have not the least idea of remotely recognising an equality between the blacks and whites. They are merely willing that a black should belong to himself and keep to himself; and the blacks who cherish this equality idea will find their abolition white friends much more difficult to be on terms with her than in the south. Here at the north we love to see a negro free, but then we do not love the negro himself or feel any interest about him. At the south, on the contrary, a master will allow no one to impose upon or ill-treat his negro; and in the ordinary traffic of the day, you may cheat the master, but be will not permit you to cheat, his slave. Of this cold, haughty, imperious exclusiveness, towards the blacks among our sympathising abolitionist, we will give an anecdote. Up to the time when the south declined voting for John Quincy Adams for a second time, we never heard of his opposition to slavery; but it burst out like a volcano when he lost the election.

Many years ago, a black fellow ran away from the south and got as far east as Vermont. He managed to obtain a good education, and ambition. He applied for a servant's place in the family of Mr. Adams; and as most of these Africans claim a royal descent, they called him in the family. Prince George. After some time, George managed to get off to Hayti, where his cleverness obtained him some public place, and his business habits and intelligence promoted him, until he was sent as commissioner or charged' affairs to England. Mr Adams was then minister at London, and George thoght he would call and see his old master. He found the family at breakfast—Mr. and Mrs. Adams, their daughters or young ladies, and two gentlemen. They were glad to see George and asked him to sit down. When breakfast was over, Mr. Adams and his two guests rose and left the room. Mrs. Adams, as if suddenly reccollecting herself, said—'George, won't you draw near and take a cup of coffee?'

'No, I thank you, madam,' said he; 'I am engaged to breakfast with the prince regent.'

Here was the difference between professing and practical abolition. The blacks may make themselves easy. Liberty they may have from their devoted friends at the north, but never equality. The south on this point understands its position: they feel towards the blacks the dignity of a master and the affection of a friend. Their condescension come with a grace, because it is frank and open.—Here, the abolitionists aim at no such condescension towards the blacks, for they intend to allow no equality. They aim at abolishing slavery at the south, 'not that they love Cæsar, but that they hate Rome.—Times and Messenger.

YOUNG MEN.—The most anxious moment in the history of a young man, is that moment when he forsakes the paternal roof, and goes forth into the world to seek a livelihood. The interests of life are crowded into that period. The tears of a mother, the counsels of a father, consecrate that eventful moment. Away from old associates, and settled in some new home, how apt the former restraints are to be cast off?

The trial of virtue now comes. The test of principles is now applied. If he holds fast his integrity, the prayers of his father and mother, rising oft when the still dews are falling, will bring blessings as thick as the manna that fell round the camp of the Israelites, down upon his path. But if he prove faithless, then will memory embitter his life, then will his parents welcome the grave, that they may hide their dishonor in the dust.

One hour's sleep before midnight, is worth two after.

Rev. Rowland Hill

Many amusing anecdotes of the eccentric, but pious and useful Rowland Hill, have been told; but the following, narrated to us by one of his parishoners, is new to us.

It was Mr. Hill's habit to ride to church in an old family carriage, a practice too aristocratic, in the judgement of one of his flock, who determined to rebuke it.

It was customary in his chapel for notes to be sent to the pulpit, requesting prayers for various objects. One Sabbath, Mr. Hill was proceeding with the reading of these requests as usual, when he found himself in the midst of one of the following purport:

'Prayers are requested for Rev. Mr. Hill, that he may be made more humble and like his Divine Master, who, instead of riding in a carriage, was content to be borne on an ass.'

Having read the notice, he lifted his spectacles to his forehead, and looking around the house, observed, that it was true he had been guilty of the fault alleged; but if the writer would step round to the vestry door after services, saddled and bridled, he would have no objection to try to ride home, after the Master's example, on the back of an ass.

A Tale of a Tub.

The following droll story appears in the St. Joseph's Times:

On the passage of the ship Alexandria from New Orleans to New York, a young lad of about 14. from a natural frolicksome disposition became so troublesome that he was threatened by the Captin that he would confine him in a water cask. Our youngster took no heed; at the next offence he was put in the cask, which was headed up leaving a large hole for the admission of air. The ship encountered a storm, and in a sudden lurch the cask containing the boy rolled into the sea. The circumstances was not noticed by any on board. Fortunately the cask struck bung up, and floated about thirty hours when it was thrown upon the beach of Cape St. Blass. Here the boy made efforts to extricate himself without success, and in despair gave up to die. Some cows strolling on the beach, were attracted to the cask, and one of the number, it being fly time, switched her tail into the bung hole, which he grasped with a desperate resolution. The cow bellowed and set out for life, and after running some two hundred yards with the cask struck it against a log on the beach, and knocked it as we may say, 'into a cocked hat.' The boy, thus providentially released was discovered by some fisherman on the Point, and taken to Apalachacola, where a small collection being made for him he was enabled to proceed north by Columbus.

Papa are the hogs that come to Cincinnati sick?' No, child; why do you ask?' Because the papers say they are cured here.' 'Go to bed, child, and don't pest your father.'

Mr. Partington, in allusion to the many advertisements headed 'Ho! for California,' thinks a spade would be more useful than a hoe, to the diggers.

DEFENCE OF ROMPS.—Never find fault with girls, young girls in particular, if they are decided romps; but be thankful that they have the health and spirits necessary for romping. Better a romp than have a narrow chest. or a hectic flush on the cheek. Better wild as a hawk than than tame as a dove. Better pay the butcher and the shoemaker than the physician and the undertaker.—Chicago Journal.

DO AS YOU PROMISE.—There is no necessity of breaking your word. In the first place never promise a thing unless you know it to be in your power to fulfil: and in the second place make up your mind before you promise that whatever you do promise, you will fulfil. When such a character is established, it will be of more value than ermine, gold or princely diamonds.

ANGELS' VISITS.—When the unfortunate but humorous Dr. Patten was dying, Archbisuop Secker sent him ten guineas. The dying man thus thanked his bishop. 'Tell the primate,' said he, 'I now own him to be a man of God, for I have seen his angels.'

The True Sun is responsible for the following desperate act of punning:

Why cannot California be admitted as a State? Because the inhabitants are all miners.

Thrill the deepest note of woe.'

PLAINFIELD GAZETTE.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Thursday, March, 15, 1849.

NOTICE.

The citizens of Plainfield and vicinity are requested to meet at Laing's Hall on Thursday, the 15th inst. at 7 o'clock P. M. to take into consideration the propriety of electing a candidate and adopting such measures as the meeting shall think proper concerning the post office of this place.

The above notice we copy from the "Union," and as far as the notice goes we have no objection; the people certainly have the right to meet, and discuss, and act, on this or any other question that directly concerns their interest, and all we desire is that mere party views shall not destroy, or take precedence of the real interests of the people in this matter. But the "Union" appears over zealous about the matter, and we think the whigs must be much obliged to it for its dictation.—It says, "without wishing to assume any responsibility in regard to it ourself," yet, "Undoubtedly if a change in the post office in this place is deemed necessary or desirable a whig should have the place;" and, "only whigs should have a voice."

Is this whig democracy, it may be the "Union's" whig patent democracy, but we think the whigs of Plainfield will repudiate it, at all events it is not true democracy, and if we remember right it was not to be Taylor democracy.

HORACE GREELEY.—This gentlemens course in Congress we think must be approved by all who have the principles of true democracy at heart; his course on most all the great questions which have been brought forward, has been democratic. He has gained the ill will of the corrupt of all parties for exposing and trying to reform the mileage abuse. He has done all that a single individual could do to abolish slavery in the District of Columbia, and to prevent its introduction into the Territories. He brought in a bill to discourage speculation in the Public Lands and to secure homes thereon to Actual setlers and Cultivators, and opposed the extra pay of those who were well paid already. Although this gentlemen has heretofore advocated doctrines which we consider anti-democratic, and holds some exploded notions about a protective tariff, yet we consider him entitled to the thanks of all true democrats for the efforts he has made in the cause of equal rights. We would recommend to all a perusal of his address to his constituents; we care not by what motive you may say he acted, the principles which he advocated are right; neither do we care by what motive you may judge we wrote this, all we ask is, that it may be read with the same independence with which it was written.

The "Plainfield Union,' we perceive is enlarged, now we rejoice in our neighbors prosperity, but must beg leave to take all the credit to ourselves, "competition is the life of trade" the community can perceive this in the Union's enlargement, there is one thing more neighbor Cushing we would suggest in all kindness, change your proof reader and we will take credit for that also, we hope the public will not overlook us for these improvements.

Bound to California.

Mr. William Laing; Mr. Jeremiah Drake; and Mr. Horace Dunham; young men of this Place started early Monday Morning March 12th for California, they go the overland route; we believe they have the good wishes of the citizens generally as well as our own for their health, happiness, and success.

On the first page of our paper is an article headed Liberty and Equality upon which we intended to have made a few strictures, but which we must defer to another opportunity for want of room; perhaps some of the friends of Free Soil wll notice it for our next.

A vote in favor of the Wilmot Proviso cannot be obtained in the Cabinet to-day. There is no doubt at all that General Taylor is opposed to it; and so are Messrs. Clayton, Preston, Crawford, and Johnston. Probably Mr. Meredith also, and perhaps Mr. Ewing, Are the whigs going to desert their own Cabinet? No, they will have to come upon our ground, those of them that are not there already, and say that the Proviso is entirely unnecessary to the exclusion of slavery from the new Territories; and that being unnecessary, and withal exceedingly offensive to the South, it is therefore inexpedient. When they get there, they will feel that they are on ground that cannot be shaken. —N. Y. Journal of Commerce.

We would call the attention of our Merchants and others, to the advertisement of Alfred F. Lagrave, in another column, it woul be to your interest to call.

To the Editors of the Plainfield Gazette.—Respected Friends: Feeling an interest in your welfare and prosperity, I was much pleased in reading your papers, to observe the neat and workmanlike manner in which it was performed; and also your frankness and honesty of purpose; which indicates a determination on your part to do right, (though the heavens fall) but let me tell you if you wish to become popular, and to receive the smiles of those who have insinuated themselves into power, you must not speak too plain; all men cannot bear to hear the truth; the office holder and the wealthy nabob, will not thank you for saying a poor man who owns neither house nor land, is competent to fill a seat in the legislative halls, or any lucrative office, be his talents and opportunities what they may. You also insinuate that slavery is inconsistent with Christianity and the Declaration of Independence. Now I am satisfied there are many in your own Village who roll slavery a sa sweet morsel under their tongues; and who are also opposed to the elevation of the laboring class, they have long rode on the public back, and still adhere to it with as much tenacity as a snapin-turtle does to life. I then say if you wish to become popular, you must go with the current, sacrifice independence, play the sycophant and stoop to mean things; but if you had rather act justly, and conscientiously, and recieve the approbation of your own conscience, and countenance of all honest men, then go on in the way in which you have commenced, and you will finally hear the approval of well done good and faithful servant.

MORE ANON.

As we are constanly adding new names to our subscription list, it may not be amiss to make a few extracts from former numbers of our paper, showing the course we have marked out for ourselves, and which we shall not deviate from at the bidding of any "office holder" or "wealthy nabob," but shall advocate "Equal and exact justice to all men." All men who have an independent opinion of their own cannot fail to appreciate that independence in others, those who have not that independence we hope will transfer their support to those papers which act in accordance with their principles, and which first scan a question not to see if it is right and just, but to see how far it can be made subservient to their peculiar views either in religion or politics; and not whether it is in accordance with the principles which Christ taught, or with those republican principles which are set forth in the Declaration of Independence.

'It is our intention to be just and liberal toward all, in the highest acceptation of those terms; we would not alarm the fears or unnecessarily excite the prejudices of the most humble, but shall 'endeavor to promote good feelings among all classes of men, whatever may be their political or religious creeds; all have the right to enjoy and utter their opinions. It was for this the greatest of all privileges that our fore-fathers sought these shores, that they might enjoy and establish, civil and religious liberty. It shall be our aim to extend and perpetuate this inestimable blessing.

We shall at all times advocate the truth, or what we sincerely believe to be such, on all subjects with candor and sincerity, whether in accordance with the preconceived opinions of men or not; we cannot hope and indeed do not wish to publish a paper with which none can find fault; believing that all men of a genorous and independent mind are willing to have all subjects of interest to the welfare of man freely discussed; and can appreciate that independence in others which they themselves enjoy, and which belongs to man as a right.

We esteem independence as regards the minds and action of men as one of the greatest blessings of a republican form of government. We regard the press as the guardian of the public liberty; as through it reason can combat error.

Believing in the Political, Religious, and Social equality of man's rights; we shall at all times speak our minds on all subjects in any way affecting those rights.

It remains but for those, all over the world who are determined to be free, to sustain the liberal and enlightened dissemination of all democratic principles whether emanating from the Press the Pulpit or the Bar, all should sustain equal rights. Look to acts not professions, names are not principles, many profess but all do not practice democratic principles.'

For the Plainfield Gazette.

Well, our legislature has at length adjourned. The State house is cleared, not only of our legislators, but also of its crowd of lobby members. The bar-rooms at the capital, also, are less thronged, because many of those who recently were so busy there have either succeeded in what they undertook, or are obliged to wait until another session in order to secure the object which they have at heart. Is it not a melancholy reflection—one well calculated to cause the blood of freemen to rush quickly to their temples—that a large part of the public business is substantially transacted at these places? For I presume that all intelligent readers are aware that almost every law which our legislators enact, is agreed to at other places than the state house. Is a railroad company, for instance, in want of some new privilege, its agents hasten to the seat of government, and the moment the legislature adjourns, if only for a single hour, these agents waylay the members, and by treating some, giving dinners and suppers to others, and perhaps something more glittering and substantial to those who are not so cheaply bought, persuade the members that the privilege asked for is of the utmost importance to the welfare of the people.

I said the legislature has adjourned. I am not sure that the state would not have been better off if it had not convened! Let us see what has been done for the public good. Look, with me, over this long list of acts, and let us see whether my opinion is correct. What is this? "An act to authorize John Smith to build a dock." Well, that is something worth while, that's a fact! It appears that Mr. Smith is in the clam and oyster line, and owns a fishing smack in which he pursues his business. As the river in front of his residence has but a small depth of water, he cannot always bring up his boat near enough to the bank to step on the shore without running some risk of wetting his feet. Now he might readily make a landing-place with a few large stone and a plank or two, but Mr. Smith—Mr. John Smith is too good a citizen to do an act of this kind without having first a special act of the legislature to authorize him to do so. In examining the journals, I find that the people are taxed to pay the members of the legislature for two days services in passing this important measure. When I assure you that the river in which Mr. Smith proposes to build his dock is a little larger than Stoney Brook, you will readily admit that this is an object worthy of the profound consideration of Jersey lawmakers!

Let us look a little farther, and we read—"To authorize the heirs of John Jones to sell real estate." This looks like a small business for the legislature to meddle with, and so it would be if it was not an act of great injustice. Mr. Jones, it appears, provided in his will that his real estate should not be sold until his children were of age. Whether this was the best thing he could have done, I neither know nor care; but he thought it was, and provided accordingly He has been dead but a few months, yet the legislature has thought proper to annul his will; and the presumption is the property will be wasted before the children are aware of the value of it. This was all wrong: the legislature has no more right to change the disposition of a man's property than they have to appropriate it to their own use. I knew a case where the legislature permitted minors to sell a large property, contrary to the express injunction of their father, and before they came of age the property was all wasted.

Here is an object, which, as a philanthropist, I am sure you will give the members much credit for: To incorporate the Hardscrabble benevolent society." How do you imagine the philanthropic citizens of that beautiful and flourishing village are to perform their charitable offices without having an act of incorporation from the state? you might as well suppose that some persons whom we know wonld do a good act without blowing a horn. No, sir! It would "not pay" these days to do a good act without the world should know it.

I shall have some thing more to say concerning the acts of our legislatures—both of what they have done, and what they have left undone. I have only time to add that the people are daily awaking to the great truth, that "The world is governed too much." A. J.

FOURTEEN DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

Arrival of the America.

ENGLAND.

Proposed Navigation Law.

In England Mr. Labouchere has again brought forward the Government proposition for the modification of the Navigation Laws and Mr. Bancroft, our Minister, states that to whatever extent in liberality the British Parliament may be disposed to legislate in this matter that he is ready to sign a Convention to-morrow, based upon complete reciprocity and upon the opening the entire coasting trade of the two countries to the vessels of both.

By the proposed law it will be competent for an American vessel to come to Liverpool from the United States, laden with cotton and tobacco. She will be permitted to discharge all or part of her cargo in the Mersey, take in Manchester goods or coals and passengers, and carry them to Glasgow or London in transit, and clear out with perhaps a fresh cargo from her final port of her discharge.

IRELAND.

The affairs of Ireland have occupied, as usual a large portion of the time of Parliament since the session commenced. The necessity for the continuance of the suspension of the Habeas Corpus Act has been admitted by overwhelming majorities and even the ultra Irish members have made but a feeble resistance to its passing the Commons. The bill will pass the House of Lords with little or no opposition. The additional grant of £50,000 for the relief of the Irish poor has also been sanctioned, but has given rise to a variety of debates, all hinging upon the question of "What is to be done with Ireland?" The clearance of the peasantry and of emigration are as active as ever. The stock of provisions are plundered in all quarters. Catholic Chapels are being closed, and the destitution of the Roman Catholic Clergy is very great; indeed apathy and misery seem universal in that unhappy country, the condition of which is without parallel in the history of the world.

Mr. Duffy's trial, after innumerable delays has at length taken place. The jury could not agree, and Mr. Duffy was sent back to prison until the 7th of April, when he will again be tried.

Miscellaneous News.

The Cholera returns have now swelled to 12,495, of which 5,546 have died, 3,788 have recovered, and 3,164 continue under treatment, on which the result is not stated.

The reports from California continue to excite the most intense interest. The excitement has now extended to all classes. The French Government has dispatched an engineer to California with the object of surveying the new discoveries.

FRANCE.

Dissolution of the National Assembly.

The National Assembly has finally voted its own dissolution, and the new Assembly will meet about the middle of May. Louis Napoleon seems to be daily acquiring political strength and popularity, and politicians who have hitherto from apprehensions of instability or other motives withheld their support, now come forward to declare themselves Bonapartists, and accordingly very great progress has been made in reestablishing public confidence.

ITALY.

Flight of the Grand Duke of Tuscany.

The course of events in Continental Europe continues marked by the flight and fall of Princes. The Grand Duke of Tuscany has fled from Florence with his family and has taken refuge at Porte San Stefano. A Provisional Government has been declared by the excited people, as part of Italy.

AUSTRIA.

In Austria and Hungary affairs have again taken an unfavorable turn. The Imperialists have certainly been beaten in several encounters with the Hungarians, Bem is likely to give them a great deal of trouble. It is impossible to read the accounts of this fratricidal war without being shocked at the frightful vindictiveness and barbarity with which hostilities are carried on.

SPAIN.

In Spain at the Session of Congres held at Madrid, Jan. 31. a call was made for the correspondence said to have passed respecting the annexation of the Island of Cuba. The reply was that no proposition had been made and that no Ministry composed of Spaniards would even listen to such a proposal if made and that they should never cede the Island of Cuba. In the Senate also Gen. Narvaez confirmed the above and added that the rumors of a cession were entirely unfounded, and that the Island of Cuba would always remain as now, a part of the monarchy of Spain.

Deposition of the Pope.

We have from Rome the important intelligence of the deposition of the Pope and the establishment of a Republic. This event took place at 10 o'clock in the morning of the 9th of February. It has been voted that he shall enjoy all the guarantees necessary for the independence of his spiritual power.

London Money Market.

There continues a good demand for American Securities in London. The reported payment of the Pennsylvania in one-half relief notes was received with considerable disfavor, United States Six Per Cents continue in demand on the Continent, and orders for the stock have been executed at 106 1-2. Money continues to get more abundant, and the rate of interest rules low.

Provisions.

The imports of Cured Provisions from the United States during the past two weeks, are as follows:—4,940tcs and 300 bbls of Beef; 2,640 bbls Pork; 69 cks Hams: 358 cks and 524 bxs Cheese; 124 hhds and 3,716 bxs of Bacon; 3,374 bbls and 3,012 kegs Lard.

FROM YUCATVN.—By the arrival of Capt Smith, of brig Potomac, from Sisal, we have information up to 16th February. He states, that 'The affairs of the Government are still in a very unsettled state. The American troops have been in several engagements and suffered considerably. There was much dissatisfaction existing among the officers and men of this regiment, caused by the false representations made to them before starting from New Orleans; in consequence of which, one major, five captains, and some eight or ten lieutenants, had resigned.

From the N. Y. Tribune.

The Best Land Route to California.

Permit me, through your columns, to enter my solemn protest against the apathy of some papers and the careless statement of others respecting the best land route to California. I distinctly assert, and the interests of thousands who are meditating a trip toCalifornia are involved in its correctness, that the shortest and most desirable overland trip on our own soil is by the way of Corpus Christi, that being 500 miles shorter than the Missouri route. The expense of horses and mules for transportation is nearly or quite one half less on the Rio Grand and Corpus Cristi route than on the more Nothern one. That the danger from Indians are simply equal on all of them, for parties of from 40 to 100 persons with fire-arms are sufficient to protect themselves on any of them. That the advantages of grass and game are of course in favor of the Southern route, as the Missouri route is, one-third of the year, buried under snow and is frequently marked by frightful loss of life and the total destruction of the teams and property of the caravans. Now if these things are true, is the New-York press guiltless in its silent indifference, while hundreds of our citizens are turning their steps towards St. Louis to commence this long and expensive march across the widest part of the United States territory? If, on the other hand, these statements are incorrect, let them be refuted, but in no case should those to whom the public look as faithful sentinels leave the people in darkness. C. M.

The Free Negro bill has passed the Legislature of Deleware. It empowers the Magistrates of the Senate to arrest all free negroes who have no apparent occupation or means of living, and hire them out for a term of servine not exceeding a year.

THE PROPOSED PILOT MONOPOLY.—On our first page will be found the Pilot bill now before the Senate of this State, as proposed by a Select Committee of that body to be amended. We have already shown the outrageous character of some of its provisions,—especially that which compels the payment of half pilotage to the New York pilots by vessels in charge of New Jersey pilots It is the opinion of many intelligent lawyers that this provision is repugnant to the Constitution, and to the existing law of congress. At any rate, it is repugnant to the plainest principles of justice, and if carried into effect, will be most injurious to the public interests, by driving the Jersey pilots from the field, and so restoring the indolent monopoly with which this community was afflicted in former years, and the effects of which, or some of them, may be seen in two hundred graves on the shore of Long Island, near the entrance to this harbor. We can can hardly believe that the Legislature of this State, in the year 1849, will take a step so entirely retrograde, and so offensive to nearly every body except the 100, men, or so, for whose benefit the monopoly is intended. Very earnest remonstrances against the passage of the billhave been transmitted to Albany, we understand, and it is to be hoped will have their proper effect.—N. Y. Journal of Commerce.

It is a trite remark of a modern writer that children suck their mothers when they are young, and their fathers when they grow up.

Advantages of thorough Draining.

Draining, as understood thirty years ago in England (and to this day with us,) merely meant the making of channels to carry off surface water, and underground drains, to dry bogs, or cut off springs. It has now an entirely different meaning in the agricultural world. Mr. Smith, of Deanston, near Edingburg, was among the first to practice and explain Thorough Draining, as it is called. His system is, that all land requires to be drained —that the depth of loam, or soil, containing the food of plants, seldom exceeds a few inches, resting on a subsoil, or pan of clay, or hard gravel saturated with water. By making drains from two and a half to five feet in depth, at every twenty or thirty feet, the land becomes dry; air takes the place of water; every shower furnished with a stock of ammonia, permeates the soil, and the result is, that instead of a few inches there are as many feet of fertile loam, the action of the atmosphere being sufficient of itself to produce the change, although, to hasten the process, subsoil plowing is made part of the system.

The change produced by the introduction of thorough draining in Britan, is said to be truly astonishing. Not only has the produce been greatly increased, but wheat and turnips have been grown at elevations, an in districts, where their cultivations was not before thought possible. By it, crops have been rendered less liable to disease, and harvest has been forwarded nearly a month. This will be better understood, if we reflect, that when water is allowed to remain in the soil until removed by evaporation, the heat of the sun and air, instead of being imparted to the land, will actually, through this process, produce an intense degree of cold. On the other hand, were the soil so dry as to allow the rain to pass through, it would imbibe heat from every ray that fell upon it.

The British government has considered this improvement of so great importance, that, during the last three years, large sums have been loaned to all applicants, to be expended in drainage, under the superintendence of inspectors. These loans are repaid by annual instalments of 6 1-2 per cent., for about twenty years; and as the money is borrowed by government at three percent., these payments cancel the loan and interest.—Robert Jardine.

Beware of the Ring Bone.—If colts stand on a plank or any hard floor that is not well littered, they will be subject to the ring bone. When breeding horses, we left the floor of the colt's stables, of the soil over which they were built. If this should be a deep loam, or of a clayey texture, then remove the soil about two feet deep, and replace it with sand, or the finest gravel to be obtained. Colts should also be let out to exercise in a yard, or open space, every day during the winter, when not particularly stormy; and in this yard there should not be older horses, or any horned animals which can do them injury. Being very playful, they are more apt to provoke attacks upon them than other animals.

How to Keep a Horse from Straying, should have been entitled 'How to hitch horses on the prairie.' The plan is an ingenious one, and it reminds me to tell you how to make a baulky horse pull. If one horse of a pair is baulky and the other is true, tie a cord to the tail of the baulky horse and to the doubletree, so that he must go ahead and keep his end up even, or have his tail badly pulled, and my word for it, he will go ahead after getting one or two good jerks.

Important Legal Decision.—Judge Eldred, of Pensylvania, has decided, says the National intelligencer, in Court, that listening at a keyhole, though against all etiquette, good manners, and the clearest maxims of common law in a man; is perfectly legal and justifiable in any individual of the gentler sex, owing to the amiable weakness of curiosity which nature has implanted in female bosoms.

A Natural Birth Register —When a native of Java has a child borne, he immediatdly plants a tree, which, adding every year a circle of wood to its trunk, indicates the age of the tree, and therefore that of the child. The consequence is, the child regards the tree with reverence and affection as long as he lives.

Obligations to Parents.—If you perceive that anything in your ways makes your parents unhappy, you ought to have no peace until you have corrected it: and if you find yourself indifferent or insensible to their will and wishes, depend upon it, yours is a carnal, disobedient, ungrateful heart. If you love them, keep their commandments: otherwise love is a mere word in the mouth, or a notion in the fancy, but not a ruling principle in the heart. They know much of the world, you very little; trust them, therefore, when they differ from you and refuse compliance with your desires. They watch over you for good, and are entitled to great deference and cheerful obedience. You may easily shorten the lives of affectionate and conscientious parents, by misconduct, bad tempers, and alienation from their injunctions. Let not this sin be laid to your charge.—Rev. Leigh Richmond.

Work for this Month.

The talented editor of the Massachusetts Ploughman, thus facetiously gives advice what to do in February; As the days grow longer and warmer the wood pile may increase. All our good farmers agree in this, that July is about the worst month we have for hauling and cutting wood and that it is not good husbandry to be procuring fuel in haytime, Chopping keeps one warm and comfortable in February, but it will wet his shirt in July.

The rats have now taken possession of all the bundles of grain that were left unthreshed, and it may be as well to let the hogs finish up the business. The straw will not make so good a bed as it would, but it will be better than mud to lie on.

Snuff on the necks and backs of calves and young cattle will do more good than in the nose of any maiden lady or dandy bachelor, and brimstone bought for the hogs will not prove that the itch has got into the house. Cards on the cattle make them look as much better as childreu with their hair combed. A clean barn is a hint to the women who takes care of the kitchen. Good milking stools save much washing in the house. A scraper at the door saves brooms and dust.

Candles are not needed in the morning for half an hour before sunrise. Oil gives a less pleasant light than the sun, therefore, make use of this whenever it shines. It is the cheapest light we have. Late suppers produce unlucky dreams. A slice of wedding cake placed under the pillow never warrants good fortune to the gluttonous eater.

Hens eggs are frozen if neglected in February. Small gains are better than large Constant droppings wear the rock. Small streams fill the milk pail. Daily toil strengthens the laborer. But "all work and no play makes Jack a dull boy."

Take good care of the cattle, the horses, oxen, sheep, and store hogs. Let them have regular feeding in the day time, and a good bed at night.

JUST PUBLISHED,

ALLEN'S COMPOUND OF AMERICAN AGRICULTURE.

R. L. ALLEN, Esq., author of the popular work entitled 'Domestic Animals, their Diseases and Remedies,' of which thirteen editions have been published in twelve months, has, after years of practical experience and close investigation, completed his Great Work of Practical Agriculture, illustrated by about 100 engravings. The work will be bound handsomely and substantially in cloth, and furnished at one dollar, single copies, can be sent by mail to any part of the United States.

This work, we most fully believe, is destined to have a more widely extended circulation than any work of the kind heretofore published. Mr. Allen, knowing the wants of the community, has met those wants in a plain, concise and familiar manner, and has made a work intelligible to all. It will be a book for

THE WHOLE PEOPLE,

Its cheapness will cause a large sale, and it will be a Book for Everybody, as well for the man who consumes the products of the earth, as for him who raises them.

150 AGENTS,

active, intelligent and honest, are wanted, to sell this book in every state in the Union.

UNDERTAKING IN GENERAL.

It is an old maxim "a bird in the hand is worth two in the bush," ie. an advantage, to the Public to have Coffins ready made, of all sizes and descriptions, trimmed and polished in the latest styles. The undersigned having been connected with the undertaking and furnishing business for five years, (having furnished five hundred Coffins in that time,) We would refer to our former patrons that the public may be satisfied we have given entire satisfaction in every case; also having had private instruction from the most experienced undertaker in the city of New York in his styles of making and trimming; We now flatter ourselves, we are prepared to give entire satisfaction to the Citizens of Plainfield and vicinity.

We have been to considerable expense in fitting up, that none may be disappointed we would respectfully solicil the Public generally to give us a call before purchasing elsewhere.

J. W. S. MARTIN, Principal.

Also, Cabinet, Chair, & Sofa,

MANUFACTORY.

We would inform the Citizens of Plainfield and vicinity that we have from a thousand to fifteen hundred dollars worth of ready made Furniture on hand, consisting of Black Walnut, Maple, and Mahogony, to suit the taste, and pocket.

BOOKS FOR THE AMERICAN PEOPLE.

TO BOOK AGENTS AND CANVASSERS.

THE FOLLOWING

VALUABLE NATIONAL WORKS

Are decidedly the best Books that Agents can possibly employ their time in supplying to the people of the United States.

THEY ARE INDISPENSABLE AS BOOKS OF REFERENCE TO OUR

Senators, Representatives in Congress, and State Legislatures,

and should be possessed by all the Young Men of this Great Republic, especially those who are aspiring to distinction and fame in our Halls of Legislation. There is not a city or town in these United States, even those of small importance, but contains many citizens to whom these works are indispensable. They are sacred Archives of our common Country. The Chronicles of American Independence!

Postmasters, Colporteurs, and Book Agents, are invited to secure such districts of country as they are most familiar with and desire to occupy. All applications are requested to be made without delay.

OUR PLAN.

☞ The plan the publisher has so successfully carried on for several years, is the obtaining Responsible Men as Agents, who are well known in their own Counties, Towns, and Villages, and have time and disposition to circulate good and instructive Books among their Neighbors and Friends. By taking a glance at the following list of Books it will easily be discovered that they are adapted to the Christain, the Patriot, the Statesman, and the Domestic Circle. Any person wishing to embark in the enterprise, will risk nothing by sending to the Publisher $20, for which he will receive sample copies of the principal works, affording a very liberal per centage to the Agent for this trouble.

1776!

A Faithful chronicle of the war of American Independence.

1776, OR THE WAR OF INDEPENDENCE.

A History of the Anglo-Americans, from the period of the Union of the Colonies aginst the French, to the Inauguration of WASHINGTON, the first President of the United States. Beautifully illustrated by numerous Engravings, showing the plans of Battles, Prominent events, and Portraits of Distinguished Men of the period. By BENSON J. LOSSING. In handsome emblematical binding. Price $2.50.

☞ To every true-hearted American, this is a most welcome and invaluable work: it is the voice of our Fathers calling upon us to guard most sacredly the precious boon of Freedom; to purchase and secure which, they offered upon their Country's altar, their lives, their fortunes, and their sacred honor.

Opinions of the Press.

(From the American Signal.)

"We have been deeply interested in reading a new and splendid patriotic volume, entitled '1776,' published by E. Walker, of New-York. The embellishments, which are very numerous, are of the most perfect description, and carry the mind of the reader back to the period when the Continental Armies were marshalled to defend our native land. We advise all the readers of the Signal to add this book to their libraries, and teach the rising generation to value the priceless lessons it contains so abundantly."

(From the New-York Express.)

"The book is elegantly printed and bound, and the engravings (seventy-eight in number) form in themselves a rare historical gallery of great interest and variety, displaying the originality and taste of the author-artist in this department. As a whole, we have no hesitation in commending this volume as the best popular history of our Revolution yet published."

(From the Evening Mirror.)

"This is the title of a very elegant looking book of some 500 pages published by Edward Walker, 144 Fulton-street. The work is beautifully illustrated with a great number of engravings, and the typography and binding are absolutely faultless. It contains a great amount and variety of information relating to the Revolutionary period of American history, and is a work which will, doubtless, command a very extensive sale."

"With regard to the tone and spirit of the volume, the felicity of the style of narrative and reflections, and the great care taken to insure accuracy, as is shown by the author's frequent reference to the best authorities, I am confident that he is entitled to the reputation of a competent and faithful historian.

EDWIN WILLIAMS."

(From the Albany Spectator.)

"This is a great national work, the beauties and excellencies of which should be studied by every one who would understand the history of human freedom, and the inalienable rights of man."

(From the Knickerbocker Magazine, August, 1847.)

"The enterprising and patriotic-spirited publisher of this exceedingly beautiful volume will find thathe has not misjudged in believing that 'a book in one volume, well written and embracing a faithful chronicle of events which accomplished the laying of the foundation stone of this great republic, would be invaluable to the present and future generations.'"

THE PRESIDENTS OF THE UNITED STATES, THEIR MEMOIRS AND ADMINISTRATIONS.

To which is added, an account of the Inaugurations of each President and a history of the principal political events of his administration, and of the transactions of Congress at each session during the period.

Declaration of Indendence.

Articles of Confederation.

Constitution of the United States, with Notes and References.

A brief history of the events and circumstances which led to the Union of the States, and formation of the Constitution.

A synopsis of the Constitution of the several States.

Tables of Members of the Cabinets of the various administrations, Ministers to Foreign Countries, and other principal public officers.

Chronological Table of Political Events in the United States.

Statistical Tables of Revenue, Commerce and Population.

A Complete List of Members of Congress from 1789 to 1846.

With Portraits of the Presidents, engraved on steel in the best style of the art, from the most approved likenesses. By V. BALSH, Esq. of Johnstown, N. Y. In one large handsomo volume, 8vo. in emblematic binding. Price $2.50.

☞ No expense has been spared in the preparation of these volumes of Documents, History, and Statistics, to render the same worthy of patronage, not only of Statesmen and Legislators, but of the American public generally; who will find them the Treasury of political knowledge and a mass of information indispensable to every intelligent citizen.

STATESMAN'S MANUAL,

COMPRISING THE

LIVES, ADDRESSES, AND MESSAGES OF THE PRESIDENTS OF THE UNITED STATES.

From Washington, to Taylor's Inaugural Message, March, 1849. With a History of their Administrations, and of each Session of Congress.

Also, various Historical, Statistical, and other importantant public Documents, and a complete Index, or Analytical Table of Contents to the whole work. Edited by EDWIN WILLIAMS, Esq.

Illustrated with Portraits of our 12 presdents, engraved on Steel, from the most approved authorities, and in the best style of the art. Printed on the best paper, and handsomely bound in emblematic style. It will also be embellished with Views of the Capitol, president's House and the Seals of the several States, and the United States. In four large volumes. Price $10.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS, &C.

From the President of the United States.

"To Mr. E. WALKER. Dear Sir.---I have found your Statesman's Manual a valuable work, and exceedingly useful and convenient. Yours, J. K. POLK.

(From the Hon. Henry Clay.)

"My Dear Sir: Your Statesman's Manual is a very valuable work for reference."

STATE OF NEW-YORK,
Department of Common Schools,
ALBANY, Sept. 18, 1848.

I have examined the Statesman's Manual, in two volumes octavo, compiled by Edwin Williams, and am of the opinion that it is a proper work for school district libraries, and deserving of a place in these institutions, designed for the diffusion of useful knowledge. Signed, J. S. RANDALL, Dep. State Sup't Com. Schools.

(From the Journal of Commerce.)

"This is one of the most important books published in the United States for a long time."

(From the N. Y. Courier and Enquirer.)

"This is the most important contribution to American political history ever published."

(From the Democratic Review.)

"The whole forms a most complete library in itself, of all that concerns the politics of the country. No individual should be without these volumes at hand for prompt reference. How many hours of idle discussions and senseless debates might be spared to heated partizans, were these books at hand for appeal. We shall have frequent occasion to refer to them."

(From the N. Y. Express, Aug. 21, 1846.)

"This is emphatically a national work, and as such eminently deserving of a national support."

(From the Commercial Advertiser.)

"Such a work is invaluable, and is offered at a comparatively low price, in expectation of a large sale."

(From the Luzerne Democrat.)

"The Statesman's Manual is a valuable work, comprising a complete condensed political history of our country from the formation of our government until the present time"

(From the Washingtonian, Ohio.)

"It is but scanty praise to say, that no work of equal value to the American Statesman, politician, journalist, historian, &c. has ever before appeared."

(From the Harrisburg, (Pa.) Argus.)

"No politician, no man who desires to understand the history of the several administration of the general government, should be without a copy of it. As a book of reference it is invaluable."

REV. DR. DOWLING'S GREAT WORK ON ROMANISM.---A NEW AND ENLARGED EDITION, WITH THE AUTHOR'S LAST ADDITIONS. A BOOK FOR EVERY PROTESTANT!

THE HISTORY OF ROMANISM,

FROM ITS EARLIEST ORIGIN TO THE PRESENT TIME. BY REV. JOHN DOWLING, D. D.

Embellished with upwards of fifty highly finished engravings, chiefly from original designs.

Just published, with the Author's final corrections, a new and enlarged edition of this splendid and popular work, with a copious Supplement, comprising a History of the Life and Reign of the present remarkable Pope, PIUS IX, and a Biographical Sketch of the last Pope, GREGORY XVI.

The best encomium upon this learned, complete and popular History of Romanism, is the fact that SIXTEEN THOUSAND COPIES have been sold in about three years, and still there is a constant demand for it in all parts of the country. In order to meet this demand, and to gratify the public curiosity in relation to the present pope, Pius IX, the present enlarged edition is presented to the public. With the Supplement, the work now forms a splendid octavo volume, for the parlor or for the library, of 732 pages.

Testimonials to former editions, selected from more than a hundred, from all Protestant denominations.

EPISCOPAL.

From the Protestant Churchman.

"This is a beautiful volume of 672 pages. Good service has been done for the cause of truth by its publication, and it certainly ought to secure for its author an enviable reputation among contributors to the standard literature of the day."

From the Episcopal Recorder.

"It traces its subjects from the earliest corruptions of Christianity to the present time. It has a full Chronological Table, with Analytical and Alphabetical Indexes and Glossary. It is a large and beautiful volume, full of valuable information."

METHODIST.

From Zion's Herald.

It is written in a popular style. Its engravings are numerous and finely executed. The book will doubtless be popular and cannot fail to produce a profound conviction of the terrible iniquity of Anti-Christ.

Rev. Geo. Coles, of the Christian Advocate and Journal, says: "I cannot but express my gratitude to Almighty God that such a concise and complete development of 'the Mystery of Iniquity' is now presented to the public in a form so elegant and attractive."

CONGREGATIONAL.

Rev. Dr. Cheever, in the New-York Evangelist, says: "We ought to have noticed this excellent and beautiful work before. It possesses many and very strong claims for popular favor, and we do not doubt that it is destined to have an extraordinary sale. The work itself is characterized by great research, and a comprehensive and scriptural view of the nature and history of the Popish system."

PRESBYTERIAN.

From the (Philadelphia) Presbyterian.

"Such a work required deep and protracted research, and it affords evidence that diligence, caution and judgment, in the selection and arrangement of materials, have not been wanting. The author has availed himself of the writings of both protestants and papists, and has brought together a greater mass of information on the history, the spirit, and the doings of Popery than we have ever before seen in one volume."

MISCELLANEOUS.

From the Christian Intelligencer, (Dutch Reformed.)

"Those who would see a correct and condensed exhibition of the ten thousand abominations of the Papacy, may find it to their amazement in 'Dowling's History of Romanism.' Its contents form a rich storehouse of historical instruction, which, if could be placed within the reach of every family, would prove an unspeakable blessing to our beloved country. This is the book for Americans. Place it beside your Bibles. Compare its records of crime and the Papal principles it exposes, with the holy doctrines and immaculate life of Jesus of Nazareth. When you have done this, you will have no difficulty in determining whether or not Romanism is christianity."

Rev. Alexander Campbell, president of Bethany college, of the church of the Reformers, says: "In this work are an immense assemblage of facts and documents connected with the development and history of this great mammoth institution of error and iniquity. Popery is developed in this treatise from its birth to the present hour. We desire for this book a very large circulation. It is only necessary to enlighten this community of the true spirit and character of the Papal system, to secure them against its insidious attacks upon everything we as a people hold dear and sacred. Let every one buy this work, communicate freely to all around him the develpement which it reveals, and the facts which it records."

President Cramp, editor of the Montreal Register, and author of the Text Book of Popery, says: "This important work possesses merits of a high order. We are pleased to see that Dr. Dowling furnishes ample references to his authorities. The matter is well arranged; the facts unquestionable; the style lucid; and the spirit Catholic, in the proper sense of the term. Its extensive circulation will be highly advantageous to protestanism."

Notwithstanding the extensive supplement now added to this valuable work, the price will remain the same as the former editions, Three Dollars per copy.

PLEASE TO READ THIS.

CAUTION EXTRA

A man by the name of CLAPP has engaged with a young man of the name of S. P. Townsend, and uses his name to put up a Sarsaparilla, which they call Dr. Townsend's Sarsaparilla, denominating it GENUINE, Original, etc. This Townsend is no doctor, and never was; but was formerly a worker on railroads, canals, and the like. Yet he assumes the title of Dr., for the purpose of gaining credit for what he is not. This is to caution the public not to be deceived, and purchase none but the GENUINE ORIGINAL OLD Dr. Jacob Townsend's Sarsaparilla, having on it the Old Dr's. likeness, his family coat of arms, and his signature across the coat of arms.

Principal Office, 102 Nassau st., New York City

OLD DR. JACOB TOWNSEND,

THE ORIGINAL DISCOVERER OF THE

Genuine Townsend Sarsaparilla.

Old Dr. Townsend is now about 70 years of age, and has long been known as the AUTHOR and DISCOVERER of the GENUINE ORIGINAL "TOWNSEND SARSAPARILLA." Being poor, he was compelled to limit its manufacture, by which means it has been kept out of market, and the sales circumscribed to those only who had proved its worth, and known its value. It had reached the ears of many, nevertheless, as those persons who had been healed of sore diseases, and saved from death, proclaimed its excellence and wonderful

HEALING POWER.

Knowing, many years ago, that he had, by his skill, science and experience, devised an article which would be of incalculable advantage to mankind when the means would be furnished to bring it into universal notice, when its inestimable virtues would be known and appreciated. This time has come, the means are supplied; this GRAND AND UNEQUALLED PREPARATION is manufactured on the largest scale, and is called for throughout the length and breadth of the land, especially as it is found incapable of degeneration or deterioration.

Unlike young S. P. Townsend's, it improves with age, and never changes, but for the better; because it is prepared on scientific principles by a scientific man. The highest knowledge of Chemistry, and the latest discoveries of the art, have all been brought into requisition in the manufacture of the Old Dr's Sarsaparilla. The Sarsaparilla root, it is well known to medical men, contains many medicinal properties, and some properties which are inert or useless, and others, which if retained in preparing it for use, produce fermentation and acid, which is injurious to the system. Some of the properties of Sarsaparilla are so volatile, that they entirely evaporate and are lost in the preparation, if they are not preserved by a scientific process, known only to those experienced in its manufacture. Moreover, these volatile principles, which fly off in vapor, or as an exhalation, under heat, are the very essential medical properties of the root, which give to it all its value.

Any person can boil or stew the root till they get a dark-colored liquid, which is more from the coloring matter in the root than from any thing else: they can then strain this insipid or vapid liquid, sweeten with sour molasses, and then call it "SARSAPARILLA EXTRACT or SYRUP." But such is not the article known as the

GENUINE OLD DR. JACOB TOWNSEND'S SARSAPARILLA.

This is so prepared, that all the inert properties of the Sarsaparilla root are first removed, every thing capable of becoming acid or of fermentation, is extracted and rejected; then every particle of medical virtue is secured in a pure and concentrated form; and thus it is rendered incapable of losing any of its valuable and healing properties. Prepared in this way, it is made the most powerful agent in the

Cure of innumerable diseases.

Hence the reason why we hear commendations on every side in its favor by men, women, and children. We find it doing wonders in the cure of CONSUMPTION, DYSPEPSIA, and LIVER COMPLAINT, and in RHEUMATISM, SCROFULA, PILES, COSTIVENESS, all CUTANEOUS ERUPTIONS, PIMPLES, BLOTCHES, and all affections arising from

IMPURITY OF THE BLOOD.

It possesses a marvellous efficacy in all complaints arising from indigestion, from Acidity of the Stomach, from unequal circulation, determination of blood to the head, palpitation of the heart, cold feet and hands, cold chills and hot flashes over the body. It has not its equal in Colds and Coughs; and promotes easy expectoration and gentle perspiration, relaxing stricture of the lungs, throat, and every other part.

But in nothing is its excellence more manifestly seen and acknowledged than in all kinds and stages of

FEMALE COMPLAINTS.

It works wonders in cases of Fluor Albus or Whites, Falling of the Womb, Obstructed, Suppressed, or Painful Menses, Irregularity of the menstrual periods, and the like; and is as effectual in curing all the forms of Kidney Diseases.

By removing obstructions, and regulating the general system it gives tone and strength to the whole body, and thus cures all forms of

Nervous diseases and debility,

and thus prevents or relieves a great variety of other maladies, as Spinal irritation, Neuralgia, St. Vitus' Dance Sleeplessness, Epileptic Fits, Convulsions, &c.

It cleanses the blood, excites the liver to healthy action, tones the stomach, and gives good digestion, relieves the bowels of torpor and constipation, allays inflammation, purifies the skin, equalises the circulation of the blood, producing gentle warmth equally all over the body, and the insensible perspiration; relaxes all stictures and tightness, removes all obstructions, and invigorates the entire nervous system. Is not this then

The medicine you pre-eminently need?

But can any of these things be said of S. P. Townsend's inferior article? This young man's liquid is not to be

COMPARED WITH THE OLD DR'S,

because of one GRAND FACT, that the one is INCAPABLE of DETERIORATION, and

NEVER SPOILS,

while the other DOES; souring, fermenting, and blowing the bottles containing it into fragments; the sour, acid liquid exploding and damaging other goods! Must not this horrible compound be poisonous to the system?—What! put acid into a system already diseased with acid! What causes Dyspepsia but acid? Do we not all know that when food sours in our stomachs what mischiefs it produces? flatulence, heartburn, palpitation of the heart, liver complaint, diarrhœa, dysentery, colic, and corruption of the blood? What is Scrofula but an acid humor in the body? What produces all the humors which bring on Eruptions of the Skin, Scald Head, Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, White Swellings, Fever Sores, and all ulcerations internal and external? It is nothing under heaven, but an acid substance, which sours, and thus spoils all the fluids of the body, more or less. What causes Rheumatism but a sour or acid fluid which insinuates itself between the joints and elsewhere, irritating and inflaming the delicate tissues upon which it acts? So of nervous diseases, of impurity of the blood, or deranged circulations, and nearly all the ailments which afflict human nature.

Now is it not horrible to make and sell, and infinitely worse to use this

SOURING, FERMENTING, ACID "COMPOUND" OF S. P. TOWNSEND,

and yet he would fain have it understood that Old Dr. Jacob Townsend's Genuine Original Sarsaparilla, is an IMITATION of his inferior preparation!!

Heaven forbid that we should deal in an article which would bear the most distant resemblance to S. P. Townsend's article! and which should bring down upon the Old Dr. such a mountain load of complaints and criminations from Agents who have sold, and purchasers who have used S. P. Townsend's FERMENTING COMPOUND.

We wish it understood, because it is the absolute truth, that S. P. Townsend's article and Old Dr. Jacob Townsend's Sarsaparilla are heaven-wide apart, and infinitely dissimilar; that they are unlike in every particular, having not one single thing in common.

As S. P. Townsend is no doctor, and never was, is no chemist, no pharmacentist—knows no more of medicine or disease than any other common, unscientific, unprofessional man, what guarantee can the public have that they are receiving a genuine scientific medicine, containing all the virtues of the articles used in preparing it, and which are incapable of changes which might render them the AGENTS of Disease instead of health.

should know well the medical properties of plants, the best manner of securing and concentrating their healing virtues, also an extensive knowledge of the various diseases which affect the human system, and how to adapt remedies to these diseases!

It is to arrest frauds upon the unfortunate, to pour balm into wounded humanity, to kindle hope in the despairing bosom, to restore health and bloom, and vigor into the crushed and broken, and to banish infirmity that OLD DR. JACOB TOWNSEND has SOUGHT and FOUND the opportunity and means to bring his

within the reach, and to the knowledge of all who need it, that they may learn and know, by joyful experience, its

Transcendent Power to Heal.

DR. JACOB TOWNSEND. NEW YORK, Oct. 5, 1848.

WALKED ACROSS THE ROOM

with the aid of crutches. Since then, I have walked in the street: have gone alone from 36 Spruce street to the Park; thence to Lovejoy's Hotel and back. I have been to 85 Nassau-street two different times, and am now frequently visiting my neighbors. During all this time, I have taken but two bottles of Old Dr. Townsend's Sarsaparilla. Oct. 4, I procured another bottle to-day (5th Oct.) I walked twice across the floor without the aid of crutches. I have also nearly recovered from obstruction of water, which gave me great distress. The pain in my back has likewise left me. I and my family have no earthly reason to ascribe my recovery to any other cause but to

OLD DR JACOB TOWNSEND'S SARSAPARILLA.

P. S.—Several able physicians despaired of my ever walking or even raising myself from my bed again.

AUNT MAGWIRE'S EXPERIENCE.

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'WIDOW BEDOTT.'

Don't care a snap for him, hay? Now, Nancy Harrington, I want to know if you think your gwine to make me believe such a story as that? I know better. I can see as fur into a millstone as anybody—and I know and have know'd for better'n six months how't you and Jasper Doolittle tuck a notion to one another. 'Tis extrawnary how gals will talk! If you don't care a snap for him, what makes you go with him to lecters, and concerts, and sleigh rides, and all kind so' dewins? Don't tell me you don't care a snap for him. He's a real nice young man tew—stiddy and industrious and dewin well—you never'll have a better chance in yer life—may be he haint said nothin pertickler to you yet—but that's no sign he aint a gwine tew as soon as he gits his curridge up. He's rather bashful, you know—it takes them sort o' fellers longer to come to the pint in such matters; they want considerabe spurrin up, and I advise you not to let nobody else hear you say you don't care nothin about Jasper Doolittle—trouble comes o'them kind o' speeches. I know by experience—I come purty nigh losin yer uncle Joshaway by making an unprudent remark o' that nater. I'll tell you how, and mabby you'll take warnin by it. I remember egzackly when 'twas—'twas in the month o' March, about tew year and a half arter sister Bedott was married; yer uncle and me'd ben keepin company all winter; he come 't our house every Sabberday evenin reglarly, besides always seein on me hum from singin-school and evenin meetins, and so forth—'twas town talk that we was engaged—Joshaway Magwire and Melissy Poole—that was was the story all round. But all this time, mind you—he hadent said a word tew me about havin him, though I was suspectin every day when he would. You see he was awful bashful. Well, one night, ('twas in the month o' March,) we was gwine hum from singin school—nary one on us dident say nothin for some ways. At last yer uncle ham'd and haw'd tew or three times, add then says he to me, says he, 'Melissy!' says I 'hay?'—but he dident continner for some time—arter a spell he ham'd and haw'd agin—and he says to me, says he 'Melissy!'—says I, 'Well—what?'—but still he dident continuer. At last I see we was a gittin purty nigh hum—so I says to him, says I, 'Joshaway—what was you a gwine to remark?'—So then he says, says he, 'I was a gwine to say—' but his curridge failed and he dident finish. Afore long we come to the gate, and there we stopt, (we used to stop awhile at the gate in a general way,) and says he, Melissy!' says I, 'Joshaway Maguire, what do you want?' 'Why,' says he, 'I was a gwine to axe you—'

Jest then yer granf'ther Poole opened the door and come out, and so yer uncle went off and I went in. Well—next day Hanner Canoot come in t' our house—and she begun to joke me about yer uncle—now I never could bear Hanner Canoot—she was a reglar mischief makin old maid—alweys a meddlin with every body's biziness in the place—and as sure as she see a young cupple appearently attached to another, she'd insiniwate svin or other against 'em. She couldent git no sweetheart herself, and it made her awful crossgrained and mad at them as could git 'em. I hadent never had no diffikilty with her—and yer gram'ther Poole used to say to me frequently, 'Melissy—dew be kerful what you say afore Hanner Canoot—she's a dangerous critter'—and I was kerful in a general way. And then, you see, there was her brother, Josiar Canoot—he'd ben tryin to be perlite to me tew or three years—and I wouldent keep company with him, nor have nothin to say tew him—and Hanner she knowd it, and she felt awful spiteful to me on account o' that. Speakin o' Siar Canoot—the last time I was up to Wiggletown, yer Aunt Bedott telled me he was quite pertickler to her. He haint never been married. I spose nobody wouldent have him—he was so lazy and so consarned disagreeable, and so awful humbly. Why his hair was as red as blazes—and he hadent no nose at all—and what there was on't turned right straight up. When yer Aunt Bedott tell'd me about his steppin up to her, I says, says I. 'I hope you won't incurridge him, Silly, for he's a poor shifiless crritter.' 'Why, no he aint, nother,' says she: 'he's been in the millentary and got to be Cappen Canoot.' 'I don't care for that,' says I: 'twouldent make no nifference to me if he was Gineral—he's Si Canoot and always will be.'

Well, I felt awful worried about it, and when I come hum, I telled yer uncle on't and says he, 'Oh don't you be afeard o' Silly's marryin him. I'll be bound he haint no idee o' marryin her. She always thinks the men has serus intentions if they look at her;' that's what yer uncle said; and I don't say but what 'tis so; sister Bedott's a curcus critter, tho' she's a nice woman in the main. Well I was a gwine to tell what Hanner said; she begun to joke me, (I was a spinnin on a gret wheel you see,) well she begun at me and says she, 'Melissey, they tell curus stories about you; 'whiz! whiz! whiz whent the wheel, and I pertended I didn't hear her. Arter a spell she spoke up louder, and says she, 'Melissey, they tell strange stories about you and Joshaway.' Whiz! whiz! went the wheel, and I made as if I dident hear a word she soid; so bymeby she turns to yer gram'ther, (she was a settin there,) and says she, 'How is it, Miss Poole? when's that are weddin a comin on!' 'What weddin?' says mother says she. 'Why, Melissey and Joshua Magwire, beshure.' says Hanner, says she. Never, not as I know on,' says mother, says she, 'I don't know nothin about no such bizness.' Well, she see she couldent git no satisfaction out o' mother, so she hollers to me agin, and says she, 'Seems to me yer rather hard o' hearin to-day, Melissey. Whiz-z-z-z went the wheel lourner'n ever, and I dident take no notice o' what she said.—Purty soon she bawled out again, and says she, 'I guess what makes you so deef, you must a ketchd cold in yer head last night; 'twas rather a long journey you tuck to git hum;' (you see yer uncle and me went hum by the turnpike instead o' gwine cross lots, but how the critter found it out, dear knows.) Well, I dident pay no' tention; but I tell you I was a gittin awful mad. Arter a spell she gets up and comes and dumps herself right down aside o' me, and says she, 'Say, Melissey, dew tell me when you and Joshaway's a gwine to step off; he's a very nice young man, tho, I guess he won't never set the river afire.' When she said that, I was completely ryled up. I'd been a growin madder and madder all the time; to think o' her tellin right afore mother about our comin hum by the new turnpike, and then sayin 'he never would set the river afire;' 'twas tew much, I couldent hold in no longer; so I turned round and shook my wheelpin in her face, and says I, 'Hanner Canoot, yer a meddlin old maid. I wish you'd mind yer own bizness and let'me alone about Josh Magwire; I wouldent wipe my old shoes on him!'

Now, what did the critter dew when I spoke so? Why she snorted right out a laffin, and says she, 'O, don't git in a passion, Melissy, don't; dew keep your temper till yer married, dew.' Purty soon she went hum. This was a Friday. Well, Sabberday come and I dident see nothing o' Joshaway. I thougt 'twas ruther queer, but I reckond on seeing on him to Wensday evenin meetin; so I waited with patience till Wensday evening come, and I went to meetin. Well he was there, and I sposed of course he'd wait on me hum; but when meetin was out lo and behold! he went straight apast me and axed Cloe Foggerson if he should have the pleasure o' seeing HER hum! Then it all come thro' my head like a flash o' lightnin, what I said to Hanner Canoot; and I well know'd she'd told him on't as if I'd heerd her. I tell you I felt like death! I never know'd till that minnit how much I sot by Joshaway Magwire; the idee o' losin on him was awful aggravatin. Well, I got hum some how or other and went straight off to bed; but I dident sleep nun that night. In the mornin I got up with a tremenjuous headache, and lookin as pale as a ghost. Mother, she axed me whether or no I wan't sick. I telled her no; but all that day I want fit for no biziness, dident have no appertite, and when night come yer gram'ther felt so consarned about me, she gin me a dose o' perrigarlick; cause she said if I dident sleep that night I'd sartinly be attackted with the fever. In spite o' the perrigarlick I dident sleep a wink that night nother. Next day I felt wos than ever, but I was awful high sperrited, and I was determined nobody shouldent know the reason. Thinks me, if Joshaway's a mind to use me so, he may, and be handged to him. I aint a gwine to kill myself on account o' him; he aint the only young man in the univarse. That was the way I talked (to myself) but talkin and dewin's tew things, you know, Nancy.—The more I tried to despise yer uncle, the more I couldent; the more I tried to hate him, the better I liked him. Well, so it went on for a number o' weeks. Yer uncle never come nigh me. I used to see him to singin school and to meetin, but he never offered to see me hum; always went with Cloey Foggerson. Afore long everybody was a talkin about him and Cloey Foggerson. But what worked me most was the gals began to blaggaurd me about losin my sweetheart, and thinks me, I'll git him back if I die for't. So arter pondering on't a spell, I made up my mind I'd incurridge Siar Canoot, and see if THAT wouldent bring your uncle tew. Si was ready enough to step up, you know, but I'd gin him the mitten so many times, he was afeard to venter. So one day I goes by his shop, (he was a waggin-maker by trade, you know,)—he was standing in the door as he always was, in a general way—(he was everlastingly lazy)—well, I says, says I, 'How de dew, Mr. Canoot?' I tell you I never see a surprisder critter 'n what he was; I hadent spoke to him in better 'n a year. 'Well as common,' says he. Says I, 'Why don't you never come to see us now days, Mr. Canoot?' The critter was mighty tickled, and says he, 'The reason I haint ben's cause I reckoned my company wa'nt agreeable.' 'O! Mr. Canoot, you mustent think so,' says I; and then I went off. Well, next night he come t' our house, and arter that he come every night, and I tell you 'twas an awful cross to me to treat him any way decent, for I hated the critter like pizen; but managed to be perlite tew him, and afore a week's time he poppt the question. I tell'd him 'twas very onexpected and I must consider on't a spell afore I gin him an answer. He seemed appearantly satisfied, and he continnered to wait on me; and I could see't yer uncle felt oneasy by the way he looks sideways at us whenever he see us together; but still he never come nigh me nor offered tew speak tew me; and so it went on for tew hull months. All the nabors begun to talk about Josiar Canoot and me; and Siar himself was a teazin on me to know whether I hadent considered eny most long enough; and what to dew I dident know. I was nigh upon crazy, my health failed, I hadent no appetite, nor no sperrits. Yet gram'ther was awful oneasy about me. You see I was all the darter she had left to hum.—Yer mar was married and gone, and yer Aunt Bedott was married and gone tew. Well, I got to be a miserable critter.

One evening, arter supper, I was in a dreadful state o'mind. I knowd Siar was a comin that night to git his anser, and I wanted to get rid on him. So I huv on my things and slipt out and went up to sisters Bedott's. She lived to the upper eend o' the village. Well, I found yer aunt Bedott to hum alone. Yer uncle Hez wan'nt in—gone to some meetin or other—and dear Kiar, (he was a baby then,) he was asleep in the cradle. 'I'm glad you've cum,' says Silly, says she, 'for I'm awful lonesome. Hez has gun off somewher, dear knows wher: 'tis amazin how any man CAN be willin to leave his pardner alone as he doos. I'm clear out o' patience with it; if it hadent a ben or that flambergasted young one's having the snuffles, I'd a went off somewher myself.' (Yer Aunt Bedott's a nice woman, but she was always an awful grumbler, they dew say she jawed the deacon out o' the world.) Well, so she went on, scoldin and frettin, and tellin her troubles and trials, for ever so long; at last I broke in, and says I, 'O! Silly, don't go on so; you don't know what trouble is.' I said it in a kind o' way that startled her, and says she, 'Melissy, what DEW you mean?' I bust right out a cryin. Your aunt huv down her knittin work and come up tew me, and says she, 'Melissy Poole, what is the the matter?' I kept on a cryin and dident anser. At last says she, 'Dew tell what ails you, Melissy, dew; taint nothin about Joshaway Magwire, I hope. I wouldent fret my gizzard for him; there's as good fishes in the sea as any't ever was ketcht yit.' Well, arter a spell, thinks me, I may as well tell her. So I telld her the hull from beginnin to eend; how yer uncle come to poppin the question; what I said to Hanner Canoot; how she provoked me to say it; how undoubtedly she'd told Joshaway on't; and all how and about it. Well, at fust yer aunt blowed me up sky high, for makin such an unprudent speech, (she was unprudent enough herself, but she hadent no patience with anybody else for bein so.) At last says she, 'What's said can't be onsaid; the only way to mend the mischief is for Joshaway and you to git together and make it up somehow.' 'But how CAN we git together,' says I, 'I can't go to see him, and he don't never come to see me no more.'

Arter thinkin a spell, says Silly, says she,—(Silly was always a cunnin critter,) 'I've got it now; you jest stay here and see to the baby, and I'll run into the widder Magwires; its a good while sence I've been there. It's purty dark now, and by the time I come hum it'll be awful dark, and Joshaway he'll come with me; he's did it several times—he's wonderful perlite—and when we git to the door I'll ax him in to see my husband. Hez won't be to hum taint likely, but Josh won't know but what he is, and when he once gits in, I'll bet forty gret apples you and he'll make it all straight purty soon.' 'O, Silly,' says I, 'that's a real good idee, but you mustent let him know I'm here, cause if you dew he won't come in.' 'I won't, sartin sure,' says she. So she put on her things, and off she went, and I sot down the back side o' the room and began a contrivin what I should say to yer uncle. O, Nancy! you've no idee what a state of pretuabation I was in; one minnit I was afeard I shouldn't say nothin to no purpose, and the next minnit I was eny most sure o' gittin Joshaway back again.

Well, sister Bedott was gone a hull hour. You see Joshaway wa'nt to hum when she went, and so she stayed till he come. It did seem to me as if she was gone a year. At last I heered em a comin. They got to the door and says yer uncle, says he, 'Good night.' 'O, you come in, dew,' says yer aunt Silly, says she; 'Mr Bedott wants to see you amazingly.' 'Well,' says he, 'I'll step in a minnit.' So in they come. 'Why,' says sister Bedott, says she, 'I wonder where husband is! you set down by the fire and I'll go call him; he can't be fur off, I'm sure; he wouldent go off and leave the baby alone.' So he sot down with his back to me—(I was a settin where he dident see me,) and she went off into tether room and shut the door. Gracious sakes alive! I never in my hull life experienced such fellins as I did that minnit, and I never shall again if I live a thousand yeer. It seem'd as if my heart would jump right out o' my mouth. Arter a minnit or so I HAM'D! Yer uncle he started and lookt round, and when he see me he riz up and made for the door. Thinks me, I've lost him now sartin, sure. Just as he got his hand on the latch, says I, 'Mr. Magwire!' He stopt and lookt round at me, and says he, 'Did you speak to me, Miss Poole?' 'Yes,' says I.—'What do you want?' says he. He spoke so cold and unconsarned I felt clear discurridged, and I jest burst right out a cryin. So then he come up to me, and says he, 'Melissy!' Says I, 'Joshaway, what makes you so cold and distsnt to me lately?' Says he, 'You're engaged, aint you, Melissy?' Says I, 'No, I aint; no such a thing.' Arter a minnit, he says, says he, 'What made you say you wouldent wipe yer old shoes on me?' 'Cause I wouldent,' says I, 'and there aint but one feller in the town I would serve such a mean trick, and that's Siar Canoot—he's jest fit to wipe old shoes on. Now, Nancy what do you spoze yer uncle done then? Why he huv his arms round my neck, and gin me such a thunderin smack as I never got afore nor sence. 'O, Melissy,' says he, 'we'll be married arter all the fuss, won't we?' 'I shouldent wonder,' says I. And we WAS married in less than a month, and I haint never had no 'casion to repent—for he's made a fust rate husband; but only think how nigh I come to loosin on him jest for speakin as I did to Hanner Canoot. She haint never ben nigh me sence I was married, and as for Siar, he was as mad as the Dragon.

COURTING SCENE.—Ah! Suke, you are sich a slick gal—heigho!

La! aint you ashamed, Jonathan?

I wish I was a ribbin-Suke.

Why for, hey?

'Cos, may be you'd tie me round that ere nice pretty neck of yourn, and I should like to be darned if I shouldn't.

O, la, there comes mother, run.

No. 2.—Ah! Jonathan, I heard somethin, about you.

La! now Suke, you don't say so?

Yes, indeed, that I did, and a great many said it, too.

La! now. what was it Suke?

O, dear! I can't tell you. [Turning her head.]

O, la! do now.

O, no, I can't.

O, yes, Suke.

La! me, Jonathan, you do pester a body so.

Well, do please to tell me, Suke.

Well I heard that—O, I can't tell you!

Ah! yes, come now, do. [Taking her hand.]

Well, I didn't say it; but I heard that——'

What! [Putting an arm around her waist.]

O, don't squeeze me so; I heard that ——that ——[turning her blue eyes full upon Jonathan's]——that you and I were to be married, Johnathan.

KISSING.—The statement of a Baltimore paper, some time since, that 'when a Baltimore girl is kissed, she says she is taking chloroform, and remains insensible as long as the operation lasts,' elicits the following from other journals:

When a Buckey girl is kissed, she throws up her hands and ejaculates, 'blissful moments, how they fly!'—Cincinnati Times.

When a Tennesee girl is kissed, she exclaims, 'Now put that right back where you got it from.'—Tennessee paper.

When a Louisiana girl is kissed, she gets miffed, and says, 'I'd like to see you do that again—I would.'—N. O. Delta.

The gross revenue of Canada for the past year has amounted to $2,226,095.

PLAINFIELD GAZETTE.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Thursday, March, 22, 1849.

Democracy, True Democracy, is a glorious and excellent principle--giving equal and exact justice to all—equal rights, equal privileges and an equal chance to all, so far as the inequalities of nature, and the imperfections of our present condition will permit. In zeal for this kind of democracy we will turn our back on no one.—Plainfield Union.

Yet the "Union" prefers the misrepresentations of whigery, to its own definition of true democracy; as is evident by his remarks dictating to and finding fault with the action of the people, in regard to the post office meeting. Doing all that it could to prevent the people from obtaining "equal rights, equal privileges and an equal chance to all."

Although the notice for the meeting was to the citizens of Plainfield and vicinity, (making no exceptions) and the call made by whigs, its officers were whigs, both candidates were whigs, and the meeting was attended by as prominent and respectable whigs as there are in town, the Editor of the Union among the number. And we were assured by a number of whigs who attended, that fully one half, if no more were whigs. Yet notwithstanding all this, the Union supposes that the candidate receiving but 7 votes out of 93 cast, will receive the appointment. Many profess, but all do not practice democracy.

☞ Since the above was in type, we have been informed by a respectable and leading whig, that by an actual canvass there were over 70 whigs at the meeting.

In our last week's paper will be found an article headed "Liberty and Equality," on which we make the following remarks:

Believing in the eternal and immutable principles of truth and justice, we do not fear error. It is only because truth has not been, and even now is not free to combat error, that error exists. And this must continue to be the case, so long as men prefer expediency to truth; thereby sacrificing their own true interest to the interests of party or sect. If men will thus continue to act, the day is far distant when we shall have liberty and equality.

Equality seem's to be to the writer of the article refered to, and doubtless to many others, the great stumbling block in the way of these opponents of freedom. Instead of attempting to argue against what our forefathers fought, and bled, and died, to establish; they would excite and alarm the prejudices of society against it.

Now as we have no prejudices, either for or against any measure affecting the rights of man, either religous or political, we will proceed to examine this subject.

In the first place then, we believe it will be generally acknowledged that our government is founded on equal rights, and equal laws, This has been the boast of our countrymen all over the world; they declare its simpliciy and beauty, and that the most humble individual is eligible to its most exalted stations; and those from the most humble walks in life have arisen to and enjoyed its highest honors; and that in this equality of rights, its great beauty, justice, and consequent durability consists. Shall the color of the skin be the only barrier, the only exception to its universal adoption.

But although all, with the above exception, are eligible to its honors, it does not necessarily follow that all can enjoy them.

Henry Clay, although in all respects eligible to the office of President of the United States; yet after repeated trials he could not obtain it, the people determining by the same equal rights otherwise, yet their so determining does not deprive him or any one else of their just rights. Even so would it be admitting all that the aforesaid article says the blacks claim for themselves. Make them eligible to all the rights that are claimed for any, and it by no means follows that even a prjudice need be outraged.

But society in many respects is so constituted, acts on so many false and selfish motives, that it is a very easy matter for might to take the place of right. We have only to excite some prjudice of a party or sect, and a selfish end is obtained to the exclusion of man's just rights; cry out amalgamation, and it answers the purpose better than all the arguments the opponents of freedom can bring against it. But we believe even this is beginning to fail; men will discuss this question, and discussion dispels error, and men act accordingly.

Although as we have shown above a man may be every way qualified by talents, by all necessary political rights, may be ambitious to obtain it, and have a powerful party to back all this, yet be unable to obtain it. Is it any more likely to follow, then by extending to a slave all the political rights enjoyed by the most talented or wealthy individual, that he would therefore be more likely to succeed? Does it follow, that because John Doe is elligible to any office; to vote and be voted for at a town meeting; that he must marry Richard Roe's daughter? If we substitute for the name of John Doe the name of some slave that has become eligible to the same rights, does it necessarily follow that he must marry her? We see no such necessity, any more than there is in the case of Henry Clay being president because he has all the political rights necessary for it.

In conclusion, we would ask. Is this question of equal rights as laid down in the declaration of independence a fundamental principle of a republican form of government, or is it not? If it is, then it is the interest of all men to carry it out. If it is not, then it is the interest of all to crush it.

What would have become of the rights of the people of these United States if our forefathers had hesitated to strike the blow for fredom, on account of any prejudice which might have been excited against those words in the aforesaid declaration of independence, "All men are created free and equal and have certain inalienable rights, among which are Life, LIBERTY and the pursuit of happiness."

Shall it be said that the decendents of those who fought and died that the above declaration might be carried into effect were detered by a prejudice from advocating what they died to maintain?

To the Editors of the Plainfield Gazette.

Sirs: In looking over the "Union" of this week, I observe that its editor has given a strange account of the meeting last week, which was called for the purpose of nominating a suitable person to fill the office of Postmaster. He says there were over one hundred persons present, and that the officers and perhaps a dozen others were whigs; but the large majority were democrats. Now sirs, is there any apearance of truth in the assertion, of there being so many democrats. Let his own story tell. He goes on to say that two persons were nominated. Now these were both whigs. Now if there were so many democrats, they must be more liberal than the Union, or they would not have given so large a vote for a whig. But sirs, If the Editor is for carrying out the sentiment with which he heads his paper, why does he strive to keep up a division instead of a "Union." We would suppose one who preached peace on earth and good will to men, would persue a different course.

How long is it since this same Union was neutral; then democrat; then abolition; directly after free soil; now an honest whig? What he will be four years hence none can say; no doubt you will find him with those in power, who have the loaves and fishes. PITT.

A Journal of Health, adopted to popular and professional reading, and the exposure of quackery, edited by Edward H. Dixon, M. D. New York, and for sale by Charles H. Ring, corner John st. and Broadway.

The object as stated by the Editor, is to convince the People that the time has come, when the use of the ordinary powers of reason possessed by an intelligent, perhaps an intellectual being, are sufficient, if used, to protect him from the heartless operations of ignorance and quackery.

We have examined the number sent us, and as far as we are capable of judging it carries out the object as stated above, we would add that it is published quarterly at $1. per year in advance.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—All the townships but two in the 3rd Congressional district, give Wilson, Whig, 7506; Vose, Dem. 6823. His majority in the district, according to the Boston Atlas, will be about 600.

In the first district, as far as heard from, Tuck, Whig, has 5495 votes, Kittridge, Dem. 4771. Tuck is re-elected, but by a much diminished majority compared with the vote two years ago.

Hibbard and Peaslee, Democrats, are elected in the other two districts.

Politically, therefore, the delegation stands as before.

Dinsmoor, Dem. is elected Governor by a large majority.

For the Plainfield Gazette.

Gentlemen: In your last weeks paper I took occasion to notice two or three laws which our legislators (not "legislatures" as your types made me say) had enacted during their recent session. It is in passing these and similar measures that employs the legislature session after session. Look over the statute books of the state, and observe what is the character of their contents. Are they not mainly composed of acts of incorporation for banking, manufacturing, mining, ralroad, turnpike, and other companies? Many of our churches, benevolent societies, and cemetries are also incorporated. Look, too, at the multitude of laws authorizing the Smiths, and Joneses, and Jenkinses, to build docks, bridges, etc. And mark the many instances in which the legislature has annulled the testaments of deceased persons, by authorizing the heirs, while minors, to sell real estate, although positively prohibited by the will of their parents.

Is it any wonder when the legislature fritters away its time on such matters as these, that subjects of the higest importance to the people are entirely neglected?

It would be unreasonable to expect a body which is constantly employed in grinding out charters for all sorts of projects, to consider and enact laws of a general character, which would enable one man or any number of men to weave or spin or build docks without first applying for a special act of the legislature.

During the last quarter of a century how little has been done for the many, and how much for the few! While turning over volume after volume of our state laws how it grieves the friend of equal rights and priviliges to observe how much the state has done to build up monopolies of the most odious character, whose tendency is to make the rich still richer and the poor yet poorer.

We are now beginning to reap some of the bitter fruits of this system of legislating for the benefit of the few at the expense of the many. Already some of these monopolies have become monsters, who have become too strong to be managed. From small beginnings they have acquired privilege after privilege until they now control the liberties of the people. Is not the charge reiterated from all quarters, from a thousand tongues, that our state legislation is controlled by the railroad companies? Is it not notorious that the Camden and Amboy monopoly has never applied for any new privileges but what, sooner or later, it obtained them? And do not some of these companies show by their acts that they are above the law? How often, for instance within three years has the New-Jersey Railroad been presented by the grand juries of the different counties through which it passes, and the aid of the courts invoked, but invoked in vain! Look at its utter disregard of the lives and property of those who are obliged te travel near its road and over its bridges!

Did you ever know a case in our Courts where a person recovered damages for injury to life or property caused by these incorporations? And is it not asserted by many who have traveled much over these roads, and who have otherwise had good opportunities for forming a correct opinion, that many of the engineers employed on these roads would as soon run over a horse or a cow which might be on the track, as to pass them by the side of the road unharmed? Do not imagine that these men would be thus reckless, were they not tolerated at least, if not encouraged, by their employers. But let one of them be careless of the property of the company, and how quickly, he would be discharged!

Our laws are constantly violated by some of these railroad companies in their utter disregard of the Sabbath. Does not this one fact speak strongly of the contempt which they entertain for the people?

Have not the citizens living on the lines of these roads frequently sought to prevent this shameful desecration of the Sabbath, but without avail? But let a poor man—no matter what may be the necessity—undertake to saw a load of wood or work in his garden on that day, and how soon would the strong arm of the law be invoked—and successfully, too—for his punishment. What a holy horror would it excite in his neighborhood, and how eloquent would the public prosecutor be in denouncing his transgression! And the judge, too, before whom the poor culprit might be brought; how zealously would he invoke the jury to punish severely the wretch who—"not having the fear of God before his eyes, but being instigated and moved thereunto by the devil"—could thus sin against "the peace and dignity of the State."

But in the case of these companies there is nothing wrong. Certainly not! They are incorporated bodies—associations of gentlemen—aye, of moneyed men—embracing in their number most of our legislators, judges, lawyers, and many members of our most popular churches—for (and it grieves me when I say it,) it is a fact which cannot be controverted, that a large number of the heaviest stockholders in these railroads are members of Christian churches! What if these men do run their cars and steamboats on the Sabbath; are they not wealthy and therefore respectable citizens, occupying the most distinguished places in church and state? And if a hundred or two common people, poor men, are compelled to work on these roads on that day, do not their employers, or at least many of them, attend church, and kneeling on cushions of down, thank God that they are "not as other men." And when the clergyman prays that they may not be led into temptation, and be kept from evil, do they not with great unction respond Amen! And if the cars do come thundering along close to the church door at the hour of prayer, do not suppose this will disturb their devotions. Not in the least! If you think it does, yon are not acquainted with the weighty argument which keeps their consciences quiet. They will tell you it is necessary that the cars should run to carry the mails! But they say nothing of the fact that they carry double the number of passengers on the sabbath, that they do on any other day of the week! Of course, that is their business.

Now I insist upon it that the friends of fair play—the advocates of equal rights—should have these companies compelled to respect the sabbath, as well as the poor man. Up, then, friends of equal laws! and do your duty in this matter. If the sabbath is to be regarded as a day of rest by us, let us not have it trampled down by soulless corporations. A. J.

Great Flood at Chicago---Loss $100,000!

Chicago, March 13—8, P. M.

We have been visited by a terrible flood which has destroyed an immense amount of property. The damage done to commerce alone is estimated at over $100,000.

The following is a list of the vessels destroyed and damaged, as far as ascertained, to this hour:

Brig St. Louis, sunk, entire loss; Schrs Norton and Diamond, broken into; Brig Europa, sides stove in and sunk, loaded with salt; Schr. Whirlwind, sides stove in and sunk. The brigs Ashland and Gen. Worth, Schr. H. Hagar and others, badly damaged. The Gen. Warner has sunk.

It is impossible, at this time, to ascertain correctly the amount of damage to property in this vicinity. Propellers, vessels and steamers are all jammed into one another; some are lying on the top of one another, and all appear to be in the utmost confusion.

The water is still rising, and great fears are entertained that the destruction will increase.

All the canal boats, with the exception of one or two, are entirely destroyed or have gone into the lake. Several vessels have gone outside and are now anchored in the lake. One or two lives have been lost by the falling of spars on board of vessels in the harbor.—Albany Journal.

ACCIDENT ON THE HARLEM RAILROAD.—As a freight train of the Harlem Railroad which left the Depot at Twenty-seventh-st. at 6 1-2 this morning was approaching the tunnel, a piece of rock weiging several hundred pounds fell upon the track, and in an instant the locomotive and tender were dashed to pieces.—Several of the new and heavy freight cars were also entirely destroyed, while the track was torn up for a considerable distance. The engineer, by some miracle, sustained but a slight injury. The fireman after the occurrence was found clinging to a piece of projecting rock some distance from the track, and in what manner his and the Engineer's lives were saved is quite a mystery. At the last accounts from the scene of disaster, workmen were actively engaged removing the fregments of the wreck from the road; but a temporary track will necessarily have to be laid down before cars can pass over the road, in the meantime the New-Haven albany, Boston and Croton Falls passengers are detained at the Depot at Thirty-second st. with but little prospect of gettin under way for some hours to come.

Post Office Meeting.

A meeting of the citizens of Plainfield and vicinity was held in pursuance of public notice given, at Laing's Hall, on Thursday the 15th inst. Joel Dunn, Esq. called the meeting to order; whereupon Jonathan Cory, Esq. was called to the chair, and Joseph Annin, appointed Secretary.

The Chairman, after a few pertinent and well considered remarks, stated the object of the meeting to be the selection of a suitable person to be presented to the Post Office Department at Washington for the place of Post Master at Plainfield, in the event of the removal of the present incumbent.

On motion it was Resolved, That the persons who should be nominated to this meeting as candidates, should be voted for by ballot.

Elisha Runyon, Esq. and Henry A. H. Martin, Esq. being nominated, the meeting proceeded to an election with the following result: E. Runyon, 7, H. A. H Martin, 86.

On motion, Resolved, That the proceedings of this meeting be signed by the chairman and secretary and published in the Plainfield Union, and Plainfield Gazette; and that a copy thereof be forwarded to the Post Master General.

UNITED STATES BANK.—It appears to have been the "manifest destiny" of this $35,000,000 monster, to meet with trouble in all the stages of its existence, and even after its decease.

According to the Pennsylvanian, all that has been collected of the credits of the bank, under the assignment, which took place about seven years ago, is $1,288,311 10. About ten per cent, or $128,000, have been deducted from the gross receipts for lawyers and agents in different parts of the country. The following are given as expenses of the trust:—

'Salaries received by the trustees	$79,404 13
" " their clerks	45,104 96
Counsel fees in Philadelphia	56,081 75
Other expens (nobody knows what)	73,107 83
	$253,788 67

Making the enormous sum of upwards of a quarter of a million paid for the collection of a little over one million of dollars—in other words, an estate which under any other circumstances, according to the laws of Pennsylvania, could have been settled in about three years, for two and a half per cent, has been subjected to a charge of upwards of thirty per cent, and still remain as profitless to the creditors as it was on the day upon which the assignment was made.'—*N. SICKNESS.—It is reported that there are upwards of 700 patients at the Bellevue Hospital, including sixty cases of typhus fever, and that much sickness prevails at the Marine Hospitals and those on Ward's Island.

NO-LICENSE IN VERMONT.—The people of Vermont have determined that no license to sell liquor shall be issued in that State for the year to come. Last year they voted just the other way. The returns have not yet been all received, but the No License majority will not be less than 10,000 or 12,000. Twenty towns give 3,000.

MORSE'S TELEGRAPH CLAIM.—Judge Cranch of Washington has decided that Mr Bain has a right to a patent for his mode of telegraphing. This decision is against the Morse monopoly.

LENGTH OF DAYS.—At Berlin and London the longest days has sixteen and a half hours. At Stockholm and Upsal, the longest has eigteen and a half hours. At Hmburg, Cantzic, and Stettin, the longest day has seventeen hours, and the shortest seven. At St. Petersbugand Tobolsk, the longest has nineteen, and the shortest five hours. At Torneo, in Finland, the longest day has twenty-one hours and a half, and the shortest two and a half. At Wanderbus, in Norway, the day lasts from the 21st of May to the 22nd of July, without interruption; and at Spitzbergen, the longest three and a half months.

Horrible Tragedy---Murder---Suicide and Conflagration.

Correspondence of N. Y. Tribune.

WARREN, Bradford Co. Pa. Mar. 11,

I have just returned from the scene of a most horrible tragedy which took place last night. About midnight Mr. Wm. Manning of this place saw a blaze of light in the direction of the house of Charles Corben, one of his immediate neighbors. He at once gave the alarm and hastened toward it. He found both house and barn wrapped in devouring flames. It appears there were at the time only three persons in the house, Mr. Corben and his two sons, one seven and the other thirteen years of age. Judge of the horror of the benevolent neighbor when he saw that the room occupied by the children had just fallen in, and on the straw bed, not yet consumed, lying among the ruins, where the disfigured and scarcely recognizable remains of the two boys; their limbs were already burnt to ashes. The body of the wretched father lay near them on his back, his body similarly mutilated by the fire. It was too late to stay the conflagration. As soon as possible the almost formless cinders were removed. It could be seen that the father had cut his own throat after firing the house. There is no doubt in the minds of the neighbors that he first killed the children or stunned them by a blow on the head. He also tied up eighteen head of cattle and ono horse in the barn previous to setting it on fire.

The motive of this fearful crime is thought to have been a brutal ferocity excited by hatred of his innocent and affectionate wife. He had often threatened her life and last Thursday, alarmed at his menaces, she escaped and went to Owego He then went and on ptetence that his wife was dangerously ill persuaded his daughter, who had also fled from his cruelty some months before to return to the house. There he confined her. treating her like a fiend, till yesterday afternoon, when with difficulty she again escaped. Immediately after he must have proceeded to carry out the horrible purpose whose results I have above described. Yours, respectfully, H. W.

It strikes us that Corben was decidedly insane and that his neighbors should long before have had him put under suitable restraint.—[Ed. Trib.

Railway Enterprise in the United States.

It is a matter of legitimate pride and congratulation to the American people that their comparatively infant country should already be accommodated with a larger amount of railway communication than any other country in the world. It is difficult to believe that this can be the case—that a nation which was fighting for its very birth only seventy years ago, should already have outstripped the hoary nations of the Old World in the successful employment of these most important auxiliaries to civilization refinement and social happiness.

On the first of January last, there were six thousand four hundred and twenty-one (6,421) miles of rail laid in the United States, and in operation.

In the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland there were only four thousand four hundred and twenty, less than in the United States just two thousand and one miles. In France there were one thousand two hundred and fifty; in Germany, three hundred and seventy; and in the rest of Europe, only sixteen hundred and thirty-eight miles.

It is worthy of being borne in mind, that none of the railroads in the United States have received any aid from the General Government, while there is scarcely one in operation in Europe, which has not been chiefly if not entirely built at the public expence. Many or rather some of our roads have received the aid of the State Governments, but probably the whole amount of public money invested in this kind of property, does no exceed if it equals two per cent, upon the aggregate amount of railroad capital in the United States.

Such a contrast goes farther than a cart-load of essays to explode the notion that aid of the Government is necessary to develope the physical resources of a country, and that the representatives of the people are neglecting their duty in leaving such important results to be accomplished by the tardy operation of individual enterprise. It is sufficiently apparent from the foregoing statistic, that capital, mechanical skill and industry can be commanded more freely by private enterprise than by public patronage.

In this connexion it may be interesting to compare the cost of roads in England and France with those in this country, to see whether the difference may not suggest some profitable inferences. The average cost of all the railroad in the United States has been say $30,000 per mile. In France, say $110,000. In England, say $145,000. or nearly five times as much as in the United States.

MARRIAGES ON SUNDAY.—It is said that the Pensylvania courts have decided that marriage is a civil contract, and that they have also decided that no contract made on Sunday is valid. The Register says that the question is now being agitated whether marriages made in that State on Sunday are lawfull and whether indictment for bigamy can be sustained, where the first marriage had taken place on Sunday.

REMARKABLE TRACE OF ANTIQUITY.—The perfect skeleton of an Indian woman was found last Wednesday afternoon in the sand-bank excavation adjoining Niagara River, immediately back of Major Whitney's new residence. We understand that it rested in a sitting posture with its head facing the North, (true Indian style,) about four feet below the surface. Immediately above grew a large hickory, two feet in diameter, at least 200 years old whose huge roots encircled the skeleton on every side. Owing to the frost in the sand, and the number of roots to be removed, it was obtained with great difficulty. Rumor says Indian relics were found with it. [Niagara Falls Iris.

EMIGRATION AND COLONIZATION.—'Ma,' said a young lady to her mother the other day, 'what is emigration?'

Daughter.—'What is colonizing, ma?'

Mother.—'Colonizing, dear, is marrying there and having a family.,

Daughter.—'Ma, I should like to go to California.'

PROSPECTUS FOR 1849!

PETERSON'S MAGAZINE,

(OR: THE LADIES' NATIONAL.)

EDITED BY MRS. ANN S. STEPHENS.

The proprietor of the Ladies' National Magazine returns his thanks to the American public for their liberal patronage of his magazine, and commends to their attention the following reasons for preferring it: As a Literary Magazine it stand unrivalled, its authors being the best in America, and its contents original.

As a Fashionable Monthly it is first: its fashions being the real Philadelphia and New-York ones, but issued in advance.

As a Family Magazine it is invaluable. To render fiction useful is the great aim of the work; hence its domestic stories are pronounced by the press and the public unequalled in truth and merit.

As a Pictorial work it is without a superior: more superb mezzotints appearing in it than any other periodical. For cheapness and merit combined, it has no parallel. At two dollars we furnish a periodical rivalling the three dollar ones in elegance, and infinitely more useful to the sex. Our success in this reduction of price is owing to a rigid adherence to the cash system and to payments in advance.

NEW CORPS OF CONTRIBUTORS.

Several new contributors of talent have been engaged for next year, which will relieve this Magazine from the objection so frequently brought against others, of being filled only with the hackneyed writings of worn-out tale-writers. We shall thus be able to give peculiar freshness to our Magazine for 1849.

THRILLING NOUVELLETES.

In addition to our domestic sketches, stories of the heart, tales of manners, &c. we shall publish several nouvellets, chiefly confined to illustrating the days of '76, those times that tried men's souls. Among these is a tale entitled 'Martin Rudolph,' founded on the report, that a Capt. in Lee's Legion went to France after the revolution, entered the French army under another name, and rose to be the great Marshal Ney. A tale, entitled 'Philadelphia in 1776,' illustrated by mezzotints, will be furnished by C. J. Peterson: this story will embrace the Declaration, the Battle of Trenton, Valley Forge, &c. &c. Mrs. Stephens will contribute several of her thrilling stories.

THE BEST FOR THE SEX.

For 1849 we shall issue, each month, an Editor's table, devoted expressly to the sex, containing information on new styles of embroidery, furniture, crotchet work &c. also new receipts for the housewife, and horticultural intelligence: in a word a perfect vade mecum.

OUR SPLENDID FASHION PLATES

This magazine has always been the best guide for the fashions, which we get in advance. The costumes are selected, engraved and colored for us a month ahead of all rivals. To each plate is added a letter-press description, besides information on all the latest styles.

OUR SUPERB EMBELLISHMENTS.

One of our superb mezzotints, engraved as they generally are from original pictures, costs us more than two, or even three of the ordinary plates that appear in other magazines. Such an engraving as 'The Fall of Babel,' which appeared in our November number, is almost priceless.

A HIGH MORAL TONE.

The other magazines are intended to amuse: this has a higher plan in view. Its object is to instruct while pleasing; parents may place it, with advantage in the hands of their daughters.

Terms: These are cheaper than any other Magazine can offer:—Two dollars a year invariably in advance. To Clubs: 3 copies, $5,00. 5 do $7,50. 7 do $10,00. 16 do $20,00.

PREMIUMS.

To the postmaster or other person obtaining a club of three or five, we will send a copy of 'Trumbull's celebrated picture of the Battle of Bunker Hill,' executed on steel. For a club of seven or sixteen either an extra copy of the magazine, or a copy of the 'Military Heroes of the Revolution,' an octavo of five hundred pages, illustrated with two hundred wood, and eighteen steel engravings, and sold for $3.

Address, post-paid, the money at our risk,

'My dear, don't say tale, say narrative,' said a modest lady to her little son, who was relating a very nice, interesting 'tale' he had just read in the newspaper. While the little fellow was thinking of his sad mistake, the old house dog walked in, shaking his tail and looking quite familiar at the boy, when he exclaimed: 'Ma make Sancho quit shaking his narrative!'

JUST PUBLISHED,

ALLEN'S COMPOUND OF AMERICAN AGRICULTURE.

R. L. ALLEN, Esq., author of the popular work entitled 'Domestic Animals, their Diseases and Remedies,' of which thirteen editions have been published in twelve months, has, after years of practical experience and close investigation, completed his Great Work of Practical Agriculture, illustrated by about 100 engravings. The work will be bound handsomely and substantially in cloth, and furnished at one dollar, single copies, can be sent by mail to any part of the United States.

This work, we most fully believe, is destined to have a more widely extended circulation than any work of the kind heretofore published. Mr. Allen, knowing the wants of the community, has met those wants in a plain, concise and familiar manner, and has made a work intelligible to all. It will be a book for

THE WHOLE PEOPLE,

Its cheapness will cause a large sale, and it will be a Book for Everybody, as well for the man who consumes the products of the earth, as for him who raises them.

150 AGENTS,

active, intelligent and honest, are wanted, to sell this book in every state in the Union.

N. B.—A cash capital of from $25 to $50 will be necessary. Address, post paid,

BOOKS FOR THE AMERICAN PEOPLE.

TO BOOK AGENTS AND CANVASSERS.

THE FOLLOWNG

VALUABLE NATIONAL WORKS

Are decidedly the best Books that Agents can possibly employ their time in supplying to the people of the United States.

THEY ARE INDISPENSABLE AS BOOKS OF REFERENCE TO OUR

Senators, Representatives in Congress, and State Legislatures,

and should be possessed by all the Young Men of this Great Republic, especially those who are aspiring to distinction and fame in our Halls of Legislation. There is not a city or town in these United States, even those of small importance, but contains many citizens to whom these works are indispensable. They are sacred Archives of our common Country. The Chronicles of American Independence!

Postmasters, Colporteurs, and Book Agents, are invited to secure such districts of country as they are most familiar with and desire to occupy. All applications are requested to be made without delay.

OUR PLAN.

☞ The plan the publisher has so successfully carried on for several years, is the obtaining Responsible Men as Agents, who are well known in their own Counties, Towns, and Villages, and have time and disposition to circulate good and instructive Books among their Neighbors and Friends. By taking a glance at the following list of Books it will easily be discovered that they are adapted to the Christain, the Patriot, the Statesman, and the Domestic Circle. Any person wishing to embark in the enterprise, will risk nothing by sending to the Publisher $20, for which he will receive sample copies of the principal works, affording a very liberal per centage to the Agent for this trouble.

1776!

A Faithful chronicle of the war of American Independence.

1776, OR THE WAR OF INDEPENDENCE.

A History of the Anglo-Americans, from the period of the Union of the Colonies aginst the French, to the Inauguration of WASHINGTON, the first President of the United States. Beautifully illustrated by numerous Engravings, showing the plans of Battles, Prominent events, and Portraits of Distinguished Men of the period. By BENSON J. LOSSING. In handsome emblematical binding. Price $2.50.

☞ To every true-hearted American, this is a most welcome and invaluable work: it is the voice of our Fathers calling upon us to guard most sacredly the precious boon of Freedom; to purchase and secure which, they offered upon their Country's altar, their lives, their fortunes, and their sacred honor.

Opinions of the Press.

(From the American Signal.)

"We have been deeply interested in reading a new and splendid patriotic volume, entitled '1776,' published by E. Walker, of New-York. The embellishments, which are very numerous, are of the most perfect description, and carry the mind of the reader back to the period when the Continental Armies were marshalled to defend our native land We advise all the readers of the Signal to add this book to their libraries, and teach the rising generation to value the priceless lessons it contains so abundantly."

(From the New-York Express.)

"The book is elegantly printed and bound, and the engravings (seventy-eight in number) form in themselves a rare historical gallery of great interest and variety, displaying the originality and taste of the author-artist in this department. As a whole, we have no hesitation in commending this volume as the best popular history of our Revolution yet published."

(From the Evening Mirror.)

"This is the title of a very elegant looking book of some 500 pages published by Edward Walker, 144 Fulton-street. The work is beautifully illustrated with a great number of engravings, and the typography and binding are absolutely faultless. It contains a great amount and variety of information relating to the Revolutionary period of American history, and is a work which will, doubtless, command a very extensive sale."

"With regard to the tone and spirit of the volume, the felicity of the style of narrative and reflections, and the great care taken to insure accuracy, as is shown by the author's frequent reference to the best authorities, I am confident that he is entitled to the reputation of a competent and faithful historian.

EDWIN WILLIAMS."

(From the Albany Spectator.)

"This is a great national work, the beauties and excellencies of which should be studied by every one who would understand the history of human freedom, and the inalienable rights of man."

(From the Knickerbocker Magazine, August, 1847.)

"The enterprising and patriotic-spirited publisher of this exceedingly beautiful volume will find thathe has not misjudged in believing that 'a book in one volume, well written and embracing a faithful chronicle of events which accomplished the laying of the foundation stone of this great republic, would be invaluable to the present and future generations.'"

THE PRESIDENTS OF THE UNITED STATES, THEIR MEMOIRS AND ADMINISTRATIONS.

To which is added, an account of the Inaugurations of each President and a history of the principal political events of his administration, and of the transactions of Congress at each session during the period.

Declaration of Indendence.

Articles of Confederation.

Constitution of the United States, with Notes and References.

A brief history of the events and circumstances which led to the Union of the States, and formation of the Constitution.

A synopsis of the Constitution of the several States.

Tables of Members of the Cabinets of the various administrations, Ministers to Foreign Countries, and other principal public officers.

Chronological Table of Political Events in the United States.

Statistical Tables of Revenue, Commerce and Population.

A Complete List of Members of Congress from 1789 to 1846.

With Portraits of the Presidents, engraved on steel in the best style of the art, from the most approved likenesses. By V. BALSH, Esq. of Johnstown, N. Y. In one large handsomo volume, 8vo. in emblematic binding. Price $2.50.

☞ No expense has been spared in the preparation of these volumes of Documents, History, and Statistics, to render the same worthy of patronage, not only of Statesmen and Legislators, but of the American public generally; who will find them the Treasury of political knowledge and a mass of information indispensable to every intelligent citizen

STATESMAN'S MANUAL,

COMPRISING THE

LIVES, ADDRESSES, AND MESSAGES OF THE PRESIDENTS OF THE UNITED STATES.

From Washington, to Taylor's Inaugural Message, March, 1849 With a History of their Administrations, and of each Session of Congress.

Also, various Historical, Statistical, and other importantant public Documents, and a complete Index, or Analytical Table of Contents to the whole work. Edited by EDWIN WILLIAMS, Esq.

Illustrated with Portraits of our 12 presdents, engraved on Steel, from the most approved authorities, and in the best style of the art. Printed on the best paper, and handsomely bound in emblematic style. It will also be embellished with Views of the Capitol, president's House and the Seals of the several States, and the United States. In four large volumes. Price $10.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS. &C.

From the President of the United States

"To Mr. E. WALKER. Dear Sir.---I have found your Statesman's Manual a valuable work, and exceedingly useful and convenient. Yours, J. K. POLK.

(From the Hon. Henry Clay.)

"My Dear Sir: Your Statesman's Manual is a very valuable work for reference."

STATE OF NEW-YORK,
Department of Common Schools,
ALBANY, Sept. 18, 1848.

I have examined the Statesman's Manual, in two volumes octavo, compiled by Edwin Williams, and am of the opinion that it is a proper work for school district libraries, and deserving of a place in these institutions, designed for the diffusion of useful knowledge. Signed. J. S. RANDALL,
Dep. State Sup't Com. Schools.

(From the Journal of Commerce.)

"This is one of the most important books published in the United States for a long time."

(From the N. Y. Courier and Enquirer.)

"This is the most important contribution to American political history ever published."

(From the Democratic Review)

"The whole forms a most complete library in itself, of all that concerns the politics of the country. No individual should be without these volumes at hand for prompt reference. How many hours of idle discussions and senseless debates might be spared to heated partizans, were these books at hand for appeal. We shall have frequent occasion to refer to them."

(From the N.Y. Express, Aug. 21, 1846.)

"This is emphatically a national work, and as such eminently deserving of a national support."

(From the Commercial Advertiser.)

"Such a work is invaluable, and is offered at a comparatively low price, in expectation of a large sale."

(From the Luzerne Democrat.)

"The Statesman's Manual is a valuable work, comprising a complete condensed political history of our country from the formation of our government until the present time"

(From the Washingtonian, Ohio.)

"It is but scanty praise to say, that no work of equal value to the American Statesman, politician, journalist, historian, &c. has ever before appeared."

(From the Harrisburg, (Pa.) Argus.)

"No politician, no man who desires to understand the history of the several administration of the general government, should be without a copy of it. As a book of reference it is invaluable."

REV. DR. DOWLING'S GREAT WORK ON ROMANISM.—A NEW AND ENLARGED EDITION, WITH THE AUTHOR'S LAST ADDITIONS. A BOOK FOR EVERY PROTESTANT!

THE HISTORY OF ROMANISM,

FROM ITS EARLIEST ORIGIN TO THE PRESENT TIME. BY REV. JOHN DOWLING, D. D.

Embellished with upwards of fifty highly finished engravings, chiefly from original designs.

Just published, with the Author's final corrections, a new and enlarged edition of this splendid and popular work, with a copious Supplement, comprising a History of the Life and Reign of the present remarkable Pope, PIUS IX, and a Biographical Sketch of the last Pope, GREGORY XVI.

The best encomium upon this learned, complete and popular History of Romanism, is the fact that SIXTEEN THOUSAND COPIES have been sold in about three years, and still there is a constant demand for it in all parts of the country. In order to meet this demand, and to gratify the public curiosity in relation to the present pope, Pius IX, the present enlarged edition is presented to the public. With the Supplement, the work now forms a splendid octavo volume, for the parlor or for the library, of 732 pages.

Testimonials to former editions, selected from more than a hundred, from all Protestant denominations.

EPISCOPAL.

From the Protestant Churchman.

"This is a beautiful volume of 672 pages. Good service has been done for the cause of truth by its publication, and it certainly ought to secure for its author an enviable reputation among contributors to the standard literature of the day."

From the Episcopal Recorder.

"It traces its subjects from the earliest corruptions of Christianity to the present time. It has a full Chronological Table, with Analytical and Alphabetical Indexes and Glossary. It is a large and beautiful volume, full of valuable information."

METHODIST.

From Zion's Herald.

It is written in a popular style. Its engravings are numerous and finely executed. The book will doubtless be popular and cannot fail to produce a profound conviction of the terrible iniquity of Anti-Christ.

Rev. Geo. Coles, of the Christian Advocate and Journal, says: "I cannot but express my gratitude to Almighty God that such a concise and complete developement of 'the Mystery of Iniquity' is now presented to the public in a form so elegant and attractive."

CONGREGATIONAL.

Rev. Dr. Cheever, in the New-York Evangelist, says: "We ought to have noticed this excellent and beautiful work before It possesses many and very strong claims for popular favor, and we do not doubt that it is destined to have an extraordinary sale. The work itself is characterized by great research, and a comprehensive and scriptural view of the naturo and history of the Popish system."

PRESBYTERIAN.

From the (Philadelphia) Presbyterian

"Such a work required deep and protracted research, and it affords evidence that diligence, caution and judgment, in the selection and arrangement of materials, have not been wanting. The author has availed himself of the writings of both protestants and papists, and has brought together a greater mass of information on the history, the spirit, and the doings of Popery than we have ever before seen in one volume."

MISCELLANEOUS.

From the Christian Intelligencer, (Dutch Reformed.)

"Those who would see a correct and condensed exhibition of the ten thousand abominations of the Papacy, may find it to their amazement in 'Dowling's History of Romanism.' Its contents form a rich storehouse of historical instruction, which, if could be placed within the reach of every family, would prove an unspeakable blessing to our beloved country. This is the book for Americans. Place it beside your Bibles. Compare its records of crime and the Papal principles it exposes, with the holy doctrines and immaculate life of Jesus of Nazareth. When you have done this, you will have no difficulty in determining whether or not Romanism is christianity."

Rev. Alexander Campbell, president of Bethany college, of the church of the Reformers, says: "In this work are an immense assemblage of facts and documents connected with the development and history of this great mammoth institution of error and iniquity. Popery is developed in this treatise from its birth to the present hour. We desire for this book a very large circulation. It is only necessary to enlighten this community of the true spirit and character of the Papal system, to secure them against its insidious attacks upon everything we as a people hold dear and sacred. Let every one buy this work, communicate freely to all around him the develpement which it reveals, and the facts which it records."

President Cramp, editor of the Montreal Register, and author of the Text Book of Popery, says: "This important work possesses merits of a high order. We are pleased to see that Dr. Dowling furnishes ample references to his authorities. The matter is well arranged; the facts unquestionable; the style lucid; and the spirit Catholic, in the proper sense of the term. Its extensive circulation will be highly advantageous to protestanism."

Notwithstanding the extensive supplement now added to this valuable work, the price will remain the same as the former editions, Three Dollars per copy.

THE POOR.

YOUR PURSE AND HEART.

Open not your purse alone,
  Its lucre to impart ;—
Of the two 'tis better far
  You freely open your heart.
That which wrings the bosom most,
  Your money won't allay :
Sympathy 's the sun that turns
  Its darkness into day.

For the body, if ye will,
  Your bread and broth still dole,
Love's the only nouirshment
  That satisfies the soul,
Jingling change like that ye give
  May please the baser part,
But kind and gentle words and looks
  Alone can reach the heart.

Warmth is not all the poor demand,
  Nor shelter, nor yet food ;—
Ye who pause, bestowing these,
  Withhold the greater good.
What they want, and what require,
  All things else above,
Is kindly interest in their fate,
  And sympathy, and love.

HISTORY OF A LIFE.

BY BARRY CORNWALL.

Day dawned. Within a curtained room,
Filled to faintness with perfume,
A lady lay at point of doom.

Day closed. A child had seen the light ;
But for the lady, fair and bright,
She rested in undreaming night.

Spring came. The lady's grave was green;
And near it, oftentimes was seen
A gentle boy with thoughtful mien.

Years fled. He wore a manly face,
And struggled in the world's rough race,
And won, at last, a lofty place.

And then—he died ! Behold before ye,
Humanity's poor sum and story :
Life—Death, and (all that is of of) Glory.

TRUST, SWEET LADY, TRUST!

Trust ! trust ! sweet lady, trust !
  'Tis a shield of seven-fold steel,
Care and sorrows come they must,
  But sharper, far, is doubt to feel !
    Trust ! trust ! sweet lady, trust !

Trust the lover, trust the friend—
  Heed not what old rhymers tell—
Trust in God, and in the end,
  Doubt not all will still be well.
    Trust ! trust ! sweet lady, trust!

THE DISCOVERY.

BY THOMAS HOOD.

'It's a nasty,' evening said Mr. Dorton, the stock-broker, as he settled himself in the last inside place of the last Fulham coach, driven by our friend Mat—an especial frient in need, be itrememered, to the fair sex.

'I wouldn't be outside,' said Mr. Jones, another stockbroker, 'for a trifle.'

'Nor as a speculation in options,' said Mr. Parsons, another frequenter of the Alley.

'I wonder what Mat is waiting for,' said Mr. Tidwell, 'for we are full, inside and out.'

'Mr. Tidwell's doubt was soon solved—the coach door opened, and Mat somewhat ostentatiously inquired, what indeed he very well knew—'I believe every place is took up inside ?'

'We are all here,' answered Mr. Jones, on behalf of the usual complement of old stagers.

'I told you so, Ma'am,' said Mat, to a female who stood beside him, but still leaving the door open to an invitation from within. However, nobody spoke—on the contrary, I felt Mr. Hindmarsh, my next neighbor, dilating himself like the frog in the fable.

'I don't know what I shall do,' exclaimed the woman ; 'I've no where to go to, and its raining cats and dogs ?'

'You'd better not hang about anyhow,' said Mat, 'for you may ketch your death—and I am the last coach—aint I, Mr. Jones ?'

'To be sure you are,' said Mr. Jones rather impatiently, 'shut the door.'

'I told the lady the gentlemen couldn't make room for her,' answered Mat, in a tone of apology. 'I'm very sorry, my dear,' (turning towards the female,) you should have my seat, if you could hold the ribbons—but such a pretty one as you ought to have a coach of her own.'

He began slowly closing the door.

'Stop, Mat, stop !' cried Mr. Dorton, and the door qaickly unclosed again ; 'I can't give up my place, for I am expected home to dinner ; but if the lady wouldn't object to sit on my knees—

'Not the least in the world,' answered Mat, eagerly, 'you wont object, will you, ma'am, for once in a way with a married gentleman, and a wet night, and the last coach on the road ?'

'If I thought I shouldn't uncommode,' said the lady, precipitately furling her umbrella, which she handed in to one gentlemen, whilst she favored another with her muddy pattens. She then followed herself, Mat shutting the door behind her, in such a manner as to help her in 'I'm sure I'm much obliged for the favor,' she said, looking round ; but which gentleman was so kind ?'

'It was I who had the pleasure of proposing, Madam,' said Mr. Dorton; and beforehe had pronounced the last words she was in his lap, with an assurance that she would sit as lightsome as she could. Both parties seemed very well pleased with the arrangement ; but to judge according to the rules of Lavater, the rest of the company were but ill at ease. For my own part, I candidly confess I was equally out of humor with myself and the person who had set me such an example of gallantry. I, who had read the lays of Troubadours—the awards of the 'Courts of Love'—the lives of the 'preux Chevaliers'—the history of Sir Charles Grandison—to be outdone in courtesy to the sex by a married stockbroker ! How I grudged him the honor she conferred upon him—how I envied his feelings !

I did not stand alone, I suspect, in this unjustifiable jealousy ; Messrs. Jones, Hindmarsh, Tidwell, and Parsons, seemed equally disinclined to forgive the chivalrous act which had, as true knights, lowered all our crests, and blotted our escutcheons, and cut off our spurs. Many an unfair jibe was launched at the champion of the fair, and when he attempted to enter into conversation with the lady, he was interrupted by incessant questions of 'What is stirring in the Alley ?'

'What is doing in Dutch ?' 'How are the Rentes ?'

To all these questions Mr. Dorton incontinently returned business-like answers, according to the last Stock Exchange quotations ; and he was in the middle of an enumeration, that so and so was very firm, and so and so very low, and this rather brisk, and that getting up, and operations, and fluctuations, and so forth, when somebody enquired about Spanish Bonds.

'They are looking up, my dear,' answered Mr. Dorton, somewhat abstractedly ; and before the other stockbrokers were done tittering, the stage stopped. A bell was rung, and Mat stood beside the open coach door, a staid female in a calash and clogs, with a lantern in her hand, came clatering pompously down a front garden.

'Is Susan Pegg come ?' inquired a shrill voice.

'Yes, I be,' replied the lady who had been dry-nursed from town—'are you, ma'am, number ten, Grove Place ?'

'This is Mr. Dorton's,' said the dignified woman in the hood, advancing her lantern—'and—mercy on us! you're in master's lap !'

A shout of laughter from five of the inside passengers corroborated the assertion, and like a literal cat out of the bag, the ci-devant lady forgetting her umbrella and her pattens, bolted out the coach, and with feline celerity rushed up the garden, and down the area of number ten.

'Renounce the woman !' said Mr. Dorton, as he scuttled out of the stage—'Why the devil didn't she tell me she was the new cook ?'

MARRIAGE

Jacobus de Voragine, in some arguments, succint, elegant, and forcible, declares the benefits of marriage. They are these :

1. Hast thou means ? In a wife thou hast one to keep and increase them.
2. Hast thou none ? Thou hast one to help thee get some.
3. Art thou in prosperity? She doubles it.
4. Art thou in adversity ? She will comfort, assist, and bear thee up.
5. Art thou at home ? She will drive away melancholy.
6. Art thou abroad ? She prays for thee, wishes thee at home, and welcomes thee with joy.
7. Nothing is so delightsome as home : no society is equal to that of a wife and children.
8. The bond of conjugal love is adamantine.

—The above "arguments" rest upon the presumption that the wife is a good one. In this matter of wives, it is as emphatically true as in the case of Job's turkey's that 'the good are very good, but the bad are'—not to be desired.

☞ What clever chap wants a wife ?—Here is a first rate chance :

"We are now working out our notice, and shall soon be out of employment—can turn our hand to most anything—don't like to be idle—but determined not to work for nothing where folks can afford to pay. Who wants help ? We can make dresses, bonnets, pies or cakes ; can patch, darn, knit, roast, stew, or fry; make butter and cheese, milk cows, feed chickens, and hoe corn ; sweep out the kitchen, put the parlor to rights ; make beds, split wood, kindle fires, wash and iron, besides being remarkably fond of babies ; in fact, can do anything the most accomplished housewife is capable of, not forgetting the scolding on Mondays and Saturdays ; for specimens of spunk, will refer you to the overseer of the factory in which I now work. Speak quick ! black eyes, fair forehead, clustering locks, beautiful as a Hebe, can sing like a seraph, and smile most bewitchingly ; an elderly gentleman in want of a housekeeper, or a nice young man in want of a wife ; willing to sustain either character—in fact, we are in the market. Who bids ? Going, gone ! Who's the lucky man ?"

FACTS IN PHYSIOLOGY.—Elephants live for two, three, and even four hundred years. Bats, in India, are called flying-foxes, and measures six feet from tip to tip. Sheep, in wild pastures, practise self-defense by an array in which rams stand formost, in concert with ewes and lambs, in the centre of a hollow square. Three Hudson's-Bay dogs draw a sledge, loaded with 300 lbs., fifteen miles a day. One pair of pigs will increase in six years to 119,160, taking the increase at fourteen times per annum. A pair of sheep, in the same time, would be but 64. A single female house-fly produces in one season 20, 080, 320 eggs. The flea, grasshopper, and locust jump 200 times their own length, equal to a quarter of a mile for a man.

'APPEALING TO THE INWARD NATURE OF CHILDREN.'—Writers on education now-a-days, in treating of the government of children, have much to say about 'appealing to their inward nature.' The doctrine was practically illustrated in School street Sunday. A lady finding some difficulty in making a couple of children walk home from church in a becoming manner, said to them—'If you behave so, see if you don't have to take some castor oil as soon as you get home. Now, take my word for it, just as sure as you are alive.' The children immediately drew up demurely by her side, and moved along as gravely as mutes at a funeral.'

☞ It affords a very peculiar pleasure, as we grow older, to see in our offspring another and more lovely form, embodying the thoughts and sentiments we once nursed in ourselves. It is then no wonder that we feel warm-hearted towards the object that seems the incarnation of our youth ; the living portrait of all that was bright in ourselves.

☞ The latest case of absence of mind reported, is that of a man deeply involved in debt, who went on board of a vessel bound for California, to take leave of his friends, and forgot to come ashore again.

☞ The friendship of some people is like our shadow, keeping close to us while we walk in the sunshine, but deserting us the moment we enter the shade.

The Independant Treasury

The March number of the Merchants' Magazine, a Whig periodical, thus frankly speaks of this favorite Democratic institution :

'To what end, and for what purpose, should we get rid of the Sub-Treasury ? It has, thus far with all its faults and trials, passed through an unexpected war, involving an immense expenditure of treasure, without wavering ; and with similar soundness in the movements of our monetary affairs, we have with perfect regularity and calmness preserved ourselves through a period of great speculative excitement. In my judgement, had we been deprived of the controlling interference of this power, a wild scene of ruinous extravagance would have been exhibited, which, like the mania of 1836, would have terminated in general and disgraceful bankruptcy. The system has acted conservatively, through the natural force of its inherent power to check expansion. The importation of twenty millions of dollors, the price of our breadstuffs, would have inflated the currency to such an extent, had the banks been at liberty, that, by this time, we should either have returned to Europe double the amount of specie we extracted The Sub-Treasury kept down the value of foreign merchandise to specie prices ; and in the ratio of its influence, in regulating our home market, were our merchants enabled, those, at least. who were moderate in their expectations, to make fair and profitable voyages.'

☞ The editor of the Lake Providence (La.) Republican in his last number brags considerably about the improved condition of the streets in his town. Because he was able to see above the mud the ears and a small portion of the heads of a mule team that was driven through one of the streets the day before, he says "the mud is nothing like as deep as it has long been !"

HOW TO RENDER CLOTH, SILK, &c., WATER PROOF.—Take one pound, each, of common alum, (sulphate of alumna,) and sugar of lead, (acetate of lead,) and dissolve them in six quarts of boiling water, well mixed by stirring. When cold, the top portion of the mixture should be poured off for use, as the sediment consists of sulphates of lead, potash, &c. Any article of dress, no matter how slight the fabric, if well saturated with this liquid and allowed to dry slowly, will bear the action of boiling water, and not permit it to pass through it.

MR. AND MRS. SNIPPE.—'Hey, hey ! what's that ? where, allow me to ask, are you going at this time of night, Mr. Snippe?' cried a lady, in notes of ominous sharpness.

'Out,' responded Snippe, with a heart-broken expression, like an afflicted mouse.

'Out, indeed ! where's out, I'd like to know ? where's out that you prefer it to the comfortable pleasures of your own fireside ?'

'Out is nowhere in particular, but everywhere in general, to see what's going on. Every body goes out, Mrs. Snippe, after tea they do.'

'No, Mr. Snippe, every body don't—do I go out, Mr. Snippe, without being able to say where I am going to ? No, Mr. Snippe, you are not going out to frolic, and smoke, and drink, and riot round, upon my money. If you go out, I'll go out too. But you're not going out. Give me that hat, Mr. Snippe, and do you sit down there, quietly, like a sober, respectable man.' And Snippe did.

A REMEDY FOR THE CVLIFORNIA FEVER.—A friend who has seen some service in camp life, offers to those afflicted with the prevailing epidemic the following prescription :

1st. Sleep three nights in your wood-house with the door open and swinging in the wind, during which time let your diet be pork cooked by yourself at a smoky fire in the garden. 2d. Improve all the rainy nights in sleeping between your currant-bushes and garden fence. 3d. On the fourth day of our regime ; let the diet be mule steak. 4th. Thereafter dispense will all kinds of food save dog meat

If this be followed resolutely, it is confidently believed a permannet cure will be effected.

Why is an honest man like a carpenter? said one gentleman to another. 'Why, because he is a plane dealer.' 'Ah ! I see it now, you have made it a deal planer,' was the reply.

Why is a troy-weight like a thief?—Because it happens to have no scruples.

Delays are dangerous. No, they are not—when a man thinks of marrying or going to be hanged.

PLAINFIELD GAZETTE.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Thursday, March, 29, 1849.

On and after Monday next the 'Gazette Office' will be removed to the building lately occupied as the Post Office, opposite the 2nd Presbyterian Church.

Free School.

On the second day of April next according to notice given, we are to meet at Laing's Hall to select three or more suitable persons to act as trustees for the ensuing year. As the subject of education is one of very great importance, it is to be hoped that all will use their influence to make it efficient. A Free School in this Village is a new thing; and very much of its efficiency depends upon the spirit of the people in regard to it. If they desire its success, they must all lend a helping hand; throw away all jealousies if there are any existing on a subject which concerns the interests of all. Full one half of the work is done when commenced, if commenced in the right spirit. A reasonable share of success has thus far attended our efforts. Much also depends upon the selection of suitable persons as trustees, as upon them depends the choice of teacher, and also the proper expenditure of the money raised for its support, with a due regard to economy and to its utmost efficiency. All who pay a tax for its support have a voice in the choice of trustees; It is therefore the duty of all to attend this meeting, and cast their votes for such persons as in their judgment will best fulfil this most important trust; and when such choice is made, to second by their own important and necessary duty the efforts of the men they so select.

Town Meeting.

Our annual Town Meeting is near at hand. It will be held in this place at Laing's Hall on the 9th. day of April next.

Are all disposed to act for the best interests of the Township on that day, in the selection of such officers as will act justly, and for the best interest of the whole people; without regard to fear, favor, or party influences? Or shall we consider adherence to party principles, and tact at electioneering, as the best qualifications for township officers? We do hope and believe there is yet sufficient intelligence in the great majority of the people, to see, that in the selection of men, that fitness of qualification for the office, and honesty and independence of principle to carry out his qualifications, are all that are necessary; and that they, by the selection of such persons, will best carry out the interest of the whole people.

In voting sums of money, it is our opinion that it is the greatest economy to vote such sums as are sufficient to effect the object desired; whether that object be the free school, the indigent poor, or the public highways. For instance we think it good economy to vote such sums of money as are necessary and sufficient to sustain our public free school; as persons when arriving at a proper age to act for themselves, are more likely to become good and useful members of society with than without an education; are less liable to become an expense to the town; as no person that has a moderately liberal education while their health and strength lasts will ever become a town charge. It is also a great prevention of crime; and prevention is better than cure. Also a very trifling addition to, or more economical expenditure of the money for that purpose would give us good side walks, which we very much need; surely all would be benefited in their healths from dry feet, to say nothing about the conveniece and pleasure of such an improvement. And surely no man will grudgingly care for the poor, the old, and infirm. It is merely that you may bear it in mind that we mention it; we sometimes overlook this important part of our duty in the cares and business of every day life; certainly no one who has his health and a shilling can fail to share that shilling with those from whatever cause may need it; a proper care therefore we hope will be given to the townships poor. As we before observed, on a proper selection of township officers depends in a great mearure the judicious and economical administration of its affairs.

The Baptist Position Defended;

Or, animadversions and remarks on Kirwin's (Rev. Dr. Murray) Charges against the Baptists. By W. H. Turton, pastor of the Baptist church, Elizabethtown, N. J. in pamphlet form, is for sale at this office.

Post Office Meeting.

"On Monday evening of last week, after the Union had been circulated about town, we were informed that our statement, that the democrats were largely in the majority at the meeting, was a mistake, and accompanied with proof sufficient to satisfy us that the two parties were about equally represented, as regards numbers. We therefore stand corrected, on that point"

"If the people in general, or the Whigs in particular, will agree on either one of the three, or upon any other, no opposition will be expressed by us, though of course, we have our choice."

"As all of the candidates are good whigs and either of them, if appointed, would without doubt faithfully perform the duties of the office."

"But it is said we have been a Democrat, Abolitionist, Free Soil Man and Whig. All right, we have been all these, and what is more we are still."—Plainfield Union.

All right: Our neighbor of the Union makes a clean breast of it; by admitting all we have said in regard to the Post Office meeting; as all good men should do, and no doubt feels much the better of it. He is also a Democrat, Abolitionist, Free Soil Man and Whig!! "All right," he says, "We have been all these and what is more are still!!" Good again, perfectly rght, go ahead. But there are 500 voters says the Union, and the 200 (there were no doubt fully 200 there, and considering the dark night and bad travelling, was a very full meeting,) cannot decide for the 500. But neighbor from our own knowledge, and from information from whigs themselves, and as also would appear from a communication in another column, a majority of the 300 not there were satisfied with things as they were, and of those that were there, were equally well satisfied, but in the event of a change, designated who they prefered. Yet our neighbor is not satisfied to let the majority rule. Now as "the people in general," and "the whigs in particular," have agreed on "one of the three," we hope our friend is satisfied.

How our neighbor considers matters of this kind personal we cannot perceive; personally we could say so much in our neighbors favor that he might think we were not sincere.

We shall always consider all such matters proper subjects of public scrutiny, and shall make our comments on them independently, without fear or favor, allowing at the same time the same privilege to others, without considering them personal. If we have conveyed any such impression it was unintentional. But our neighbor having doubtless got entangled by endeavoring to advocate his above antagonistical compound, says and takes things different from what they are intended.

William Penington of New Jersey was appointed Governor of Minesota, by the Prsident and Senate.

The Water-Cure Journal, and Herald of Reforms.—Devoted to the Philosophy and Practice of the Hydropathic System of Curing and Preventing Disease: Joel Shew, M. D Editor. Published Monthly by Fowler and Wells, 131 Nassau street, New York.

We have recieved the 1st. and 2nd. numbers of Vol. 7 of the above Journal. And as far as our knowledge extends on such matters, must beg leave to differ on the subject of cold water, as being sufficient of itself to cure long standing and deep seated diseases. But as prevention is much better than cure, we can cheerfully agree and reccommend with it, a more liberal use of pure cold water, internally as well as externally, in the place of the vast amount of injurious narcotics now made use of. It is well worth the subscription price ($1. per year in advance) for the many other excellent things it contains; It being also a strong advocate for temperance in all things.

Fremonts Expedition.

Dreadful Suffering—Fremont's Party all Perished except himself.

The Independence (Mo.) Republican of Feb. 2, contains letters from Taos, New-Mexico, which represent the winter as having been very severe: That Col. Fremont, while passing through one mountain gorge lost 130 mules in one night; that he was left to make his way on foot, and determined it was impossible to proceed farther, finally dispatched three men to seek some settlement. Succor not returning in 20 days, Fremont started for Taos, distant 350 miles, where he arrived in nine days. Major Beale immediately dispatched a party of dragoons, with mules and provisions to relieve Fremont's party.—Fremont was much emaciated, but accompanied the expedition.

The sufferings of the party are represented as having been very great, having even been forced to the extremity of feeding upon one another.—N. Y. Tribune.

For the Plainfield Gazette.

A few of our townsmen, it is well known, are trying to create an impression that our excellent and efficient postmaster, Elias Kirkpatrick, Esq. will be removed, or at any rate, will not be reappointed. Now, it appears to me that these gentlemen are rather fast in their asssertions. Who but they desire any change in the office? Is there anybody who is entitled to credit that will say that the present incumbent has not proved himself every way qualified to discharge the required duty? Is he not faithful, honest, obliging? Is not the office in a central and convenient location, built of brick, fire proof, the only fire proof building in town? Will any one venture the assertion that one quarter of our citizens desire a change?

If the law provided for the election of postmasters by the people (as it should do, and will do before many years,) does any one doubt that the present incumbent would receive an almost unanimous vote?

I shall be greatly disappointed if the few busy-bodies who desire a change (for their own benefit) are able to affect it. I will not believe that Gen. Taylor will remove a valuable public officer like Mr. K. to make room for any one who claims his place as a reward for electioneering services.

The Dead coming to Life.

A young woman of Orleans Co. N. Y. named Spencer was taken slightly ill a few evenings since. She went to bed, and in the morning was found insensible and supposed to be dead. Her funeral took place yesterday in the presence of a large number of the neighbors. Shortly after the conclusion of the funeral sermon, and before the coffin had been moved for the purpose of carrying it to the grave, it was discovered that life was not yet extinct. She was once more placed on the bed and the work of resuscitation commenced. It is, however, still doubtful whether she will recover or not.

An Operation by Chloroform.

We witnessed an operation yesterday, under the influence of chloroform, for the removal of a cancerous disease of the breast of a lady, by Dr. Beakley, of this City. The liquid was administered through the medium of a sponge applied to the nostrils of the invalid, and in about ten minutes she sank into a state of insensibility, when the operator commenced his work, with a degree of intrepidity and self-posession peculiar to himself. The disease involved the entire right breast, extending upward as far as the glands in the region of the arm-pit. The time occupied in cutting was about thirty-five minutes. Not a word was uttered during the entire period, and she was only conscious of what had transpired after the effects of this mysterious agent had passed away, in finding herself deluged in blood, and a smarting sensation which followed a return to consciousness. I am told she is doing very well to-day.—N. Y. Tribune.

Explosion and Loss of Life at Pittsburg.

Pittsburg, Monday, March 26.

At 11 o'clock to-day, the boilers in Fife's vatting factory in Allegany City exploded, carrying away the roof of the building, and throwing the boilers 40 feet Five bodies have been dug out of the ruins, but there are others badly injured. Mr. J. Fife was among the killed. Such was the terrible force of the explosion that five dwellings situated near the factory were destroyed! An investigation is to be made into the cause of this awful calamity. Farther particulars will be furnished as they transpire.

Riot in Toronto.

Toronto, March 23.

The Ministerial measure for the payment of the riot in Toronto. Last evening, March 22, Messrs Baldwin, Blake and McKenzie were burned in effigy. They were carried through several streets, elevated upon long poles, passing from the residence of Mr. Blake, and then returning to Mr. Baldwin's. The effigies of the two were then burned. The mob, went to the house of Mrs McIntosh, where Mr. McKenzie was stopping, where his effigy was burned, and the house assailed with stones and all manner of missilies, completely riddling the windows. The gaslights in the vicinity were put out and the poliece resisted. The house of Mr. Montgomery, which is situated nearly opposite, was attacked and the windows much damaged. Mr. H. Price, son of Hon. J. H. Price, was severely beaten, and on being conveyed to the residence of Dr. Rolph, that gentlemen's house was assailed by the mob and slightly damaged. The residence of Mr. Brown, of the Globe, was also injured.—Courier and Enquirer.

Hyer's Trial.—The tryal of Hyer, which has just terminated in Kent Co. Maryland, resulted in his conviction, and a fine of $700, with costs, which swell the amount to $1,000. It is not ascertained whether the fine has been paid, or Hyer released on bail.

The Tariff.

The Annual Report of the late Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Walker, was so convincing, and likely to commend itself so strongly to the good sense of the American people, that the Protectionists in Congress felt it necessary to present some counteracting influence. Accordingly, a resolution was adopted by the House of Representatives, (a majority of whose members were Protectionists,) instructing the Committee of Ways and Means —Mr. Hudson, of Massachusetts, being chairman—to, inquire into the expediency of reporting a Tariff bill passed upon the principles of the Tariff of 1842.' Towards the close of the session this Committee presented a long Report, which fell almost still-born upon the public, having, so far as we have observed, been printed in but one paper, the Philadelphia North American, although probably it has appeared in a few others without our knowledge. Now, as it is a pity that this labored effort of the Protectionists should go for nothing, we have resolved to contribute our share towards delivering it from so melancholy a fate, and accordingly present it, entire, in onr columns this morning. With a good many of the Tariff fallaces on its front, it now avoids endorsing the black Tariff of 1842, but proposes a sort of medium between that and the Tariff now in operation. It proposes a restoration of specific duties, in most cases, instead of ad valorem, pretending that the latter open the door for frauds, which in fact is not so, because the invoice is never received by the appraisers as a test of the value of the goods. On the contrary, if there is any evidence of fraud, or of undervaluation in the invoice, the goods are at once 'marked up' by the Appraisers, and in case of objection by the importer, the question is referred to a committee of merchants, whose decision is final. The Report represents that the duties levied by the Tariff of 1846 'are nearly high enough as a whole but several important modifications seem to be required by the country.' It however appears from the details of the modifications proposed, that they cover every considerable article of Am. manufacture such as cotton, wool, hemp, iron, and coal We trust the friends of commercial freedom will not be caught in this snare.—N. Y. Journal of Commerce.

A New Legal Expression.—When the Normans introduced these laws into England, they published them either in Latin or Frech; the latter being their own language, and the former the then colloquial language among the learned. Hence we still use, in the recital of our laws, which are, for the greater part, derived from, or pased upon, those of England several French or Latin expressions, such as Oyer & Terminer, Habeas Corpus, ne exact, &c. Our legislators now seem to think that our own language is sufficiently copious to afford legal expression enough, without having recourse to that of any other country, and have commenced using English instead of Latin. Their debut in the transmutation of expressions does not however appear to be any great improvement, if we are to judge by the effect produced yesterday in the Court of Common Pleas, by the recital of a clause of an Act lately passed at Albany, which says: 'Where a defendant is about to leave the State, whereby the rights of the plaintiff may be impaired, and order of 'No Go' may be granted, and this shall be a substitute for the writ here tofore known as the writ of ne exact.' This new legal expression 'No Go' called up such a ludicrous aassociation of ideas, from the vulgar signification hither to attached to it, that the whole Bar burst into laughter.—N. Y. Journal of Cammerce.

The New Jersey Pilots.—The Report of the New-Jersey Commissioners of Pilotage, just published states that during the past year they have had four cruising-pilot boats in service, employing 21 branch and 4 deputy pilots, the most of whom have been on unremitted active duty during the year—having taken into port 675 vessles: 646 of which are duly reported as having been hoarded out of sight of the light-house at Santy Hook, and many were from 150 to more than 200 miles from shore. During the same period, 597 vessles have been taken to sea.

There have been in charge of the New-Jersey Pilots, thus far, says the Report, 11,387 vessels: many of which were of the greatest draft, including a number of large steamers. Of this number, 5,885 have been piloted into port, and 5,502 taken out.

The New Coinage.—The double eagles, or twenty dollar pieces, and the gold dollars, or units, are to resemble the other gold coinage, except that on the reverse of the dollar the eagle is to be omitted. They are made a legal tender, and like penalties are annexed to counterfeiting these and other United States coins.

It is estimated the Tobacco costs the United States $16,000,000, annually, of which $9,000,000 are for Spanish Cigars. What nonsense!! Money enough, to give every child an education, worse than buried in the earth. When will our people learn wisdom?

Keep Bees.—Bees cost nothing for their food, neither for their pasturage in summer, nor for their provisions in winter.

FOURTEEN DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

Arrival of the Canada.

The Canada, Capt. Judkins, with European news to the 10th inst. arrived at Halifax on Thursday evening shortly after 9 o'clock, having experienced very heavy weather on her passage. She was detained 15 hours off the harbor in one of the most terriffic gales known on the Coast of Nova Scotia. The same gale, which was from the southwest, was most severe felt in the Bay of Fundy, and no doubt has caused many marine disasters

The Canada left Halifax at 12 o'clock and arrived at her wharf, New-York early on Sunday. She has 99 passengers.

ENGLAND.

Financial Reform Bill.

In Parliament on 26th ult., Mr. Cobden in a speech of the most temperate character, brought forward his long heralded financial reform budget, the main object of which was to cut down our expenditure £10,000,000 per annum. He was met by the Chancellor of the Exchequer who adduced an epitome on all the arguments which during the last two months, had infirmed the strength of Mr. Cobden's suggestions. The debate which followed, falsified all the expectations entertained by the friends of the financial Reform Champion. It languished from the beginning, and the question was disposed of on the same evening, Mr. Cobden's amendments being rejected by a majority of 197 —the number being 275 to 78.

Wreck and Great Loss of Life.

The frighful wreck of an Emigrant ship has taken place on our coast, off Harwich. The bark Floridian, of 500 tons, E. D. Whitmore, Master from Antwerp for New-York. the property of Messrs. E. D. Hurlbut & Co. chartered by a German Company to convey emigrants, was wholly lost on the 28th ult and all on board perished, with the exception of three individuals who were miraculously rescued from death The master and crew, together with 126 passengers, were drowned. 126 green hides, 125 cases of glass and various other articles from the wreck were carried into Margate on the 4th inst. Other articles also reached Ramsgate on the same day.

FRANCE.

Increase of Confidenee.

The French Government continues to gather strength, and there is evidently a growing disposition, on the part of the nation, to crush any attempt at public disorder. Upon the whole, the prospects of tranquility are more favorable than they have been during the past year. The labors of the Assembly have ceased to be of any interest--they have been chiefly occupied in pushing the electoral laws. As an evidence of the strength of the Government, it may be mentioned that an attempt to censure the minister for calling out the troops on the 29th of January was lost by the large majority of 254.

Trial of the Insurgents.

Barbes and Blanqui, with other state prisoners, have been transported to Bourges which is strongly protected by troops. The trials commenced on the 7th inst. when the Court was constituted, and such was the interest excited, that there were reporters from the United States in attendance to take notes.

INDIA.

Another Battle—Great Slaughter.

The details of the late warlike intelligence from India have more than ordinary interest, but we can at present make but brief allusion to the subject. The Bombay Telegraph says another of those murderous conflicts has occurred on the left bank of the river Ihelum, near, as some say on the indentical spot which 2,000 years ago formed the battle-field of Alexander and Porus--that scene, rich in classic associations, has been the arena of a fierce and protracted struggle between the Army of the Punjaub under Lord Gough and the Sikh force. The Sikh forces was under Rajah Shwere Singh, a struggle in which the Brittish have to deplore the loss of at least 93 officers and 2,500 men killed and wounded, 4 guns captured and 4 or 5 Regimental Colors taken by the enemy. The struggle, which terminated in victory, was disgraced by fligh, of the Bengal Cavalry Regiment and the retreat, as yet scarcely satisfactorily explained, of two British corps of Dragoons. A struggle which left the contending hosts so weak and shattered that it was doubtful which had surtained the greatest injury from the conflict, and which yielded so few of the badges of triumph for the victors that their opponents took a new position and fired a salute in honor of its termination. Though masters of the field our laurels are drenched with blood, and it is the universal opinion that two more such victories would be virtual ruin. No attempt is made by the English press to disguise the fact that the news from India is of the most disastrous character Lord Gough has been promptly superseded in the command by Siar Charles Napier, who was to have proceeded to the scene of hostilities on the 20th ult.

ITALY.

The Revolution in Tuscany.

The Revolution of Tuscany is completed The Republic has been proclaimed at Leghorn. Florence and a central Italian Republic has been formed in union with the Romans. The Grand Duke has protested against this revolution, and has entreated all the powers of Europe to refuse to recognise the new authority, which he declared to be a violation of the Constitution agreed to by all parties last year, committed by a few factious men only.

ROME.

A Bonaparte Vice-President.

The Prince of Canino has been elected Vice-President of the Republic of Rome.

The Pope after halting between addition and soliciting foreign intervention, has now, it is said made an application to Austria and it is confidently stated that Spain is about to send a division of 10,000 men to aid in restoring his Holiness.

The latest intelligence from Italy states that the Roman Ministry had communicated to the Assembly that a joint intervention of Austria, Spain and Naples is announced. France had not decided what part to take.

PATERSON ROBBERY TRIAL.—The trial of Daniel Dermond, arrested at Paterson, N. J. with John A Calvin and E. Gile, for robbing the clerk of Drew, Robinson & Co. of this city of $8,500, was commenced on Tuesday last.

On Thursday night the Jury returned; on Friday they asked in vain to be discharged and at 8 o'clock this morning as our correspondent at Paterson writes had been out 37 hours with no refreshment but water.—N. Y. Tribune.

Bark Warsaw---The Captain and Crew Saved.

PHILADELPHIA, Monday, March 26.

The captain and crew of the bark Warsaw, and Eastern vessel, from New-York for California, which was burned at sea on the 19th inst. were fallen in with by the brig America and brought to this port.

PITTSBURG, Monday, March 26.

The banking house of Nesbitt & Co. was robbed last night. The vault was entered and $40,000 taken from it.

The citizens of Albany held a meeting on Friday in relation to the Canal Bank frauds, Teunis Van Vechten presiding. Strong resolutions were adoptod in condemnation of the crime and criminals, and calling for investigation into the conduct of the Judges concerned in the judicial investigation of the affair. The meeting voted thanks to Dudley Burwell, Esq. for his perseverance in bringing the scoundrelly business to light.—N. Y. Tribune.

Alexander's printing office at Washington, together with a large part of the materials, was entirely destroyed by fire on Sunday evening.

THE MORMONS.—Twenty thousand Mormons are to start for the Great Salt Lake in the month of September, under the command of a journeyman printer named Peckett, who married Joe Smith's wife's sister, and on whose shoulders the mantle of the prophet has fallen.—Sunday Mercury.

NOVEL DECISION—WESTERN JUSTICE—A woman was convicted of stealing a piece of linsey, Randolph County, Ia. and the Justice sentenced her husdand to jail for the offence.

The Boston Post is responsible for the truth of the above,

NO LICENSE IN BOSTON.—The Board of Aldermen unanimously voted against license—the vote of the Mayor being the only one in favor!

THE VALUE OF KNOWLEDGE.—Newspapers in California bring one dollar each at the mines.

A Telegraphic despatch from Boston, dated yesterday stated that the ship Czar is below, with $60,000 California Gold on board.

THE United States storeship Lexington, was reported off Valparaiso on the 6th December, with $400,000 in California gold on board.

HUDSON RIVER.—The day line of boats will not commence their regular trips until about the 7th of April.—Alb. Journal.

A HARD CASE.—A Western editor says he has no objection to taking wood in payment for subscription to his paper, but that he hates, after one of his subscribers had left a load of wood before his door in the day time, for him to come and steal it all back at night.

A Bible and a Newspaper in every house, a good school in every district—all studied and appreciated as they merit—are the principal support of virtue, morality, and civil liberty.—Franklin.

A TOBACCO ANECDOTE.—John Anderson's "honey dew" tobacco came into notice in the following way: John, who is a shrewd wag, hired some score of well dressed people to go round one after another, and inquire for the "honey dew" at every public house in New York. This manœuvre cost him some $200, he having paid $10 to each of his kind visitors. Twenty different persons asking for the "honey dew," induced some 800 public houses to buy the article and keep it for sale. By this means John Anderson made a small fortune "right off."

THE LIVE ONE.—A little girl meeting a countryman with a load of slaughtered swine, dropped a curtesy. The rustic laughed without returning the civilty. 'What,' said he, 'do you curtesey to dead hogs?' 'No, sir,' replied the little miss, 'I curtesied to the live one.'

TO DRIVE AWAY RATS.—Mr Charles Pierce, of Milton, pounded potash and strewed it around their holes, and rubbed some on the sides of the boards and under parts where they came through. The next night heard squeaking among them, which he supposed was from the caustic nature of the potash that got among the hair, or on their bare feet. They disappeared, and he has not been troubled with them since that time which was nearly a year ago.—Bos. Cultivator.

COMING ALONG—The gold from California. We saw yesterday a specimen of the auriferous product of our new acquisition on the pacific. It was in the shape of small golden scales packed away in a vial. It was a sample of some 40 lbs. valued at from $9,000, to 10, 000, recievd by S. S. Halstead, of New York, in exchange for goods. This is said to be the first reciept thro' trade from that region. —Albany Atlas.

GRAND BALLOON ASCENSION.—In accordance with his promise to the public Mons. Victor Verdelle yesterday made an ascension from the corner of St. Charles and Poydras streets. He arose from the ground in fine style, suspended from the balloon by his feet, and while going up he performed many gymnastic feats, to the great amusement of the crowd. The daring æriel voyager, however, did not long enjoy his triumph, as a collapse took place when he was over the Third Municipality, at a height of about one thousand feet, and he came down with a rush.—Every one who saw him when his rapid descent commenced, supposed, as a matter of course, that he would be dashed to pieces, and his escape from death was almost miraculous. He landed in the Third Municipality, and strange to say, received no injury.—N. O. Pic. 13th.

DRAINAGE OF SWAMP LANDS IN LOUISIANA.—An Act of Congress, passed at the late session, cedes to the State of Louisiana, all the swamp and overflowed public lands unfit for cultivation in the State providing however, that the proceeds of the same, so far as necessary to the construction of levees and drains necessary to reclaim the lands. The lands ceded are to be designated by the Surveyor General of the State, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, the State defraying the expense of the examination

The success of individuals in life is greatly owing to their learning early to depend upon their own resources. Money, or the expectation of it by inheritance, has ruined more men than the want of it ever did. Teach the young men to rely upon their own efforts, to be frugal and industrious, and you have furnished them with a productive capital which no man can ever wrest from them, and one which they themselves will not feel disposed to alienate.

A LIBEL NOT A LIBEL!—The Globe says it has been settled in the New York Courts that an editorial of the Herald cannot injuriously affect the character and standing of any citizen, unless said editorial be in the shape of a favorable notice.

A corteous Frenchman, in reply to the question why women were not admitted into the Chamber of Deputies, said that to be a member it was requisite to be 40 years old, and that it was impossible to suppose that any lady could reach that unseemly age.

Sonny, dear, you've a dirty face,' said a fond mother. 'Well, mother,' he replied, 'I belong to the free sile party.'

'What is the chief use of bread?' asked an examiner at a recent school examination. 'The chief use of bread,' answered the urchin, apparently astonished at the simplicity of the inqury, 'the chief use of bread is to spread butter and molasses on.'

What is a fool who has made his fortune? A pig embarrassed by his fat.

JUST PUBLISHED;

ALLEN'S COMPEND OF AMERICAN AGRICULTURE.

R. L. ALLEN, Esq., author of the popular work entitled 'Domestic Animals, their Diseases and Remedies,' of which thirteen editions have been published in twelve months, has, after years of practical experience and close investigation, completed his Great Work of Practical Agriculture, illustrated by about 100 engravings. The work will be bound handsomely and substantially in cloth, and furnished at one dollar, single copies, can be sent by mail to any part of the United States.

This work, we most fully believe, is destined to have a more widely extended circulation than any work of the kind heretofore published. Mr. Allen, knowing the wants of the community, has met those wants in a plain, concise and familiar manner, and has made a work intelligible to all. It will be a book for

THE WHOLE PEOPLE,

Its cheapness will cause a large sale, and it will be a Book for Everybody, as well for the man who consumes the products of the earth, as for him who raises them.

150 AGENTS,

active, intelligent and honest, are wanted, to sell this book in every state in the Union.

MOLASSES from 2 shillings to 2 shillings and 6 pence per. gallon at W. M. DRAKE'S

CAUTION EXTRA

A man by the name of CLAPP has engaged with a young man of the name of S. P. Townsend, and uses his name to put up a Sarsaparilla, which they call Dr. Townsend's Sarsaparilla, denominating it GENUINE, Original, etc. This Townsend is no doctor, and never was; but was formerly a worker on railroads, canals, and the like. Yet he assumes the title of Dr., for the purpose of gaining credit for what he is not. This is to caution the public not to be deceived, and purchase none but the GENUINE ORIGINAL OLD Dr. Jacob Townsend's Sarsaparilla, having on it the Old Dr's. likeness, his family coat of arms, and his signature across the coat of arms.

Principal Office, 102 Nassau st., New York City

OLD DR. JACOB TOWNSEND,

THE ORIGINAL DISCOVERER OF THE

Genuine Townsend Sarsaparilla.

Old Dr. Townsend is now about 70 years of age, and has long been known as the AUTHOR and DISCOVERER of the GENUINE ORIGINAL "TOWNSEND SARSAPARILLA." Being poor, he was compelled to limit its manufacture, by which means it has been kept out of market, and the sales circumscribed to those only who had proved its worth, and known its value. It had reached the ears of many, nevertheless, as those persons who had been healed of sore diseases, and saved from death, proclaimed its excellence and wonderful

HEALING POWER.

Knowing, many years ago, that he had, by his skill, science and experience, devised an article which would be of incalculable advantage to mankind when the means would be furnished to bring it into universal notice, when its inestimable virtues would be known and appreciated. This time has come, the means are supplied; this GRAND AND UNEQUALLED PREPARATION is manufactured on the largest scale, and is called for throughout the length and breadth of the land, especially as it is found incapable of degeneration or deterioration.

Unlike young S. P Townsend's, it improves with age, and never changes, but for the better; because it is prepared on scientific principles by a scientific man. The highest knowledge of Chemistry, and the latest discoveries of the art, have all been brought into requisition in the manufacture of the Old Dr's Sarsaparilla. The Sarsaparilla root, it is well known to medical men, contains many medicinal properties and some properties which are inert or useless, and others, which if retained in preparing it for use, produce fermentation and acid, which is injurious to the system. Some of the properties of Sarsaparilla are so volatile, that they entirely evaporate and are lost in the preparation, if they are not preserved by a scientific process, known only to those experienced in its manufacture. Moreover, these volatile principles, which fly off in vapor, or as an exhalation, under heat, are the very essential medical properties of the root, which give to it its value.

Any person can boil or stew the root till they get a dark-colored liquid, which is more from the coloring matter in the root than from any thing else: they can then strain this insipid or vapid liquid, sweeten with sour molasses, and then call it "SARSAPARILLA EXTRACT or SYRUP." But such is not the article known as the

GENUINE OLD DR. JACOB TOWNSEND'S SARSAPARILLA.

This is so prepared, that all the inert properties of the Sarsaparilla root are first removed, every thing capable of becoming acid or of fermentation, is extracted and rejected; then every particle of medical virtue is secured in a pure and concentrated form; and thus it is rendered incapable of losing any of its valuable and healing properties. Prepared in this way, it is made the most powerful agent in the

Cure of innumerable diseases.

Hence the reason why we hear commendations on every side in its favor by men, women, and children. We find it doing wonders in the cure of

CONSUMPTION, DYSPEPSIA, and LIVER COMPLAINT, and in RHEUMATISM, SCROFULA, PILES, COSTIVENESS, all CUTANEOUS ERUPTIONS, PIMPLES, BLOTCHES, and all affections arising from

IMPURITY OF THE BLOOD.

It possesses a marvellous efficacy in all complaints arising from Indigestion, from Acidity of the Stomach, from unequal circulation, determination of blood to the head, palpitation of the heart, cold feet and hands, cold chills and hot flashes over the body. It has not its equal in Colds and Coughs; and promotes easy expectoration and gentle perspiration, relaxing stricture of the lungs, throat, and every other part.

But in nothing is its excellence more manifestly seen and acknowledged than in all kinds and stages of

FEMALE COMPLAINTS.

It works wonders in cases of Fluor Albus or Whites, Falling of the Womb, Obstructed, Suppressed, or Painful Menses, Irregularity of the menstrual periods, and the like; and is as efficacious in curing all the forms of Kidney Diseases.

By removing obstructions, and regulating the general system, it gives tone and strength to the whole body, and thus cures all forms of

Nervous diseases and debility,

and thus prevents or relieves a great variety of other maladies, as Spinal irritation, Neuralgia, St. Vitus' Dance Swooning, Epileptic Fits, Convulsions, &c.

It cleanses the blood, excites the liver to healthy action, tones the stomach, and gives good digestion, relieves the bowels of torpor and constipation, allays inflammation, purifies the skin, equalises the circulation of the blood, producing gentle warmth equally all over the body, and the insensible perspiration; relaxes all strictures and tightness, removes all obstructions, and invigorates the entire nervous system. Is not this then

The medicine you pre-eminently need?

But can any of these things be said of S. P. Townsend's inferior article? This young man's liquid is not to be

COMPARED WITH THE OLD DR'S,

because of one GRAND FACT, that the one is INCAPABLE of DETERIORATION, and

NEVER SPOILS,

while the other DOES; souring, fermenting, and blowing the bottles containing it into fragments; the sour, acid liquid exploding and damaging other goods! Must not this horrible compound be poisonous to the system?—What! put acid into a system already diseased with acid! What causes Dyspepsia but acid? Do we not all know that when food sours in our stomachs, what mischiefs it produces? flatulence, heartburn palpitation of the heart, liver complaint, diarrhœa, dysentery, colic, and corruption of the blood? What is Scrotula but an acid humor in the body? What produces all the humors which bring on Eruptions of the Skin, Scald Head, Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, White Swellings, Fever Sores, and all ulcerations internal and external? It is nothing under heaven, but an acid substance, which sours, and thus spoils all the fluids of the body, more or less. What causes Rheumatism but a sour or acid fluid which insinuates itself between the joints and elsewhere, irritating and inflaming the delicate tissues upon which it acts? So of nervous diseases, of impurity of the blood, or deranged circulations, and nearly all the ailments which afflict human nature.

Now is it not horrible to make and sell, and infinitely worse to use this

SOURING, FERMENTING, ACID "COMPOUND" OF S. P. TOWNSEND,

and yet he would fain have it understood that Old Dr. Jacob Townsend's Genuine Original Sarsaparilla, is an IMITATION of his inferior preparation!!

Heaven forbid that we should deal in an article which would bear the most distant resemblance to S. P. Townsend's article! and which should bring down upon the Old Dr. such a mountain load of complaints and criminations from Agents who have sold, and purchasers who have used S. P. Townsend's FERMENTING COMPOUND.

We wish it understood, because it is the absolute truth, that S. P. Townsend's article and Old Dr. Jacob Townsend's Sarsaparilla are heaven-wide apart, and infinitely dissimilar; that they are unlike in every particular, having not one single thing in common.

As S. P. Townsend is no doctor, and never was, is no chemist, no pharmaceutist—knows no more of medicine or disease than any other common, unscientific, unprofessional man, what guarantee can the public have that they are receiving a genuine scientific medicine, containing all the virtues of the articles used in preparing it, and which are in capable of changes which might render them the AGENTS of Disease instead of health.

But what else should be expected from one who knows nothing comparatively of medicine or disease! It requires a person of some experience to cook and serve up even a common decent meal. How much more important is it that the persons who manufacture medicine, designed for should know well the medical properties of plants, the best manner of securing and concentrating their healing virtues, also an extensive knowledge of the various diseases which affect the human system, and how to adapt remedies to these diseases!

It is to arrest frauds upon the unfortunate, to pour balm into wounded humanity, to kindle hope in the despairing bosom, to restore health and bloom, and vigor into the crushed and broken, and to banish infirmity that OLD DR. JACOB TOWNSEND has SOUGHT and FOUND the opportunity and means to bring his

within the reach, and to the knowledge of all who need it, that they may learn and know, by joyful experience its

Transcendent Power to Heal.

DR. JACOB TOWNSEND. NEW YORK, Oct. 5, 1848.

WALKED ACROSS THE ROOM

with the aid of crutches. Since then, I have walked in the street: have gone alone from 36 Spruce street to the Park; thence to Lovejoy's Hotel and back. I have been to 85 Nassau street two different times, and am now frequently visiting my neighbors. During all this time, I have taken but two bottles of Old Dr. Townsend's Sarsaparilla. Oct. 4. I procured another bottle to-day (5th Oct.) I walked twice across the floor without the aid of crutches. I have also nearly recovered from obstruction of water, which gave me great distress. The pain in my back has likewise left me. I and my family have no earthly reason to ascribe my recovery to any other cause but to

OLD DR JACOB TOWNSEND'S SARSAPARILLA.

ALEX. WELSH, 36 Spruce-st.

P. S.—Several able physicians despaired of my ever walking or even raising myself from my bed again.

BOOKS FOR THE AMERICAN PEOPLE.

TO BOOK AGENTS AND CANVASSERS.

THE FOLLOWNG

VALUABLE NATIONAL WORKS

Are decidedly the best Books that Agents can possibly employ their time in supplying to the people of the United States.

THEY ARE INDISPENSABLE AS BOOKS OF REFERENCE TO OUR

Senators, Representatives in Congress, and State Legislatures,

and should be possessed by all the Young Men of this Great Republic, especially those who are aspiring to distinction and fame in our Halls of Legislation. There is not a city or town in these United States, even those of small importance, but contains many citizens to whom these works are indispensable. They are sacred Archives of our common Country. The Chronicles of American Independence!

Postmasters, Colporteurs, and Book Agents, are invited to secure such districts of country as they are most familiar with and desire to occupy. All applications are requested to be made without delay.

OUR PLAN.

☞ The plan the publisher has so successfully carried on for several years, is the obtaining Responsible Men as Agents, who are well known in their own Counties, Towns, and Villages, and have time and disposition to circulate good and instructive Books among their Neighbors and Friends. By taking a glance at the following list of Books it will easily be discovered that they are adapted to the Christain, the Patriot, the Statesman, and the Domestic Circle. Any person wishing to embark in the enterprise, will risk nothing by sending to the Publisher $20, for which he will receive sample copies of the principal works, affording a very liberal per centage to the Agent for this trouble.

1776!

A Faithful chronicle of the war of American Independence.

1776, OR THE WAR OF INDEPENDENCE.

A History of the Anglo-Americans, from the period of the Union of the Colonies aginst the French, to the Inauguration of WASHINGTON, the first President of the United States. Beautifully illustrated by numerous Engravings, showing the plans of Battles, Prominent events, and Portraits of Distinguished Men of the period. By BENSON J. LOSSING. In handsome emblematical binding. Price $2.50.

☞ To every true-hearted American, this is a most welcome and invaluable work: it is the voice of our Fathers calling upon us to guard most sacredly the precious boon of Freedom; to purchase and secure which, they offered upon their Country's altar, their lives, their fortunes, and their sacred honor.

Opinions of the Press.

(From the American Signal.)

"We have been deeply interested in reading a new and splendid patriotic volume, entitled '1776,' published by E. Walker, of New-York. The embellishments, which are very numerous, are of the most perfect description, and carry the mind of the reader back to the period when the Continental Armies were marshalled to defend our native land We advise all the readers of the Signal to add this book to their libraries, and teach the rising generation to value the priceless lessons it contains so abundantly."

(From the New-York Express.)

"The book is elegantly printed and bound, and the engravings (seventy-eight in number) form in themselves a rare historical gallery of great interest and variety, displaying the originality and taste of the author-artist in this department. As a whole, we have no hesitation in commending this volume as the best popular history of our Revolution yet published."

(From the Evening Mirror.)

"This is the title of a very elegant looking book of some 500 pages published by Edward Walker, 144 Fulton-street. The work is beautifully illustrated with a great number of engravings, and the typography and binding are absolutely faultless. It contains a great amount and variety of information relating to the Revolutionary period of American history, and is a work which will, doubtless, command a very extensive sale."

"With regard to the tone and spirit of the volume, the felicity of the style of narrative and reflections, and the great care taken to insure accuracy, as is shown by the author's frequent reference to the best authorities, I am confident that he is entitled to the reputation of a competent and faithful historian.

EDWIN WILLIAMS."

(From the Albany Spectator.)

"This is a great national work, the beauties and excellencies of which should be studied by every one who would understand the history of human freedom, and the inalienable rights of man."

(From the Knickerbocker Magazine, August, 1847.)

"The enterprising and patriotic-spirited publisher of this exceedingly beautiful volume will find thathe has not misjudged in believing that 'a book in one volume, well written and embracing a faithful chronicle of events which accomplished the laying of the foundation stone of this great republic, would be invaluable to the present and future generations.'"

THE PRESIDENTS OF THE UNITED STATES, THEIR MEMOIRS AND ADMINISTRATIONS.

To which is added, an account of the Inaugurations of each President and a history of the principal political events of his administration, and of the transactions of Congress at each session during the period.

Declaration of Indendence.

Articles of Confederation.

Constitution of the United States, with Notes and References.

A brief history of the events and circumstances which led to the Union of the States, and formation of the Constitution.

A synopsis of the Constitution of the several States.

Also, various Historical, Statistical, and other importantant public Documents, and a complete Index, or Analytical Table of Contents to the whole work. Edited by EDWIN WILLIAMS, Esq.

Illustrated with Portraits of our 12 presdents, engraved on Steel, from the most approved authorities, and in the best style of the art. Printed on the best paper, and handsomely bound in emblematic style. It will also be embellished with Views of the Capitol, president's House and the Seals of the several States, and the United States. In four large volumes. Price $10.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS. &c.

From the President of the United States

"To Mr. E. WALKER Dear Sir.—I have found your Statesman's Manual a valuable work, and exceedingly useful and convenient. Yours, J. K. POLK.

(From the Hon. Henry Clay)

"My Dear Sir: Your Statesman's Manual is a very valuable work for reference."

STATE OF NEW-YORK,
Department of Common Schools,
ALBANY, Sept. 18, 1848.

I have examined the Statesman's Manual, in two volumes octavo, compiled by Edwin Williams, and am of the opinion that it is a proper work for school district libraries, and deserving of a place in these institutions, designed for the diffusion of useful knowledge. Signed, J. S. RANDALL, Dep. State Sup't Com. Schools.

(From the Journal of Commerce.)

"This is one of the most important books published in the United States for a long time."

(From the N. Y. Courier and Enquirer.)

"This is the most important contribution to American political history ever published."

(From the Democratic Review)

"The whole forms a most complete library in itself, of all that concerns the politics of the country. No individual should be without these volumes at hand for prompt reference. How many hours of idle discussions and senseless debates might be spared to heated partizans, were these books at hand for appeal. We shall have frequent occasion to refer to them."

(From the N.Y. Express, Aug. 21, 1846.)

"This is emphatically a national work, and as such eminentlydeserving of a national support."

(From the Commercial Advertiser.)

"Such a work is invaluable, and is offered at a comparatively low price, in expectation of a large sale."

(From the Luzerne Democrat.)

"The Statesman's Manual is a valuable work, comprising a complete condensed political history of our country from the formation of our government until the present time"

(From the Washingtonian, Ohio.)

"It is but scanty praise to say, that no work of equal value to the American Statesman, politician, journalist, historian, &c. has ever before appeared."

(From the Harrisburg, (Pa.) Argus.)

"No politician, no man who desires to understand the history of the several administration of the general government, should be without a copy of it. As a book of reference it is invaluable."

REV. DR. DOWLING'S GREAT WORK ON ROMANISM.—A NEW AND ENLARGED EDITION, WITH THE AUTHOR'S LAST ADDITIONS. A BOOK FOR EVERY PROTESTANT!

THE HISTORY OF ROMANISM,

FROM ITS EARLIEST ORIGIN TO THE PRESENT TIME. BY REV. JOHN DOWLING, D. D.

Embellished with upwards of fifty highly finished engravings, chiefly from original designs.

Just published, with the Author's final corrections, a new and enlarged edition of this splendid and popular work, with a copious Supplement, comprising a History of the Life and Reign of the present remarkable Pope, PIUS IX, and a Biographical Sketch of the last Pope, GREGORY XVI.

The best encomium upon this learned, complete and popular History of Romanism, is the fact that SIXTEEN THOUSAND COPIES have been sold in about three years, and still there is a constant demand for it in all parts of the country. In order to meet this demand, and to gratify the public curiosity in relation to the present pope, Pius IX, the present enlarged edition is presented to the public. With the Supplement, the work now forms a splendid octavo volume, for the parlor or for the library, of 732 pages.

Testimonials to former editions, selected from more than a hundred, from all Protestant denominations.

EPISCOPAL.

From the Protestant Churchman.

"This is a beautiful volume of 672 pages. Good service has been done for the cause of truth by its publication, and it certainly ought to secure for its author an enviable reputation among contributors to the standard literature of the day."

From the Episcopal Recorder.

"It traces its subjects from the earliest corruptions of Christianity to the present time. It has a full Chronological Table, with Analytical and Alphabetical Indexes and Glossary. It is a large and beautiful volume, full of valuable information."

METHODIST.

From Zion's Herald.

It is written in a popular style. Its engravings are numerous and finely executed. The book will doubtless be popular and cannot fail to produce a profound conviction of the terrible iniquity of Anti-Christ.

Rev. Geo. Coles, of the Christian Advocate and Journal, says: "I cannot but express my gratitude to Almighty God that such a concise and complete developement of 'the Mystery of Iniquity' is now presented to the public in a form so elegant and attractive."

CONGREGATIONAL.

Rev. Dr. Cheever, in the New-York Evangelist, says: "We ought to have noticed this excellent and beautiful work before It possesses many and very strong claims for popular favor, and we do not doubt that it is destined to have an extraordinary sale. The work itself is characterized by great research, and a comprehensive and scriptural view of the nature and history of the Popish system."

PRESBYTERIAN.

From the (Philadelphia) Presbyterian

"Such a work required deep and protracted research, and it affords evidence that diligence, caution and judgment, in the selection and arrangement of materials, have not been wanting. The author has availed himself of the writings of both protestants and papists, and has brought together a greater mass of information on the history, the spirit, and the doings of Popery than we have ever before seen in one volume."

MISCELLANEOUS.

From the Christian Intelligencer, (Dutch Reformed.)

"Those who would see a correct and condensed exhibition of the ten thousand abominations of the Papacy, may find it to their amazement in 'Dowling's History of Romanism.' Its contents form a rich storehouse of historical instruction, which, if could be placed within the reach of every family, would prove an unspeakable blessing to our beloved country. This is the book for Americans. Place it beside your Bibles. Compare its records of crime and the Papal principles it exposes, with the holy doctrines and immaculate life of Jesus of Nazareth. When you have done this, you will have no difficulty in determining whether or not Romanism is christianity."

Rev. Alexander Campbell, president of Bethany college, of the church of the Reformers, says: "In this work are an immense assemblage of facts and documents connected with the development and history of this great mammoth institution of error and iniquity. Popery is developed in this treatise from its birth to the present hour. We desire for this book a very large circulation. It is only necessary to enlighten this community of the true spirit and character of the Papal system, to secure them against its insidious attacks upon everything we as a people hold dear and sacred. Let every one buy this work, communicate freely to all around him the develpement which it reveals, and the facts which it records."

President Cramp, editor of the Montreal Register, and author of the Text Book of Popery, says: "This important work possesses merits of a high order. We are pleased to see that Dr. Dowling furnishes ample references to his authorities. The matter is well arranged; the facts unquestionable; the style lucid; and the spirit Catholic, in the proper sense of the term. Its extensive circulation will be highly advantageous to protestanism."

Notwithstanding the extensive supplement now added to this valuable work, the price will remain the same as the former editions, Three Dollars per copy.

Water is Best.

Water is best for the man of health,
'Twill keep his strength secure;
Water is best for the man of wealth,
'Twill keep his riches sure.

Water is best for the feeble man,
'Twill make his health improve;
Water is best for the poor, I ken,
'Twill make his wants remove.

Water for those who are growing old,
'Twill keep them hail and strong;
Water is best for the young and bold,
'Twill make their moments long.

Water is best for the man of toil,
'Twill make his labor light;
Water is best for "loafers," who soil
Not a hand from morning till night.

Water is best for the man of strife,
'Twill make his anger slow;
And for him who leads a peaceful life,
'Tis the very best drink I know.

Water is best for the man of state,
'Twill make his judgment true;
Water is best for those who wait
His high commans to do.

Water, pure water's the drink for man,
Its fountains are full and free!
Others may drink "fire-water" who can,
Pure water's the nectar for me!

Water is best in cold or heat,
At morn, or noon, or night;
'Tis the only drink that "cant be beat,"
Clear, healthful, sparkling, bright!

Woman's Curiosity.

Week before last, the brethren of the Lodge of Odd Fellows at Woodstown, N. J. determined to have their Hall swept out and cleaned, when it was unanimously resolved Mrs. Keep Secret, should be called upon to do the job.

After the meeting had adjourned, the lamp lighter, who well knew the inquisitive character of Mrs. Keep Secret, went and procured a monstrous Billy-goat, and placed in the closet which is kept as a reservoir for all secret things. He then proceeded to the domicil of the good lady, and informed her that the lodge had determined to give her the job of cleaning and sweeping their Hall, and requested her to come early the next morning, as he would be at leisure to show her what was and what was not to be done.

The morning came, and with it Madam Keep Secret appeared, according to promise, with her broom, brushes, pails, tubs, &c. prepared and armed for the job, and found Mr. Doorkeeper in waiting for her.

Now Madam, says the mischievous Doorkeeper, I will tel you what we want done, and, how we came to employ you.

One of the brethren said 'it would be difficult to get anybody to do the job, who would not be meddling with our secrets in that closset because we've lost the key, and can't lock it. I assured them that you could be trusted, and so they ordered me to call on you, as I knew you could be depended upon.'

'Depended upon,' says Madam, 'I guess I can, my poor dead and gone husband, who belonged to the Free Masons or Anti-Masons, don't know which, used to tell me all the secrets of the consarn, and when he showed me the marks the gridiron made when he was initiated, and told me all how they fixed poor Morgan, I never told a liven soul to this day, and if nobody troubles the closet to find out your secrets till I do, they'll all lay there till they rot, that they will.'

'I thought so,' says the doorkeeper, and now I want you to commence at that corner, pointing with his finger to a place where some undignified and indecent brother, had thrown out quids of tobacco, and give the whole room a decent cleansing, and as I have pledged my word and honor for your fidelity to promises—☞ dont go in that closet,' and then left our lady to herself.

No sooner had she heard the sound of his feet upon the last step of the stairs, than she exclaimed, 'that closet; what on earth can be there, I'll warrant there's a gridiron, or some such nonsense, just like the Anti-Masons for all the world, I'll be bound. I'll just take a peep in, and nobody'll be any the wiser but me, and I can keep it to myself.' Suiting the action to the word, she stepped softly to the door of the forbidden closet—turned the button—which was no sooner done, than baha, ha, ha, went Billy, with a spring to regain his liberty, which came nigh upsetting her lady ship. Both started for the doorway which was filled with her implements of house-cleaning when all was swept clear from their positions to the bottom of the stairs. The noise and confusion occasioned by such an unceremonious coming down stairs, drew half the town to witness Mrs. Keep Secret's effort to get from under a pile of goat, pails, tubs, brooms and scrubbing brushes.

Who should be first on the spot but that rascally doorkeeper, who after releasing the goat, who was made a cripple for life, and unpiling the other rubbish which bound the good lady to the floor, anxiously inquired if she had been taking the 'degrees.'

'Taking the degrees,' exclaimed our lady, 'if you call tumbling from the top to the bottom of the stairs, with a tarnal goat to jump upon ye as ye go, taking things by 'Degrees,' I have, and if ye generally frighten folks as bad as ye have me, and hurt 'em to boot, I'll warrant ye, they'll make as much noise as me.'

'I hope you did not open the closet, Madam,' says the doorkeeper.

'Open the closet! an' sure I did, and didn't Eve eat the apple when forbidden. If you want a woman to do any thing tell her not to, and she'll do it, sartain. I could'nt stand the temptation. There was the secret; I wanted to know it, and as I opened the closet, out popped the tarnal goat, right in my face. I thought besure it was the Devil, and I run for the stairs, with it at my heels, when I fell over the tubs, and we all arrived at the bottom as you found us, in a heap together.'

'But madam,' says the door keeper, 'you are in possession of the great secret of the order and you must go up and be initiated, sworn. Sworn and ride the goat in the regular way.'

'Regular way,' exclaimed the lady, 'and do you suppose I'm going to go near that tarnal critter again—and without a bridle or lady's saddle—no, never, I dont want nothin' to do with it, or a man that rides it. I'd look nice perched on a goat, would'nt I. I'll never go near it again nor your hall nuther, and if I can prevent it, no lady shall ever join any of the odd fellows. Why I'd sooner be a Free Mason or Anti-Mason, and be broiled on a gridiron as long as fire could be kept under it and pulled from garret to cellar with a halter in a pair of old breeches and slippers, just as my poor dead and gone husband used to tell me they served him, and he lived over it too, but I never could live over such a ride as I took with the goat to-day, and you may rest assured I shall never see a goat but what I shall think of the Odd Fellows.—Bridgetown Chronicle.

THE SEAMSTRESS.—The following lines are from the pen of Jamrs R. Lowel, the Boston poet, and posesse quite as much undeniable truth as eloquent poetry:

Hark, that rustle of a dress,
Stiff with lavish costliness; [flush
Here comes one whose cheek would
But to have her garments brush
'Gainst the girl whose fingers thin
Wove the weary broidery in;
And in midnights chill and murk,
Stiched her life into the work,
Bending backward from her toil,
Lest her tears the silk might soil;
Shaping from her bitter thought
Heart's-ease, and forget-me-not;
Satirizing her despair
With the emblems woven there!

A wag the other day said to his friend, 'How many knaves do you suppose live in this street beside yourself?' replied the other in a heat, 'do you intend to insult me?' 'Well then,' said the first, 'how many including?'

Getting into the wrong Box.
A Story of Down East.

BY THE YOUNG 'UN.

A few months ago, there arrived in the quiet city of Portland, a home-spun specimen of the genus homo, in a packet, all the way from Passamaquoddy. Upon going ashore, he inquired the way to the nearest public house, and was informed that it stood directly at the head of the pier where he landed.

Opposite the head of the wharf stands the 'Eagle Coffee House.' At the corner is located the 'Custom House,' the front of which is surmounted by a large gilt spread eagle.—Into the latter our traveller walked, carpet-bag in hand; and, having found his way into the first room—which chanced to be in the Surveyor's department—he threw his luggage against the corner, seized an arm chair, and drew himself up to the fire. Bracing his feet against the grate, he pulled forth a huge pipe, and having very leisurely crowded it with pigtail, he cocked his hat over his shoulder, and commenced to puff away in right good earnest.

The surveyor gazed at the queer biped a moment, but concluded to wait for the finale of this scene, without intruding unprofitable questions. Having finished his pipe, lazily, the traveler turned about to the official with—

'Cold day, nabur.'

'Very, sir.'

'How long to dinner?'

'To what, sir?'

'Dinner.'

'We dine at two,' continued the Surveyor. discovering the stranger's error, and disposed for the nonce to humor it.

'Whar's the old man?' (meaning the landlord.)

'The Collector is in the next room, sir,' said the agreeable Surveyor; and our Down Easter immediately moved himself into the Collector's department, toting his luggage along as he went. Having laid down his traps, he stepped up to the counter, where stood a pitcher and a tumbler for the use of the room. The Cashier looked at him an instant, when the stranger broke silence:

'Brandy and-water.'

'What, sir?' exclaimed the astonished accountant.

'A little brandy-and water, 'fu please.'

Leaving the bar-keeper (as he supposed him) to fix his toddy, he moved forward, and suddenly discovered the Collector of the Port sound asleep in his easy chair. Stepping up to him, he gave him a most unceremonious blow upon the back, and shouted at the top of his voice:

'Hello! old feller—how are ye? I say, ole hoss—how d'e due?'

'Sir!' exclaimed the Collector.

'Glad tu see yer. Tew toddies, barkeeper! Brandy-and-water for me—wot der yer drink, 'squire?'

'Sir!' continued the Collector again, imagining himself the victim of some horrid dream.

'Come, come, old feller! wake up!' added his tormentor, bringing down his huge mauler again between the Collector's shoulders, and well nigh knocking the breath entirely from his body.

'There's some mistake here, sir,' said the Collector, springing back.

'Not a bit uv it, old rusty; I know yeu jest like a inkstan'.'

I don't remember—really—'

'Yis yeu deu, sart'n. But never mine—what yer goin tu take?'

'Do you know where you are sir?' inquire the Collector, supposing the man to be a lunatic, whom he had better get rid of as easily as possible.

'Me? Sartin. In Portlan'—Eagle Coffee House. You're ole Brass, the lan'lord; I know yeu. G, git aout! We're bound to hev a drink;' and he drove his thumb and fore-finger in the Collector's ribs with so much good earnest, that he nearly 'finished his business' for him.

'Excuse me, sir, but—'

'No sir-ee. No backin' aout, old squibob—I've seen yeu go it afore, yer know. Come, bar-keeper, tote aout the licker. All mumchum, yer know. I un'stan'—again the law to sell brandy in Portlan'—but we know; pass it up.'

'You have mistaken you quarters, sir.'

'Eh?'

'This is the Custom House.'

'The wot?'

'Custom House.'

'Cus—eh!' continued the discomfited traveller, endeavoring to get the thing through his head—'not the coffe house!'

'No, sir.'

'Why, I seen the eagle over the top—they, tole me head of the wharf—tavern—an' yeu say it ain't public house?'

'No, sir.'

'Wa'—I never!' said the chap fallen traveller, gathering up his duds. Looking about him to be satisfied of his error, he concluded by inquiring what was the expense. He was informed that there was nothing to pay.

'Wal, 'old feller, a mistake isn't a hay stack?'

'No—fortunately,' said the Collector.

'Wal, I wouldn't ha' b'lieved I could ha' made sich a blunder'—and then insisting that the 'hul craowd should g'out and take a gin'ral drink,' which was declined, he secured his luggage and hastily vamosed, to the no small gratification of the Government officials, who had been so queerly startled from their customary propriety.—Saturday Post.

Good Peaches.

A countryman brought from the city five peaches, the finest ever were seen. But his children saw this fruit, for the first time. Therefore, they wondered, and rejoiced in the pretty peaches with their reddish cheeks and delicate down. The father then divided them among his four boys, giving one to their mother.

In the evening, when the children went into their sleeping-chamber, their father asked: "Well, and how did the pretty peaches taste?"

"Finely, dear father," said the oldest. "It is a beautiful fruit, so tartish and so delicate in taste. I have carefully kept the stone, and will raise me a tree from it.

'Bravo!' said the father; 'that is providing economically for the future, as becomes landsmen!'

'I ate mine at once,' the youugest cried, 'and threw away the stone, and Mother gave me half of her's. O, it tasted so sweet and melted in my mouth!'

'Well,' said the father, 'you have not acted very wisely, but naturally, and in a child's manner. For wisdom, there is yet room in the course of your life.'

Then the second son began; 'I hunted up the stone which my little brother threw away, and cracked it. There was a seed in it, that tasted as sweet as a nut. But my peach I sold for enough, when I go to the city, that I can probably buy twelve.'

The father shook his head, and said: 'That is wise enough, but—childlike and natural, it was not. Heaven guard you, that you do not become a merchant?

'And you, Edmund?' asked the father.

Self-possessed and frank, Edmund replied: 'I carried my peach to our neighbor's George who is sick of a fever. He would not take it. Then, I laid it upon his bed, and came away."

'Well,' said the father, 'who has made the best use of his peach?'

All three exclaimed: 'Brother Edmund!' But Edmund was silent; and his mother embraced him, with tears in her eyes.

To practise sincerity is to speak as we think, to do as we profess, to perform what we promise, and really to be what we would seem to be.

'Pat,' says a Yankee to an Irishman, as they passed a tree near Harlem, with a rope hanging from one of its branches, 'where do you suppose you would be now, if that rope had its deserts?

'Faith, and I'd be a walking here alone to New York?'

Why is the squalling of a child like one of the western States? Because it is so Ill-a-noise.

Never stop to wish a thing done, but go and do it.

PLAINFIELD GAZETTE.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Thursday, April, 5, 1849.

From the interest taken at our school meeting on Monday evening last, in the selection of proper persons to act as trustees, it must be evident to all that all considered it of the utmost importance, that proper persons should be selected. As all doubtless endeavored to bring about such a result, although a variety of views prevailed as to how that result should be brought about; as that matter is accomplished, and we trust to the entire satisfaction of all interested; certainly better men could not have been selected. But our object in alluding to the subject is not to flatter the men selected, but simply to show that union ("Plainfield Union") on such a subject is certainly desirable.

In the first place then it will be seen by the report, (which by the way being self interested we should have supposed the public spirited citizens of Plaiufield would have ordered published in the Village papers,) that it will be necessary to vote at our town meeting on monday next at least $1000, for the proper support of our Free School. As we observed in our last number; In voting sums of money, it is our opinion that it is the greatest economy to vote such sums as are sufficient to effect the object desired, whether that object be the Free School, the indigent poor, or the public highways, &c.

Now as it must be evident to all according to the report, and the explanation and recommendation of those who could have only the prosperity of the School and consequently of the Village at heart, that at least a $1000, are necessary to an economical completion and continuance of the the School for the ensuing year. Surely none will withhold his mite, nor so blindly oppose his own interest by not voting the necessary sum. We care not what a mans situation in life may be, he cannot fail to recieve compound interest for all sums he may vote that shall be judiciously applied to educate the masses; the future Legislators, Judges, Presidents, Husbands, Wives, &c. of our glorious country. We would rather tolerate a prodigal than a parsimonious waste of money on so important, so noble an object.

We hope that all will second by their votes on Monday next the recommendations of the trustees they have selected, and also of the meeting by which they were selected, and also to have that generous confidence in those whom they have chosen to apply it, so necessary to its permanent profitable application.

METROPLITAN MAGAZINE.—The March number of this Magazine has not been received at this office. Why?

TOWN MEETING will be held at Laing's Hall on Monday next, the 9th inst. The Polls will open at 8 o'clock, A. M. and close at 7 o'cleck, P. M.

☞ We would call the attention of the public in general, to Mr. David Freeman's advertisement in another column, and more particularly those out of the Village wanting PUMPS made or repaired, who are unacqnainted with his pumps; they give general satisfaction as we can testify, having one in use. Charges moderate.

☞ Painting is the cheapest way to preserve Houses, and if you want painting done good and cheap, call on Frazee Marsh, whose advertisement will be found in another column.

☞ Any of our subscribers, from removal or other causes, not receiving the Gazette will please give us notice.

☞ The article in our last relating to the treatment of colered children in the Plainfield School, we have heard was copied in the Plainfield Gazette, with a call upon the Trustees for an explanation of the matter. We are informed the Trustees are silent on the subject.—N. J. Freeman.

THE NEWARK PLANK ROAD.--Surveyors have been over the routes of the proposed plank road between Newark and this City. They report the distance from the Jersey City ferry to the Market-st. railroad depot in Newark as one chain less than 7 miles, Three routes are practiable, all starting from the same point in Newark, running down the old ferry road, and then crossing the Passaic and Hackensack rivers by horseboat. The cost of the road is estimated at less than $60,000, and about one-sixth of the stock has already been taken. It has not yet been decided whether the road shall commence on this end at Jersey City or Pavonia.

Important from the Rio Grande.

NEW-ORLEANS, March 30.

The steamer Globe has arrived from Brazos Santiago, bringing later dater dates from the Rio Grande.

The most important advices received by her is the intelligence of the breaking up of Col. Webb's California expedition, and that eight of their number have been swept off by the Cholera, on the Rio Grande, four of whom were from New-York; names not given.

The Globe brought eighteen of the company to New-Orleans.

Audibon, a son of the eminent American Naturalist, whose company embarked from this city in January, had been robbed of $12,000 in gold, $4,000 being subsequently recovered from the robbers.—Messrs. Web and Audibon remained behind in order to recover the residue of the money.

There is much sickness reported along the Brazos.

The Cholera is also increasing again in New Orleans.

Business generally is brisk, and the alarming flood in the river is again subsiding.

Steamboat Explosion.

WHEELING March 30.

The steamer Virginia, while on her way to Steubenville this afternoon, about twelve miles above Wheeling, burst her boiler, near a place called Rush run.—Three persons, whose names have not been heard, were instantly killed by the disaster, while thirteen are missing, and twelve badly wounded. It was a most fearful explosion. The boat is a perfect wreck.

OHIO LEGISLATURE.—The bill authorizing a convention for the purpose of adopting a new State constitution, passed both Houses on the 23 instant. The main points expected to be secured by the change, are a total reform of the Judiciary system and the practice of the Courts;

The election of all officers by the People!

No increase of the State debt except by a vote of the people themselves;

A liberal system of common schools and of education;

No legislation but what the people can reform or annul, when found injurious.

Connecticut Election.

We have bad news from the neighborhood of Hartford, where the popularity of Col. Thos. H Seymour, the Loco-Foco candidate for Governor, has done considerable mischief. The result for Congress in that District is doubtful.

Partial returns from Fairfield County assure us of the election to Congress of Thomas B. Butler, Whig, from that District.

P. S.—By reference to our latest Dispatches it will be seen that Chapman and Rockwell, Whigs, in the 1st. and 3d. Congressional Districts, are probably defeated, and that the result in the State for Governor and, Legislature is doubtful.—N. Y. Tribune.

Mr. T. H Seymour, the Democratic candidate for Governor, gains 413 in Hartford. He also gains in almost every town in this County. Farmington sends two Democratic Representatives, being a gain; Simsbury 1, gain; South Windsor 1, gain; Manchester 1, gain; Wethersfield 2, loss. The Whigs look quite down. The prospects are that the Democratic candidate in the 1st District is elected, and probably the State has gone Democratic. In Bridgeport the Whigs are reported to have a majority of 104. In Fairfield 226, and Stratford a majority of 252, and that the Whig candidate for Senator in that district is certainly elected.

ANTIDOTE TO POISION —A correspondent of the London Literary Gazette, alluding to the numerous cases of deaths from accidental poisoning, and particularly the melancholy fate of the late Mr. Owen, adds:—I may venture to affirm, there is scarce even a cottage in this country that does not contain an invaluable, certain, and immediate remedy for such events; nothing more than a dessert spoonful of made mustard mixed in a tumbler glass of warm water, and drank immediately. It acts as an instantaneous emetic, is always ready, and may be used with safety in any case where one is required. By making this simple antidote known, you may be the means of saving many a fellow-creature from an untimely end.

WORTH OF SLAVE PROPERTY.—Mr. Herschel V. Johnson, of Ceorgia, in the course of a debate in the U. States Senate on the 28th of February, stated the estimated valuation of property in slaves at the astonishing sum of $1000,000,000.

The joint resolution to amend the Constitution of the United States in favor of an election of the U. S. Senators by the people, has passed both branches of the Wisconsin Legislature.

CONSISTENCY.—The whigs professed to be very much opposed to the Mexican war. The New Jersey legislature composed of a large majortty of Whigs have been voting swords to a number of the volunteers in that war. Of course they take the peoples money to pay for them with.

Free Navigation.

It is a singular fact that the chief opposition in this country to Freedom of Navigation, comes from the ship-owners and other parties directly interested in commerce. The fact that the foes of American commerce on both sides of the Atlantic concurringin opposition to the measure, affords presumptive evidence in its favor.

The only point about which our shipping interest would feel the least anxiety in case the restrictions should be thrown off, is the coastingrtrade; and as two this it is suffiicient to say, that with the reservations under which the coasting trade of England is offered to us, ours could never become available to her. If the protectionists honestly desrire to favor commerce, let them not load down with duties, as they have always done when they had the power, nearly every article except wood, which enters into the structure of a ship. Under the tariff of 1842 the burdens upon ship building were enormous. The present tariff is much more liberal; and under it the navigating interest has prospered as it never did before. But mark ye! if the protectionists find themselves a majority in Congress, they will restore the old oppression, either wholly or in part. Let this be remembered.—N. Y. Journal of Com.

☞ HENRY D. THOREAU of Concord, Mass. has recently been lecturing on 'Life in the Woods,' in Portland and elsewhere. There is not a young man in the land,—and very few old ones—who would not profit by an attentive hearing of that lecture. Mr Thoreau is a young student, who has imbibed (or rather refused to stifle) the idea that a man's soul is better worth living for than his body. Accordingly, he has built him a house ten by fifteen in a piece of unfrequented woods by the side of a pleasant little lakelet, where he devotes his days to reflection, cultivating a small plat of ground, living frugally on vegetables, and working for the ueighboring farmers whenever he is in need of money or additional exercise. It thus costs him some six to eight week's rugged labor per year to earn his food and clothes, and perhaps an hour or two per day extra to prepare his food and fuel, keep his house in order, &c.—He has lived in this way four years, and his total expenses for last year were $41 25, and his surplus earnings at the close were $13 21, which he considers a better result than almost any of the farmers of Concord could show, though they have worked all the time. By this course Mr Thoreau lives free from pecuniary obligation or dependence on others, except that he borrows some books, which is an equal pleasure to lender or borrower. The man on whose land he is a squatter is no wise injured nor inconvenienced thereby. If all our young men would but hear this lecture, we think some among them would feel less strongly impelled either to come to New-York or go to California.—N. Y. Tribune.

EXTRACT FROM LUTHER.--'Without me ye can do nothing.' This passage teaches that we must be absorbed by Christ, so that we ourselves should no longer act, but that Christ should live in us. As the Divine nature has been made one body with man in Christ, so should man be incorporated by faith with Jesus Christ.

The multiplicity of Laws in matters of conscience has filled the world with sects and divisions. The hatred thence engendered between Priest, Monks and Laity, is even greater than that which exists between Christians and Turks. Each is devoted to his own sect and dispises all others. The unity and love of Christ is broken up and distroyed.

PENSIONS.—All claims for pensions can be sworn to before any Judge of a State or Territory. Volunteers disabled are to be pensioned; all revolutionary officers are entitled to pensions; and their widows to the balance due them. Widows of revolutionary officers are entitled to pensions, if they do not again marry. Brothers and sisters of deceased soldiers in Mexico, are entitled to the land which would have been claimed by the soldiers if living. Invalids of the navy receive pensions.

MORTALITY AT JEFFERSON BARRACKS.—From Tuesday, the 13th, to Monday, the 19th instant, twenty-seven deaths have occurred among the troops now stationed at Jefferson Barracks. Our information states that the fatal disease, in all its symptons, was that of cholera.—Louisville Democrat, 26th.

Minesota.

Governor Penington, of the comfortable State of New Jersey, a gentleman who has always lived in the bustle of gay life, is appointed Govenor of Minesota, and we learn has accepted the appointment. As he may be about as much puzzle as Sancho was to find out his government of Barrita, we may as well inform him that Minesota is bounded on the north by the British posessions; east by the State of Wisconsin and the Missippi river; south by Iowa; and west by the Missouri and White Earth rivers. The seat of government is to be at St. Paul's, if the new governor is able to find out where it is, and he can have as many Sacks, Foxes, and Flat Head Indians, as members of his council, as he may desire. He is at liberty to shoot deer and patridges, from his own log cabin, and keep close quarters in the fort during the snowy season.—Morning Star.

FLOGGING IN THE NAVY.—The following is the testimony of an old sea officer on this subject:

BALTIMORE, Jan 29th, 1849.

Hon. Danl Webster,
United States senator
Washington, D. C.:

Sir—Permit me to address you a few lines on the subject of corporal punishment in the Navy, the abolition of which is now pending in the Senate. Something like sage experience has taught me that the best kind of discipline has always existed in our public vessels where the infliction of the lash was rarely if ever resorted to. I have had, I think, ample experience in every branch of our militray service namely: Navy, Army, and Revenue Marine. I have held a commission for nearly thirty years, (I am now fifty-four,) and have consequently been clothed during that time with legal authority to inflict corporal punishment; but I have never found it necessary to resort to the lash over eight times, and even in those instances it might have been avoided without any detriment to the service, by substituting some other mode of punishment, less imbruting to the nature of man. Sir, I have ever deprecated this horrible and truly disgraceful practice. Surely not only the common dictates of humanity, but the general spirit of the age in which we live, call aloud for its abolition. I hazard nothing in saying that every experienced and humane commander knows that seamen, when properly and ably commanded, are more docile than any other class of men under the sun. This cutting up the 'human form diving,' appears to me to be one of the few relics of barbarism. If our officers would only study to remove causes rather than punish effects, all the imaginary necessity for corporal punishment would vanish at once.

I have the honor to be, sir,
Your obed't servt,
EZEKIEL JONES,
Capt. U. S. Rev. Mar. Serv.,
Of Scituate, Mass.

JERSEY CITY AND NEWARK PLANK ROAD.—The subscription books were opened at Jersey City on Thursday last.

From the Journal of Commerce.

The New Jersey Monopoly.

The exclusive grant of the franchise to the right of way over the State of New Jersey by a legislature, who hold only a limited power of sovreignty, is too gross an absurdity to be tolerated by a free people, and in these enlightened days ought to be blotted out of the statute book.

Taxation is a right conceded in a free government, and one of those elements that cannot be parted with by any legislature, for all succeeding legislatures would have the same rights over the property of the citizens. For eminent domain must be left unimpaired, otherwise our free institutions will have a tendency to pass into a state of despotism and our rights will be sacrificed at the shrine of power. It is admitted by our judges, that corporations holding a power where the public are directly interested, must be construed strictly and in favor of the community, for these corporators are generally adventurers, and to enlarge these grants by implication or construction would be attended with great risk to the state. It is settled that the states holding a portion of the sovereign power have a right to tax her citizens and all the capital that is in her territory. When she levies a toll on passenger and property that are carried over her domain, and then calls it a tax upon capital, is another question.

The constitution of the United States says in "Article 1, Sec. 9; no tax or duty shall be laid on articles exported from any State." Article 4, Sec. 2: the citizens of each state shall be entitled to all priviliges and immunities of citizens in the several states. By the charter of the Camden and Amboy Railroad Company in section 23, the company are required to pay the "treasurer of the state, at the rate of ten cents for each and every passenger, and the sum of fifteen cents for each and every ton of merchandize transported thereon, and that no other tax or impost shall be levied or assessed by said company."

Suppose the State of New Jersey was to levy a toll of ten cents per head on all the cattle that pass over the state, on the turnpike roads between the cities of New York and Philadelphia, and then should say "that no other tax or impost shall be levied or assessed upon said companies."

Would such a clause dodge the constitution of the United States, and invest the right in the state of New Jersay absolute? If it will carry this right, every fat ox might be assessed at one dollar, and the drovers would have to pay the same or keep out of the State. Look at the practice of the joint companies by their companies by their commutation system from Trenton to New Brunswick which is in accordance with the 23d section of their charter, that each passenger after purchasing his ticket which costs five dollars for eight passages, pays ten cents tax for the state every time he passes over the said road, which tax is demanded of him by the conductor or collector on the railroad for the companies. Indices.

It is stated that the frost has killed thousands of orange trees in Florida this month. One orchard of 4,000 trees near Apalachicola, was swept by the board.

☞ 'That's my impression,' as the printer said when he kissed his sweetheart.

Veto Power.

The veto power was exercised twice by Washington, six times by Madison and once by Monroe. The former was President, and the two latter active members, of the convention which framed the Constitution. It can hardly, therefore, be supposed that they were ignorant of the meaning, or disregardful of the spirit, of that instrument in whose construction themselves participated so largely. We cannot, then, believe that either the hostility of the opponents of that power, or General Taylor's renunciation of it, is based upon the principle of its unconstitutionality. This is the more apparent when we reflect that no objection was ever made to the veto until Andrew Jackson and, more recently, John Tyler, by its exercise, prevented the establishment of a National Bank, when the champions of that monster corporation naturally became the opponents of the power which had so completely frustrated their iniquitous designs. That principle could not have been the basis of their opposition may be inferred from the fact that they have entirely relinquished their advocacy of the measure whose extinction by the veto aroused their indignation. If their original advocacy of the National Bank had been founded upon principle that measure would not have been abandoned, as principles is immutable; but neither in 1846 or in 1848 was it brought into the Presidential contest as a whig claim to popular support. The position of the Democratic party on this question has, on the contrary, been unchanged. To the principle which they assumed at the outset they have rigidly adhered through evil and though good report.

The best evidence of a party's adhesion to principle is its consistent advocacy of the same measures, and this is in a high degree, the characteristic of the Democrats, whose opposition to the monster corporation, dating its origin so far back as 1791, when, in compliance with the recomendation of Mr, Hamilton (who was, then, Secretary of the Treasury) a National Bank was first incorporated, has continued to the present day. That the bostility of the Democrats to a high protective tariff was likewise based upon principle is apparent from the fact that their policy, in that respect, has undergone little or no modification since 1816—when the strength of their opposition prevented the advocates of onerous duties from raising them to the extent desired. The whigs, on the contrary, have not merely modified their policy in regard to those measures, but appear to have abandoned them altogether, since we do not know a single Whig journalist or politician, who, during the late contest, ventured to ground his claims to public confidence upon their advocacy. We have taken up these two questions as being the most prominent and generally understood, and, therefore, best suited to the pursose of illustrating, but we might go through the whole history of the two parties and demonstrate, at every step, that, as principle is essential to party success, the Whigs have no enduring structure upon which to establish a permanent ascendancy, while the Democrats base their policy upon a foundation which is identical with that of the constitution and must be coextensive with the progress of genuine republicanism.—Middletown Point Banner.

The bill to abolish corporal punishment in the Navy has been defeated in the Senate. The New Jersey Senators, Miller & Dayton both voting in favor of the whip.

Rev. Mr. Burroughs, a Methodist minister, being attacked at Sandy Hill, Worcester Co. Pa. by a Mr. Bishop, who owed him an old grudge, shot him dead in self-defence as he alleged. He has surrendered himself to await the result of a judicial inveitigation.

The attempt has been made to convert wheat from an annual to a perenial plant, and it is said, with some good degree of success. The account given, is that it was discovered by the steward or director named Kern, of an estate at Constance. After he had ploughed an manured the land, he then sowed it with summer or winter wheat. In the spring, before the ear makes its appearance, he mows it. This he does repeatedly several times, in the course of the season, using it as a kind of hay. After this he allows the plant to grow, and be harvested as usual. The next year it ripens earlier and bears a much larger crop than wheat cultivated in the usual manner. In autumn it is manured like the grass of meadow, and in the spring the weeds are removed. The effect is stated to be such that from one field four successive harvests have been gathered. The subject is one of considerable interest, as no doubt, if rendered perrennial, it would be useful for the purpose of forage. It might be well for some of our enterprizing farmers to test the principle, as it is so easily done, and fuller information relating to it is needed. We have sought for some more satisfactory history of the matter, but as yet have been unable to light upon any thing which will give it. At present it is too vague to entitle it to much reliance, though the particular fact does not appear to be at variance with analogy in regard to improvements, quite as great of numerous plants, by particlar cultivation

United States Postage, according to the Act approved March 3 1849.

The inland postage, for 300 miles and under is 10 cents an ounce, for half ounce and less it is 5 cents.

The inland postage for greater distances than 300 miles, is 20 cents an ounce; 10 cents for half an ounce and under.

The whole postage by the British or American mail steamers, from or to Great Britain or Ireland, is 48 cents an ounce; 24 cents for a single half ounce or less.

The United States inland postage, whatever may be the distance, on letters sent by the British steamers to foreign countries, other than Great Britain or Ire- 10 cents an ounce; 5 cents the single half ounce.

The postage by the American steamers, to foreign countries, other than Great Britain or Ireland, is 10 cents an ounce; 5 cents the single half ounce.

To and by Bremen, from the post and the reverse, 48 cents an ounce: 24 cents the single half ounce. The inland postage to be added.

To and from Havana, 25 cents an ounce; 12 1-2 cents single.

To and from Chagres, 40 cents an ounce; 20 cents single.

To and from Panama, 60 cents an ounce; 30 cents single.

To and from the West Indies (except Havana) and islands in the Gulf of Mexico, 20 cents; 10 cents single with inland postage.

Any fractional excess over an ounce is always to be regarded as an ounce.

The above postage may be prepaid or not, at the option of the sender; except to foreign countries, other than Great Britain or Ireland. And where the letters pass through the Bremen Post Office, in most cases, the whole postage may be prepaid. (See table 1, exhibited D Senate document, Executive, No 25, 30th Congress, 2d session.)

A postage of six cents is charged on letters and pacquets brought into the United States in any private ship or vessel, or carried from one post therein to another, if they are to be delivered at the Post Office where the same shall arrive; and two cents are added to the rates of postage if designed to be conveyed to any place. And postmasters are to receive one cent for every letter or pacquet received by them to be conveyed by any (private) ship or vessel beyond sea, or from any port to another in the United States.

One cent is to be added to the rate of each way letter. Way letters are those brought to a Post Office by the post riders, and other carriers of the mail, whose duty it is to receive them, when presented more than one mile from a Post Office.

There is charged upon letters and other matter delivered from steamboats, except newspapers, pamphlets, magazines, and periodicals, the same rates as if they had been transmitted by mail.

Drop letters, or letters placed in any Post Office for delivery there, are charged two cents each.

Advertised letters are charged with the cost of advertising, which is not to exceed four cents for each letter, in addition to the regular postage.

Not more than two cents to be paid to the letter carriers employed in cities for the delivery of letters, or for receiving them to be deposited in the Post Office.

Newspapers of and under the superfices of 1,900 square inches are conveyed from one post office to another in the same State for one cent; and any distance not more than 100 miles at the same rate, and 1 1-2 cent for any greater distance. One quarter's postage is always to be paid in advance by those who receive newspapers by post. The sea postage on newspapers is three cents each, with the above rates added when transported inland. Newspapers may be mailed or delivered at any post office in the United States to or from Great Britain or Ireland on the payment of two cents. Letter carriers employed in cities are not to receive more than 1-2 cent for the delivery of newspapers. The postage on newspapers not sent from the office of publication is required to be prepaid; and the whole postage, in all cases, when they are directed to foreign countries.

Handbills, circulars and advertisements not exceeding one sheet, are subject to three cents postage each, whatever the distance (inland) to be prepaid. The sea postage on price currents is three cents, with inland postage added when so transported. The law makes no distinction of handbills, circulars, advertisement or price currents, when regulating sums to be paid to the letter carriers of cities.

Newspapers are defined in the 16th section of the act approved March 3, 1835. When they exceed two sheets, or a superfices of 1,900 square inches, they are to be charged with the same rates of postage as that on magazines and pamphlets. All pamphlets, magazines, periodicals, and every other kinds of printed or other matter (except newspapers) are charged at the rate of 2 1-2 cents per copy, of no greater weight than one ounce, and one cent additional for each additional ounce, any fractional excess of not less than 1-2 ounce being regarded as an ounce. The sea postage on each pamphlet is three cents, with the above rates added when transported inland. There is to be paid on pamphlets sent to or received from Great Britain and Ireland, one cent for each ounce or fractional excess. Letter carriers employed in cities are not to receive more than 1-2 cent for the delivery of pamphlets.

KITCHEN GARDEN.—Early cucumbers, melons, cabbages, cauliflowers, lettuce, radishes, &c., which have been brought forward in hot beds, should be transplanted this month into open ground. Let the asparagus beds be attended to. Sow the various kinds of table vegetables and earlyroot crops for open culture. Tomatoes, eggplants, and peppers, that have been forwarded in pots, can be planted out the latter part of the month.

FRUIT GARDEN AND ORCHARD.—All kinds of northern fruit trees should be transplanted this month, before the leaf buds come out. Grafting and spring inoculation must also be performed. Strawberry beds may now be dressed, cleaned, and supplied with a small sprinkling of guano or some other stimulating manure. Currants, raspberries, and goosberries, that have not received attention before, can now be burned.

FLOWER GARDEN AND PLEASURE GROUND.—The ground about bulbs that have not yet started may now be forked or hoed. Herbaceous perennials may be transplanted into flower borders. Hedges and shrubs may be trimmed and box-edging set out. Top-dress lawns.

THE VALUE OF BONES AS A MANURE.—It is a fact well established by agricultural chemistry, that a single pound of bones contains as much phosphoric acid, (one of the essential ingredients of wheat,) as one hundred pounds of wheat. Notwithstanding this, it is true that many families in the United States waste more bones than would be required to manure, in this respect, the amount of the wheat crop they consume Keeping Lemons Fresh.

I have been a housekeeper for some years, and never, till lately, have I been able to keep lemons fresh and juicy for any length of time. But with all my care —now in this closet—now in that—now wrapped in paper—now packed in bran—now in a cool place, and now in a dry one, they would dry up and become hard as wood. Of late, however, I have preserved them perfectly fresh, three months in summer, by placing them in a closely-covered jar, or pot, kept in the ice house.

Each lemon is wrapped up in paper, (perhaps they would do as well without,) but opened and wiped once in ten or twelve days, then covered again with dry, paper, and put back into the jar, or earthen vessel, on the ice. MOTHER HUBBARD.

MUSTARD PLASTERS.—When a mustard plaster is to be applied, there should always be a piece of clean muslin or gauze placed between it and the skin, unless the contrary is expressly ordered by a physician. The mustard acts quite as powerfully, and the whole can be removed more quickly, and without the disagreeable effects of dropping it about

ORIGIN OF SOAP.

SOME water and oil
One day had a broil
As down in a glass they were dropping,
And would not unite,
But continued to fight.
Without any prospect of stopping.

Some perlash o'erheard,
And quick as a word,
Jumped in the midst of the clashing:
When all three agreed,
And united with speed,
And soap was created for washing.

The following as a Valentine was recently received by a consumer of the 'filthy weed.'

Great smoker of the filthy weed,
Whose very looks would fever breed:
Your mouth decked out with steam & spittle
Looks like a vile soap boiler's kettle.
Your nose a dirty chimney flue,
Where smoke & soot come pouring through
I'd rather wed a steam engine,
Than such a filthy Valentine

ALLEN'S COMPEND OF AMERICAN AGRICULTURE.

R. L. ALLEN, Esq., author of the popular work entitled 'Domestic Animals, their Diseases and Remedies,' of which thirteen editions have been published in twelve months, has, after years of practical experience and close investigation, completed his Great Work of Practical Agriculture, illustrated by about 100 engravings. The work will be bound handsomely and substantially in cloth, and furnished at one dollar, single copies, can be sent by mail to any part of the United States.

This work, we most fully believe, is destined to have a more widely extended circulation than any work of the kind heretofore published. Mr. Allen, knowing the wants of the community, has met those wants in a plain, concise and familiar manner, and has made a work intelligible to all. It will be a book for

THE WHOLE PEOPLE,

Its cheapness will cause a large sale, and it will be a Book for Everybody, as well for the man who consumes the products of the earth, as for him who raises them.

150 AGENTS,

active, intelligent and honest, are wanted, to sell this book in every state in the Union.

CAUTION EXTRA

A man by the name of CLAPP has engaged with a young man of the name of S. P. Townsend, and uses his name to put up a Sarsaparilla, which they call Dr. Townsend's Sarsaparilla, denominating it GENUINE, Original, etc. This Townsend is no doctor, and never was; but was formerly a worker on railroads, canals, and the like. Yet he assumes the title of Dr., for the purpose of gaining credit for what he is not. This is to caution the public not to be deceived, and purchase none but the GENUINE ORIGINAL OLD Dr. Jacob Townsend's Sarsaparilla, having on it the Old Dr's. likeness, his family coat of arms, and his signature across the coat of arms.

Principal Office, 102 Nassau st., New York City

OLD DR. JACOB TOWNSEND,

THE ORIGINAL DISCOVERER OF THE

Genuine Townsend Sarsaparilla.

Old Dr. Townsend is now about 70 years of age, and has long been known as the AUTHOR and DISCOVERER of the GENUINE ORIGINAL "TOWNSEND SARSAPARILLA." Being poor, he was compelled to limit its manufacture, by which means it has been kept out of market, and the sales circumscribed to those only who had proved its worth, and known its value. It had reached the ears of many, nevertheless, as those persons who had been healed of sore diseases, and saved from death, proclaimed its excellence and wonderful

HEALING POWER.

Knowing, many years ago, that he had, by his skill, science and experience, devised an article which would be of incalculable advantage to mankind when the means would be furnished to bring it into universal notice, when its inestimable virtues would be known and appreciated. This time has come, the means are supplied; this GRAND AND UNEQUALLED PREPARATION is manufactured on the largest scale, and is called for throughout the length and breadth of the land, especially as it is found incapable of degeneration or deterioration.

Unlike young S. P. Townsend's, it improves with age, and never changes, but for the better; because it is prepared on scientific principles by a scientific man. The highest knowledge of Chemistry, and the latest discoveries of the art, have all been brought into requisition in the manufacture of the Old Dr's Sarsaparilla. The Sarsaparilla root, it is well known to medical men, contains many medicinal properties, and some properties which are inert or useless, and others, which if retained in preparing it for use, produce fermentation and acid, which is injurious to the system. Some of the properties of Sarsaparilla are so volatile, that they entirely evaporate and are lost in the preparation, if they are not preserved by a scientific process, known only to those experienced in its manufacture. Moreover, these volatile principles, which fly off in vapor, or as an exhalation, under heat, are the very essential medical properties of the root, which give to it all its value.

Any person can boil or stew the root till they get a dark-colored liquid, which is more from the coloring matter in the root than from any thing else; they can then strain this insipid or vapid liquid, sweeten with sour molasses, and then call it "SARSAPARILLA EXTRACT or SYRUP." But such is not the article known as the

GENUINE OLD DR. JACOB TOWNSEND'S SARSAPARILLA.

This is so prepared, that all the inert properties of the Sarsaparilla root are first removed, every thing capable of becoming acid or of fermentation, is extracted and rejected; then every particle of medical virtue is secured in a pure and concentrated form; and thus it is rendered incapable of losing any of its valuable and healing properties. Prepared in this way, it is made the most powerful agent in the

Cure of innumerable diseases.

Hence the reason why we hear commendations on every side in its favor by men, women, and children. We find it doing wonders in the cure of

CONSUMPTION, DYSPEPSIA, and LIVER COMPLAINT, and in RHEUMATISM, SCROFULA, PILES, COSTIVENESS, all CUTANEOUS ERUPTIONS, PIMPLES, BLOTCHES, and all affections arising from

IMPURITY OF THE BLOOD.

It possesses a marvellous efficacy in all complaints arising from Indigestion, from Acidity of the Stomach, from unequal circulation, determination of blood to the head, palpitation of the heart, cold feet and hands, cold chills and hot flashes over the body. It has not its equal in Colds and Coughs; and promotes easy expectoration and gentle perspiration, relaxing stricture of the lungs, throat, and every other part.

But in nothing is its excellence more manifestly seen and acknowledged than in all kinds and stages of

FEMALE COMPLAINTS.

It works wonders in cases of Fluor Albus or Whites, Falling of the Womb, Obstructed, Suppressed, or Painful Menses, Irregularity of the menstrual periods, and the like; and is as effectual in curing all the forms of Kidney Diseases.

By removing obstructions, and regulating the general system, it gives tone and strength to the whole body, and thus cures all forms of

Nervous diseases and debility,

and thus prevents or relieves a great variety of other maladies, as Spinal irritation, Neuralgia, St. Vitus' Dance Swooning, Epileptic Fits, Convulsions, &c.

It cleanses the blood, excites the liver to healthy action, tones the stomach, and gives good digestion, relieves the bowels of torpor and constipation, allays inflammation, purifies the skin, equalises the circulation of the blood, producing gentle warmth equally all over the body, and the insensible perspiration; relaxes all strictures and tightness, removes all obstructions, and invigorates the entire nervous system. Is not this then

The medicine you pre-eminently need?

But can any of these things be said of S. P. Townsend's inferior article? This young man's liquid is not to be

COMPARED WITH THE OLD DR'S,

because of one GRAND FACT, that the one is INCAPABLE of DETERIORATION, and

NEVER SPOILS,

while the other DOES; souring, fermenting, and blowing the bottles containing it into fragments; the sour, acid liquid exploding and damaging other goods! Must not this horrible compound be poisonous to the system?—What! put acid into a system already diseased with acid! What causes Dyspepsia but acid? Do we not all know that when food sours in our stomachs, what mischiefs it produces? flatulence, heartburn, palpitation of the heart, liver complaint, diarrhœa, dysentery, colic, and corruption of the blood? What is Scrofula but an acid humor in the body? What produces all the humors which bring on Eruptions of the Skin, Scald Head, Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, White Swellings, Fever Sores, and all ulcerations internal and external? It is nothing under heaven, but an acid substance, which sours, and thus spoils all the fluids of the body, more or less. What causes Rheumatism but a sour or acid fluid which insinuates itself between the joints and elsewhere, irritating and inflaming the delicate tissues upon which it acts? So of nervous diseases, of impurity of the blood, or deranged circulations, and nearly all the ailments which afflict human nature.

Now is it not horrible to make and sell, and infinitely worse to use this

SOURING, FERMENTING, ACID "COMPOUND" OF S. P. TOWNSEND,

and yet he would fain have it understood that old Dr. Jacob Townsend's Genuine Original Sarsaparilla, is an IMITATION of his inferior preparation!!

Heaven forbid that we should deal in an article which would bear the most distant resemblance to S. P. Townsend's article! and which should bring down upon the Old Dr. such a mountain load of complaints and execrations from Agents who have sold, and purchasers who have used S. P. Townsend's FERMENTING COMPOUND.

We wish it understood, because it is the absolute truth, that S. P. Townsend's article and Old Dr. Jacob Townsend's Sarsaparilla are heaven-wide apart, and infinitely dissimilar; that they are unlike in every particular, having not one single thing in common.

As S. P. Townsend is no doctor, and never was, is no chemist, no pharmaceutist—knows no more of medicine or disease than any other common, unscientific, unprofessional man, what guarantee can the public have that they are receiving a genuine scientific medicine, containing all the virtues of the articles used in preparing it, and which are incapable of changes which might render them the AGENTS of Disease instead of health.

But what else should be expected from one who knows nothing comparatively of medicine or disease! It requires a person of some experience to cook and serve up even a common decent meal. How much more important is it that the persons who manufacture medicine, designed for should know well the medical properties of plants, the best manner of securing and concentrating their healing virtues, also an extensive knowledge of the various diseases which affect the human system, and now to adapt remedies to these diseases!

It is to arrest frauds upon the unfortunate, to pour balm into wounded humanity, to kindle hope in the despairing bosom, to restore health and bloom, and vigor into the crushed and broken, and to banish infirmity that OLD DR. JACOB TOWNSEND has SOUGHT and FOUND the opportunity and means to bring his

within the reach, and to the knowledge of all who need it, that they may learn and know, by joyful experience, its

Transcendent Power to Heal.

DR. JACOB TOWNSEND. NEW YORK, Oct. 5, 1848.

WALKED ACROSS THE ROOM

with the aid of crutches. Since then, I have walked in the street; have gone alone from 36 Spruce-street to the Park; thence to Lovejoy's Hotel and back; I have been to 85 Nassau-street two different times, and am now frequently visiting my neighbors. During all this time, I have taken but two bottles of Old Dr. Townsend's Sarsaparilla, Oct. 4. I procured another bottle to-day (5th Oct.) I walked twice across the floor without the aid of crutches. I have also nearly recovered from obstruction of water, which gave me great distress. The pain in my back has likewise left me. I and my family have no earthly reason to ascribe my recovery to any other cause but to

OLD DR. JACOB TOWNSEND'S SARSAPARILLA.

ALEX. WELSH, 36 Spruce-st.

P. S.—Several able physicians despaired of my ever walking or even raising myself from my bed again.

BOOKS FOR THE AMERICAN PEOPLE.

TO BOOK AGENTS AND CANVASSERS.

THE FOLLOWNG

VALUABLE NATIONAL WORKS

Are decidedly the best Books that Agents can possibly employ their time in supplying to the people of the United States.

THEY ARE INDISPENSABLE AS BOOKS OF REFERENCE TO OUR

Senators, Representatives in Congress, and State Legislatures,

and should be possessed by all the Young Men of this Great Republic, especially those who are aspiring to distinction and fame in our Halls of Legislation. There is not a city or town in these United States, even those of small importance, but contains many citizens to whom these works are indispensable. They are sacred Archives of our common Country. The Chronicles of American Independence!

Postmasters, Colporteurs, and Book Agents, are invited to secure such districts of country as they are most familiar with and desire to occupy. All applications are requested to be made without delay.

OUR PLAN.

☞ The plan the publisher has so successfully carried on for several years, is the obtaining Responsible Men as Agents, who are well known in their own Counties, Towns, and Villages, and have time and disposition to circulate good and instructive Books among their Neighbors and Friends. By taking a glance at the following list of Books it will easily be discovered that they are adapted to the Christain, the Patriot, the Statesman, and the Domestic Circle. Any person wishing to embark in the enterprise, will risk nothing by sending to the Publisher $20, for which he will receive sample copies of the principal works, affording a very liberal per centage to the Agent for this trouble.

1776!

A Faithful chronicle of the war of American Independence.

1776, OR THE WAR OF INDEPENDENCE.

A History of the Anglo-Americans, from the period of the Union of the Colonies aginst the French, to the Inauguration of WASHINGTON, the first President of the United States. Beautifully illustrated by numerous Engravings, showing the plans of Battles, Prominent events, and Portraits of Distinguished Men of the period. By BENSON J. LOSSING. In handsome emblematical binding. Price $2.50.

☞ To every true-hearted American, this is a most welcome and invaluable work: it is the voice of our Fathers calling upon us to guard most sacredly the precious boon of Freedom; to purchase and secure which, they offered upon their Country's altar, their lives, their fortunes, and their sacred honor.

Opinions of the Press.

(From the American Signal.)

"We have been deeply interested in reading a new and splendid patriotic volume, entitled '1776,' published by E. Walker, of New-York. The embellishments, which are very numerous, are of the most perfect description, and carry the mind of the reader back to the period when the Continental Armies were marshalled to defend our native land. We advise all the readers of the Signal to add this book to their libraries, and teach the rising generation to value the priceless lessons it contains so abundantly."

(From the New-York Express.)

"The book is elegantly printed and bound, and the engravings (seventy-eight in number) form in themselves a rare historical gallery of great interest and variety, displaying the originality and taste of the author-artist in this department. As a whole, we have no hesitation in commending this volume as the best popular history of our Revolution yet published.

(From the Evening Mirror.)

"This is the title of a very elegant looking book of some 500 pages published by Edward Walker, 144 Fulton-street. The work is beautifully illustrated with a great number of engravings, and the typography and binding are absolutely faultless. It contains a great amount and variety of information relating to the Revolutionary period of American history, and is a work which will, doubtless, command a very extensive sale."

"With regard to the tone and spirit of the volume, the felicity of the style of narrative and reflections, and the great care taken to insure accuracy, as is shown by the author's frequent reference to the best authorities, I am confident that he is entitled to the reputation of a competent and faithful historian.

EDWIN WILLIAMS."

(From the Albany Spectator.)

"This is a great national work, the beauties and excellencies of which should be studied by every one who would understand the history of human freedom, and the inalienable rights of man."

(From the Knickerbocker Magazine, August, 1847.)

"The enterprising and patriotic-spirited publisher of this exceedingly beautiful volume will find thathe has not misjudged in believing that 'a book in one volume, well written and embracing a faithful chronicle of events which accomplished the laying of the foundation stone of this great republic, would be invaluable to the present and future generations.'"

The Presidents of the United States, their Memoirs and Administrations.

To which is added, an account of the Inaugurations of each President and a history of the principal political events of his administration, and of the transactions of Congress at each session during the period.

Declaration of Indendence.

Articles of Confederation.

Constitution of the United States, with Notes and References.

A brief history of the events and circumstances which led to the Union of the States, and formation of the Constitution.

A synopsis of the Constitution of the several States.

Chronological Table of Political Events in the United States.

Statistical Tables of Revenue, Commerce and Population.

A Complete List of Members of Congress from 1789 to 1846.

With Portraits of the Presidents, engraved on steel in the best style of the art, from the most approved likenesses. By V. BALSH, Esq. of Johnstown, N. Y. In one large handsomo volume, 8vo. in emblematic binding. Price $2.50.

☞ No expense has been spared in the preparation of these volumes of Documents, History, and Statistics, to render the same worthy of patronage, not only of Statesmen and Legislators, but of the American public generally; who will find them the Treasury of political knowledge and a mass of information indispensable to every intelligent citizen.

STATESMAN'S MANUAL,

COMPRISING THE

Lives, Addresses, and Messages of the Presidents of the United States.

From Washington, to Taylor's Inaugural Message, March, 1849. With a History of their Administrations, and of each Session of Congress.

Also, various Historical, Statistical, and other importantant public Documents, and a complete Index, or Analytical Table of Contents to the whole work. Edited by EDWIN WILLIAMS, Esq.

Illustrated with Portraits of our 12 presdents, engraved on Steel, from the most approved authorities, and in the best style of the art. Printed on the best paper, and handsomely bound in emblematic style. It will also be embellished with Views of the Capitol, president's House and the Seals of the several States, and the United States. In four large volumes. Price $10.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS, &C.

From the President of the United States

"To Mr. E. WALKER. Dear Sir.—I have found your Statesman's Manual a valuable work, and exceedingly useful and convenient. Yours, J. K. POLK.

(From the Hon. Henry Clay.)

"My Dear Sir: Your Statesman's Manual is a very valuable work for reference."

STATE OF NEW-YORK,
Department of Common Schools,
ALBANY, Sept. 18, 1848.

I have examined the Statesman's Manual, in two volumes octavo, compiled by Edwin Williams, and am of the opinion that it is a proper work for school district libraries, and deserving of a place in these institutions, designed for the diffusion of useful knowledge. Signed, J. S. RANDALL, Dep. State Sup't Com. Schools.

(From the Journal of Commerce.)

"This is one of the most important books published in the United States for a long time."

(From the N. Y. Courier and Enquirer.)

"This is the most important contribution to American political history ever published."

(From the Democratic Review.)

"The whole forms a most complete library in itself, of all that concerns the politics of the country. No individual should be without these volumes at hand for prompt reference. How many hours of idle discussions and senseless debates might be spared to heated partizans, were these books at hand for appeal. We shall have frequent occasion to refer to them."

(From the N.Y. Express, Aug. 21, 1846.)

"This is emphatically a national work, and as such eminentlydeserving of a national support."

(From the Commercial Advertiser.)

"Such a work is invaluable, and is offered at a comparatively low price, in expectation of a large sale."

(From the Luzerne Democrat.)

"The Statesman's Manual is a valuable work, comprising a complete condensed political history of our country from the formation of our government until the present time"

(From the Washingtonian, Ohio.)

"It is but scanty praise to say, that no work of equal value to the American Statesman, politician, journalist, historian, &c. has ever before appeared."

(From the Harrisburg, (Pa.) Argus.)

"No politician, no man who desires to understand the history of the several administration of the general government, should be without a copy of it. As a book of reference it is invaluable."

REV. DR. DOWLING'S GREAT WORK ON ROMANISM.—A NEW AND ENLARGED EDITION, WITH THE AUTHOR'S LAST ADDITIONS. A BOOK FOR EVERY PROTESTANT!

THE HISTORY OF ROMANISM,

FROM ITS EARLIEST ORIGIN TO THE PRESENT TIME. BY REV. JOHN DOWLING, D. D.

Embellished with upwards of fifty highly finished engravings, chiefly from original designs.

Just published, with the Author's final corrections, a new and enlarged edition of this splendid and popular work, with a copious Supplement, comprising a History of the Life and Reign of the present remarkable Pope, PIUS IX, and a Biographical Sketch of the last Pope, GREGORY XVI.

The best encomium upon this learned, complete and popular History of Romanism, is the fact that SIXTEEN THOUSAND COPIES have been sold in about three years, and still there is a constant demand for it in all parts of the country. In order to meet this demand, and to gratify the public curiosity in relation to the present pope, Pius IX, the present enlarged edition is presented to the public. With the Supplement, the work now forms a splendid octavo volume, for the parlor or for the library, of 732 pages.

Testimonials to former editions, selected from more than a hundred, from all Protestant denominations.

EPISCOPAL.

From the Protestant Churchman.

"This is a beautiful volume of 672 pages. Good service has been done for the cause of truth by its publication, and it certainly ought to secure for its author an enviable reputation among contributors to the standard literature of the day."

From the Episcopal Recorder.

"It traces its subjects from the earliest corruptions of Christianity to the present time. It has a full Chronological Table, with Analytical and Alphabetical Indexes and Glossary. It is a large and beautiful volume, full of valuable information."

METHODIST.

From Zion's Herald.

It is written in a popular style. Its engravings are numerous and finely executed. The book will doubtless be popular and cannot fail to produce a profound conviction of the terrible iniquity of Anti-Christ.

Rev. Geo. Coles, of the Christian Advocate and Journal, says: "I cannot but express my gratitude to Almighty God that such a concise and complete developement of 'the Mystery of Iniquity' is now presented to the public in a form so elegant and attractive."

CONGREGATIONAL.

Rev. Dr. Cheever, in the New-York Evangelist, says: "We ought to have noticed this excellent and beautiful work before. It possesses many and very strong claims for popular favor, and we do not doubt that it is destined to have an extraordinary sale. The work itself is characterized by great research, and a comprehensive and scriptural view of the nature and history of the Popish system."

PRESBYTERIAN.

From the (Philadelphia) Presbyterian

"Such a work required deep and protracted research, and it affords evidence that diligence, caution and judgment, in the selection and arrangement of materials, have not been wanting. The author has availed himself of the writings of both protestants and papists, and has brought together a greater mass of information on the history, the spirit, and the doings of Popery than we have ever before seen in one volume."

MISCELLANEOUS.

From the Christian Intelligencer, (Dutch Reformed.)

"Those who would see a correct and condensed exhibition of the ten thousand abominations of the Papacy, may find it to their amazement in 'Dowling's History of Romanism.' Its contents form a rich storehouse of historical instruction, which, if could be placed within the reach of every family, would prove an unspeakable blessing to our beloved country. This is the book for Americans. Place it beside your Bibles. Compare its records of crime and the Papal principles it exposes, with the holy doctrines and immaculate life of Jesus of Nazareth. When you have done this, you will have no difficulty in determining whether or not Romanism is christianity."

Rev. Alexander Campbell, president of Bethany college, of the church of the Reformers, says: "In this work are an immense assemblage of facts and documents connected with the development and history of this great mammoth institution of error and iniquity. Popery is developed in this treatise from its birth to the present hour. We desire for this book a very large circulation. It is only necessary to enlighten this community of the true spirit and character of the Papal system, to secure them against its insidious attacks upon everything we as a people hold dear and sacred. Let every one buy this work, communicate freely to all around him the develpement which it reveals, and the facts which it records."

President Cramp, editor of the Montreal Register, and author of the Text Book of Popery, says: "This important work possesses merits of a high order. We are pleased to see that Dr. Dowling furnishes ample references to his authorities. The matter is well arranged; the facts unquestionable; the style lucid; and the spirit Catholic, in the proper sense of the term. Its extensive circulation will be highly advantageous to protestanism."

Notwithstanding the extensive supplement now added to this valuable work, the price will remain the same as the former editions, Three Dollars per copy.

The Panther Hunt.

BY RICH.

Incredible as the following account may appear to our readers, the material incidents related are strictly true, and the hero of the tale still walks the earth in a green old age.

In a ceriain section of our own goodly State, the first settlers were obliged to depend, for a part of their subsistence, upon the wild animals they might take with the aid of their trusty rifles Many of them could eye a rifle, or take a shot of white-eye (corn whiskey), without blinking; and it is to be regretted that some of them have suffered severely from wounds caused by the latter.

In the autumn, after the leaves had fallen, as a light snow lay upon the ground, our hero, who rejoiced in the cognomen of 'Cal,' (Calvin shortened) started, with two companions and a dog, to spend an afternoon on a still hunt for deer, Now Cal was one of that cool, self-posessed, athletic yet reckless kind of men, often met with in all new countries; and on training days, at logging bees, and at raisings, always was ready to climb a sign-post, or sapling, feet formost, or walk a ridge-pole from end to end, upon his hands, with his heels in the air, and then, by way of showing that he was capable of even greater feats, would decend a rafter to the plate of the building in the same manner.

The party did not forget to carry their canteens well charged, and as they pursued their way into the recess of the forest, from time to time refreshed the inner man by liberal draughts therefrom. Not meeting with any game in their progress, it was agreed to seperate and pursue the hunt, and if either fired his rifle, the others were to hasten to his assistance. They had not been long seperated, when one of them fired his rifle, and the others soon came up. The one who fired, had discovered a recent track in the light snow, which resembled a cat's but was nearly as large as a man could make with his hand, by slightly bending his fingers inward, as in the act of grasping. They knew it to be a panther's track, and though the day was far spent, resolved to follow it, and, if possible, secure the animal. On they went, plunging deeper and deeper into the forest, till the shades of night gathered around them, when they came to a huge hemlock, and perceived, by scratches on the bark, that the object of their pursuit was treed. It was too dark to see him through the thick foliage, and they dared not fire at random; they therefore concluded to build a fire at the roots of the tree, and watch till day-light, when they might secure their prisoner.

Accordingly, the fire was built; and after again wetting their throats, they commenced their night's watch. About six or eight feet from the roots of the tree, lay the fallen trunk of another. Owing to the fatigues of the day and their experiments with the canteens, as the night wore away, sleep weighed down their eyelids, and they sunk into her embrace. Cal, however, had one eye open for adventure. The fire had gradully declined until only a few faint flickerings shot up at intervals. Hearing a scratching above his head, he roused himself, arose, and by the light of the nearly extinguished fire, discovered the panther, about fifteen feet up the tree, gradually decending, like a cat. His long tail swung to and fro, and as soon as it came within reach, Cal seized it with both hands, shouted to his companions, and gave a desperate pull, which brought the panther directly down into the burning embers. Bewildered, and taken all aback, as the sailors say, he started full jump around the tree, while Cal, shouting, and holding on the coudal extremity, followed round and round, raising a fine dust in the ashes, His companions had snatched their rifles, and, at a safe distance, called on Cal to let go that they might fire without danger of hitting him. But Cal thought that a panther caught by the tail, was worth two running in the woods; so round they went as before, till the panther, not liking the 'circus,' darted off, and just as he was leaping over the before-mentioned fallen tree, received a shot through the heart, and fell dead on the other side.—Cal, still retaining his hold, went over after him, and his companions were duly notified that the animal was his game. He was of the largest size, measuring over nine feet from the tip of the nose to the end of the tail.—Syracuse Literary Union.

How Jedediah was 'sucked in.'

'Is the Squire tu hum?' inquired an elongated individual yesterday, who pushed his head into the Recorder's office. It being about the dinner hour none of the officials happened to be 'to hum,' but a couple of cits, who were lounging inside, invited him in, and inquired his business.

'Well,' said he, in a beautiful nasal, 'my business ain't much, but tell me which is the Squire?'

'He is at dinner, sir,' said one of the pair,—'but if you have anything very urgent, we will send for him.'

'Well, I ain't got much in particular, replied the Eastern man, 'but jest this mornin' a feller from the 'jinin State of Illinois played me one of the allfiredest mean tricks I've heern tell on lately.'

'What was it like?' inquired the listener.

'Well, it wan't much like anythin';' said he, 'but an all created suck in.—Where is that Squire,' he burst out again: 'I'll hev the mean critter jerked into a jail if it costs me a dollar.

What did he do? persisted the questioner. 'Well, 't want much of anything except a sell,' said he; and then, breaking out again, he exclaimed: 'Oh Jedediah Dexter! that anything cute as you're allowed tu be shud be drawed intu sech a scrape by a yaller lookin ager shakin', corn raisin' sarpint as that fellar!'

'Was he a Sucker?' inquired the gent.

'Well he wan't much else,' said the injured man, 'and the fullest grown one I've seed lately—hang his picture.'

'But you have not told us what his offence was,' continued the other.

'No,' said he, 'I ain't; and what's wusser a plaguy sight, I'm ashamed to; all cre-a-tion! that I shud a been so tee-totally green. I swow,' said he, starting, 'I believe I wont tell, I'll jest let the mean varmint slide. It won't bear tellin' on.—Why, if they shud heer tell of it down in Connecticut, I couldn't never show myself at any futur' Thanksgivin' in them latitudes; they'd holler at me jest as quick as they'd clap eyes on me."

'Oh, come!' shouted both listeners, you are not goin to leave without enlightening us now that you have raised our curiosity!'

'Well, I guess it won't hurt you much if you don't heer it,' and he was about to move when one of his auditors informed him that it was absolutely necessary that he should stop and lodge his complaint, for that evidently some wrong had been committed, and if he kept silent, and allowed to pass unpunished, he would be conniving at the evil, and thereby lay himself liable.

'Is that the law with you?' inquired the bitter complainant.

Both listeners signified the affirmative to the query.

'Well, I don't want to go agin law much,' said Jed, 'so you kin hev the hull upshot of this in a minit, and you'll allow it is mighty mean. A Illinois feller this mornin' walked into my shop, where I'm merchandizin' along side on the market, and got tu dickerin' some butter with me for groceries and other notions. His pots of cow's grease wur dreadful nice on top, and tasted like new milk arter spring grass. It just tuck me all of a heap and I bargained for all the critter had, and got tu sellin' him the little fixins in exchange. He looked so tarnal soft, and swayned around so allfired green that I didn't once hev a dreamin' of the critter's being tricky; so the trade was did up mighty short, and he traveled. Well, just a minit sence, I turned out a pot to sell a customer, and I swan tu man if two-thirds on it wasn't an Injin meal dumplin'!'

A burst of laughter here broke from his auditors, and, as they appeared to keep on at it, instead of sympathising with Jed, he raised himself proudly up under his load of surprise, and moved to the door.

'Ah! ha, ha, ha! Injin dumplins, ha! ha!' shouted one of the convulsed listeners, as Jed was retreating.

'You needn' take on so,' says Jed, for if he don't think of his sins when he swallers that tea I sold him, then I'm mistaken in the yarb. It's perfectly awful on a man's bowels; 'specially when he aint used to it!' and, amid a shout of laughter Jed disappeared, congratulating himself at least on being even.

The First Wedding.

Major Noah thus pleasantly and philosophically discourses upon 'the first wedding.' He says:—

'We like short courtships, and in this, Adam acted like a sensible man. He fell asleep a bachelor, and awoke to find himself a married man. He appears to have popped the question almost immediately after meeting Md'lle Eve, and she, without any flirtation or shyness, gave him a kiss and herself. Of this first kiss in this world we have had, however, our own thoughts, and sometimes in a poetical mood have wished we were the man 'wot did.' But the deed is done—the chance was Adam's and he improved it.

We like the notion of getting married in a garden. It is in good taste. We like a private wedding. Adam's was private. No envious beaux were there; no croaking old maids; no chattering aunts and grumbling grandmothers. The birds of heaven were the minstrels, and the glad sky flung its light upon the scene.

One thing about the first wedding brings queer thoughts to us, in spite of scriptural truth. Adam and his wife were rather young to be married—some two or three days old, according to the sagest speculations of theologians—mere babies—larger but older—without experience, without a house, without a pot or a kettle, nothing—but love and Eden!"

Knowledge.

Knowledge is its own exceeding great reward. It is not the gift of colleges, particularly. It is what the mind produces whenever it acts.—Great schools are chief appliances for the lazy, to furnish substitutes for knowledge, by which they may make their way in the world. The youth who has a noble thirst for science is not so much benefited by a 'liberal education' as he is apt to imagine he will be, before trying it. If your parents are rich, and have nothing better to do with their money let them board you at Cambridge or Yale for four years. But if they are poor, laboring people, stay with them and labor too. But don't the less strive for a liberal education. Be liberal in supplying yourself with books and time. Journey on foot, and study nature and men. Ask questions of everybody and every thing.

Thus doing, you will probably acquire more satisfactory and useful knowledge, and what is more, sounder character and firmer health—you will be more of a man—than if you distress your parents to have knowledge put into your mouth with a pap-spoon. It is thus that the greatest and best men are made in every country.

THE TURKEY.—In an article published in the American Agriculturist, from the pen of Mr. Chas. Starr, Jr, that gentleman remarks as follows:

'Heretofore I have had much difficulty in raising turkeys as to be almost discouraged, but of late have been very successful in consequence of persuing the following mode reccommended to me by a lady, who said that she had no trouble with them:

'When first hatched, give no food for twenty-four hours; then give a little curd made of buttermilk, increasing the quantity as they grow older. They should then be protected from the wet, and by no means have Indian meal. But with the curd they may have, in moderate quantities, wheat-bread soked in buttermilk.

'I believe that Indian meal is fatal to the greater part of young turkeys that die in the attempt to raise them.'

HOW TO CONQUER.—'Wife,' said a ben-pecked husband, 'go to bed.' 'I won't.' 'Well then, sit up; I will be minded.'

Husband Catching.

Of a certain divine an anecdote is told, which Hook used to say exceeded any specimen of cool assurance thst even he had exhibited. A young clerical friend of his, staying at his house, happened to be sitting up one night reading, after the family, as he supposed had retired to rest. The door opened, and his excellent host reappeared in his dressing gown and slippers. 'My dear boy,' said the latter, seating himself, and looking pathetically at his guest, 'I have a few words to say—don't look alarmed–they will prove agreeable enough to you—rely upon it. The fact is, Mrs.—and myself have for some time observed the attention which you have paid to betsey. We can make every allowance, knowing your excellent principles as we do, for the diffidence which has hitherto tied your tongue, but it has been carried far enough. In a worldly point of view, Betsey, of course, might do better, yet we have all the highest esteem for your character and disposition—and then our daughter—she is very dear to us–and where her happiness is at stake all minor considerations must give way. We have, therefore, after due deliberation—I must own altogether without hesitation—made up our minds to the match. What must be, must be; you are a worthy fellow, and therefore, at a word, you have our free and cordial consent. Only make our child happy, and we ask no more. The astonished divine, half petrified, laid down his book. 'My dear sir,' he began to murmur, 'here is some dreadful mistake. I really never thought—that is, I never intended—' 'No! no! I know you did not. Your modesty, indeed, is one of those traits which has made you so deservedly a favorite with us all. But, my dear boy, a parent's eyes are chary. Anxiety sharpens them. We saw well enough what you thought so well concealed. Betsey, too, is just the girl to be so won. Well! well! say no more about it: it's all over now. God bless you both! Only make her a good husband—here she is. I told Mrs.—to bring her down again; for the sooner young folks are out of suspense the better. Settle the matter as soon as you like; we will leave you together.' Thus saying, the considerate papa bestowed a most considerate kiss upon his daughter, who was at this juncture led into the room by her mother, both en deshabille, shook his future son-in-law by the hand, and with a 'There, there, go along, Mrs.—,' turned his wife out of the room, and left the lovers(?)to their tete-a-tete. What was to be done? Common humanity, to say nothing of politeness, demanded nothing less than a proposal; it was tendered accordingly, and we need scarcely add, very graciously accepted.—Memoirs of Hook.

'I'll bet a sheep,' said old Meredith to his other half, 'that our boy Jim is going crazy. For he is grinning at the plough, and he is grinning at the barn, and he is grinning at the table, and he is grinning to himself wherever he goes.' 'Poh,' replied the woman, 'don't you know he got a love letter this morning.'

THE LOVE LETTER.–The following love letter was found in an old garret among other lumber:

DER JIM—Cum rite of if your comin at all: as Silas Hoames is sisting that I shall have him, and he hugs and kisses me so continually that I can't hold out much longer. I must have a feller afore next winter, and I can't stand it no how no longer. Your flame, SALLY ANN T—.

THE TIDES OF THE GERMAN OCEAN.–A striking example occurs to us of the happy connection of theory with observation, in the prediction that there must exist a spot in the German Ocean—the central point of an area of rotation, produced by the meeting and mutual action of two opposite tides—where no rise or fall of tide whatever could occur; a prediction actually verified by Captain Hewett in 1839, without any prior knowledge that such a point had been supposed to exist. This is one among the many triumphs of like kind achieved by modern science.—Quarterly Review.

PLAINFIELD GAZETTE.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Thursday, April, 12, 1849.

One great obstacle in the way of man's arriving at a correct conclusion on all subjects affectnng his rights, and more particularly in those relating to matters of Political Government, is party proscription; which has heretofore been carried to a most injurious and alarming excess; thousands of men would not read, much less subscribe for any newspaper not in accordance with his preconceived views; and would not tolerate even a township officer of opposite political opinions.

And what we would ask has been the result of such a course? Have not the true interests of all suffered in consequence of this spirit of party proscription; and to the extent that this has been the case? All men when speaking candidly on the subject admit this to be true, and many have earnestly sought a remedy. But instead of beginning at the beginning, and taking the beam out of their own eye, they have sought away off for it, and prefer taking the mote out of other peoples.

We were told, and were also in just expectation that it would prove to be true, that by selecting Gen. Taylor for president, we should select a president for the nation, and not for or of a party. He also thus declared himself; that he would not be the president of a party. That he had no "friends to reward nor enemies to punish." And that he would and did accept nominations of respectable bodies of men without regard to party. And it must be evident to all that he was elected by a majority of the whole people without the usual manifestationof party spirit; thousands of Democrats thus voting for him as well as Whigs, with the expectation that the pledges given both by Gen. Taylor, and the Whigs; who by not making the usual declaration of principles, and party issues, knowing, and thereby acknowledging that they could not elect him on those issues, and that therefore he was not to be a party president.

Yet notwithstanding all this, it appears as though the party papers on both sides, with few exceptions, and also party leaders, are endeavoring to keep up party proscription. The Democrats complaining that he does proscribe men for opinions sake, and the Whigs because he does not. And this proscription is again extending itself into our primary elections, to the disgraceful selection of unworthy and incompetent men, to the manifest injury of the true interest of every individual.—What has a man's opinions on the Tariff and kindred subjects to do with the just administration of township affairs, by a Town Committee, a Constable, Judge of Election, Clerk, Overseers of the Poor and of the Highways &c?

Now we would respectfully enquire, inasmuch as a large proportion of party proscription was done away, or believed to be done away by the election of Gen. Taylor, whether men who profess true democracy and a Christian spirit, whether known by name as Whigs or Democrats, would not act more consistently in accordance with that spirit in using their influence in doing away that spirit of intolerance which proscribes a man for his Political or Religious opinions?

There is one thing certain, that if Gen. Taylor does act in accordance with his avowed unsolicited declarations, he may make a very popular president. But if he suffers himself to become the pliant tool of cliques and parties, he will just as assuredly make a very unpopular one.

His election, in the manner in which it was accomplished i. e. by his own unsolicited declarations' that he would be the president of the people, and not of a party; and its being tacitly so understood by all who voted for him, is evidence that the American people wish to do away with this spirit of proscription. As it must be equally evident to all sane men that the Whigs never did or ever can elect a president on the old openly avowed issues of the principles of the party. The people as often as the attempt has been made, have as often decided, that those principles are antagonistical to the true interests of the whole country.

This is not said in any vain boast, but is as evident as the Sun at noon day. The great majority of the people, having nothing but the true interest of the Country at heart, have never hesitated in adopting those great principles of Democracy laid down by the immortal Jefferson and hitherto advocated by that party known by the name of Democrats' or Loco-Focos, whenever they have been made the test.

Protection and Prices.

To the Editor of the Tribune:

In your Tariff article of Thursday morning, you deny that the tendency of a Protective duty is to enhance price. Now I confess myself, though a Whig, in a state of shameful uncertainty in regard to the entire question of the Protective policy. And yet one thing seems to me clear—namely, that prices must be enhanced by a Tariff, otherwise its purpose is not answered. I am probably showing my utter ignorance of the matter, but I ask information.

Taking, for instance, Iron instead of Pins, is your argument true? A higher duty—that is, an enhanced price—is asked to enable the manufactures to live. If no increase of price is obtained, and that permanently what is the good of 'Protection?' Does it reduce the rate of wages, (I hope not,) or how? Then how does a Tariff, without an increase of prices, make manufacturers profitable?

Yours, INQUIRER.

Reply.

We have probably answered substantially the same questions as the above a dozen times at least, but Patience is a virtue we rejoice in, and do not object to one more attempt to make clear what need never have been otherwise.

The question, be it remembered, is not —'Do Protective Duties ever, for any period, enhance Prices?'—for we cheerfully admit that they do. The point raised by our correspondent is this—'Must not Protective Duties neceesarily raise Prices? If not, how can they be Protective?' We will try to show.

If we knew what an 'Inquirer' does for a living, we would choose an illustration drawn from his own buisiness, but, being ignorant of his, we will begin with our own. There was a time, then, when The Tribune did not contain near so much matin proportion to its cost as it now does, nor was that matter procured for it at anything like so great expense. And yet we are not doing worse than we were at the time but better. Why?—Because our regular subscription, sale and advertising patronage are much greater than they where in the infancy of our enterprise. Doubling our patronage has enabled us to give each patron more for a dollar than we were able to give seven or eight years ago. Can it be difficult for 'An Inquirer' to apply the rule here indicated to the various branches of American Manufacture beside that of Newspapers?

Scrutinize the business of any maker of Sythes, Hoes, Axes, Pen-Knives, Hollow Ware, or what you please who formerly sold to the value of four or five thousand dollars per year, and who now sells a better article to the extent of Fifty or Eighty Thousand Dollars, and you will find that whereas he formerly just lived he is now making a handsome profit, and yet he sells his wares not at a higher but at a lower price than formerly Increased Demand for his product has enabled—nay impelled—him to sell it cheaper yet make more money by it. Five per cent net profit on a business of Fifty Thousand Dollars per anum is better than Twenty per cent on Five Thousand Dollars.

Take any village wherein Five Thousand Dollars worth of goods are annually sold, and let its trade expand to One Hundred Thousand Dollars per anum, and you will now obtain goods in that village at lower prices than before.

These examples sufficiently illustrate a general law. Our young Manufactures, —exposed to unequal competition with the older and richer establishments of Europe, employing the far cheaper Labor of that continent, with the main channels of our Trade in possession of Importers and their jobbing customers,—maintain a crippled and precarious existence under a Tariff of low Revenue duties. But shut out by protective Duties the great bulk of the competing Foreign fabricks, and you instantly and greatly enlarge the Home Market for American fabrics. The establishment for merely having half work and sometimes waiting months for sales has now full employment and ready sales. The water-power, dam, buildings, &c. formerly devoted to making five thousand dollars' worth annually now answer as well for twenty-five thousand dollars worth. And if any one attempts to keep up the price so as to realize an exorbitant profit, some one else engages in or extends a rival establishment, undersells him and brings him down to a fair living rate. Is not this obvious? And is it hard to see that the manufacture is now more profitable than formerly even at a price somewhat diminished.—Ed. Trib.

Now here is a Whig as will be seen by the above extract, who, notwithsanding all the light the Tribune has been able to give on the subject, cannot help but perceive that the tendency of Protection is to enhance prices. It requires no comment; it must be evident to all men who will throw aside prejudice and look at things as they exist, that this always has been and always will be the case. And what further light does the Tribune give in all its long string of comments but to prove that it is competition in all and every branch of business that gives a better article at a reduced price; which is what those who are in favor of tariff sufficient for revenue only, have always contended? Mr. Walker himself has never written any thing stronger than these same comments of the Tribune to show that "competition is the life of trade" and that capital will always flow into any branch of business where there is a demand created for it, and that it is detrimental to the interests of the country as a whole to protect i. e. force capital into any branch of business that does not call for it.

What has protection to do with the publication of the Tribune? Is it not evident by the Tribune's own argument that it is competition and competition alone that has made the tribune what it is? So with the maker of "Scthes, Hoes, Axes, Pen-Knives, Hollow Ware, or what you please."

"Increased demand for his product has enabled—nay, impelled—him to sell it cheaper yet make more money by it."

It must be evident to all that in the above manufacture of Scythes, Hoes, &c. as in its own case it is the superior article manufactured, which is caused by competition that creates the demand, and which demand as all must know cheapens the article, and that protection as in its own case has nothing to do with it.

This same protection whenever it has been made the test, the American people have indignantly rebuked and put down, being unwilling to acknowledge, as knowing they can compete with universaldom, as can be seen by the manufacture of every article that can be made to pay a profit, and of new ones which are constantly springing up all over the country to make a market for the "Wood, Charcoal, Butter, Cheese, Fruits Vegetables, &c. &c." as fast and faster than there is a demand for them.

If all would divest themselves of prejudice on this suject and look at things as they really are, and as they affect their own interest, without reference to party politics they could not fail to percieve that a revenue Tariff together with 3000 miles of ocean transportation to add to it should be and is sufficient protection for any and all manufactures.

The Tariff of '46 with some modifications that experience may point out more nearly meets the demands of the country than any which has preceded it. And which with the Subtreasury, which has also proved itself superior to any other mode which has yet been adopted, to adjust and carry on the finances of the Government. We say proved which is certainly the fact for while the Governments of Europe have been overturned and been embarrassed by financial difficulties, the Government of the United States has maintained its credit unimpared through heavy expenses created by a foreign War.

The Tribunes arguments quite as often as otherwise will like the above apply to free trade, as it designates a revenue tariff, as well as to protection, on which, its Edior is a perfect monomaniac.

☞ We again invite attention to the valuable books advertised by Mr. Walker. The 'Statesman's Manual,' in particular, is a work which should be found in the library of every citizen.

☞ The few get rich by judicous advertising because the many do not compete with them.

It would be as easy a task to collect a bad debt (or perform any other impossible feat) as for a merchant or mechanic to prosper in business without advertising in The Gazette.

In another column of our paper will be found a few extracts from a small volume entitled "Essays on Human Rights" by E. P. Hurlbut, which we think contains many good things on the subject, published by Fowler and Wells 131 Nassau st. New York. Price 50 cts.

☞ We have received the April number of the "National Magazine" Edited by Mrs. Ann S. Stephens, whose name alone is a sufficient guarantee of its worth, its pages are filled with highly interesting matter with a strict regard to moral worth.

☞ If we were inclined to puff we might puff Mr. Bullman's establishment, but our abilities might fall far short of the realities therefore we forbear; he assures us however that he is prepared to compete with any store in town, so far as reasonable prices and a good article are concerned, will you test the truth of this; see advertisement.

☞ We have received Holden's Dollar Magazine for April, the very low price at which it is afforded, places it within the reach of all. We like this number so well we would like to have the three preceding numbers, to which we are entitled.

HORRIBLE EFFECTS OF RUM.—We see in the Democratic Banner of Morristown of April 5th. the death of an old woman aged about 75 years named Martha Paine, whose death was caused by her cloths taken fire while intoxicated. Her son, during all the time she was burning, was lying within a few feet of her, utterly unconscious of the dreadful affair, her daughter was aroused from the stupor, and getting up, staggered toward her mother and pushing her down, tried to put out the fire.

Dr. Canfield was called, who did all that could be done for the sufferer, who lingered from the time of the accident, about 12 o'clock, until nearly 5, most of the time without pain, and in full possession of her mind, when she expired. Verdict of the Jury, accidental death.

TOWN MEETING.—At our Election on Monday last for Township officers, our Whig friends were so greedy that they have taken all the offices from us, poor fellows, we are afraid they will not know how to conduct themselves properly, be moderate gentlemen.

Warren Township in Somerset Co. is in about the same fix, having elected only the Assessor and one Freeholder one Constable Democrats.

☞ Do we live in a free country—Verily we hope so, yet we percieve from the Elizabethtown Journal that its Editor has been denounced by "a distinguished clergyman!" of the old Borough, for allowing the question of the cars running on the Sabbath to be discussed in its columns. "Free discussion is the Palladium of our Liberties."

The Protocal.

After all the indignation of the whig press about a certain Protocal it will be perceived that the Secretary of State (Mr. Clayton) attaches no sort of importance to it, as will be seen by a note of his to Senor Rosas, and that the administration consider the treaty itself binding upon the two republics. What a waste of ammunition.

☞ Stand-up collars are becoming quite fashionable in these parts. A friend suggests the propriety of establishing an office for the insurance of ears.

RECOVERY OF THE GOVERNMENT JEWELS.—Officer A. M. C. Smith, while in Washington day before yesterday, ascertained that Henry B. Jones of this City, or his brother Philander, was in some way connected with the stealing of the Government Jewels. The officers accordingly went to the residence of Henry B. Jones, at 11 Pike-st. and took them into custody.

On arriving at the house, 121 Diamonds of various sizes, 143 Pearls, together with three pounds of Gold in bars, were found buried in the cellar. One large bottle of Ottar of Rose, containing nearly a quart, was also found. The original bottle had been substituted by the one found. The Scabbard of the Sword which had been presented to Commodore Biddle by the Emperor of Russia, and a gold Snuff Box presented by the Emperor of Morocco, had been melted down into bars. The settings of the diamonds and pearls had been removed and deposited in a tin box.

The Grand Jury of Washington have indicated Tom Hand as the individual who stole the jewels, and it is believed that Henry B. Jones proceeded to Washington and brought on the jewels to New-York. —N. Y. Trib.

It is stated that there were five gentlemen in the U. S. Senate, who were once members of the same Class in Transylvania University, viz: Messrs. Downs of La.; Jefferson Davis of Miss.; D. R. Atchison, of Mo.; Hannegan of Ind.; and Jones of Io.

During the past month petitions from 58 towns, signed by 4,069 persons, praying for the abolition of Capital Punishment have been presented to the Massachusetts Legislature by J. M. Spear.

The New-Brunswick Union mentions a rumor that Dr. Hasbrouck intends to resign the presidency of Rutgers College after the next Commencement.

There had been about 240 Post Office appointments made during the week, of which 24 were to fill vacancies, or were caused by removals for cause.—National Whig.

NEW POSTMASTERS IN NEW JERSEY.—Samuel Risdon has been appointed Postmasters at Mount Holly, in the place of George Haywood removed. Charles C. Blanvalt Postmaster at Hightstown, in place of Israel C. Perdy removed. John Barton Postmaster at Rancocos in place of Aaron Sharpe resigned.

It is mentioned as a singular fact, that Gen. Taylor never saw one of the gentlemen composing his Cabinet, until he arrived at Washington.

Human Rights.

The States of the American Union have acknowledged these principles in the adoption of their several constitutions, viz:

They have asserted that the people are the scource of all legitimate authority and power, and that government derives its authority only from the consent of the governed. They have declared that the true aim of government is to secure the happiness of those living under its influence; and that when it fails to accomplish this object, its authority ceases, and those concerned have a right to throw of their allegiance, and to organize a new government in harmony with human nature and subservient to human wants; that allegiance is only due to a just and free government, and that a true and faithful man, in view of his own nature, and the importance of his own happiness, can consent to no other.—The American people, therefore, have declared the true foundation and scope of government. It remains to be seen whether American legislation has followed or departed from the great design of our political institutions.

If the aim of all mankind be happiness, and if that depend upon the same rule of intellectual and moral action, then the rule prescribing or limiting that course of action must be the same for all men. Hence the demand of all the enlightened world, that the laws shall acknowledge the equality of all men; not the equality of their physical, moral, or intellectual powers, but the universality and equality of human rights.—The doctrine of human equality is not understood by all who assert it. Legal equality exists where the laws create no factitious greatness, confer no partial privileges, and deny no natural rights. So that if the laws be adapted to the constitution of the human mind, and apply to all men alike, or are just and general, affecting all men alike, then all men are equally regarded, protected, and punished by those laws, and legal equality is established. But the inequalities arising from the disparities of men's phyisical and mental constitutions will still exist. One man will have the advantage of another still; but he will owe it to the laws of his organization, and not to the laws of man. So far as human legislation has gone, it has left him as it found him—strong, if he were strong before, and weak, if he were weak. It has guarantied the freedom of his nature not the powers of it It has kept his course free from human obstruction. It has conferred neither rights, nor privileges, nor powers—but protected all, and all alike. It is not the boast of the law, if he is now strong. It made him neither. It took him as he was, and kept him as it found him. The most perfect human laws can claim no higher merit, than that they have followed nature; not having conferred the rights of humanity, guarantied and defended them; not having bestowed powers upon any man, but having kept him free from obstruction in the exercise of his natural faculties The boast of the laws should be, that they have not obstructed the true course of humanity; that they have neither advanced nor retarded any man; but that they let him alone to work out his happiness in the exercise of his own true nature, according to its beautiful harmonies, and to attain happiness in accordance with the laws of his mind. Mankind demand to be left to themselves. I speak of the well-constituted, the great majority of civilized men.

Government has nothing to bestow upon any man; it can only serve to protect him in all that he hath. He comes into society with the capital which God has given him, and he demands 'free trade.' It is not the work of government to provide capital for any man's business in social life, nor to endorse for him if he has not wherewithall to get on without its endorsement. It must protect him only in what he hath, be it much or little. The response of just and equal laws so the petitions of men under their protection is uniform in all cases.

If a special priviledge is sought for, it cannot be bestowed; for if it be granted, a favor is given to one or a few at the expense of all the rest; and thus one man or set of men is benefited by contributions from the rights of all. A law effecting this would abuse the office of all law; which cannot derogate from the rights of any, but only protects the rights of all. Where, then, doth Government derive the priviliges which it bestows upon its favorites? I answer: by an usurpation of the rights of all. A just government will confer no spcial privileges; its powers will be exerted only in the vindication and defence of human rights. Privilege conferred upon one man implies a derogation from the rights of others; and the office of government is protection alone. So that right must forever defeat privilege, and man, after all, must be left to the resources of his own nature for the attainment of hapiness.

Neither has Government, rightfully, any honors to bestow, except upon man as such It honors his rights. Nature is the fountain of honor and source of true greatness. If greatness come not from hatural endownment or brillant achievement, Government cannot 'thrust' it upon any man. It can no more confer the title to, than the elements of greatness. Manmaking is not the business of Government. It must regard man as a rational moral being; take him as such, treat him as such, and allow him to live and die as a man. He derives his nature and his nomanclature from God; and until Government has power to change his nature, it ought not to be ambitions to change his name.

If one man be a king, all are kings; if one be a lord, all are lords; for, if the title exist of common or natural right, then all men are heirs to it. But if it be the arbitrary creation of Government, and be applied only to a select few, then, if there be any good or advantage in the thing, it is bestowed at the expense of all who have it not, and is an offence against their rights. Government, then, can bestow neither privileges nor titles, without violating the sanctify of human rights, whose protection is its only proper function.—Accordingly, the American people have ordained that no title of nobility shall be conferred by Government. In theory, at least, we look to Nature to present us with the great and noble of mankind; and we yield to them the places which she has destined them to fill.—Essays on Human Rights.

Slavery and the President.

Mr. Floyd of the New York Legislature offered resolutions, that the fact that the President of the United States is owner of a large number of slaves, and that he has formed a Cabinet so as to give preponderence in his councils to the slave power—that his appointments to office thus far indicate a determination to protect and extend the slave-holding interest—and that all the indications admonish us that the opponents to the extension of Slavery will be removed; the circumstances demand a wakefullness and activity that ought to prevail on behalf of the people of the State of New-York.

A Calf with two Heads.—A living calf, abont seven weeks old, having two heads has been exhibited in Mount Holly for some days past. It is a general remark that two heads are better than one—but after looking at this singular freak of nature we came to the conclusion that one head was much the best. The two-head-calf is certainly a great curiosity, but the man who accompanies it is thought to be a greater.—Mt. Holly Mirror.

We learn from Elizabethtown that Mr Abm. Van Hounten, of whose mysterious disappearance about two weeks since our readers were appraised, returned to his family on Wednesday evening last, bringing with him about $500 in cash. It is said that, under a temporary aberration of mind, by mistake he was taken to Albany, from whence he voluntarily returned.

Telegraph ahead of Time.—The St. Louis Republican says, that the telegraph managers at the place have been making some tests of the practicability of transmitting intelligence over a long connection of line. A telegraphic dispatch, dated Philadelphia, 1 o'clock 55 minutes, reached St. Louis at 12 o'clock 55 minutes. By this it will appear, that the wonderful invention of the telegraph not only annihilates space, but time itself. Old Sol being actually beat one hour in the distance between the two places.

Col. Fremont's Wolly Horse, captured near the Gile,—a nondescript animal—is now in N. Y., on his way to Europe. He is said to be 'in size, like the horse, fleet as the deer, swings an elephant's tail, and is as wolly as a silk headed negro. His wool is of the color of camel's hair and of exceeding finenes of texture.—Naturalist are unable to agree as to what class he belongs to.'

Election of Judges.—The House of Representatives at Harrisburg on Monday passed a resolution, by a vote of 52 to 25, to amend the constitution, to give the people the election of Judges, to be approved by the next Legislature, and then submitted to the people at the election following.

The city of St. Louis has a population of 65.471. The county of St. Louis contains about 81,000 inhabitans. The increase in the city for the two years preceding 1847 was 11,568, and the increase for the two preceeding 1849, was 15,888—being a total increase for the four years preceding 1849, of 27,456.

Rather embarrassing.—The lady who, in giving her consent to a faithful lover, lets two artificial teeth drop out with her words, may be said decidedly to be in a very embarassing situation.

A young lady who was rebuked by her mother for kissing her intended, justified herself by quoting the passage—'Whatsoever ye would that men should do unto you, do ye even so to them.'

The doctors are at work trying to cure up a man in South Carolina, that he may be executed according to law.

Deep and Shallow Planting.—C L Shepperd, of Illinois, planted his cornfield shallow, or about an inch deep, except eight rows through the middle, which was planted two or three inches deep. The shallow corn came up first, and kept the lead through the whole season. The difference was discernible as far as the corn could be seen.—Albany Cultivator.

Remedial Justice.—Zebulon Paine, who was wrongly convicted and sentenced to the Massachusetts penitentiary, has obtained, by a vote of the Legislature of that State, $500 for his time and services during his incarceration.

Work in the Garden.

Those who desire to enjoy the gratification of seeing their families supplied with early vegetables, must take immediate steps to lay the groundwork of raising plants. First in order, then, is—

Spinach.—Prepare a bed by manuring freely, digging deep and raking fine, and sow spinach-seed; if you do you will secure a supply of this delightful vegetable for your family.

Radishes—The sooner you sow a bed of these, on a warm border, the better. The ground should be well manured with rotten dung, well dug, and thorougly raked.

Beets, Carrots and Parsnips.—Prepare a bed by manuring with rotten dung, dig it up deeply, and rake it thoroughly. In this bed sow seeds of each of these roots for early use. A small bed will answer for a family.

Rhubarb.—Procure a dozen or so of the plants of this excellent vegetable, and set them out, to supply your table with tarts.

Gooseberries and Currants.—Dig and manure about the roots of thes bushes; trim out their heads, and keep the grass and weeds down, and you will be sure to have lots of fine fruit. If however, you have none in your garden, see to it, and have them planted therein forthwith.

Raspberries. Now is the time to clean, manure, and tie up your raspberries, as also to plant them, if you have none in your garden.

Strawberries.—Clean off your strawberry beds, and slightly dig in some well-rotted manure; then rake, and lay fresh straw between the rows. If there are no strawberries in your garden, plant them without delay.

Asparagus.—Spread some well-rotted manure on your asparagus beds; fork it carefully in; then rake, and strew salt over them. Should you be without asparagus, procure plants from a nurseryman and set out a bed. No garden should be without this vegetable.

Celery.—Prepare a bed and sow celery-seed for early use.

Roses and other Shrub flowers.—All of these should be moderately manured and carefully spaded around. And if you have none in your garden you should procure some of each kind, and plant them out, as no garden should be without snch sources of pleasure and delight.

Grapes—Manure your grape-vines with a compost made of two parts of woods mould, one part ashes, and one part bones dust. After mixing these ingredients together, apply a peck of the compost, broadcast, to each vine; dig it lightly in, and then rake the earth. If not done before, prune your vines, wipe the wound dry, and paint it with a mixture of oil and plaster. Cuttings should now be set out. It is also a good time to set out the vines.

Thyme, Sage, Parsley, Hyssop, and Herbs generally.—The seed of everything of this description should now be sown. Roots of all may also be transplanted; and we will here observe that every garden should have a little plot of every kind of herb, medicinal as well as culinary.

Onions.—Sow onion-seed early this month, and they will make large bulbs by August, provided they are planted in good, well-prepared ground—are thinned ont, so as to stand three inches in twelve-inch rows, and are kept clean. Onions raised from seed will keep better than those grown from sets.

Onion bulbs should be set out as early this month as possible: and we desire you to bear in mind that the onion delights in a rich loam, and bears manure well.

An opinion prevails with some, that large onions cannot be grown from seed the first season; bnt this opinion is erroneous; for, if sown early, in well-manured, suitable soil, they will grow as large as from the sets, with this advantage, that they are not so subject to sprout as are those grown from the bulbs.

Seed Onions should be set out early.

Seed Turnips.—Set these out as early as possible: be sure to set out, large well-shaped roots.

Fruit.—Look to the fruit-trees in your garden; cut off any dead limbs nearly, dig in manure around the roots, and paint the trunks as reccomended for those in the orchard. Plant any young fruit-trees you design to set out as early as possible.

ALLEN'S COMPEND OF AMERICAN AGRICULTURE.

R. L. ALLEN, Esq., author of the popular work entitled 'Domestic Animals, their Diseases and Remedies,' of which thirteen editions have been published in twelve months, has, after years of practical experience and close investigation, completed his Great Work of Practical Agriculture, illustrated by about 100 engravings. The work will be bound handsomely and substantially in cloth, and furnished at one dollar, single copies, can be sent by mail to any part of the United States.

This work, we most fully believe, is destined to have a more widely extended circulation than any work of the kind heretofore published. Mr. Allen, knowing the wants of the community, has met those wants in a plain, concise and familiar manner, and has made a work intelligible to all. It will be a book for

THE WHOLE PEOPLE,

Its cheapness will cause a large sale, and it will be a Book for Everybody, as well for the man who consumes the products of the earth, as for him who raises them.

150 AGENTS,

active, intelligent and honest, are wanted, to sell this book in every state in the Union.

CAUTION EXTRA

A man by the name of CLAPP has engaged with a young man of the name of S. P. Townsend, and uses his name to put up a Sarsaparilla, which they call Dr. Townsend's Sarsaparilla, denominating it GENUINE, Original, etc. This Townsend is no doctor, and never was; but was formerly a worker on railroads, canals, and the like. Yet he assumes the title of Dr., for the purpose of gaining credit for what he is not. This is to caution the public not to be deceived, and purchase none but the GENUINE ORIGINAL OLD Dr. Jacob Townsend's Sarsaparilla, having on it the Old Dr's. likeness, his family coat of arms, and his signature across the coat of arms.

Principal Office, 102 Nassau st., New York City

OLD DR. JACOB TOWNSEND,

THE ORIGINAL DISCOVERER OF THE

Genuine Townsend Sarsaparilla.

Old Dr. Townsend is now about 70 years of age, and has long been known as the AUTHOR and DISCOVERER of the GENUINE ORIGINAL "TOWNSEND SARSAPARILLA." Being poor, he was compelled to limit its manufacture, by which means it has been kept out of market, and the sales circumscribed to those only who had proved its worth, and known its value. It had reached the ears of many, nevertheless, as those persons who had been healed of sore diseases, and saved from death, proclaimed its excellence and wonderful

HEALING POWER.

Knowing, many years ago, that, he had, by his skill, science and experience, devised an article which would be of incalculable advantage to mankind when the means would be furnished to bring it into universal notice, when its inestimable virtues would be known and appreciated. This time has come, the means are supplied; this GRAND AND UNEQUALLED PREPARATION is manufactured on the largest scale, and is called for throughout the length and breadth of the land, especially as it is found incapable of degeneration or deterioration.

Unlike young S. P. Townsend's, it improves with age, and never changes, but for the better; because it is prepared on scientific principles by a scientific man. The highest knowledge of Chemistry, and the latest discoveries of the art, have all been brought into requisition in the manufacture of the Old Dr's Sarsaparilla. The Sarsaparilla root, it is well known to medical men, contains many medicinal properties and some properties which are inert or useless, and others, which if retained in preparing it for use, produce fermentation and acid, which is injurious to the system. Some of the properties of Sarsaparilla are so volatile, that they entirely evaporate and are lost in the preparation, if they are not preserved by a scientific process, known only to those experienced in its manufacture. Moreover, these volatile principles, which fly off in vapor, or as an exhalation, under heat, are the very essential medical properties of the root, which give to it all its value.

Any person can boil or stew the root till they get a dark-colored liquid, which is more from the coloring matter in the root than from any thing else; they can then strain this insipid or vapid liquid, sweeten with sour molasses, and then call it "SARSAPARILLA EXTRACT or SYRUP." But such is not the article known as the

GENUINE OLD DR. JACOB TOWNSEND'S SARSAPARILLA.

This is so prepared, that all the inert properties of the Sarsaparilla root are first removed, every thing capable of becoming acid or of fermentation, is extracted and rejected; then every particle of medical virtue is secured in a pure and concentrated form; and thus it is rendered incapable of losing any of its valuable and healing properties. Prepared in this way, it is made the most powerful agent in the

Cure of innumerable diseases.

Hence the reason why we hear commendations on every side in its favor by men, women, and children. We find it doing wonders in the cure of CONSUMPTION, DYSPEPSIA, and LIVER COMPLAINT, and in RHEUMATISM, SCROFULA, PILES, COSTIVENESS, all CUTANEOUS ERUPTIONS, PIMPLES, BLOTCHES, and all affections arising from

IMPURITY OF THE BLOOD.

It possesses a marvellous efficacy in all complaints arising from Indigestion, from Acidity of the Stomach from unequal circulation, determination of blood to the head, palpitation of the heart, cold feet and hands, cold chills and hot flashes over the body. It has not its equal in Colds and Coughs; and promotes easy expectoration and gentle perspiration, relaxing stricture of the lungs, throat, and every other part.

But in nothing is its excellence more manifestly seen and acknowledged than in all kinds and stages of

FEMALE COMPLAINTS.

It works wonders in cases of Fluor Albus or Whites, Falling of the Womb, Obstructed, Suppressed, or Painful Menses, Irregularity of the menstrual periods, and the like; and is as effectual in curing all the forms of Kidney Diseases.

By removing obstructions, and regulating the general system, it gives tone and strength to the whole body, and thus cures all forms of

Nervous diseases and debility,

and thus prevents or relieves a great variety of other maladies, as Spinal irritation, Neuralgia, St. Vitus' Dance Swooning, Epileptic Fits, Convulsions, &c.

It cleanses the blood, excites the liver to healthy action, tones the stomach, and gives good digestion relieves the bowels of torpor and constipation, allays inflammation, purifies the skin, equalises the circulation of the blood, producing gentle warmth equally all over the body, and the insensible perspiration; relaxes all strictures and tightness, removes all obstructions, and invigorates the entire nervous system. Is not this then

The medicine you pre-eminently need?

But can any of these things be said of S. P. Townsend's Inferior article? This young man's liquid is not to be

COMPARED WITH THE OLD DR'S,

because of one GRAND FACT, that the one is INCAPABLE of DETERIORATION, and

NEVER SPOILS,

while the other DOES; souring, fermenting, and blowing the bottles containing it into fragments; the sour, acid liquid exploding and damaging other goods! Must not this horrible compound be poisonous to the system?—What! put acid into a system already diseased with acid! What causes Dyspepsia but acid? Do we not all know that when food sours in our stomachs, what mischiefs it produces? flatulence, heartburn palpitation of the heart, liver complaint, diarrhœa, dysentery, colic, and corruption of the blood! What is Scrofula but an acid humor in the body? What produces all the humors which bring on Eruptions of the Skin, Scald Head, Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, White Swellings, Fever Sores, and all ulcerations internal and external? It is nothing under heaven, but an acid substance, which sours, and thus spoils all the fluids of the body, more or less. What causes Rheumatism but a sour or acid fluid which insinuates itself between the joints and elsewhere, irritating and inflaming the delicate tissues upon which it acts? So of nervous diseases, of impurity of the blood, or deranged circulations, and nearly all the ailments which afflict human nature.

Now is it not horrible to make and sell, and induce men to use this

SOURING, FERMENTING, ACID "COMPOUND" OF S. P. TOWNSEND,

and yet he would fain have it understood that Old Dr. Jacob Townsend's Genuine Original Sarsaparilla, is an IMITATION of his inferior preparation!!

Heaven forbid that we should deal in an article which would bear the most distant resemblance to S. P. Townsend's article! and which should bring down upon the Old Dr. such a mountain load of complaints and criminations from Agents who have sold, and purchasers who have used S. P. Townsend's FERMENTING COMPOUND.

We wish it understood, because it is the absolute truth, that S. P. Townsend's article and Old Dr. Jacob Townsend's Sarsaparilla are heaven-wide apart, and infinitely dissimilar; that they are unlike in every particular, having not one single thing in common.

As S. P. Townsend is no doctor, and never was, is no chemist, no pharmaceutist—knows no more of medicine or disease than any other common, unscientific, unprofessional man, what guarantee can the public have that they are receiving a genuine scientific medicine, containing all the virtues of the articles used in preparing it, and which are incapable of changes which might render them the AGENTS of Disease instead of health.

But what else should be expected from one who knows nothing comparatively of medicine or disease! It requires a person of some experience to cook and serve up even a common decent meal. How much more important is it that the persons who manufacture medicine, designed for should know well the medical properties of plants, the best manner of securing and concentrating their healing virtues, also an extensive knowledge of the various diseases which affect the human system, and how to adapt remedies to these diseases!

It is to arrest friends upon the unfortunate, to pour balm into wounded humanity, to kindle hope in the despairing bosom, to restore health and bloom, and vigor into the crushed and broken, and to banish infirmity that OLD DR. JACOB TOWNSEND has SOUGHT and FOUND the opportunity and means to bring his

within the reach, and to the knowledge of all who need it, that they may learn and know, by joyful experience, its

Transcendent Power to Heal.

DR. JACOB TOWNSEND. NEW YORK, Oct. 5, 1848.

WALKED ACROSS THE ROOM

with the aid of crutches. Since then, I have walked in the street; have gone alone from 36 Spruce street to the Park; thence to Lovejoy's Hotel and back. I have been to 85 Nassau street two different times, and am now frequently visiting my neighbors. During all this time, I have taken but two bottles of Old Dr. Townsend's Sarsaparilla. Oct. 4. I procured another bottle to-day (5th Oct.) I walked twice across the floor without the aid of crutches. I have also nearly recovered from obstruction of water, which gave me great distress. The pain in my back has likewise left me. I and my family have no earthly reason to ascribe my recovery to any other cause but to

OLD DR JACOB TOWNSEND'S SARSAPARILLA.

ALEX. WELSH, 36 Spruce st.

P. S.—Several able physicians despaired of my ever walking or even raising myself from my bed again.

BOOKS FOR THE AMERICAN PEOPLE.

TO BOOK AGENTS AND CANVASSERS.

THE FOLLOWING

VALUABLE NATIONAL WORKS

Are decidedly the best Books that Agents can possibly employ their time in supplying to the people of the United States.

THEY ARE INDISPENSABLE AS BOOKS OF REFERENCE TO OUR

Senators, Representatives in Congress, and State Legislatures,

and should be possessed by all the Young Men of this Great Republic, especially those who are aspiring to distinction and fame in our Halls of Legislation. There is not a city or town in these United States, even those of small importance, but contains many citizens to whom these works are indispensable. They are sacred Archives of our common Country. The Chronicles of American Independence!

Postmasters, Colporteurs, and Book Agents, are invited to secure such districts of country as they are most familiar with and desire to occupy. All applications are requested to be made without delay.

OUR PLAN.

☞ The plan the publisher has so successfully carried on for several years, is the obtaining Responsible Men as Agents, who are well known in their own Counties, Towns, and Villages, and have time and disposition to circulate good and instructive Books among their Neighbors and Friends By taking a glance at the following list of Books it will easily be discovered that they are adapted to the Christain, the Patriot, the Statesman, and the Domestic Circle. Any person wishing to embark in the enterprise, will risk nothing by sending to the Publisher $20, for which he will receive sample copies of the principal works, affording a very liberal per centage to the Agent for this trouble.

1776!

A Faithful chronicle of the war of American Independence.

1776, OR THE WAR OF INDEPENDENCE.

A History of the Anglo-Americans, from the period of the Union of the Colonies aginst the French, to the Inauguration of WASHINGTON, the first President of the United States. Beautifully illustrated by numerous Engravings, showing the plans of Battles, Prominent events, and Portraits of Distinguished Men of the period. By BENSON J. LOSSING. In handsome emblematical binding. Price $2.50.

☞ To every true-hearted American, this is a most welcome and invaluable work: it is the voice of our Fathers calling upon us to guard most sacredly the precious boon of Freedom; to purchase and secure which, they offered upon their Country's altar, their lives, their fortunes, and their sacred honor.

Opinions of the Press.

(From the American Signal.)

"We have been deeply interested in reading a new and splendid patriotic volume, entitled '1776,' published by E. Walker, of New-York. The embellishments, which are very numerous, are of the most perfect description, and carry the mind of the reader back to the period when the Continental Armies were marshalled to defend our native land We advise all the readers of the Signal to add this book to their libraries, and teach the rising generation to value the priceless lessons it contains so abundantly."

(From the New-York Express.)

"The book is elegantly printed and bound, and the engravings (seventy-eight in number) form in themselves a rare historical gallery of great interest and variety, displaying the originality and taste of the author-artist in this department. As a whole, we have no hesitation in commending this volume as the best popular history of our Revolution yet published.

(From the Evening Mirror.)

"This is the title of a very elegant looking book of some 500 pages published by Edward Walker, 144 Fulton-street. The work is beautifully illustrated with a great number of engravings, and the typography and binding are absolutely faultless. It contains a great amount and variety of information relating to the Revolutionary period of American history, and is a work which will, doubtless, command a very extensive sale."

"With regard to the tone and spirit of the volume, the felicity of the style of narrative and reflections, and the great care taken to insure accuracy, as is shown by the author's frequent reference to the best authorities, I am confident that he is entitled to the reputation of a competent and faithful historian.

EDWIN WILLIAMS."

(From the Albany Spectator.)

"This is a great national work, the beauties and excellencies of which should be studied by every one who would understand the history of human freedom, and the inalienable rights of man."

(From the Knickerbocker Magazine, August, 1847.)

"The enterprising and patriotic-spirited publisher of this exceedingly beautiful volume will find thathe has not misjudged in believing that 'a book in one volume, well written and embracing a faithful chronicle of events which accomplished the laying of the foundation stone of this great republic, would be invaluable to the present and future generations.'"

The Presidents of the United States, their Memoirs and Administrations.

To which is added, an account of the Inaugurations of each President and a history of the principal political events of his administration, and of the transactions of Congress at each session during the period.

Declaration of Independence.

Articles of Confederation.

Constitution of the United States, with Notes and References.

A brief history of the events and circumstances which led to the Union of the States, and formation of the Constitution.

A synopsis of the Constitution of the several States.

Tables of Members of the Cabinets of the various administrations, Ministers to Foreign Countries, and other principal public officers.

Chronological Table of Political Events in the United States.

Statistical Tables of Revenue, Commerce and Population.

A Complete List of Members of Congress from 1789 to 1846.

With Portraits of the Presidents, engraved on steel in the best style of the art, from the most approved likenesses. By V. BALSH, Esq. of Johnstown, N. Y. In one large handsomo volume, 8vo. in emblematic binding. Price $2.50.

☞ No expense has been spared in the preparation of these volumes of Documents, History, and Statistics, to render the same worthy of patronage, not only of Statesmen and Legislators, but of the American public generally; who will find them the Treasury of political knowledge and a mass of information indispensable to every intelligent citizen

STATESMAN'S MANUAL,

Illustrated with Portraits of our 12 presdents, engraved on Steel, from the most approved authorities, and in the best style of the art. Printed on the best paper, and handsomely bound in emblematic style. It will also be embellished with Views of the Capitol, president's House and the Seals of the several States, and the United States. In four large volumes. Price $10.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS, &C.

From the President of the United States

"To Mr. E. WALKER. Dear Sir.—I have found your Statesman's Manual a valuable work, and exceedingly useful and convenient. Yours, J. K. POLK.

(From the Hon. Henry Clay.)

"My Dear Sir: Your Statesman's Manual is a very valuable work for reference."

STATE OF NEW-YORK,
Department of Common Schools,
ALBANY, Sept. 18, 1848.

I have examined the Statesman's Manual, in two volumes octavo, compiled by Edwin Williams, and am of the opinion that it is a proper work for school district libraries, and deserving of a place in these institutions, designed for the diffusion of useful knowledge. Signed, J. S. RANDALL, Dep. State Sup't Com. Schools.

(From the Journal of Commerce.)

"This is one of the most important books published in the United States for a long time."

(From the N. Y. Courier and Enquirer.)

"This is the most important contribution to American political history ever published."

(From the Democratic Review.)

"The whole forms a most complete library in itself, of all that concerns the politics of the country. No individual should be without these volumes at hand for prompt reference. How many hours of idle discussions and senseless debates might be spared to heated partizans, were these books at hand for appeal. We shall have frequent occasion to refer to them."

(From the N.Y. Express, Aug. 21, 1846.)

"This is emphatically a national work, and as such eminently deserving of a national support."

(From the Commercial Advertiser.)

"Such a work is invaluable, and is offered at a comparatively low price, in expectation of a large sale."

(From the Luzerne Democrat.)

"The Statesman's Manual is a valuable work, comprising a complete condensed political history of our country from the formation of our government until the present time"

(From the Washingtonian, Ohio.)

"It is but scanty praise to say, that no work of equal value to the American Statesman, politician, journalist, historian, &c. has ever before appeared."

(From the Harrisburg, (Pa.) Argus.)

"No politician, no man who desires to understand the history of the several administration of the general government, should be without a copy of it. As a book of reference it is invaluable."

REV. DR. DOWLING'S GREAT WORK ON ROMANISM.—A NEW AND ENLARGED EDITION, WITH THE AUTHOR'S LAST ADDITIONS. A BOOK FOR EVERY PROTESTANT!

THE HISTORY OF ROMANISM,

FROM ITS EARLIEST ORIGIN TO THE PRESENT TIME. BY REV. JOHN DOWLING, D. D.

Embellished with upwards of fifty highly finished engravings, chiefly from original designs.

Just published, with the Author's final corrections, a new and enlarged edition of this splendid and popular work, with a copious Supplement, comprising a History of the Life and Reign of the present remarkable Pope, PIUS IX, and a Biographical Sketch of the last Pope, GREGORY XVI.

The best encomium upon this learned, complete and popular History of Romanism, is the fact that SIXTEEN THOUSAND COPIES have been sold in about three years, and still there is a constant demand for it in all parts of the country. In order to meet this demand, and to gratify the public curiosity in relation to the present pope, Pius IX, the present enlarged edition is presented to the public. With the Supplement, the work now forms a splendid octavo volume, for the parlor or for the library, of 732 pages.

Testimonials to former editions, selected from more than a hundred, from all Protestant denominations.

EPISCOPAL.

From the Protestant Churchman.

"This is a beautiful volume of 672 pages. Good service has been done for the cause of truth by its publication, and it certainly ought to secure for its author an enviable reputation among contributors to the standard literature of the day."

From the Episcopal Recorder.

"It traces its subjects from the earliest corruptions of Christianity to the present time. It has a full Chronological Table, with Analytical and Alphabetical Indexes and Glossary. It is a large and beautiful volume, full of valuable information."

METHODIST.

From Zion's Herald.

It is written in a popular style. Its engravings are numerous and finely executed. The book will doubtless be popular and cannot fail to produce a profound conviction of the terrible iniquity of Anti-Christ.

Rev. Geo. Coles, of the Christian Advocate and Journal, says: "I cannot but express my gratitude to Almighty God that such a concise and complete developement of 'the Mystery of Iniquity' is now presented to the public in a form so elegant and attractive."

CONGREGATIONAL.

Rev. Dr. Cheever, in the New-York Evangelist, says: "We ought to have noticed this excellent and beautiful work before. It possesses many and very strong claims for popular favor, and we do not doubt that it is destined to have an extraordinary sale. The work itself is characterized by great research, and a comprehensive and scriptural view of the nature and history of the Popish system."

PRESBYTERIAN.

From the (Philadelphia) Presbyterian

"Such a work required deep and protracted research, and it affords evidence that diligence, caution and judgment, in the selection and arrangement of materials, have not been wanting. The author has availed himself of the writings of both protestants and papists, and has brought together a greater mass of information on the history, the spirit, and the doings of Popery than we have ever before seen in one volume."

MISCELLANEOUS.

From the Christian Intelligencer, (Dutch Reformed.)

"Those who would see a correct and condensed exhibition of the ten thousand abominations of the Papacy, may find it to their amazement in 'Dowling's History of Romanism.' Its contents form a rich storehouse of historical instruction, which, if could be placed within the reach of every family, would prove an unspeakable blessing to our beloved country. This is the book for Americans. Place it beside your Bibles. Compare its records of crime and the Papal principles it exposes, with the holy doctrines and immaculate life of Jesus of Nazareth. When you have done this, you will have no difficulty in determining whether or not Romanism is christianity."

Rev. Alexander Campbell, president of Bethany college, of the church of the Reformers, says: "In this work are an immense assemblage of facts and documents connected with the development and history of this great mammoth institution of error and iniquity. Popery is developed in this treatise from its birth to the present hour. We desire for this book a very large circulation. It is only necessary to enlighten this community of the true spirit and character of the Papal system, to secure them against its insidious attacks upon everything we as a people hold dear and sacred. Let every one buy this work, communicate freely to all around him the develpement which it reveals, and the facts which it records."

President Cramp, editor of the Montreal Register, and author of the Text Book of Popery, says: "This important work possesses merits of a high order. We are pleased to see that Dr. Dowling furnishes ample references to his authorities. The matter is well arranged; the facts unquestionable; the style lucid; and the spirit Catholic, in the proper sense of the term. Its extensive circulation will be highly advantageous to protestanism."

Notwithstanding the extensive supplement now added to this valuable work, the price will remain the same as the former editions, Three Dollars per copy.

Jan. 10. 1849.

For the Plainfield Gazette.

There are very few but have some opportunity of doing good. The most humble if they are truly the disciples of the compassionate savior, can do something for the relief of human suffering. The poor widow, even, whose heart is alive to the wants of the needy, will contribute her two mites to those who are poorer than herself. Nor is this contribution in money the only thing she can do; although in her circumstances it is a magnificent gift, which is registered in heaven amid the rejoicings of angels and the spirits of just men made perfect. She is not satisfied with giving her mite: she knows that the sons and daughters of affliction require something more than dollars and cents. Her religion is something more than a mere profession; and it teaches her that wherever misery exists, it calls upon her to do her utmost to alleviate it. She knows that the poor have many troubles besides their want of bread; and though she will first minister to the wants of the body, yet the anxietes of the mind will receive her prompt attention. For this duty she is well qualified; her own trials have made her acquainted with the spiritual wants of others, and she hastens to the humble tenement of the sorrowful and heavy-laden, with a hope that she may be able to impart to her suffering sister the consolation she needs.

It is a cheering reflection that there are some who delight in doing good.—I say some, because although many profess much, but few practice. If but a quarter part of those who assume obligations by making a profession of religion, were really the disciples of Him who "went about doing good," is it not evident that they would obey his teachings, the whole spirit of which is that they can do nothing so pleasing in his sight as ministering to the wants of his creatures? Ah, did they but see how much misery there is in our world, surely they would talk less about points of faith and be less strenuous about modes and ordinances, and perform the will of God by relieving the sufferings of his creatures. Why is it that Christians, who profess so much, and who are under obligations to be filled and actuated by the Spirit of their Leader, so often forget the first principles of their religion, and wrangle about things of no practical value? Surely they find nothing in the example of the Saviour to countenance them in such a course. At what period of his ministry did be stop to talk to his disciples on subjects of a controversial nature? Was it in his sermon on the mount? I am afraid that sermon,—which embodies the spirit of Christianity and embraces the whole duty of man,—is not studied as many sermons are which are of a very different nature. What a paradise might this world of ours be made if the precepts delivered on the mount were the rule of life of every one who professes to be a follower of Christ! "Love your enemies." Said our Saviour on that occasion, "bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which dispitefully use you, and persecute you; that ye may be the children of your Father which is in heaven." But it is evident to the most superficial observer, that many are actuated by a far different spirit. Is it not notorious that many reverse the precept? Else why so much controversy; and so little charity? Else why is there not more done to clothe the naked, to feed the hungry, and instruct the ignorant? Reader, if you wish to be happy while in health, and die in peace, have nothing to do with those who teach that religion consists in believing certain points of doctrine, and at the same time neglect the inculcation of a charitable disposition. "God is love," and unless you live in charity with all men, and seek their good, it is very evident you are not a Christian, no matter what professions you may make.

—But it was my design when I sat down, to speak of an act performed by a poor woman in my neighborhood, which should cause her wealthier sisters to blush that they have never done so much, although blessed with abundant means. A family, one of the most wretched in our town, lost by death its youngest member, a girl of three years. The father, although an industrious man, has had his hands full during the past winter to find food for himself and numerous family. His wife appears to be poorly qualified to discharge a mother's duties; for a more wretched, dirty, slovenly family of children I have rarely seen. I presume they generally were kept from suffering by hunger or cold, but their whole appearance continually, satisfied me that they suffered greatly from neglect. I said the daughter died; some of the neighbors said for want of care. Be this as it may, after it died, it required burial. Now some women (perhaps a large majority) would have advised the family to apply to the overseer of the poor, who lived but a short distance off, for aid to bury their child. Not so with the woman of whom I speak: she prevailed on them to be guided by her, and no help would be required of the town. With a few shillings which a neighbor owed the family, the woman procured the services of an undertaker and paid for a coffin; and then having removed the dead to her dwelling, that the neighbors might attend the funeral, she proceeded to wash and dress the children that they also might follow their sister to the grave. Ah, could you have seen those children when her labor was done, so different in appearance from what they were but a few hours previous, how it would have gladdened your heart. An appeal to a few friends furnished proper clothing for the woman and her remaining children, and many families in comfortable circumstances would not have made a more respectable appearance. After appropaiate services, the child was carried to the grave, followed by a large number of neighbors.

Now here was a woman, herself among the poorest in the community, who, without any prospect of reward beyond the approbation of her conscience, discharged a duty from which many would have turned away. It is an easy thing for the rich lady to give a shilling or even a dollar or two for charitable purposes; but I fear very few would have the courage to imitate the woman of whom I speak, in such a labor of love as hers But let no one think she will fail of her reward. She has obeyed the commandment of Christ in doing good to those who could not recompense her, and therefore she is one of whom he says—"And thou shalt be blessed: . . . . for thou shalt be recompensed at the resurection of the just." What more could she desire?

J. A.

From the Boston Olive Branch.

A Thrilling Story.

In the fall of 1846, I was a travelling Eastward in a stage coach from Pittsburg over the mountains. My fellow passengers were two gentlemen and a lady. The elderly gentlemen's appearance interested me exceedingly. In years he seemed about thirty: in air and manner he was calm, dignified and polished; and the contour of his features was singularly intellectual.

He conversed freely on general topics, until the road became more abrupt and precipitous; but on my directing his attention to the great altitude of a precipice, on the verge of which our coach wheels were leisurely rolling, there came a marked change over his whole countenance The eyes, so lately filled with the light of a mild intelligence, beemed wild, restless, and anxious; the mouth twitched spasmodically; and the forehead was heated with a cold perspiration. With a sharp, convulsive shudder, he turned his gaze from the giddy height, and clutching my arm tightly with both hands, he clung to me like a drowning man.

'Use this cologne,' said the lady, handing me a bottle, with the instinctive goodness of her sex.

I sprinkled a little on his face, and he soon became somewhat more composed, but it was not until he had entirely traversed the mountain and descended to the level country beneath, that his fine features relaxed from their perturbed look and assumed the placid quiet dignity I had at first noticed.

'I owe an apology to the lady,' said he, with a bland smile and a gentle inclination of his head to our fair companion, 'and some explanation to my fellow travellers, also; and perhaps I cannot better acquit myself of the double debt than recounting the cause of my recent agitation.'

'It may pain your feelings,' delicately urged the lady.'

'On the contrary it will relieve them,' was the respectful reply.

Having signified our several desires to hear more, the traveller thus proceeded:

'At the age of 18 I was light of heart, light of foot, and I fear,' [here he smiled,] 'light of head. A fine property on the right bank of the Ohio, acknowledged me as sole owner. I was hastening home to enjoy it, and delighted to get free from college life. The month was October, the air bracing, and the mode of conveyance a stage coach like this, only more cumbrous. The other passengers were few—but three in all—an old grey-headed planter of Louisana, his daughter, a joyous, bewitching creature, about seventeen years of age. They were just returning from France, of which country the young lady discussed in terms so eloquent as to absorb my attention. The farther was taciturn, but the daughter was vivacious by nature; and we soon became so mutually pleased with each other—she as a talker, I as a listener—that it was not until a sudden flash of lightning and a heavy dash of rain against the coach window elicited an exclamation from my charming companion, that I noticed how rapidly night had encompassed us. Presently there was a low rumbling sound, and then several tremendous peals of thunder, accompanied with flashes of lightning The rain descended in torrents, and an angry wind began to howl and moan by turns through the forest trees. I looked out from the window of our vehicle; the night was dark as ebony, but the lightning revealed the dangers of the road. We were on the edge of a frightful precipice. I could see at intervals huge jutting rocks, far away down its side, and the sight made me solicitous for the safety of my fair companion. I thought of the mere hair breadths that were between us and eternity; a single little rock in the track of our coach wheels, a tiny billet of wood, a stray root from a tempest-torn tree, a restive horse, or a careless driver; any of these might hurl us from our sublunary existence with the speed of thought.

''Tis a perfect tempest, observed the lady. How I love a sudden storm! There is something so grand in the mournful voice of the winds when fairly let loose among the hills. I never encountered a night like this, but Byron's storm in the Juro immediately occurs to my mind. But are we on the mountain yet?'

'Yes; we have begun the ascent.'

'Is it not said to be dangerous?'

'By no means,' I replied, in as easy a tone as I could assume.

'I only wish it were day light, that we might enjoy the mountain scenery. But Jesu Marie! what's that?' and she covered her eyes from the glare of a sheet of lightning that illuminated the rugged mountain with brilliant intensity. Peal after peal of crashing thunder instantly succeded; there was an immense volume of rain coming down at each successive thunder burst; and, with the deep moaning of an animal, as if in dreadful agony, breaking on my ears, I found that the coach had come to a dead halt. Louise, my beautiful fellow traveller, became pale as ashes; she fixed her searching eyes on mine with a look of anxious dread, and turning to her father, hurriedly remarked—'We are on the mountains!' 'I reckon so,' was the unconcerned reply.

With instant activity I put my head through the window and called to the driver; but only answer was the heavy moaning of an agonized animal, borne past me by the swift wings of the tempest I seized the handle of the door and strained at it in vain; it would not yield a jot. At that instant I felt a cold hand on mine, and heard Louise's voice faintly articulating in my ear the appalling words—'The coach is being moved backwards!'

God in Heaven! Never shall I forget the fierce agony with which I tugged at the coach door and called on the driver in tones that rivalled the force of the blast, while the dreadful conviction was burning into my brain that the coach was being moved slowly backwards! What followed was of such swift occurrence that it seems to me like a frightful dream.

I rushed against the door with all my force; but it mocked my utmost efforts. One side of our vehicle was sensibly going down, down. The moaning of the agonized animal became deeper; and I knew from his desperate plunges against the traces that it was one of our horses. Crash upon crash of hoarse thunder rolled down the mountain; and vivid flashes of lightning played around our devoted carriage as if in glee at our misery. By its light I could see for a moment—only for a moment—the old planter standing erect, with his hands on his son and daughter, his eyes raised to Heaven, and his lips moving like those of one in prayer; I could see Louise turn her ashy cheeks and superb eyes towards me as if imploring my protection; and I could see by the bold young glance of the boy, flashing defiance at the descending carriage, the war of elements, and the awful danger that awaited him. There was a heavy roll, a desperate plunge, as if an animal in the last throes of dissolution, a harsh grating jar, a sharp, piercing scream of mortal terror, and I had but time to clasp Louise firmly around the waiste with one hand and seize the leather fastenings attached to the roof, with the other, when we were precipitated over the precipice.

I can distinctly reccollect preserving consciousness for a few seconds of time, of how rapidly my breath was being exhausted; but of that tremendous descent I soon lost all further individual knowledge, by a concussion so violent that I was instantly deprived of sense and motion.'

The traveller paused; his features worked for a minute or two as they had worked when we were on the mountain; he pressed his hands across his forehead as if in pain, and then resumed his interesting story.

'On a low couch, in a humble room of a small country house, I next opened my eyes in this world of light and shade, of joy and sorrow, mirth and madness. Gentle hands smoothed my pillow, gentle feet glided across my chamber, and a gentle voice hushed, for a time, all my questionings. I was kindly tended by a fairy young girl about fifteen, who refused for several days to hold any discourse with me. At length, one morning, finding mysels sufficiently recovered to sit up, I insisted on learning the result of the accident.

'You were discovered,' said she, 'on a ledge of rock, 'midst the branches of a shattered tree, clinging to a part of the roof of your broken coach with one hand and to the insensible form of a lady with the other.'

'And the lady!' I gasped, scanning the girl's face with an earnestness that caused her to draw back and blush.

'She was saved, sir, by the same means that saved you—the friendly tree.'

'And her father and brother?' I impatiently demanded.

'Were both found crushed to pieces at the bottom of the precipice, a great way below where my father and uncle Joe got you and the lady. We buried their bodies both in one grave close by the clover patch down in our meadow ground.'

'Poor Louise! poor orphan! God pity you!' I muttered in broken tones, utterly unconscious that I had a listener.

'God pity her, indeed sir,' said the young girl, with a gush of heart-felt sympathy. 'Would you like to see her?' she added.

'Take me to her;' I replied

I found the orphan bathed in tears, by the grave of her buried kindred. She received me with sorrowful sweetness of manner. I will not detain your attention by detailing the efforts I made to win her from grief; but briefly acquaint you that I at last accompanied her to her forlorn home at the sunny south, and that twelve months after the dreadful occurrence that I have related, we stood at the alter together as man and wife. She still lives to bless my home with her smiles, and my children with her good precepts; but on the anniversary of that terrible night she secludes herself in her room and devotes the hours of darkness to solitary prayer.

'As for me,' added the traveller, while a faint flush tinged his noble brow at the avowal, 'as for me—that accident has reduced me to a mere coward at the sight of a mountain precipice.'

'But the driver,' urged our lady passenger, who had attended to the recital of the story with much attention, 'what became of the driver? or did you never learn the reason of his deserting his post?'

'His body was found on the road, within a few steps of the spot where the coach went over. He had been struck by the same flash of lightning that blinded the restive horse.'

The traveller here fell into a musing attitude, as if all further allusion to the subject would be unpleasant to him. We shortly after reached the railroad station, where I parted from the nervous gentleman with feelings of profound esteem.

EXAMINATION DAY.—A schoolteacher preparing for an examination of his school, selected a class of pupils, and wrote down the questions, and answers to questions, he would put to them on examination day. The day came, and so came the young hopefuls, all but one. The pupils took their places as had been arranged and all went glibly on until the question came for the absentee, when the teacher asked:—

'In whom do you believe?'

The pupil who sat next the vacant seat without noticing whose question it was, answered.—

'Napoleon Boneparte.'

'No, no!' angrily exclaimed the teacher.

'In whom do you believe?'

Napoleon Boneparte.'

Here the teacher began to smell the rat, and said:—

'You believe in the Holy Ghost, do you not?'

'No,' said the pupil, amid roars of uncontrollable laughter. The boy what believes in the Holy Ghost hasn't come to school to-day. He's at home sick a-bed.'

DECIDEDLY RICH—One of the parvenu ladies of our village, but would be wonderfully aristocratic in all domestic matters, was visiting a few days since at Mr. G——'s,(all know the old Major,) when, after tea, the following conversation occurred between the Major's excellent old-fashioned lady and the 'top-not,' in consequence of the hired girl occupying a seat at the table.

Mrs.——. 'Why Mrs.——! you do not allow your hired girl to eat with you at the table? It's horrible.'

Mrs. G——. 'Most certainly I do. You know this has ever been my practice. It was so when you worked for me—don't you recollect?'

This was a 'cooler to silk and satin greatness, or as the boys call it, 'codfish aristocracy.' And after coloring and stammering she answered in a very low voice, 'Y-e-s, I b-e-l-i-e-v-e i-t w-a-s,' and 'sloped.'—Jackson Patriot.

Some of our cotemporaries have been trying to see how tough stories they could tell but the Maine Farmer 'takes the rag off the bush.' It tells a crowder of a chap in Cobbosseocontee-dom, who took a gill of camphene by mistake for gin, but life was saved by a most ingenious process. After the stomach pump and all thought-of means of restoration had been tried in vain, the grocer's clerk simply run a wick down the patient's throat, touched a blaze to it, and burned out the camphene! Instant restoration was the consequence.

'I say, Jim, are you going to see that man hung to-morrow?'

'I don't know, Dick—vot's he got to be hung for?'

'Vy, bless you, for'orse stealing.'

'For stealing a 'orse? Vot a fool! Vy didn't he buy von on trust and never pay for him?

THE DEVIL'S EXPERIENCE.—Our devil says experience has tought him that many of our schoolmasters are better tanners than teachers.

SEVEN GIRLS WANT HUSBANDS.—We have before us, says the Cincinnati Commercial, a letter dated Ridley, Orlean county, Ia., and signed by seven girls two of them 16, three, 17 and two 18—who signify a keen desire to marry each a California-bound man! The letter has a special reference to the New York California company, who advertised for wives; but we presume the Hooiser girls will not refuse any respecteble young men who may visit their places with honorable intentions.

FALLING IN LOVE.—Sterne says that the expression, falling in love,' proves love to be beneath one.

PLAINFIELD GAZETTE.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Thursday, April, 19, 1849.

Advertize.—"There is but one way of obtaining business—pulicity; one way of obtaining publicity—advertisements.—The newspaper is the fly-wheel by which the motive power of business enterprize is sustained, and money the steam by which the advertising is kept going."—Blackwood.

We are always happy to receive communications on all subjects important to the welfare and happiness of man; and therefore shall make no apology for the space occupied on the subject of temperance. If all will read, reflect upon, and apply it, the time and space will have been profitably employed.

GENTLEMEN: Will you permit me through the columns of your well conducted, and by me much admired little paper, to address your readers on a subject of vital importance to the very existance of our Liberties; I mean the subject of Slavery.

Reader, are you a slave? Do you wear the fetters of the bondman? Do you wear the human form, and possess that immortal spirit, which animated the minds and guided the hearts of our fore-fathers when they trampled in the dust the tyranny and mighty power of Great Brittain? Do you submit that immortal spirit to the degradation, to the whims, the taunts, the tyranny, the scorn, and contempt of, I was going to say your fellow man? But no If you do submit to these indignanties, although you may wear the form, you cannot lay claim to the dignity, to the self respect, to that vital spark of the immortal spirit which constitutes man. Again on the other hand, if you hold the human form divine in involuntary bondage; to do your will, whether in the menial offices of your household, or of the field, or what under other circumstances might be considered highly honorable, in places of the most important trust, against his will, or what would have been his will, if you had permitted him to know and enjoy it, neither have you any better any claim to the title of man. Neither him that submits to bondage, nor him by whom he is submitted, although wearing the form neither possess the spirit of freemen!

Although this evil is great, and to many, and should be to all, of most serious importance; as affecting in the greatest degree the very existance of human rights as laid down by our forefahers; who pledged for its maintrinance their fortunes, their lives, and their most sacred honors.—Yet this was not the object on which I wished to confer with your readers. Although that object was stated to be slavery. Yet it is slavery nevertheless; and I much fear of a worse kind than that glanced at above.

Worse, did I say? Aye worse, because it is voluntary! Voluntary slavery! Yes reader voluntary slavery, and thousands exult, aye glory in it! This makes it worse, more difficult to stay, to eradicate; where thousands are rushing voluntarily into it; daily, hourly, and by many, by most, by all imperceptably(!) hence the greater danger than in involuntary slavery.

Reader, are you yet a free, a reasonable man? Can you throw aside all prejudice whether you are or are not affected with it? If you can you are the very person I wish to confer with on the subject: If you are not affected with, you are by it; your interest, the interest of all are affected by it. Do you wish to stay this alarming, this worse than African bondage; which has so recently, so powerfully and I trust permanently and beneficially agitated this country from its centre to its circumference? This voluntary slavery of which I wish to confer with you on, reader, is intemperance, "Intemperance" say you: "I am not intemperate." Then of course you will read on, calmly, attentively, seriously, while I describe the intemperance of others. And if you are a reasonable, and make any pretensions to be a free man, you will not hesitate to apply any part which may be applicable to yourself.

Reader, are you in the habitual use of intoxicating drink? Do you feel ill at ease and a want of appetite until you have had your bitters in the morning, again at noon, and at night? If you do, if you are in the daily use of it, either morning, noon or night, and feel a desire for it depend upon it you are already intemperate; we care not what you may think of the matter; or that other others may think and call you temperate But if you are a slave to your appetite, and feel a desire for it, and must needs gratify that desire then you are certainly a slave to it, a slave, a worse than involuntary slave of bondage, for this is compulsory, and of the body, as none can enslave the mind, yours of the body and mind; voluntary! A voluntary slave to a base appetite! Yes I say it, and you must acknowledge its truth if you are a man of sense, of reflection, that that person who has not strength of mind sufficient to resist the indulgence of a base appetite, of the habitual and daily use of all things that will intoxicate, is a greater slave than he who submits to involuntary bondage.

In a newspaper article, this subject can only be glanced at. I shall not attempt to show its uncecessary use, as many of the most able in body and mind do without it, which is proof sufficient that it is unnecessary; nor its expense, its waste of time, its debasing qualities of the mind and body, these to any reflecting mind are self evident; to say nothing about its being the cause of crime, which the records of our prisons conclusively prove. Reader this may not apply to you, if it does not, you must see the necessity for lending your aid to do away this evil, If it does apply to you, and you alone save the great Author of your being perhaps can know this to be the case, then greater is the necessity that you refrain, resist, resolve to conquer before it is to late, so degrading, so expensive, so unnecessary, therefore so foolish a habit. You see others who have been made its slaves, who once bid as fair as yourself to become useful and honorable members of society; who by the daily and habitual use of the intoxicating cup, become by its debasing influences the degraded and pitiable objects which we see.

Another branch of this slavery, and which is closely connected with it, is the use of tobacco: much that can be said of the one, will equally well apply to the other; it is intoxicating, it is disgusting, it is expensive, unnecessary, and therfore to a man of sense foolish. A man becomes its slave in the same way he does of rum; from its habitual and unnecessary use; and this more than the other extends throughout society, among all classes, from the boy of ten years, to the silver haired old man, and even to preachers of the gospel! And here indeed should be entered a protest, (not a compulsory one, its being mentioned should be sufficient,) those to whom we should look for examples of temperance should not be the slaves of so vile a practice: can it be supposed that He whom they profess to follow, or his disciples, would tolerate its use! impious thought! Does not its use by the clergy do away with much of their influence to do good in the cause which they profess to have espoused?

These remarks are submitted with the sincre desire to promote the cause of temperance in all things. M.

The Democratic Banner of Middletown Point N. J. thinks proper to give our humble sheet a favorable notice, which coming as it does from one of the very best conducted Journals in the state, is highly gratifying to us; may its Editor receive as he deserves, the hearty support of the good people of Monmouth.

☞ NEW STORE.—Our readers will doubtless call at the New Store opened by Mr. Bryan, his stock of goods are all entirely new, and selected with care to the wants of the public; he will be found at our old quarters opposite Doct. Craig's Office, read his advertisment in another column.

GREEN PEAS—COLD WEATHER.—A friend writes us under date of April 9th from Savannah Ga. that green peas were then an old story having had them three weeks previous, also watermelons, strawberries, and tomatoes the first of April. The thought of such things appears quite out of place here, Saturday, Sunday, and Monday last, being among the most unpleasant days experianced this spring; with the thermometer below the freezing point, cold pierceing winds, with snow squalls, good coal fires are indispensible.

It appears that the act appropriating from the public funds $10.000 for the support of the public schools in this State, in addition to the thirty thousand dollars from the school fund, does not go into operation till the 4th of July, consequently no more than the usual amount will be distributed this year. It was probably the intention of the friends of the measure that it should go into effect immediately, but the act contains no such provision. So the rail-road Monopoly is like to cheat the State out of its school money for one year at least in consequence of the omission of this provision.—N. J. Herald.

TWO DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

Arrival of the Hermann.

The U. S. Mail Steamer Hermann, Capt. Crabtree, sailed from Southampton on the 59th ult. and reached this port at about 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

ENGLAND.

California Gold.

The Daily News of the 26th says: 'Considerd parcels of gold have been received by parties in this city direct from California; the advance of about 1,000 ounces has been received by one house this morning, and previous shipments to other parties are assertained to have reached a value of about £30,000.

Sir Charles Napier left London on the 24th ult. for India.

There are no quotations of American Stocks in the report of the Financial transactions of London on the 24th. Foreign funds generally were quiet.

FRANCE.

The bill suppressing the Clubs was read a second time; after two amendments had been adopted The bill was ordered to be read a third time in five days.

The Democratic Association of the Friends of the Constitution have signed the following Protest against the bill relative to the Clubs:

'Considering that in a free country the right of association is inalienable and imprescriptable; that this sacred right is guaranteed by the 8th article of the Constitution; that the project of law against clubs presented by the Ministry is an attempt against that right, we protest with energy against that violation of the Constitution, and we hope that the representatives of the people will reject the project of law.—Buchez, President; Lebellonge, Grevy, Degouee, and Deomuret, Vice-Presidents.'

ITALY.

The Alda of Florence of the 17th states that a courier has left Genoa with a dispatch to the Tuscan Ministry from the Piedmontese Government, demanding a contingent of 20,000 men and 1,000,000 scudi for the Italian army. The same courier is afterward to proceed to Rome, and demand of the Roman Republic a contingent of double the above one.

GERMANY.

The debate in the Frankfort Assembly to make the King of prussia Emperor of Germany, is finally terminated. The motion of the Committee in favor of M Welcker's proposal, has been defeated by a majority of thirty.

SPAIN.

Madrid is still quiet. Preparations still continue to be made for the expedition to Italy in aid of the Pope.

Col. Fremonts Letter---Dreadful Details.

WASHINGTON, April 16th.

The National Intelligencer of this morning contains Col. Fremont's second letter, dated Taos, New Mexico, February 6th, giving further extracts from his journal, of the horrible sufferings of his party. He says: 'One after another, wearied and frozen, were left behind to die—others, passing onward to save themselves from cold, hunger and starvation, were compelled to eat the dead bodies of their comrades, before they became cold;' such sufferings was never before narrated. The latest accounts from Col. Fremont and the remaining members of his party, state that they expected to leave Santa Fe about the 17th February. Col. Fremont denies that the object of his adventure was gold.

The Trial of Thomas Hand

The jury in the case of Thomas Hand, alias Shustes, for the robbery of the government jewels, after a long session, reported that they were unable to agree upon a verdict, when the Judge proceeded to discharge them. It is presumed that a new trial will take place.

The Jury on the case were out forty-eight hours, standing seven for conviction and five for acquittal.—They were finally discharged.

Arkansas Election.

The Little Rock Gazette and Democrat furnish the returns as far as received of the Election for Governor in Arkansas. It looks probable that Roane is chosen by a small majority, and so the State remains Democratic. The number of votes cast is very small: Total for Roane 2,878. Total for Wilson 2,711.

KENTUCKY.—No regular nominations of either party have been made, but candidates are announced in every District in the State.

It is a truth well established among cultivators, that land planted with fruit trees of good varieties will yield to the acre more food for man and beast than any other crops, with less labor.

Death of an Infant.

"The flower that bloometh through the day, withereth at the night winds breath."

I saw it at noon
When the purple horn
Of the beetle is heard on the hill's;
I saw it at noon
When the wild Festoon
Of the east, its fragrance of poison distill's.

I saw it at eve
When nightingales weave
Their lays, on their thrones in loftiest tree;
I saw it at night
When the fire-fly's flight
In sparkles of fire is traced o'er the lea.

From a far off land
Came a spirits hand
Touching gently the slumberer's breath:
Again when at morn
The beetle's clear horn
Was heard, 'twas clothed in the garments [of death.

Truth and Freedom.

BY W. D. GALLAGHER.

On the page that is immortal,
We the brilliant promise see:—
"Ye shall know the TRUTH, my people,
And this might shall make you free!"

For the Truth, then, let us battle,
Whatsoever fate betide!
Long the boast that we are Freemen,
We have made and published wide.

He who has the Truth and keeps it,
Keeps not what to him belongs,
But performs a selfish action,
That his fellow mortal wrongs.

He who seeks the Truth and trembles
At the dangers he must brave,
Is not fit to be a Freeman—
He, at best is but a slave.

He who hears the Truth, and places
Its high promptings under ban,
Loud may boast of all thats manly,
But can never be a man.

Friend, this simple lay who readest,
Be not thou like unto them—
But to Truth give utmost freedom,
And the tide it raises stem.

Bold in speech, and bold in action,
Be forever!—Time will test,
Of the free-soled and the slavish,
Which fulfils Life's mission best.

☞ The Newark Daily Advertiser publishes part of a letter from one of Gen. Darcy's California parties, dated Independence, March 28, from which we take one or two paragraphs:

"The health of the party is generally good, though some slight cases of sickness have occurred. Some of the party are very home-sick. The stories that are told by Santa Fe traders, and others who have been over the route, of Indians and suffering by hunger and sickness, have frightened them. They would go home to-morrow if they were not afraid of being laughed at.

"Some of the Santa Fe traders prefer mules for the route, and some oxen, and there seems to be a great diversity of opinion. It makes but little difference if we take wagons; the journey cannot be performed in less than four and it may take six months. With pack mules the trip can be performed in 60 days.

"Independence is a pretty place, situated about three miles from the river, with a population of 1,500. It is built on high land and is very healthy. California emigrants arrive daily, and the hotels, there are only two, are crowded. We have them from all parts of the Union, from Maine to Texas. Most of them are boarding at private houses, and with the farmers in the neighborhood. Six of our number board with a Kentuckian about half a mile from town. It is a very pleasant place, plenty of negroes for waiters, &c. We are growing fat."

THE SIAMESE TWINS.—After twelve years of retired life on their farm in North Carolina, the celebrated Siamese twins, Chang and Eng, are about to start on another tour of exhibition. They will commence in N. Y. in a few weeks, and after visiting the principal cities of the North and East, will proceed to Europe. One object of their travel, we learn, is to obtain the opinion of eminent surgeons as to the possibility of their seperation. They will be accompanied by several of their children, who will also be included in the exhibition.

'What's the news, neighbor?'

'Oh not much in particular. They say bread-stuffs are in a rapid decline.'

'That's no news—they've been in a consumption all winter.'

From the Providence Herald.

"Improvements."

Our country is full of them. Improved agricultural and mechanical implements and tools; improved machinery; improved steam engines; improved carriages; improved buildings; improved manufactures of all kinds; everything is improved; and the improvements are cried in the markets and in the streets and on the hill tops. What of it?

Why, this of it: The poor every day grow poorer, and the rich every day richer. The poor man hears of the project of a railroad, and joins in the cry for the "improvement.' It will benefit the city or the town—says the rich man. It will benefit us all, says the poor man. The rich man adds to his wealth; the poor man gets work, and just pay enough for his work to keep him alive—to keep his family from starvation. He got a living before; he just lives now. What's the improvement to him?

But now a hall, a school house, a meeting house, are wanted. The rich men say, we will build them; yes, and the poor may come in—may attend our schools or our meetings or our lectures. How liberal! how generous! says the poor man. He dosen't stop to think who it is, in reality, that erects these buildings. He is astonished when we tell him that he must work out the entire cost without pay; that when the rich man is taxed, he taxes the poor man to make it up. He can't see it, because it is taken, cent by cent, from each day of his scanty wages or is added, cent by cent, to the price of each bushel of corn or gallon of molasses he buys of the rich man.

But there is a class of real improvements, we are told, which ought to be prized by the laboring or the poor man; which actually tend to improve his condition. These are the labor saving machines. We say nothing against them, but let's see of what real benefit they are to the man who depends on his labor for his food. Last year twenty men got nine shilling a day for plaining boards This year, one plaining machine, with four men, does all their work. Do the four men get the pay of the twenty? No. Do they get higher wages than they got before? No. Do they work a less number of hours than they did before? No. Can they buy food for their children any cheaper than they could before? No. Are they less wearied, when night comes, than they were before? No. And just so it is, tracing the improvements through—from the telegraph wires down to the patent pitch-fork; they are improvements—but they do not benefit the pockets of the poor man. Their benefits are monopolized by the rich—the men who chance to have the capital with which to carry them into operation. The reader knows well enough that we are not opposed to any of the improvements we have mentioned, or to any others. Let them come, we say, and let them prosper. Let the rich man's money, and the poor man's labor be joined in the effort to carry them forward. But let the laborer remember that, down to this day, capital has filched from him his share of their profits. It is his turn, now, to realize something better than hunger and rage. Let him say, that from this hour, the first effect of labor saving machines or improvements in the arts shall be to reduce the hours of labor—its second to increase his wages per day. Let him say it, and stick to it. Let him join hands with his fellow laborers, and let the world go round. Let him not refuse to vote for a railroad charter, but let him insist that a ten hour law pass on the same day. So let him see to it, that he reaches nearer to independence with every stride of genius to plan or skill to execute.

PERCUSSION CAPS—The following is the description of the machine now in use at the Arsenal, Washington City:

The machine, which occupies but 2 1-2 by 4 feet, embraces the properties, as I am informed, of all previous inventions. A sheet of copper, 14 by 29 inches, being placed on a plain surface, denominated a 'table, and the motive power applied, the sheet by an alternate motion passes immediately under the cutting-die, which forms perfect caps, and throws them into holes around the edge of a 'charging plate,' some eighteen inches in diameter. With a rotary motion, and its edges studded successively with new informed caps, the plate passes, at about one-third its diameter, directly under a cup containing the percussion powder, from which drops with a singular regularity, a sufficient quantity for a charge, into each cap. Progressing round, at another point is a very fine punch, which completes the job of charging, by pressing home the powder: and at a third point, a small instrument throws the caps from their lodgment, tosses them into a funnel, through which they fall into a drawer beneath.

Thus by the same unchanging motion, is the cutting die furnished with material, the cap manufactured, loaded, pressed, and thrown into a box beneath, at the rate of 4000 an hour—requiring the aid of but one person.

A MILD ANSWER—A clergyman was once told by one of his parishoners of a story to his disadvantage, which was in circulation.

'Ah!' exclaimed he, 'do they say so about me!' If they knew me half as well as I know myself they might tell things much worse than that, and with more truth!'

NEW MODE OF EXTINGUISHING FIRES.—A London correspondent of the Boston Atlas describes a new invention called "Phillips' Fire Annihlator," as follows:

In large fires, flame is the great agent of destruction; it occasions a violent draught, intese heat, and rapidly generates suffocating and noxious gases. For its existence a constant supply of pure air is necessary, as well as a constant high temperature. To prevent the latter, water is sufficient, but not so to prevent the other condition. The "fire-annihilator" subdues flame by preventing effectually the supply of its vital element, pure air, and supplying instead one destructive to its existence—carbonic gas and steam—thus rendering the continuance of flame impossible. These are generated by this apparatus, which is perfectly portable, for one ample for a private house weighs only about twenty-five pounds. It is so contrived that by simply touching a spring this active agency can be aroused in three seconds of time. The potency of this invention was exhibited in several different ways in the lecture room. The great advantages of this invention are the instantaneous effect produced, long before a fire engine could have been got in preapration or brought to bear upon the fire, and the complete freedom from any injury to furniture inseparable from the employment of water.

SENTENCE OF SIMS—Andrew Sims, the incendiary, has been tried, convicted and sentenced—sentenced to thirty years imprisonment in the Penetentiary, in solitary confinement and at hard labor. He is a young men, now twenty years of age, but the Court truly remarked that if he ever caused another burning it would be when he was an old man. He has at last met a richly deserved punishment, and as if to preclude all doubts which might exist in the minds of any, as to his guilt, after having been convicted on three indictments he plead guilty to the fourth. The sentence was immediately carried into execution. Last night Sims was taken by officer Fox to his cell in the Penitentiary, and neither he nor his friends can hope for any commutation of his sentence.—Pittsburg Chronicle.

JUST PUBLISHED.

ALLEN'S COMPEND OF AMERICAN AGRICULTURE.

R. L. ALLEN, Esq., author of the popular work entitled 'Domestic Animals, their Diseases and Remedies,' of which thirteen editions have been published in twelve months, has, after years of practical experience and close investigation, completed his Great Work of Practical Agriculture, illustrated by about 100 engravings. The work will be bound handsomely and substantially in cloth, and furnished at one dollar, single copies, can be sent by mail to any part of the United States.

This work, we most fully believe, is destined to have a more widely extended circulation than any work of the kind heretofore published. Mr. Allen, knowing the wants of the community, has met those wants in a plain, concise and familiar manner, and has made a work intelligible to all. It will be a book for

THE WHOLE PEOPLE,

Its cheapness will cause a large sale, and it will be a Book for Everybody, as well for the man who consumes the products of the earth, as for him who raises them.

150 AGENTS,

active, intelligent and honest, are wanted, to sell this book in every state in the Union.

N. B.—A cash capital of from $25 to $50 will be necessary. Address, post paid,

C. M. SAXTON,

PROSPECTUS FOR 1849!

PETERSON'S MAGAZINE,

(OR: THE LADIES' NATIONAL.)

EDITED BY MRS. ANN S. STEPHENS.

The proprietor of the Ladies' National Magazine returns his thanks to the American public for their liberal patronage of his magazine, and commends to their attention the following reasons for preferring it: As a Literary Magazine it stand unrivalled, its authors being the best in America, and its contents original.

As a Fashionable Monthly it is first: its fashions being the real Philadelphia and New-York ones, but issued in advance.

As a Family Magazine it is invaluable. To render fiction useful is the great aim of the work; hence its domestic stories are pronounced by the press and the public unequalled in truth and merit.

As a Pictorial work it is without a superior: more superb mezzotints appearing in it than any other periodical. For cheapness and merit combined, it has no parallel. At two dollars we furnish a periodical rivalling the three dollar ones in elegance, and infinitely more useful to the sex. Our success in this reduction of price is owing to a rigid adherence to the cash system and to payments in advance.

NEW CORPS OF CONTRIBUTORS.

Several new contributors of talent have been engaged for next year, which will relieve this Magazine from the objection so frequently brought against others, of being filled only with the hackneyed writings of worn-out tale-writers. We shall thus be able to give peculiar freshness to our Magazine for 1849.

THRILLING NOUVELLETES.

In addition to our domestic sketches, stories of the heart, tales of manners, &c. we shall publish several nouvellets, chiefly confined to illustrating the days of '76, those times that tried men's souls. Among these is a tale entitled 'Martin Rudolph,' founded on the report, that a Capt. in Lee's Legion went to France after the revolution, entered the French army under another name, and rose to be the great Marshal Ney. A tale, entitled 'Philadelphia in 1776,' illustrated by mezzotints, will be furnished by C. J. Peterson; this story will embrace the Declaration, the Battle of Trenton, Valley Forge, &c. &c. Mrs. Stephens will contribute several of her thrilling stories.

THE BEST FOR THE SEX.

For 1849 we shall issue, each month, an Editor's table, devoted expressly to the sex, containing information on new styles of embroidery, furniture, crotchet work. &c. also new receipts for the housewife, and horticultural intelligence: in a word a perfect vade mecum.

OUR SPLENDID FASHION PLATES

This magazine has always been the best guide for the fashions, which we get in advance. The costumes are selected, engraved and colored for us a month ahead of all rivals. To each plate is added a letter-press description, besides information on all the latest styles.

OUR SUPERB EMBELLISHMENTS.

One of our superb mezzotints, engraved as they generally are from original pictures, costs us more than two, or even three of the ordinary plates that appear in other magazines. Such an engraving as 'The Fall of Babel,' which appeared in our November number, is almost priceless.

A HIGH MORAL TONE.

The other magazines are intended to amuse: this has a higher plan in view. Its object is to instruct while pleasing; parents may place it, with advantage in the hands of their daughters.

Terms: These are cheaper than any other Magazine can offer:—Two dollars a year invariably in advance. To Clubs: 3 copies, $5,00. 5 do $7,50. 7 do $10,00. 16 do $20,00.

PREMIUMS.

To the postmaster or other person obtaining a club of three or five, we will send a copy of 'Trumbull's celebrated picture of the Battle of Bunker Hill,' executed on steel. For a club of seven or sixteen either an extra copy of the magazine, or a copy of the 'Military Heroes of the Revolution,' an octavo of five hundred pages, illustrated with two hundred wood, and eighteen steel engravings, and sold for $3.

Address, post-paid, the money at our risk,

CHARLES J. PETERSON,
98 Chestnut-st. Philadelphia.

UNDERTAKING IN GENERAL.

IT is an old maxim "a bird in the hand is worth two in the bush," ie. an advantage, to the Public to have Coffins ready made, of all sizes and descriptions, trimmed and polished in the latest styles. The undersigned having been connected with the undertaking and furnishing business for five years, (having furnished five hundred Coffins in that time,) We would refer to our former patrons that the public may be satisfied we have given entire satisfaction in every case; also having had private instruction from the most experienced undertaker in the city of New York in his styles of making and trimming; We now flatter ourselves, we are prepared to give entire satisfaction to the Citizens of Plainfield and vicinity.

We have been to considerable expense in fitting up, that none may be disappointed we would respectfully solicil the Public generally to give us a call before purchasing elsewhere.

J. W. S. MARTIN, Principal.

Also, Cabinet, Chair, & Sofa,

MANUFACTORY.

We would inform the Citizens of Plainfield and vicinity that we have from a thousand to fifteen hundred dollars worth of ready made Furniture on hand, consisting of Black Walnut, Maple, and Mahogony, to suit the taste, and pocket.

Our motto is Cheap for the "Chemicals."

Thankful for the encouragement we have already received; having had a perfect rush ever since we refused that proposal which was directly opposed to the peoples interests: We are going through the world on our own hook, without any incumbrance.

CAUTION EXTRA

A man by the name of CLAPP has engaged with a young man of the name of S. P. Townsend, and uses his name to put up a Sarsaparilla, which they call Dr. Townsend's Sarsaparilla, denominating it GENUINE, Original, etc. This Townsend is no doctor, and never was; but was formerly a worker on railroads, canals, and the like. Yet he assumes the title of Dr., for the purpose of gaining credit for what he is not. This is to caution the public not to be deceived, and purchase none but the GENUINE ORIGINAL OLD Dr. Jacob Townsend's Sarsaparilla, having on it the Old Dr's. likeness, his family coat of arms, and his signature across the coat of arms.

Principal Office, 102 Nassau st., New York City

OLD DR. JACOB TOWNSEND,

THE ORIGINAL DISCOVERER OF THE

Genuine Townsend Sarsaparilla.

Old Dr. Townsend is now about 70 years of age, and has long been known as the AUTHOR and DISCOVERER of the GENUINE ORIGINAL "TOWNSEND SARSAPARILLA" Being poor, he was compelled to limit its manufacture, by which means it has been kept out of market, and the sales circumscribed to those only who had proved its worth, and known its value. It had reached the ears of many, nevertheless, as those persons who had been healed of sore diseases, and saved from death, proclaimed its excellence and wonderful

HEALING POWER.

Knowing, many years ago, that he had, by his skill, science and experience, devised an article which would be of incalculable advantage to mankind when the means would be furnished to bring it into universal notice, when its inestimable virtues would be known and appreciated. This time has come, the means are supplied; this GRAND AND UNEQUALLED PREPARATION is manufactured on the largest scale, and is called for throughout the length and breadth of the land, especially as it is found incapable of degeneration or deterioration.

Unlike young S. P. Townsend's, it improves with age, and never changes, but for the better: because it is prepared on scientific principles by a scientific man. The highest knowledge of Chemistry, and the latest discoveries of the art, have all been brought into requisition in the manufacture of the Old Dr's Sarsaparilla. The Sarsaparilla root, it is well known to medical men, contains many medicinal properties and some properties which are inert or useless, and others, which if retained in preparing it for use, produce fermentation and acid, which is injurious to the system. Some of the properties of Sarsaparilla are so volatile, that they entirely evaporate and are lost in the preparation, if they are not preserved by a scientific process, known only to those experienced in its manufacture. Moreover, these volatile principles, which fly off in vapor, or as an exhalation, under heat, are the very essential medical properties of the root, which give to it its value.

Any person can boil or stew the root till they get a dark-colored liquid, which is more from the coloring matter in the root than from any thing else; they can then strain this insipid or vapid liquid, sweeten with sour molasses, and then call it "SARSAPARILLA EXTRACT of SYRUP." But such is not the article known as the

GENUINE OLD DR. JACOB TOWNSEND'S SARSAPARILLA.

This is so prepared, that all the inert properties of the Sarsaparilla root are first removed, every thing capable of becoming acid or of fermentation, is extracted and rejected; then every particle of medical virtue is secured in a pure and concentrated form; and thus it is rendered incapable of losing any of its valuable and healing properties. Prepared in this way, it is made the most powerful agent in the

Cure of innumerable diseases.

Hence the reason why we hear commendations on every side in its favor by men, women, and children. We find it doing wonders in the cure of CONSUMPTION, DYSPEPSIA, and LIVER COMPLAINT, and in RHEUMATISM, SCROFULA, PILES, COSTIVENESS, all CUTANEOUS ERUPTIONS, PIMPLES, BLOTCHES, and all affections arising from

IMPURITY OF THE BLOOD.

It possesses a marvellous efficacy in all complaints arising from Indigestion, from Acidity of the Stomach from unequal circulation, determination of blood to the head, palpitation of the heart, cold feet and hands, cold chills and hot flashes over the body. It has not its equal in Colds and Coughs; and promotes easy expectoration and gentle perspiration, relaxing stricture of the lungs, throat, and every other part.

But in nothing is its excellence more manifestly seen and acknowledged than in all kinds and stages of

FEMALE COMPLAINTS.

It works wonders in cases of Fluor Albus or Whites, Falling of the Womb, Obstructed, Suppressed, or Painful Menses, Irregularity of the menstrual periods, and the like; and is as effectual in curing all the forms of Kidney Diseases.

By removing obstructions, and regulating the general system, it gives tone and strength to the whole body, and thus cures all forms of

Nervous diseases and debility,

and thus prevents or relieves a great variety of other maladies, as Spinal irritation, Neuralgia, St. Vitus' Dance Swooning, Epileptic Fits, Convulsions, &c.

It cleanses the blood, excites the liver to healthy action, tones the stomach, and gives good digestion relieves the bowels of torpor and constipation, allays inflammation, purifies the skin, equalises the circulation of the blood, producing gentle warmth equally all over the body, and the insensible perspiration; relaxes all strictures and tightness, removes all obstructions, and invigorates the entire nervous system. Is not this then

The medicine you pre-eminently need?

But can any of these things be said of S. P. Townsend's inferior article? This young man's liquid is not to be

COMPARED WITH THE OLD DR'S,

because of one GRAND FACT, that the one is INCAPABLE of DETERIORATION, and

NEVER SPOILS,

while the other DOES; souring, fermenting, and blowing the bottles containing it into fragments; the sour, acid liquid exploding and damaging other goods! Must not this horrible compound be poisonous to the system?—What! put acid into a system already diseased with acid! What causes Dyspepsia but acid? Do we not all know that when food sours in our stomachs what mischiefs it produces? flatulence, heartburn palpitation of the heart, liver complaint, diarrhœa, dysentery, colic, and corruption of the blood? What is Scrofula but an acid humor in the body? What produces all the humors which bring on Eruptions of the Skin, Scald Head, Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, White Swellings, Fever Sores, and all ulcerations internal and external? It is nothing under heaven, but an acid substance, which sours, and thus spoils all the fluids of the body, more or less. What causes Rheumatism but a sour or acid fluid which insinuates itself between the joints and elsewhere, irritating and inflaming the delicate tissues upon which it acts? So of nervous diseases, of impurity of the blood, or deranged circulations, and nearly all the ailments which afflict human nature.

Now is it not horrible to make and sell, and infinitely worse to use this

SOURING, FERMENTING, ACID "COMPOUND" OF S. P. TOWNSEND,

and yet he would fain have it understood that Old Dr. Jacob Townsend's Genuine Original Sarsaparilla, is an IMITATION of his inferior preparation!!

Heaven forbid that we should deal in an article which would bear the most distant resemblance to S. P. Townsend's article! and which should bring down upon the Old Dr. such a mountain load of complaints and criminations from Agents who have sold, and purchasers who have used S. P. Townsend's FERMENTING COMPOUND.

We wish it understood, because it is the absolute truth, that S. P. Townsend's article and Old Dr. Jacob Townsend's Sarsaparilla are heaven-wide apart, and infinitely dissimilar; that they are unlike in every particular, having not one single thing in common.

As S. P. Townsend is no doctor, and never was, is no chemist, no pharmaceutist—knows no more of medicine or disease than any other common, unscientific, unprofessional man, what guarantee can the public have that they are receiving a genuine scientific medicine, containing all the virtues of the articles used in preparing it, and which are incapable of changes which might render them the AGENTS of Disease instead of health.

But what else should be expected from one who knows nothing comparatively of medicine or disease! It requires a person of some experience to cook and serve up even a common decent meal. How much more important is it that the persons who manufacture medicine, designed for should know well the medical properties of plants, the best manner of securing and concentrating their healing virtues, also an extensive knowledge of the various diseases which affect the human system, and how to adapt remedies to these diseases!

It is to arrest frauds upon the unfortunate, to pour balm into wounded humanity, to kindle hope in the despairing bosom, to restore health and bloom, and vigor into the crushed and broken, and to banish infirmity that OLD DR. JACOB TOWNSEND has SOUGHT and FOUND the opportunity and means to bring his

within the reach, and to the knowledge of all who need it, that they may learn and know, by joyful experience, its

Transcendent Power to Heal.

DR. JACOB TOWNSEND. NEW YORK, Oct. 5, 1848.

WALKED across THE ROOM

with the aid of crutches. Since then, I have walked in the street: have gone alone from 36 Spruce street to the Park; thence to Lovejoy's Hotel and back. I have been to 85 Nassau-street two different times, and am now frequently visiting my neighbors. During all this time, I have taken but two bottles of Old Dr. Townsend's Sarsaparilla. Oct. 4. I procured another bottle to-day (5th Oct.) I walked twice across the floor without the aid of crutches. I have also nearly recovered from obstruction of water, which gave me great distress. The pain in my back has likewise left me. I and my family have no earthly reason to ascribe my recovery to any other cause but to

OLD DR JACOB TOWNSEND'S SARSAPARILLA.

ALEX. WELSH, 36 Spruce-st.

P. S.—Several able physicians despaired of my ever walking or even raising myself from my bed again.

The Slave Ship.

Swift! swift she came!
'Till a wreath of flame,
Seemed playing around her brow;
The morning bright
Flashed golden light,
On the crest of the waves below.

Beautful and bright
She wing'd her flight
O'er the breast of the rolling sea,
'Till she brightly gleamed
And 'neath the sun-ray seemed,
A spirit of heaven to be.

The sailors paced
And lightly traced
Her deck 'neath the morning sky;
Or lightly laugh'd
As the nectar quaff'd—
And dash'd the cup on high.

From Afric's strand
That sun-scorched land,
She drove her onward course;
As eagle flies
Thro' Cloudy skies—
Or the dash of a madened horse.

O! who could say?
'Neath that mornings ray
As she onward dashed—alone!
To hear the shout
As it rang out,
She was rent with pain, and dying groan.

Yet it was so
'Neath the deck—below,
Three hundred captives lay:
From the desert home
O'er the sea were borne,
By the white man torn away.

Fettered they lay
In close array,
All darkness and gloom around;
The thickened air
Bore here and there,
The last throb of the death telling sound.

Grim Death was there
In that bark so fair,
As she traversed the ocean wave;
And Africs child
From his native wild
Torn, soon found a watery grave.

Still the sailors sound
Burst free around
On the breath of the quickened air,
As the death-struck form
Amid calm or storm,
Was consigned to the oceans care.

Thus forms that glide
In beauteous pride,
Seeming void of care and sin,
As they dart along
With laugh and song—
Oft have the fire of hell within.

The outside is bright,
The laugh is light,
Ringing merry on the ear—
But the immortal soul—
Of man the whole,
Is shrouded in darkness and fear.

ROSA.

Plainfield, April 19.

Man is not free when he is given to sinful pleasures and corrupt desires. Ignorance is slavery, every vicious habit is a chain, and the bosom heaving with the excess of passion is the dungeon of the soul. Ah, how many dwell in darkness and attempt to hobble through the world with these shackles! If it be an outrage against nature to fetter a beast, will Man endure a bondage that is more degrading? Man, thou art a child of God; if even the brutes spurn their chains, O, be admonished to rise, in the dignity and consciousness of thy manhood, and be free!—Young Peoples Journal.

A clergyman being opposed to the use of the violin in the church service, was, however overruled by his congregation, who determined upon having one. On the following Sunday, the parson commenced the service by exclaiming, in long-drawn accents, 'You may f-i-d-d-le and s-i-n-g the 40th psalm.'

As an old lady lately was walking through one of the streets of Paris, at midnight, a patrol called out 'Who's there?' 'It's only me patrol; don't be afraid!'

Woman's Eye.

A THRILING SCENE.

I passed up the natural avenue and came upon the green. My feelings were very poetical as I walked towards the village church. I entered. A popular preacher was holding forth, and the little meeting house was much crowded. Several persons were standing up, and I soon discovered that I must retain my perpendicular position, as every seat was crowded. I, however, passed up the aisle, until I gained a position where I could have a fair view of nearly all present. Many of the congregation looked curiously at me, for I was a stranger to them all. In a few moments, however, the attention of every one seemed to be absorbed in the embassador of grace, and I also began to take an interest in the discourse. The speaker was fluent and many of his flights were even sublime. The music of the woods, and the fragrance of the health seemed to respond to his eloquence.

Then it was no great stretch of the imagination to fancy that the white banded creatures around me, with their pouting lips and artless innocence, were thus divided between the beauties of the two worlds, and wrapped in a sort of poetical devotion, I detected some glances at me of an animated character.

I need not describe the sensations experienced by a youth, where the eyes of a beautiful woman rest for a length of time on his countenance, and when he imagines himself to be an object of segard to her. I returned her glances with interest, and threw all the tenderness into my eyes which the scene, my meditations and the preachers discourse, had inspired in my heart—doubting not that the fair damsel possessed kindred feelings at the fountain of inspiration. How could it be otherwise?

She had been born and nurtured amidst these wild romantic scenes, and was made up of romance, of poetry, of tenderness; and then I thought of the purity of woman's love—her devotion—her truth. I only prayed that I might enjoy a sweet interchange of sentiment. Her glances continued. Several times our eyes met. My heart beat with rapture. At length the benediction was pronounced. I lingered about the premises until I saw the dark-damsel set out for home alone and on foot. Oh that the customs of society would permit—for we are surely one in soul. Cruel formality! that throws up a barrier between each other! Yet I follow her.—She looked behind, and I thought evinced some emotion at recognizing me as the stranger of the day. I then quicked my pace, and she actually slackened hers, as if to let me come up with her.

'Noble young creature!' thought I; 'her artless and warm heart is superior to tne bonds of custom?'

I reached within a stone's throw of her. She suddenly halted and turned her face toward me. My heart swelled to bursting. I reached the spot where she stood. She began to speak, and I took off my hat as if doing reverence to an angel?'

'Are you a pedler?'

'No, my dear girl, that is not my occupation.'

'Well, I don't know,' continued she, not very bashfully, and eyeing me very sternly: 'I thought when I saw you in the meeting house, that you looked like the pedler who passed off a pewter half-dollar three weeks ago, and so I was determined to keep an eye on you. Brother John has got home now, and he says if he catches the fellow he'll wring his neck for him; and I ain't sure but you're the good-for-nothing rascal after all!'

Reader, did you ever take the shower-bath?

In Albany, two or three mornings since, a young man was found in a pig pen, sleeping with half a dozen porkers, and affectionately hugging a demijon of liquor with one arm and a pig with the other. What taste.

QUEER PEOPLE.—A newspaper, in speaking of some new railroad cars, says—'The cars are quite long, and capable of holding sixty passengers with doors at both ends.' What queer sort of passengers they must be to be sure.

Two Incidents in the Revolutionary War.

'Fortune favors the Brave.'

A military officer with whom we have long been intimate, relates two incidents connected with Croghan's gallant defence of Fort Stevenson: one of which affords a strong postive and the other a stronger negative proof, of the above quoted adage.

As the British and the Indians, in their operations had violated their pledge and the usage of civilized warfare, by wontonly murdering their prisioners, the members of Croghan's little band, (only 100 strong with a single six-ponnder, and surrounded by about 600 British troops and thrice that number of Indians,) had mutually agreed to stand their ground to the last, and sell their lives as dearly as possible.

When all was ready the British Commander sent a messenger, under a flag of truce, to treat for the surrender of the Fort. Chroghan pointing to him as he approached, exclaimed:

'It will not do to let him enter here and see our weakness: who will volunteer to meet him?'

As it was pretty certain that whoever should leave the Fort on such a mission would be murdered by the dastard foe, there was a brief pause, when Ensign Shipp replied:

'I will upon one condition.'

'What is it?' asked the Captain.

'Pledge me your word, as an officer and a man of honor, that you will keep that gun bearing directly upon me, and that you will fire it off the moment you see me raise my hand.'

The plege was given, and Shipp went forth.

To all the arguments and pursuasion of the enemy his unvarying reply was:

'I am instructed to say that we defend the Fort.'

Soon the Indians began to suround him. One clutched his epaulette, another his sword. Shipp, who was a man of Herculean frame, released himself by a powerful effort, and turning to the envoy, coolly said;

'Sir, I have not put myself under the the protection of your truce witout knowing your mode of warfare. You see that gun,' said he pointing to their solitary six-pounder, 'It is well charged with grape, and I have the solemn pledge of my commander that it shall be fired at me the instat that I give him the signal. Therefore, restrain these men and respect the law of war, or you shall instantly accompany me to the other world.'

This was enough. Shipp was no more molested, he returned to his comrades in safety, fought out the desperate action that ensued, and obtained promotion for his bravery.

The counter instance referred to at the head of our paragraph was told as follows:

After the British and Indians had withdrawn Croghan missed one man (only one) efforts for his discovery, were, for some time unsuccessful. At length his remains were discovered in the garret of one of the block houses, where he had crept for safety, and was cut in two by a cannon ball.

All the rest, considering their chances of life not worth a thought, had only sought to do their duty, and escaped alive, from perhaps the most desperate fight on record. The only man that was killed, happened to be the only man who proved himself a coward.—N. Y. Atlas.

Two Dutchmen, lived opposite to each other, who had for many years been in the habit of smoking by their door-side in silence, at length broke forth in the following dialogue:—

'What sort of wedder you tink will be to-day, neighbor?'

The other, after two or three hasty puffs, 'Well, I don't know: what sort of wedder you tink it will be?'

The first somewhat nettled, 'I think it will be wedder as you tink it will be.'

The other, acquiescingly, 'Well I tink so too.'

COMFORT.—'Is there any danger of the boa constrictor biting me?' asked a visitor at the Zoological Gardens.

'Not the least, marm,' replied the showman, 'he never bites—he swallows his wittles whole.'

What Perseverance Will Accomplish.

About forty years ago, in the woods near the line between Tennesee and Kentucky, stood a log cabin, sixteen feet by eighteen, which was occupied by a father and a mother with some ten or twelve children, and among them was the hero of our sketch. In his infancy he was fed on corn and hominy, bear meat, and the flesh of such wild animals as were caught in the woods.

At twelve years of age he was put out to work with a neighbor, as a farm-boy. He drove oxen, hoed corn, and raised tobacco in the summer, and cured it in the winter, till he was seventeen years old. Then he learned to make brick. To this he added the profession of a carpenter; and by these successive steps in mechanical arts he became able, by his unassisted skill, to raise a house from a clay pit, or from the stump, and complete it in all its parts. He could do it, too, in a manner that none of his competitors could surpass.

His panel-doors are the wonder and admiration of the country, in which they continue to swing on hinges. He never saw the inside of a school-house or church till after he was eighteen years old. Having achieved the valuable acquisitions of reading and writing, by the aid of another, all his other education has been the fruit of his own application and perseverance.

At the age of twenty-two, he conceived the idea of fitting himself for the practice of law. He at first procured an old copy of Blackstone, and having, after the close of his daily labors, by nightly studies over a pitch-not fire in his log-cabin, mastered the contents of that compendium of common law, he persued his researches into other elemeatary works. Having thus, by great diligence, acquired the rudiments of his profession, he met with an old lawyer who had left the practice, or whose practice had left him, with whom he made a bargain for his secretary and library, for which he was to pay him one hundred and twenty dollars in carpenters work. The chief part of the job to be done in payment for these old, musty books, was dressing and laying down a floor at three dollars per square of ten feet.

The library paid for, our hero dropped the adze, plane and trowel, and we soon after hear of him as one of the most prominent members of the Mississippi bar, and an able statesman and orator. 'I heard him one day,' says one, "make two speeches in succession, each of three hours in length, to the same audience, and not a movement testified any weariness on the part of a single auditor; and during his delivery, the assembly seemed swayed by the orator as weeds before the wind."

That poor farm boy is now at Washington, a member of Congress from Mississippi. His name is Patrick W. Tompkins. He is a self made man, and his history shows what an humble boy can do when he is determined to try.—Saturday Rambler.

Judge ——— had effected a settlement of accounts with one of his neighbors, a very parsimonious man, and it was found impossible to make correct change within three cents, which the judge said he would hand to the other at any subsequent period. Some days after, while the judge was upon the bench, and in the midst of a cause, the avaricious neighbor, whose brains could not rest while the three cents were absent from his pocket, appeared in the court-room, and with slight ceremony, beckoned to his debtor to grant him an interview. The judge, who was so unfortunate as to stutter somewhat, appreciated instantly the purpose of the applicant, and arrested the progress of the case, with 'st-stop, a f-f-few moments, until I sp-speak to m-m-my neighbor P.'

He thereupon descended from the bench and accompanied neighbor P. to a private room, and, as he expected, received a demand for the delinquent three cents. He paid it, obtained a receipt, and returned to the court-room, convulsing every one present with laughter, by the following remark:

'Th- they s-say, that at th-the m-moment an-any one d-d-dies another is b-b-born, and th-the soul of the one th-that dies g-goes into the b-body of th-the one that's b-b-born,—N-now when neighbor P. was b-born, n-n-no-nobody died!'

PLAINFIELD GAZETTE.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Thursday, April, 26, 1849.

What were the prinipal issues made by the late Presidential election, and by whom were they made? Were they not declared by all parties to be the prevention of the extension of Slavery over territories now free? Was not this great Jeffersonian democratic doctrine of the equal inalienable rights of all men, as so ably set forth in the declaration of independence, and the ordinahc of 1787, the principal issue of the Presidential election of 1848?

Were we not told at a Whig meeting held in this Village at Laing's Hall, by the Hon. John Vandyke, and two or three other speakers, that the whigs were and always had been the advocates of free soil, and that Gen. Taylor was more certainly to be depended on than either of the other candidates as a free soil man? Was this not also held forth by both the other parties at the same place, and within about ten days of the same time; and was not this the great question that agitated the minds of the people at that time; and that they were resolved that slavery should not be extended any farther; but that the time had then come for carrying out the great principles of freedom for which our forefathers contended? All must admit that this, and this alone, was the great issue before the people. As all the old issues, the U. S. Bank, the Tariff, the admission of Texas the Sub-Treasury, &c. had all been brought distinctly before, and were distinctly and definitely decided as they now stand, to be the favorite measures of the people; and as they would have again been decided if they had been made the test. So also will it be with Free Soil. The great majority of the people of the Union are in favor of equal rights, equal privileges, equal laws, and opposed to the extention of Slavery. All the difference appeared, and appears to be as to how, and by whom, this should be carried out; not as to the measure itself: and as above stated the People, the great mass of the intelligent Freemen of our Country are in favor of the freedom of the whole human race, and more especially that their own Country should be free; and woe be unto that Party or that man that shall defeat the expressed will of the people.

The people have spoken and continue to speak loudly on this subject. The democracy of the people, has destroyed the democracy of party; but true democracy remains as we trust it ever will, and rises superior to party democracy, and will ever be maintained by the people.

But what has been the result thus far in relation to this all important subject? Has the expressed will of the people on it been carried out by Congess or by Gen. Taylor? Has he in the selection of his Cabinet or in his appointments to office carried out the expressed will of the people on the subject of free territory? Will the whigs who professed to support him on this ground abandon him or their principles. We ask these questions now, that they, that all may be prepared to give an answer when the proper time arrives; many profess but all do not practice democracy.

We have a few more questions to ask, and respectfully request that all our readers will put the questions to themselves, and be prepared to act on due consideration of said questions in accordance with the true principles of a republican government, which we all profess to admire.

Is the subject of slavery an evil, and indefensible under all forms of government, to say nothing about its being more so under that of a republican?

Can or does a republican form of government exist where a portion of the people are held in bondage? Has not congress the power under the constitution to abolish slavery in the District of Columbia, and to prohibit its introduction into territories now free? If congress has not this power, by what power did it pass the ordinance of 1797! If this power is not in the Constitution, have not the people the power to amend it by a clause to that effect? If all power is of the people, and not by the divine right of kings, how long will they lay under this curse on their energies when all the monarchial Governments of Europe, and even the ignorant and tyranical government of Mexico have abolished and prohibited it.

As we have already observed, all the old issues have been fairly, decisively, and justly decided and we think for the best interest of the country. It matters not to us nor to the great mass of the people who is at the head of affairs, if the people have their equal and just rights. All the smoke and noise made about appoitments to and removals from office is a matter of small importance to the great mass of the people; nevertheless after the voluntary declarations of Gen. Taylor, and of those who advocated his claims to the high offiice of President, it is to be hoped that he will carry out these oft repeated declarations in his appointments to and removals from offiice, by appointing honest, capable, and obliging men, without regard to their political predilections, and thus fulfill his promises to be President of the whole people, and none can have cause to complain.

Shall we continue to be a by-word and a reproach among the nations of the earth, professing the equal and inalienable rights of all men, while we continue to hold millions of our fellow men in bondage?

The people have demanded that this curse shall be done away; that Slavery shall not be extended over territory now free, that the nation shall no longer be outraged by the toleration of Slavery in the District of Columbia.

The people also demand retrenchment in the expenses and patronage of the government. Cheap Postage for the people. Abolition of all unnecessary offices and saleries. The election of all civil officers directly by the people. Free grants in limited quantities to actual settlers of the Public Lands. A reduction of the mileage of Members of Congress to fair and just compensation of their travelling expenses. Abolition of or great reduction in the franking privilege, and to just and equal laws by the General and State governments.

☞ Now is the time to advertize, our patronage in the Village and surrounding country, is steadily on the increase, with our next number we shall issue five hundred copies of our paper, Manufacturers, Mechanics, Merchants, and others would do well to hand in their advertisements in time for our next.

☞ All communications must bear the name and address of the writer, as a guarantee of good faith, otherwise no attention will be paid to them.

Common Schools.

It will be perceived by a reference to another column of our paper, that the friends of Common Schools throughout the United States, are respectfully, and earnestly requested to meet in covention in Philadelphia, on the 22d day of August next, to promote the cause of Popular Education. And farther recommend that the friends of Common School Education in the several states of the Union, meet in Convention at their respective capitals, on or before the 4th day of July next; for the purpose of appointing delegates to the National Convention

We doubt not the citizens of Plainfield take a lively interest in this subject, and therefore we would simply call attention to the fact that there is such a convention to be held, that necessary and prompt action be taken as the importance of the subject demands, that we may be properly represented in both State and National Conventions.

We would therefore suggest the propriety of calling a meeting and inviting some suitable person or persons to give us an address on the subject.

With what greater subject, and one more closely allied to the true interest and liberties of the people, can we commemorate the birthday of our National Freedom, than that of Common School Education.

Liberty and Education are one and indivisable.

The Literary American—Published by A. J Townsend 105 Nassau st. New York, G. P. Quackenboss Editor, $3 00 per annum.—We cannot speak in too high terms of this most excellent weekly periodical, it has no superior, and but few equals, copies of it can be seen at this office.

☞Every thing offered for sale, can be made known to the inhabitants of this Village and surrounding country, at a trifling expense, by advertising in the Plainfield Gazette.

Reader be careful and look over our advertising columns, or you may chance to lose some good bargains, as we have constantly something new offered worthy of your attention.

For the Plainfield Gazette.

There is nothing more calculated to gratify the Christian and philanthropist than the influence which the newspaper press is exerting in favor of all those great reforms which must be effected before the happy period, for which the wise and good labor and the oppressed and down-trodden pray, "the good time," can arrive.

The press, it is true, is not doing all the good of which it is capable, and which it will soon, indeed, perform; but it has within fa few years advanced in usefulness a thousand-fold. That it is not putting forth greater efforts for the benefit of mankind, is more the fault of readers than of publishers. There is yet so much bigotry and intolerance among mankind, that if an editor is too earnest and faithful in the cause of the right, he is set down by the illiberal as an enthusiast, a visionary, a fanatic, a seditious fellow, whose labors are described as having a tendency to turn the world upside down. "This one fellow came in to sojourn, and he will needs be a judge," said the wicked sodomites to Lot, and such is yet frequently the language of the world to the real reformer.—The enemies of progress have ever warred fiercely against those who have sought to make mankind wiser and happier.

When the Reformer himself made his advent into our fallen world, on a mission of love to all mankind; although he violated none of the conventionalities of life, but was, in every respect, an example of what a good citizen should be—of whom it had been predicted that "He shall not strive nor cry; neither shall any man hear his voice in the streets. A bruised reed shall he not break, and smoking flax shall he not quench"—who passed his whole time in instructing the ignorant, healing the sick, and raising the dead—even he was persecuted continually by those who were the enemies of the divine truths he taught, and who finally caused him to suffer a malefactors death. Listen to his defence when he was arraigned by the high priest who caused his arrest: "I spake openly to the world; I ever taught in the synagogue, and in the temple, whither the Jews always resort, and in secret have I said nothing." Here was the grand reason of the hatred entertained by the high priest and elders, who were the whole cause of his sufferings; for the people themselves were his friends. It was because they feared his influence over those for whom he was doing so much, that they sought his life; for he had done nothing worthy of death and Pilate (who appeared to be desirous of gratifying them) was forced to confess, I find in him no fault at all."

One of the great advantages of the newspaper press is the opportunity which it affords the earnest advocate of truth—no matter what may be his condition in life—to communicate with his fellow men. There is no other method in which he can do it so effectually. All classes of people look to the newspaper to learn what is new and strange: and after they have finished the news and miscellany, many will read some of the communications which it frequently contains, although they discuss matters which require some little effort of the mind to appreciate them. And let no one imagine that such articles are not calculated to influence those who read them.

Truth is eternal and unchangeable, and, if pondered, will always produce its natural effect, no matter who promulgates it. And here is the gr.at utility of communicating truth by means of the newspaper; for thousands read papers who rarely or never touch a book, especially one addressed to the intelligent reader.

I look upon the newspaper press as one of the most efficient mediums for spreading the truth with which the world is blessed; and while I would not underrate the influence of the pulpit, I certainly look upon the press as its equal. There are some clergymen, it is true, who will command the attention of the most thoughtless, and whose labors, of course, are greatly blessed; but it is lamented by a large number of the wise and good that many of our divines are behind the age and not calculated to be very useful, because they too frequently discuss doctrinal points, instead of teaching matters of a practical nature. These doctrines, say they, may be interesting to some, but they are not to the mass of the people; and it appears to be a waste of time to dwell on them, while the weightier matters which should claim the attention of fallen creatures like us, are almost wholly overlooked. It is not my intention, however, to say anything which can possibly lessen the respect which all right-minded people have for their spiritual teachers. Far from it! So long as they teach us to live in charity with all men, and seek their highest good,—which is the spirit of our Saviours teachings,—they have my earnest prayers for their success.

But there are others than clergyman who have something important to communicate to their fellow men, who were it not for the newspaper, would have no opportunity of doing it. They have not the privilege of addressing their friends and neighbors face to face; and even if they had the opportunity of meeting them in a lecrure room, all have not the faculty of making themselves useful as lecturers.

It is a pleasure second to none which I enjoy, to hear the orator address a crowded assembly. How often have I stood for three or four hours at a time jammed in a crowd, from which one could hardly have escaped if he sought to do so, in listening to the logical and musical voice of the eloquent speaker! And it is a great gift for a man to be blessed with who can hold for hours together thousands of his fellow men by the strains of his eloquence, But this gift is nearly as rare as it is great; for although there are many men who are passable speakers, but few, very few, can be justly called orators. There are many persons, however, who can write a clever essay, or a fair newspaper article; one which will interest a good many readers; and who, by these labors, may be the cause of much good. Did you notice that man who crossed the street just now? You would not imagine that he could say anything which would be interesting to the public. He is, as you may judge by his appearance, a poor man, who has had very little chance to obtain an education; indeed, all the knowledge he posesses he has picked up at odd spells while resting from his daily labors. You would not fancy that he could find ten men in the village who could be induced to attend a lecture room to hear him speak; and yet he can write a passable newspaper article—one which shall be read and commented on by hundreds.

There are many, like him, who can occasionally write something which will be of interest to the public, and therefore they are benefactors to their fellows; for anything which interests our minds, is calculated to profit us. It is because men are not interested that they are not benefitted; for "knowledge is power," and cannot be acquired untilthe mind is interested. When that is done, men will become wiser, and therefore better; because an intelligent man will not commit many acts which the ignorant one will for he knows that every time he violates any law which has been given for his government, he must suffer the penalty he incurs by his foolishness.

But I must bring this article to a close, or some of my readers may say that they would like my argument better had I not been (like too many who address them from the pulpit) so intolerably tedious.

THE NEXT CONGRESS.—According to a statement of the Cincinnati Atlas, the members of the next House of Representatives, who have already been elected, stand politically divided, Whigs 81, Democrats 55, Independents (or Free Soilers) 9. The nine Independents are made up of two in Massachusetts, three in Pensylvsnia, three in Ohio, and one in Wisconsin. Two of them, the Atlas thinks, will support the present administration:

'The members to be elected are 1 in Massachusetts, 1 in Rhode Island, 1 in Deleware, 6 in Maryland, 15 in Virginia, 9 in North Carolina, 7 in Alabama, 4 in Mississippi, 4 in Louisana, 11 in Tennesee, 10 in Kentucky, 10 in Indiana, and 5 in Missouri. Of these 33 are Whigs, 47 are Democrats, and one Independent. If the returns of the members come in as they did before, the Whigs will have 117 members—which is four majority over Democrats and Independents, fourteen majority over the Democrats.'

The Atlas then makes an estimate of certain losses and gains, in the elections yet to be held, the result of which would give the Whigs 114 members, the Democrats 116, and the Independents 10. These estimate concedes a Whig loss of 2members in Virginia.

The Free States have 30 Senators, 139 Representatives, and 169 Presidential Electors.

The Slave States have 30 Senators, 91 Representatives, and 121 Presidential Electors.

The total Area of the Free States is 454, 340 Square Miles or 290, 777, 600 Square Acres. Total Area of Slave States is 610, 798 Square Miles or 390, 910, 720 Square Acres. Texas which is not included in the above has 325, 520 Square Miles or 208, 332, 800 Square Acres.

The new Commet is visible soon after dark, and will be nearest to us about the 28th inst.

National Convention of the Friends of Common Schools.

The undersigned, deeming that the great cause of Popular Education in the United States, may be advanced, and the exertions of its friends strengthened and systematized, by natural consultation and deliberation, respectfully request the friends of Common Schools, and of Universal Education throughout the Union to meet in Convention, at the city of Philadelphia, on Wednesday 22d day of August next, at 1 o'clock, P. M., for the promotion of this paramount interest of our Republican Institutions.'

We have only room for the following influential names, from among the large number of warm friends of Popular Education, who have signified their acquiesence in this call.

Rt. Rev. Alonzo Potter, D. D. Philad'a.
Hon. Joseph R. Chandler, do
Alfred E. Wright, do
Dr T. F. King, Jew Jersey.
Robert J. Breckenridge, D D. Ky.
Hon. Horace Mann, Mass.
Ex-Governor Horace Eaton, Vt.
Asa D. Lord, Esq. Ohio.
Judge E. Lane, Sandusky, Ohio;
Philip Lindsey, D. D. Nashville.
A. D Bache, LL. D. Washington.
H. W. Heath, LL. B. Maryland.

Local Committee of Arrangement.

The following named gentlemen have consented to act as a Committee of Arrangement, for the "National Common School Convention:"—

Hon. Joseph R. Chandler, Chairman.
Alfred, E, Wright, Cor. Secretary.
James J. Barclay, William Martin,
George Emlen, Jr. John Miller.
Daniel M Fox, Mordicai L. Dawson
Joseph Cowperthwait, S S. Randall,
Edward C. Biddle, J. Engle Negus.

Communications in reference to the proposed Convention should be addressed to the Corresponding Secretary. Those intended for publication, should be addressed to the Editor of the Casket, Philadelphia.

State Common School Conventions.

The Committee of Arrangements for the National Common School Convention, which is to assemble in Philadelphia on the 22d of August next, beg leave, respectfully and earnestly, to recommend to the friends of Common School Education in the several States of the Union, to assemble in State Convontion at their respective capitals, or at some central location, on or before the FOURTH OF JULY next, for the purpose of appointing delegates to the National Convention, and transacting such other business in reference to the interests of Common School Education within their borders, as may be deemed expedient. It is desirable that the number of delegates from each State be at least equal to its representation in Congress, and that a full delegation should, as far as may be practicable, be secured. State or Local Conventions of Teachers, Superintendents, or other assemblages of the friends of education, are also respectfully requested to appoint delegates to the proposed National Convention.

☞ Editors and publishers of newspapers throughout the Union, are eaanestly requested to publish this notice, together with the notice recommending the National Common School Convention.

By order of the Committe,
JOSEPH R. CHANDLER, Chairman.
A. E. WRIGHT, Cor. Sec.

☞ Editors giving the above 'call' an insertion will oblige us by forwardihg a copy of the paper containing the call to Wright's Casket, Philadelphia.

The Spiders Thread.

That any creature could be found to fabricate a net, not less ingenious than that of the fisherman, for the capture of its prey; that it should fix it in the right place, and then patiently await the result, is a proceeding so strange, that if we did not see it done daily before our eyes by the common house-spider, and garden-spider, it would seem wonderful. But how much is our wonder increased when we think of the complex fabric of each single thread, and then of the mathematical precision and rapidity with which, in certain cases, the net itself is constructed; and to add to all this, in example of the wonders which the most common things exhibit when carefully examined, the net of the garden-spider consists of two distinct kinds of silk. The threads forming the concentrick circles are composed of a silk, much more elastic than that of the rays, and are studded over with minute globlues of a viscid gum, sufficiently adhesive to retain any unwary fly which comes in contract with it. A net of average dimensions is estimated by Mr. Blackwall to contain 87,360 of these globules, and a large net, of fourteen or sixteen inches in diameter, 120,000; and yet such a net will be completed by one species (Eperiaa poelica) in about forty minutes, on an average, if no interruption occurs.—Right's Paper.

THE SUBTREASURY.—The losses sustained by the nation in consequence of depositing the public money in the Banks, were in 1847 estimated by Judge Woodbury, then Secretary of the Treasury, at $15,492,000, including interest, and depreciation of Bank notes compared with specie. As yet there has been no loss under the Sub Treasuay system.

A new movement is agitating the press and loyal politicians of the British North American Provinces. The object is the union of the Canadas with Nova Scotia and New Brunswick as the only means of averting the annexation of the whole to the United States. It is contended that a federal compact of the Colonies, with a common Parliament, will, by bringing the peculiar resources of each into greater activity, revive the flagging industry and trade, which have for years past been the most powerful agitator of a seperation from the Home Government.

QUEER PROPERTY.—A New-Orleans paper advertises for sale one 'undivided half of a negro."

PROSPECTUS FOR VOL. IV. OF THE LADIES' WREATH,

EDITED BY MRS. S. T. MARTYN.

The success of this magazine, which is yet in its infancy, is unsurpassed in the history of the periodical literature of this country. Its circulation is now, nearly, if not quite equal to the oldest of our monthlies, and excels some, which claim to be, the most popular of the magazines.

Our object has been, as stated in our first prospectus, to give our fair countrywomen, and introduce into the family circle, a work containing a pure, elevated, christian literature—a work which should exert an ennobling influence upon all its readers, and help to sustain the great principles, industrious habits, and moral sentiments, which lie at the foundation of our republican liberties and free institutions. When we commenced our enterprise, it was doubted, by many, whether such a work could be sustained. The success of the Wreath has settled that question, and cheered the hearts of thousands, who have mourned over the bad influence of much of the literature of the day.

It gives us much happiness to state, that we have been encouraged, in our enterprise, by a steady and rapid increase of our circulation, and by the voice of the press, and by numerous notes of commendation from the best minds and noblest hearts in the country.

OUR EMBELLISHMENTS

speak for themselves. We echo the voice of the press when we say, our flower plates have not been equalled, and our steel engravings have not been surpassed, by any, even of the three dollar magazines.

THE CHEAPEST MAGAZINE IN THE COUNTRY.

If the Wreath was made up extracts from other works, and the flowers and plates were wood engravings, the cost of publication would be lessened, at least one-half. But our articles are original, and from the pens of our very best writers—our flowers are lithographed, in the best style of the art, and our steel engravings by the ablest and most popular artists in the country. The twelve numbers make a beautiful volume of 432 pages, on fine white paper, with 24 splendid engravings, for one dollar!! ☞ in advance.

NEW TYPE AND SPLENDID PAPER.

The May number, which commences the fourth volume, will contain sixteen extra pages, two fine steel engravings, and splendid flower plate. We promise our subscribers that the next volume shall not only be the best, but the most beautiful magazine in the country.

OUR CONTRIBUTORS

Are not surpassed by any magazine in the country. We give the names of a few of them not having room for more.

Mrs. L H Sigourney, M N McDonald, Ann S Stephens, F L Smith, C Therasa Clarke, A B Hyde, E Little, St Simon, M L Gardner, E C Kinney, Hon E Lewis, Rev N A Keys, Miss Caroline May, Hon Stacy G Potts, Rev J Alden, Wm H Burleigh, W B Sprague, S D Burchard, George S Burleigh, A M Cowles, C E Babb, T S Arthur, Carlos Smith, D S Stone, G F Secchi de Casali, D C Lansing, WB Tappan, F Hagan, G W Clarke, and G F Root, Esquires.

PORTRAITS OF AMERICAN LADIES.

We shall continue giving original portraits of distinguished American ladies.—Several will be inserted in the fourth volume, as soon as correct paintings can be procured, from which to engrave them.

BEST TERMS TO CLUBS.

We offer to clubs the following low terms, which are but a few pennies above the cost price. Four copies for one year for $3; eight do do $6; fourteen do do $10; twenty do do $14. Address, Ahead of All Competition!

Sartain's Union Magazine.

The public are apprised that the Union Magazine has changed residence, as well as changed hands, Messrs. Sartain & Sloanaker having purchased it of the former proprietors, and transferred its place of publication from New-York to Philadelphia. In addition, also, to the services of Mrs. Kirkland, who will continue, as heretofore, to contribute to its pages, the proprietors have engaged, as an associate editor, professor John S. Hart, of Philadelphia.

It is confidently believed that the patrons of the Magazine will find signs of improvement, as well as change. Its external appearance is improved. For evidence of this, the reader need only look for himself. In the pictorial department, the magazine may now fearlessly challenge comparison with any of its rivals.

In respect to the literary character of the magazine, it will be the earnest endeavor of all concerned in its publication, to secure for it the contributions of the best writers that the country affords. The proprietors have already entered into arrangements for articles from almost every writer of distinction in the United States.

An Original Novel.

A special feature for the present volume will be the publication of an original novel, the manuscript of which has been purchased for the purpose. The publication of this novel will in no case be extended into the succeeding year, even though a large number of extra pages have to be printed to bring it to a conclusion before the close of the volume. This novel will open to the reader a new field of American traditions, entirely untouched by Irving, Cooper, or any of our writers of historical fiction. The scene of the story is in North Carolina, just prior to the Revolution, and it embodies in the form of an entertaining fictitious narrative, a mass of historical traditions respecting the early settlement of the Carolinas, which, if we mistake not, will give quite a new aspect to that part of our national history. The writer, Mr. Whiley, who contributed a short tale to our January number, is a native of North Carolina, and has traversed carefully all that part of the country which he has made the scene of his story, for the purpose of giving the greater fidelity and accuracy to his descriptions. Without violating any of its secrets, we may venture to tell his readers in advance, that he has thrown an interest (something like that with which genius has invested the abode of the Knickerbockers) over even the "Dismal Swamp," and that not less dismal line of sandy, harborless sea beach, that stretches for hundreds of miles south of Cape Fear.

Another feature will be a series of stories by professor Alden, of Williamstown, Mass. illustrating the times of the early puritans.

Rev. John Todd, D. D. of Pittsfield, Mass. will continue to contribute New-England Legends, of which "Tomo of the Wild lakes," in the January number, is a fair specimen.

PREMIUMS:—The following splendid engravings, suitable for parlor ornaments, have been engraved at an expense of more than $1000, and are offered as premiums in connection with the magazine The price of either picture is of itself $3

A large whole-length portrait of General Taylor,

Represented resting on his war-horse, old Whitey. Engraved on steel, in Mezzotinto, by J Sartain, from daguerreotypes from life expressly for this plate. Size, exclusive of the margin, 21 by 16 inches.

Group of portraits of the Washington family,

Including General Washington, Lady Washington, Eleanor Parke Custis, G. Washington Parke Custis, and Washington's favorite Servant. Engraved in Mezzotinto, on steel, by J. Sartain, from the original by Savage. Size, exclusive of margin, 24 by 17 inches.

Remember, our premiums are not from old worn out magazine plates, not worth the postage on their transmission, as is the case with the offers of some others. The proprietors of Sartain's Union Magazine intend in all instances, when a promise is made, to produce something of real merit and value.

TERMS:—One copy of the magazine, and one of the premiums, $3; Two copies $5; Five copies of the magazine and one of the premiums, and a copy of the Magazine extra to the agent, $10; single copies 25 cents.

☞ The money must accompany each order. No letters taken from the post-office unless the postage is paid. Address

People of Moderate Fortune.

If you are about to furnish a house, do not spend all your money, be it much or little. Do not let the beauty of this thing, and the cheapness of that, tempt you to buy unnecessary articles. Dr. Franklin's maxim was a wise one:—'Nothing is cheap you do not want.'

But merely what is absolutely necessary, and let experience of your wants and your means dictate what shall be afterwards obtained. If you spend all at first you will find you have bought many things you do not want, and omitted many you do want. Begin cautiously. As riches increase, increase in hospitality and splendor; but it is always painful and inconvenient to decrease.

After all these things are viewed in their proper light by the judicious and respectable. Neatness, tastefullness, and good sense, may be shown in the management of a small household and the arrangement of a little furniture as well as upon a large scale. The consideration gained by living beyond one's income, is not actually worth the trouble it costs. The glare there is about such false, wicked parade, is deceptive; it does not in fact procure valuable friends, or extensive influence. More than that, it is morally wrong, so far as the individual is concerned; and injurious beyond calculation to the interests of our country. To what are the increasing beggary and discouraged exertions of the present day owing? A multitude of causes no doubt tend to increase the evils, but the root of the whole matter is the extravagance of all classes of people?

We never shall be prosperous till we have sufficient moral courage to make pride and vanity yield to the dictates of honesty and prudence. We never shall be free from embarrassment till we cease to be ashamed of industry and economy! Let women aid in the reformation. Let their husbands and fathers see them happy without finery; and if their friends have, as is often the case, a foolish pride in seeing them decorated, let them silently and gradually check this feeling, by showing that they have better means of commanding respect. Let the exercise of ingenuity, economy, and neatness, prove that good taste and gentility are attainable without great expense.—Mrs. L. M. Child.

WASHINGTON.—Extract from Washington's Code of Manners, written in his early youth:

'Every action ought to be with some sign of respect to those present.

'Be no flatterer, neither play with any one who delights not to be played with.

'Read no papers, letters, or books, in company. Come not near the papers or books of another so as to read them. Look not over another when he is writing.

'Let your countenance be cheerful, but in serious matters, be grave.

'Show not yourself glad at another's misfortunes.

'Let your discourse with others on matters of business be short.

'It is good manners to let others speak first.

'When a man does all he can, do not blame him, though he succeeds not well.

'Take admonitions thankfully.

'Be not hasty to believe flying reports to the injury of another.

'In your dress be modest, and consult your condition. Play not the Peacock, looking vainly at yourself.

'It is better to be alone than in bad company.

'Let your conversation be without malice or envy.

'Urge not your friend to discover a secret.

'Break not a jest were none take pleasure in mirth.

'Speak not injurious words either in jest or in earnest.

'Gaze not on the blemishes of others.

'When another speaks be attentive.

'Be not apt to relate news.

'Be not curious to know the affairs of others.'

FREEDOM OF THE PRESS.—A postmaster in Virginia refuses to deliver the Cincinnati Globe, a Van Buren paper, as such papers are forbidden to be circulated in the State.

'I had rather not take a horn with you,' said the loafer to the mad bull; but he insisted upon treating him to two, and the loafer got quite high.

ALLEN'S COMPEND OF AMERICAN AGRICULTURE.

R. L. ALLEN, Esq., author of the popular work entitled 'Domestic Animals, their Diseases and Remedies,' of which thirteen editions have been published in twelve months, has, after years of practical experience and close investigation, completed his Great Work of Practical Agriculture, illustrated by about 100 engravings. The work will be bound handsomely and substantially in cloth, and furnished at one dollar, single copies, can be sent by mail to any part of the United States.

This work, we most fully believe, is destined to have a more widely extended circulation than any work of the kind heretofore published. Mr. Allen, knowing the wants of the community, has met those wants in a plain, concise and familiar manner, and has made a work intelligible to all. It will be a book for

THE WHOLE PEOPLE,

Its cheapness will cause a large sale, and it will be a Book for Everybody, as well for the man who consumes the products of the earth, as for him who raises them.

150 AGENTS,

CAUTION EXTRA

A man by the name of CLAPP has engaged with a young man of the name of S. P. Townsend, and uses his name to put up a Sarsaparilla, which they call Dr. Townsend's Sarsaparilla, denominating it GENUINE, Original, etc. This Townsend is no doctor, and never was; but was formerly a worker on railroads, canals, and the like. Yet he assumes the title of Dr., for the purpose of gaining credit for what he is not. This is to caution the public not to be deceived, and purchase none but the GENUINE ORIGINAL OLD Dr. Jacob Townsend's Sarsaparilla, having on it the Old Dr's. likeness, his family coat of arms, and his signature across the coat of arms.

Principal Office, 102 Nassau st., New York City

OLD DR. JACOB TOWNSEND,

THE ORIGINAL DISCOVERER OF THE

Genuine Townsend Sarsaparilla.

Old Dr. Townsend is now about 70 years of age, and has long been known as the AUTHOR and DISCOVERER of the GENUINE ORIGINAL "TOWNSEND SARSAPARILLA." Being poor, he was compelled to limit its manufacture, by which means it has been kept out of market, and the sales circumscribed to those only who had proved its worth, and known its value. It had reached the ears of many, nevertheless, as those persons who had been healed of sore diseases, and saved from death, proclaimed its excellence and wonderful

HEALING POWER.

Knowing, many years ago, that he had, by his skill, science and experience, devised an article which would be of incalculable advantage to mankind when the means would be furnished to bring it into universal notice, when its inestimable virtues would be known and appreciated. This time has come, the means are supplied; this GRAND AND UNEQUALLED PREPARATION is manufactured on the largest scale, and is called for throughout the length and breadth of the land, especially as it is found incapable of degeneration or deterioration.

Unlike young S. P. Townsend's, it improves with age, and never changes, but for the better; because it is prepared on scientific principles by a scientific man. The highest knowledge of Chemistry, and the latest discoveries of the art, have all been brought into requisition in the manufacture of the Old Dr's Sarsaparilla. The Sarsaparilla root, it is well known to medical men, contains many medicinal properties, and some properties which are inert or useless, and others, which if retained in preparing it for use, produce fermentation and acid, which is injurious to the system. Some of the properties of Sarsaparilla are so volatile, that they entirely evaporate and are lost in the preparation, if they are not preserved by a scientific process, known only to those experienced in its manufacture. Moreover, these volatile principles, which fly off in vapor, or as an exhalation, under heat, are the very essential medical properties of the root, which give to it all its value.

Any person can boil or stew the root till they get a dark-colored liquid, which is more from the coloring matter in the root than from any thing else: they can then strain this insipid or vapid liquid, sweeten with sour molasses, and then call it "SARSAPARILLA EXTRACT or SYRUP." But such is not the article known as the

GENUINE OLD DR. JACOB TOWNSEND'S SARSAPARILLA.

This is so prepared, that all the inert properties of the Sarsaparilla root are first removed, every thing capable of becoming acid or of fermentation, is extracted and rejected; then every particle of medical virtue is secured in a pure and concentrated form; and thus it is rendered incapable of losing any of its valuable and healing properties. Prepared in this way, it is made the most powerful agent in the

Cure of innumerable diseases.

Hence the reason why we hear commendations on every side in its favor by men, women, and children. We find it doing wonders in the cure of

CONSUMPTION, DYSPEPSIA, and LIVER COMPLAINT; and in RHEUMATISM, SCROFULA, PILES, COSTIVENESS, all CUTANEOUS ERUPTIONS, PIMPLES, BLOCTHES, and all affections arising from

IMPURITY OF THE BLOOD.

It possesses a marvellous efficacy in all complaints arising from Indigestion, from Acidity of the Stomach, from unequal circulation, determination of blood to the head, palpitation of the heart, cold feet and hands, cold chills and hot flashes over the body. It has not its equal in Colds and Coughs; and promotes easy expectoration and gentle perspiration, relaxing stricture of the lungs, throat, and every other part.

But in nothing is its excellence more manifestly seen and acknowledged than in all kinds and stages of

FEMALE COMPLAINTS.

It works wonders in cases of Fluor Albus or Whites, Falling of the Womb, Obstructed, Suppressed, or Painful Menses, Irregularity of the menstrual periods, and the like; and is as effectual in curing all the forms of Kidney Diseases.

By removing obstructions, and regulating the general system, it gives tone and strength to the whole body, and thus cures all forms of

Nervous diseases and debility,

and thus prevents or relieves a great variety of other maladies, as Spinal irritation, Neuralgia, St. Vitus' Dance Swooning, Epileptic Fits, Convulsions, &c.

It cleanses the blood, excites the liver to healthy action, tones the stomach, and gives good digestion, relieves the bowels of torpor and constipation, allays inflammation, purifies the skin, equalises the circulation of the blood, producing gentle warmth equally all over the body, and the insensible perspiration; relaxes all strictures and tightness, removes all obstructions, and invigorates the entire nervous system. Is not this then?

The medicine you pre-eminently need?

But can any of these things be said of S. P. Townsend's inferior article? This young man's liquid is not to be

COMPARED WITH THE OLD DR'S,

because of one GRAND FACT, that the one is INCAPABLE of DETERIORATION, and

NEVER SPOILS,

while the other DOES; souring, fermenting, and blowing the bottles containing it into fragments; the sour, acid liquid exploding and damaging other goods! Must not this horrible compound be poisonous to the system?—What! put acid into a system already diseased with acid! What causes Dyspepsia but acid? Do we not all know that when food sours in our stomachs, what mischiefs it produces? flatulence, heartburn, palpitation of the heart, liver complaint, diarrhœa, dysentery, colic, and corruption of the blood? What is Scrofula but an acid humor in the body? What produces all the humors which bring on Eruptions of the Skin, Scald Head, Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, White Swellings, Fever Sores, and all ulcerations internal and external? It is nothing under heaven, but an acid substance, which sours, and thus spoils all the fluids of the body, more or less. What causes Rheumatism but a sour or acid fluid which insinuates itself between the joints and elsewhere, irritating and inflaming the delicate tissues upon which it acts? So of nervous diseases, of impurity of the blood, or deranged circulations, and nearly all the ailments which afflict human nature.

Now is it not horrible to make and sell, and ignorantly worse to use this

SOURING, FERMENTING, ACID "COMPOUND" OF S. P. TOWNSEND,

and yet he would fain have it understood that Old Dr. Jacob Townsend's Genuine Original Sarsaparilla, is an IMITATION of his inferior preparation!!

Heaven forbid that we should deal in an article which would bear the most distant resemblance to S. P. Townsend's article! and which should bring down upon the Old Dr. such a mountain load of complaints and criminations from Agents who have sold, and purchasers who have used S. P. Townsend's FERMENTING COMPOUND.

We wish it understood, because it is the absolute truth, that S. P. Townsend's article and Old Dr. Jacob Townsend's Sarsaparilla are heaven-wide apart, and infinitely dissimilar; that they are unlike in every particular, having not one single thing in common.

As S. P. Townsend is no doctor, and never was, is no chemist, no pharmaceutist—knows no more of medicine or disease than any other common, unscientific, unprofessional man, what guarantee can the public have that they are receiving a genuine scientific medicine, containing all the virtues of the articles used in preparing it, and which are in capable of changes which might render them the AGENTS of Disease instead of health.

But what else should be expected from one who knows nothing comparatively of medicine or disease! It requires a person of some experience to cook and serve up even a common decent meal. How much more important is it that the persons who manufacture medicine, designed for should know well the medical properties of plants, the best manner of securing and concentrating their healing virtues, also an extensive knowledge of the various diseases which affect the human system, and how to adapt remedies to these diseases!

It is to arrest frauds upon the unfortunate, to pour balm into wounded humanity, to kindle hope in the despairing bosom, to restore health and bloom, and vigor into the enfeebled and broken, and to banish infirmity that OLD DR. JACOB TOWNSEND has SOUGHT and FOUND the opportunity and means to bring his

within the reach, and to the knowledge of all who need it, that they may learn and know, by joyful experience, its

Transcendent Power to Heal.

DR. JACOB TOWNSEND. NEW YORK, Oct. 5, 1848.

WALKED ACROSS THE ROOM

with the aid of crutches. Since then, I have walked in the street: have gone alone from 36 Spruce-street to the Park; thence to Lovejoy's Hotel and back. I have been to 85 Nassau street two different times, and am now frequently visiting my neighbors. During all this time, I have taken but two bottles of Old Dr. Townsend's Sarsaparilla. Oct. 4. I procured another bottle to-day (5th Oct.) I walked twice across the floor without the aid of crutches. I have also nearly recovered from obstruction of water, which gave me great distress. The pain in my back has likewise left me. I and my family have no earthly reason to ascribe my recovery to any other cause but to

OLD DR. JACOB TOWNSEND'S SARSAPARILLA.

ALEX. WELSH, 36 Spruce st.

P. S.—Several able physicians despaired of my ever walking or even raising myself from my bed again.

UNDERTAKING IN GENERAL.

IT is an old maxim "a bird in the hand is worth two in the bush," ie. an advantage, to the Public to have Coffins ready made, of all sizes and descriptions, trimmed and polished in the latest styles. The undersigned having been connected with the undertaking and furnishing business for five years, (having furnished five hundred Coffins in that time,) We would refer to our former patrons that the public may be satisfied we have given entire satisfaction in every case; also having had private instruction from the most experienced undertaker in the city of New York in his styles of making and trimming; We now flatter ourselves, we are prepared to give entire satisfaction to the Citizens of Plainfield and vicinity.

We have been to considerable expense in fitting up, that none may be disappointed we would respectfully solicil the Public generally to give us a call before purchasing elsewhere.

EXECUTED WITH NEATNESS AND DISPATCH, ON REASONABLE TERMS.

For the Plainfield Gazette.

The recent premature death of a young lady of my acquaintance, caused by almost incessant occupation with her needle, and the nearly ceaseless labors of many others, for the most insufficient compensation, which is undermining their health and hurrying them to a wretched end, induces me to offer a few remarks on the cause which produces such melancholy results.

It is known to you that a very large number of females in this section of the State, as well as in many other places, from the child of the most tender years to the matron whose tottering limbs will hardly convey her from the fireside to the door of the dwelling, are engaged in making up cheap clothing. That it is the duty of all to labor who can do anything useful, and therefore beneficial to society, I cheerfully admit, and insist that they should do it. But I do not believe,—if those who are interested will do what is right,—that it is necessary that this clothing should be made at the present starvation prices.

If all who follow this and similar employments, were obliged to labor as many hours only each day as they were able to without injury to their health, or neglecting important duties, the evil would not be so great; but, unfortunately, in a very large number of cases this will not answer, because, having no resources but the labor of their hands, they are obliged to work until they are entirely exhausted to supply themselves and their families with the necessaries (they do not aspire to the comforts) of life.

That this state of things has already produced very serious evils, the most superficial observer cannot fail to have noticed. The remark is made of the most fastidious housekeeper, who has engaged in this enterprize, that her rooms are not kept as tidy and comfortable as formerly; and her personal appearance, except when she goes abroad or expects company at home, is not as neat and becoming. The change in others is far greater; the extremely low price at which this clothing is now made compels the poorer female to neglect all but the most imperative duties, and even these are often performed in the most imperfect manner. The house is suffered to go unswept until it is intolerably dirty; the meals are hastily and improperly prepared; the children go almost uncared for, and become dirty and slovenly in their appearance; the sick baby suffers greatly for want of care; the husband's clothing is not kept in proper order, which tends to irritate him; and these causes combined often make him regard his home and family with feelings of indifference if not with disgust. The education of the daughters is neglected; they can neither afford time to attend school or learn their lessons at home, while a good book or a newspaper are luxuries which they are taught to dispense with. These girls are thus growing up to be the mothers of the next generation, ignorant in many respects of the simplest truths. They are taught housekeeping in the most superficial manner, if indeed, as in thousands of cases, they are not brought up without any knowledge of it whatever.

But these evils, great as they undoubtedly are, are light when compared with the loss of health and life which must inevitably result from such constant employment. Any one who has the least knowledge of physiology knows what must be the consequence of such incessant application. It is impossible that a young girl can grow up with the bloom of health on her cheeks, and with eyes sparkling and bright, who passes her days with the needle constantly in hand. She will as certainly undermine her constitution as that the sun shines, if she does not find some less exacting employment. The laws which govern her nature are unchanging, and every infraction of those laws will cause her to suffer. She might as well take fire into her bosom and expect not to be burned, as to labor constantly at an unhealthy business without looking forward to its certain result—an early grave. Look around at the young women who live by their needles, and where you find one who is healthy and lively, how many do you hear complaining of loss of appetite, pain in the side or breast, loss of sleep, and whose hectic cheeks and glassy eyeballs announce with tongues which cannot be misunderstood, that the place where the "weary are at rest" is, to them, very near at hand. Ah, is it not sad to reflect that so many of the young and beautiful, who are but just entering on life's bright morning, should thus have their sun go down before it is noon? What a hard fate that they must follow an employment which is fraught with so much misery! How many we have seen pass away, whose untimely deaths could as clearly be traced to their unhealthy pursuits, as any facts which we can determine! How many mothers are now sick at heart, when they look upon their unhealthy daughters, who are but the wrecks of the lively girls who but a few years since were all life and animation! Ah, mother, if this employment was not the best which you could obtain for your child, you will long reproach yourself for advising her to follow what is often attended with such disastrous consequences. That hectic flush, those sunken, lustreless eyes, those profuse sweats, that spitting of blood, perhaps—all tell too plainly, even to the inexperienced eye, that your daughter's remaining days will be few and full of evil. Consumption—that most insidious and fearful disease, which has carried off so many millions of the young and beautiful, and good—has marked her for its own! If you have another daughter whose health is not yet injured, think seriously before you teach her to depend on an employment which is so life-destroying, and whose reward at best will hardly keep soul and body together.

We have as yet experienced but a few of the evils which will inevitably follow this universal and almost incessant use of the needle. Many of those employed have followed the business but a few years, and being of robust health when they commenced, they have thus far suffered but little compared with what they certainly will in a brief period. The time is not distant when this constant labor will not fail to produce its inevitable results, in the loss of health and life of a great many who are engaged in it.

"But," says one, "all this may be true, but where is the remedy? I have no one to depend on but myself; and it is indispensably necessary that I should follow some employment in order to supply my wants. I have learned to make cheap clothing, and I have no other resource to depend on but the small sum I receive for this service. It is true, my labor is but poorly rewarded, but I must learn to work more and live upon less."

I answer, that there are probably many women, both young and old, who can hardly find any employment better than this. Many daughters follow it who are under the necessity of staying at home to take care of an aged or infirm parent. Others are poorly qualified (owing to their defective education) to earn a living in any other manner. But it is not necessary for females who are comparatively wealthy, to crowd the ranks of those who, from various causes, are compelled to earn a living by their labors with the needle. It should be borne in mind that every woman who works on this clothing, who is not obliged to do so, helps to reduce the earnings of her poor Sister! Thousands of women, who are the wives aud daughters of farmers and others comfortably situated, come into competition with those who have no other resource but the needle. Is it any wonder that pantaloons are made for eight cents a pair, when all the females in many sections of the country abandon every employment but this? Is it strange that, under such circumstances, a girl who could a few years since support herself and mother with the labor of ten hours per day at her needle, is now obliged to work from fifteen to twenty? And is it not wrong for the wealthy—i e. for those in comfortable circumstances—to take the bread from the mouths of the poor and needy, by ruining their business? But poorly as this labor is rewarded now, there is every prospect that the wages of labor will be farther reduced. Is it not known by all that the wages are every year more meagre; and if pantaloons are made this season for eight cents, who will say that next they will not be made for six?

It is, I confess, unaccountable to me, why women whose husbands and fathers are worth thousands of dollars, should seek to come into competition with those less favored, especially when the inducement is so trifling. I could mention the name of many a farmer's daughter who prides herself upon the extent of her father's flocks and herds, on the number of his fertile acres, and of his thousands of dollars at interest, who works early and late at this work that she may earn a few shillings per week! To see the anxiety which she manifests while engaged so profitably, one would think that she was very poor and had no friends in the world. I would not complain of her industry, but I am sorry that it has no higher aim. It is because her labor comes in competition with that of her poor sister, that I regret it. I admit that every one has a legal right to labor at this or any other branch of business; but at the same time I do not believe her labors will in the end be a benefit to herself, while I know that she is lessening the reward of those who have no other resource.

THE LAST VISIT.

EXTRACT FROM THE MYSTERIES OF ST. HELENA

From the French of Marco de St. Hilaire.

BY FREDERIC R. COUDERT.

Every time the weather was favorable, the Emperor, notwithstanding his feeble health, was accustomed to go out and take a short ride in a calash which had been placed at his disposal; and as it took him but a very short time to go over the narrow space allowed him, he loved to explore it in its minutest details. Thus, after having made a dictation (for, to his last moments, he occupied himself with arranging his memoirs, and this had become his almost sole relaxation), Napoleon went out, accompanied by the Grand Marshal (Betrand), or by General Montholon; sometimes he even went out alone, but this was of rare occurence, as he feared to be betrayed by his strength which was considerably diminished. He most generally directed his course towards the valley nearest Longwood. Thus he visited the neighborhood and the few persons inhabiting it. All with the exception of Mrs Mason, were poor; the roads were sometimas impracticble, but the worse they were the more the Emperor seemed to take pleasure in these excursions; there was then, something resembling liberty in them. The only thing to which he could not accustom himself, was to meet English sentinels stationed at intervals to watch him.

One day, having advanced farther than usual among the barren rocks, he discovered a small house, of a poor appearance; he opened the door and entered a little garden, covered with various kinds of flowers. A young girl was watering them. She was fair and fresh-looking as her flowers; she had blue eyes, whose expression was so sweet and kind, that Napoleon was struck by them.

'What is your name, mademoiselle? he asked of her.

'Jenny, sir,' she answered in pretty good French, but as if frightened by this sudden apparition.

'What is your family name?' continued the Emperor.

'Braston,' she answered, in a still more embarrassed tone.

'You seem to love flowers very much, and to understand their cultivation,'

'Alas! sir, this occupation is my only resource.'

'How so?'

'Every day, I go to the city and carry with me the geraniums you see here. I live on the three or four pennies which I obtain in exchange for my nosegays.'

'But what do your father and mother do?'

'I have neither, sir,' answered the young girl with profound emotion.

'Not a single parent!'

'No, sir, not a single one—I am entirely a stranger in this island. Three years ago, my father, formerly under officer in the English army, and my mother who was from Holland, left London, and took me along with them. Their intentions was, they said, to go to India, to join relations of theirs, then living in that country and who had promised to lend them assistance. We were not rich; my parents had very great trouble to amass the money necessary for so long a voyage; but alas! they were never to see its destination? my father died during the passage, and when our vessel stopped at this island, my poor mother was so ill, that they left us here. She was long ill and our resources were completely exhausted. To bring a little relief to our misery, I thought of selling flowers. A merchant of the city, who, like you questioned me on our situation, had pity on us; he gave us this cottage, where my mother and I lived, during two years, on the produce of this little garden, A year ago, my poor mother, who had a relapse, obtained from God a termination of her woes. She enjoined upon me to have courage and you see, sir, I obey her.'

As she was speaking thus, Jenny had been unable to restrain her tears.

During this short recital, Napoleon had been moved; a few unintelligible words had come from his mouth; finally, he said distinctly:—

'Poor child! But you, mademoiselle, what had you done to God to be cast into such a spot and so wretchedly? Singular coincidence of destiny!' added Napoleon, in a low tone—'like me she has no longer a country, no longer a family!'

And as he spoke thus, a sigh, the more poignant as it had been more concentrated, escaped from the bosom of the Emperor. Thus, the man, whom the loss of the two finest crowns of Europe had found calm and resigned, wept at the remembrance of his mother. But soon, regaining all his firmness, he said to the young girl:

'Mademoiselle, will you make me a bouquet, that I may have a souvenir of my visit.'

Jenny gathered together her prettiest flowers, and presented them to Napoleon, who in exchange gave her five gold pieces.

'Oh—mon Dieu! sir,' cried the young girl; 'why did you not come sooner? My poor mother would not have been in want of anything, and she would not have died.'

'Well, my child,' said Napoleon, more moved than ever, 'those are noble sentiments; I will come again to see you.'

Then Jenny, looking at the five gold pieces, added, blushing:

'But, sir, I will never be able to give you flowers enough, for so large a sum.'

'Let not that trouble you, mademoiselle,' added Napoleon, gently tapping her on the cheek with his two fingers.

Then he returned to Longwood and related to his faithfuls the discovery he had made.

Napoleon appeared happy, at having found a misfortune to console; and from that instant the young girl augmented the especial nomenclature of Longwood. She was called 'the little bouquetiere.'

In a moment of gaiety, the Emperor had bestowed an epithet on every thing that surrounded him; thus the part of the island which he generally preferred in his walks, was called the 'Valley of Silence.' Mr. de Balcome, in whose house he had lived when he had arrived at Briars was the 'Amphitryon,' and an English major, over six feet high, was called the 'Hercules.'

A few days after, Napoleon, while dressing said he wished to go and see his little 'Bouquetiere' and to present her to his friends. This time, the young girl, who had learned who her benefactor was, was dressed in her best attire. Deeply moved, not by the past granduer of Napoleon, but by his misfortunes, she did the honors of her poor habitation as best she could to her illustrious guest. She offered figs, flowers from her garden, and water from a stream which ran in the valley, and which rose in her garden itself.

'You see, sir,' she said to Napoleon, 'I was awaiting you. Unhappily I was not forewarned sufficiently soon, or I would have received you more becomingly, which the treasure you bestowed upon me has enabled me to do."

'And I would have scolded you for so doing, mademoiselle,' answered the Emperor.

'When I will return to visit you, I wish nothing else but your water, which is excellent On this condition only, will you see me again. After all, I am but an old soldier, like your father, and the soldier has not always water at his disposal, as experience has often taught me.'

From that time, scarcely a week elapsed without Napoleon's visiting Jenny's hut. Then she who used to wait for him before her door, would go to meet him, and offer him a cup of water and a boquet; then the Emperor having thanked her in a few words, continued his walk, conversing meanwhile with those who had accompanied him, on the excellent disposition of the young girl.

Some time later, and when the terrible sickness which was eventually fatal to him had made such progress as to prevent his leaving Longwood as frequently as he would have desired, Jenny, not seeing her benefactor, came every day to Longwood to inquire after his health, and after having offered only her boquet, she would return sadly.

One day, however, as she was in her garden, she heard the sound of a carriage. She crossed the road and found herself before the Emperor, but hardly had she expressed her joy at seeing him, when the countenance of Napoleon suddenly became more sad.

'You find me very much changed, do you not, my child?' he asked in an almost inaudible voice.

'True, sire; but now your health will return.'

'I doubt it,' said the Emperor, shaking his head incredulously; 'still, I wished to visit you to-day.'

Aided by one of his companions in exile, Napoleon with difficulty descended from his carriage, and leaning on Jenny's arm, entered the cottage; and, when he was seated:

'Give me a cup of water,' he said to her; 'perhaps it will appease the fire which devours me—there'—he added placing both his hands on his breast.

Jenny hastened to comply with his request, and as soon as Napoleon had drank half of the cup she had tendered him with a trembling hand, his countenance a moment ago contracted by pain, again became serene.

'Thank you, my dear child,' he said, kindly, 'this water seems to have of a sudden calmed my sufferings. Had I taken some sooner'—he added, raising his eyes to heaven; 'but now it is too late!'

'Then,' resumed Jenny, affecting an air of gaiety, 'I am very happy that you find this water so good; I will carry you some every day, and it will cure you entirely.'

'No! it is useless, I am not deluded as to my true state, my dear child, this is my last visit. There is here a dolore sorao which kills me (and Napoleon placed his hand on his heart); but since this is perhaps, the last time I will see you. I wish at least to leave you a souvenir of my friendship; what can I do for you?"

'Ah! sir,' cried Jenny, melting into tears and falling at the Emperors feet, 'your blessing, that is all I desire all I wish for, all I hope for.'

Then Napoleon with that gravity which Faith gives, for he had always had the belief which makes the honest man, placed both his hands on the young girls head, saying: 'I give it you my child, be happy.'

From that day Jenny never failed religiously to go to Longwood. She always carried spring-water and a nosegay, and each day returned more sad: for each day, the news with regard to the Emperor's health was more alarming.

One morning with a brighter sun than usual over her head, and with lighter spirits, Jenny arrived at longwood with that childish hope, which gave her a secret confidence in the spring water. They had told her the day before, in order to conceal the truth from her, that the Emperor was better. Her grateful imagination had straightway created a miracle, and that miracle was her benefactor's restoration to health.

She arrived—but alas! how far was the reality from her happy dreams! She found all the inmates of the house plunged in consternation. Then, fearing for the life of him whom next to God she loved best, and wishing at least to see him once more to bid him a last farewell, she begged to be admitted to the Emperor's room It was answered her that he was very sick, and that it was not possible. She prayed, she supplicated, and her tears were so powerful, that she was introduced into Napoleon's chamber.

It was at that solemn moment when the Emperor, sorrounded by his faithful friends and servants, after long sufferings on his bed of sickness, had asked to have the window opened that was placed in the direction of France, and after having addressed a touching farewell to that country he had so loved, the delirium had taken possession of him, his limbs had become stiffened by convulsions, his eyes had become fixed, he had uttered the words: "my son! France!"—and he expired.

At the sight of all this, Jenny fell on both her knees, then making an effort, she endeavored to seize the hand of Napoleon which was hanging out of the bed. But immediately her head bowed down, her lips lost their color; her eyelids slowly closed, and she fell gently at the foot of the bed, as if yielding to an irresistible desire to sleep. Poor Jenny never woke again.

EPITAPH.

At rest beneath this church yard stone,
Lies stingy Jemmy Wyatt;
He died one morning just at ten,
And saved a dinner by it.

SUSPENDED.—An Irishman, who was talking in rather ambigicus terms about the sudden death of his paternal relative asked if he had lived high?

Well, I can't say he did,' said Terrence, 'but he died high.'

'Why, what do you mean?'

'Faith I mean that like the United States Bank, he was suspended!'

'GONE TO MILL.'—We notice the marriage of Mr. Joseph Gone to Miss Amanda Mill.

NOTHING NEW UNDER THE SUN.—By an article in the Courier des Etats Unis, we perceive that Mr. Julein lately read in the French 'Academie' a paper designed to show that chloroform, either or some similar anæsthetic agent was used by the Chinese doctors several centuries since. He produced some very curious Chinese recipes from ancient and modern works of medicine, to sustain his position.

The Mercury says that whoever goes to law for damages will be sure to get them.

PLAINFIELD GAZETTE.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Thursday, May 3, 1849.

To the Public.

Knowing from what we have already experienced, that a liberal and enlightened public have, and always will, encourage all proper and beneficial enterprises; therefore, for the liberal patronage already bestowed upon us we return our most sincere thanks.

Having commenced the publication of a paper ii this our native Village, we are determined, that if by untiring industry, and devotion to our business, a paper can be made worthy of the support of the citzens of Plainfield and surrounding country, that we are determined to do it; all we ask is to be judged by our merits. Although an entirely new business to us, and laboring under many disadvantages, yet we believe our paper will compare favorably with most, of a much older date.

Certainly our merchants, mechanics, manufacturers, and citizens generally, cannot fail to perceive the advantages that must accrue to our Village, collectively, as well as individually, by the generous support of a well conducted newspaper.

Therefore we respectfully request all who receive this number of our paper, to give it a careful and candid perusal, and if approved of to hand in their names as subscribers; and particularly those of the surrounding country, to give us an answer upon the reception of the next number.

One word to those who may not have seen our paper in regard to our principles. We profess to advocate democratic principles, but it must be as we understand them, as we shall not be trammeled by the preconceived opinions of any man, or party of men, but shall advocate to the best of our ability, the Equal Rights of All, believing that on this alone our own rights depend. How far we have or shall pursue this course we leave the public to decide.

BIGOTRY.—Is it possible, that in the nine-teenth century, men of so intolerant a spirit are elected to a seat in our legislative halls, to the disgrace of the country and age in which we live. It is but a short time since, that New Hampshire was disgraced by her legislators passing intolerant laws, in regard to a sect called Shaking Quakers; declaring that whoever should join that society should forfeit certain political rights.

It will be seen by an extract below from the Tribune of Apl. 27th. that Massachusetts also puts in a claim to the above title of bigotry.

A STATE DISGRACED.—When the Ursuline Convent near Boston was burned by a mob from that City, her journals urged, in deprecation of the world's loathing, that the arson was perpetrated by a few irresponsible rowdies, over whom the sedate and reflecting majority had no control. The apology was plausible, and the public generally accepted it. But now that a Massachusetts Legislature has just refused, by a vote of 117 to 84, to charter a Catholc College in that State, what apology can be offered? Can it be plausibly contended that this is an act which involves no one but its perpetrators?

Does the Tribune mean to say that (the apology was plausible,) because the Convent was burnt by a few irresponsible persons, that therefore Massachusetts was not responsible for the protection of the property or lives of her citizens?

Exhibition.

There will be an exhibition at Laing's Hall, on Monday Evening, May 6th. of over 80 paintings illustrative of Scripture, History and Astronomy, together with the most noted Historical and Miscellaneous Paintings, among which are some of the recent battles in Mexico. Each Painting will be shown on a screen ten feet square.

This Exhibition is worthy the attention of the old and young, being wholly of a moral nature, highly instructive and entertaining. The citizens of the Village and vicinity will lose a rich treat if they do not attend. Admittance 12 1-2 cents, children half price.

☞ Please call early, as the whole evening will be occupied in the representation.

☞ The attention of the public is requested to our advertising columns, we have several new advertisements this week, which are well worthy their attention. We are not permitted a more extended notice for want of room.

☞ We acknowledge with much pleasure, the receipt of a present of Green Peas and New Potatoes, from our young friend Andrew M. Webster, Esq. of Savannah Geo. Our friend of the Union we perceive makes a similar acknowledgment from the same source. This is a kind hint from our friend far away, for those nearer home not to let us poor printers suffer in his absence. May an honorable, long, and happy life be his.

☞ Those wanting Rev. Turton and Coats Sermon's, call immediately at this Office, as we have only a few copies left.

THE VIRGINIA ELECTION, as far as heard from, has resulted in a gain of three members of Congress to the Democrats. Districts No. 1 to 11, both inclusively, return three whigs and eight democrats. In the last Congress they were represented by six whigs and five democrats. Districts No. 12 to 15, are yet in doubt.

The State Legislature will be composed of a Democrat Senate, and probably a Whig House of Delegates; although the Democrats claim a majority in the latter, and are certain of a majority on joint-ballot. So far, the returns from Virginia look like a democratic victory.

Wisconsin on Rumselling.

We have already stated that a very stringent bill in regard to intoxicating liquors was passed by the Wisconsin Legislature at its recent session. The bill consists of ten sections, and requires all persons who would vend or retail 'spirituous liquors' to give bond to the town authorities, with three sureties in $1,000, 'conditioned to pay all damages the community or individuals may sustain by reason of such a traffic; to support all paupers, widows and orphans; pay the expenses of all civil and criminal prosecutions made, growing out of, or justly attributable to such a traffic.' And it is made the duty of the officer holding the bond to deliver it to 'any person who may claim to be injured by such traffic.'

Serious Riot in Canada.

MONTREAL, Thursday, April 26.

The Earl of Elgin, Governor General, of Canada, came down to the Legislative Council Chamber yesterday, and gave the Royal assent to the Bill for Payment of the Rebellion Losses, the recent discussions relative to which have caused such excitement in this Province; whereupon a very serious riot took place in this city last evening. His Excellency was pelted by the Tory mob, and constrained to leave the city, retiring to his residence at Monklands, two miles distant, they then fired the Parliament Buildings, which were burnt down, and the Legislative Records of Upper and Lower Canada, with one of the most valuable and extensive Libraries on this continent, and the Furniture, Pictures, &c. entirely consumed.

Hon George Moffatt, Member of the Legislative Council, and the President of the British American League, has been arrested on a charge of Treason, connected with the riots of yesterday.

[Mr. Moffatt is a merchant, in extensive business, and an ardent politician on the ultra-tory side.—Ed Trib.

MONTREAL, April 30th, 5 P. M

Despatches from Quebec state that the Governor was burnt in effigy in that city on Saturday night, and that the authorities were using strenuous efforts to preserve the public peace.

Upper Canada shares the same fate, and the effigy of the Governor has been burned in many places, and at Brookville the authorities were compelled to assist in the ceremony!!

The St. Andrews church Society and the Thistle Club have expelled Lord Elgin from their ranks.

To-day the people are quiet upon the assurance of the Governor that the French shall be disarmed. The Governor is to go to the Parliament House at 6 to-night, and much trouble is expected.

☞ The New-Jersey M. E. Conference, after being in session in Burlington nine days, adjourned on Friday afternoon to meet next year in Camdem. Some 5,000 members have been added to the Church during the past year. The Treasurer of the Conference Missionary Society reported that the collections of the year exceeded $4,000, and $350 were raised at the University. Among the appointments we notice, Rev. W. E. Perry for Plainfield, and Rev. J. O Rogers for Salem.

MUNICIPAL SPECULATION.—The City of Houston has resolved to purchase negroes to work upon the roads leading into the interior. To do this, the Corporation has issued $15,000 in bonds, at 10 per cent, interest.

CHLOROFORM may be prepared by any person who chooses to take the trouble to follow the directions of this receipt.

R.—Bleaching powder (hyperchloride of lime) 4lbs.
Water 12lbs.
Alcohol 12lbs.

Mix in a large retort or still, and distil over so long as a dense fluid, which sinks in water, with which it comes over, is produced This dense fluid is the chloroform When pure (as it ought to be for medical use), it is perfectly insoluble in water. It produces insensibility much more rapidly than ether.—Wrights Paper.

SEVEN DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

Arrival of the Cambria.

General Intelligence.

England is quiescent, but with the less glowing prospect of the revival of trade.

In Ireland, Mr. Duffy's re-trial is proceeding with, but the result will not be know till to-morrow.

The accounts received this morning from the Southern and Western Provinces as to the spread of destitution and disease has become really alarming. In Galway the Cholera is said to have supervened on Dysentery, and yet, says our reporter, there is no medical aid. The people are left to perish—without food, without medicine—even a grave is not to be had for money. Truly this is lamentable in a Christian land.

The reports for the past year from the District Poor Law Inspectors to the Commissioners at Dublin, record a volume of misery most dispiriting to glance over. Every page of this book, which is about to be laid before Parliament, teems with evidence of the exemplary patience of the unhappy peasantry of Ireland under sufferings that have had no parallel in the history of the civilized world.

A clergyman from the parish of Connaught says the whole district is almost a wilderness. "Out of 12,000 inhabitants, which was the population of this parish 4 years ago, I am sure we have not 6,000 at present; and as for landholders, I am positive there is not one out of five remaining, so that the creatures that still live and move here may be termed rather an accumulation of death and dying humanity. than what is generally meant by a population.

France is tranquil, but all parties are preparing for a great electional struggle.

The Democratic and Socialist journals have published the following announcement from the representatives of the Montagne: "In the serious circumstances in which we are now placed, on the eve of the Elections; at this moment, when we have need of all our forces against the coalition of all the enemies of the Republic, the ex-magistracy has taken upon itself the task of crushing the Press of the People. The Revolution Democratique et Social has again been condemned to three years imprisonment and 10,000f. fine, and the Peuple to 6,000f. fine and its Editor to five years' imprisonment Thus fine assumes the proporties of confiscation and imprisonment, those of homicide, attacking not only the property, but the very life of the Press This is a rigor, an inveteracy without example even in the worst time of the Monarchy; it is war to the deaths Our duty, the duty of all Republicans, therefore, is to come to the succor of the journals thus stricken. The representatives of the montagne subscribe a sum of 500f. in favor of each journal, and appeal to all the Democrats of Paris and the Departments."

Hostilities having recomenced between Demark and Prussia, a Danish fleet in attempting to capture the fortress Eckernford on the 5th inst. were utterly defeated, and a line-of-battle ship and a frigate fell into the hands of the former commander. The line-of-battle ship grounded, and taking fire, shortly after exploded with 700 on board.

NATIONAL WASHINGTON MONUMENT.—We learn from Mr. Dougherty, the superintendent of this stupendous column was completed on Friday, and the laying of the marble work been already commenced. The foundation of this mighty structure has been completed in a most substantial and workmanlike manner. (Nat. Int

EXTRAORDINARY SURGICAL OPERATION.—Week before last an invalid girl named Margaret Shiels, aged 14, was sent up from Deer Island to the Massachusetts General Hospital, at the suggestion of Dr. Moriarity, to submit her mysterious and painful case to the professional judgment of the eminent surgeons and physicians of that excellent institution. It appears from the statement she made, that about half the time during the last four years she has experienced very curious sensations in her stomach, such as, at one time, a leaden, choking obstruction, at another a sickening feeling, which seemed to absorb the vigor of all her physical powers, producing fainting fits, spasms, and at others, a sort of inward life, a squirming, indefinable something, all of which were daily becoming more serious in their nature. She stated that her only brother in England was strangled to death, about two years ago, by a tape-worm. This piece of information, taken in connection with the sypton s above described, soon convinced Drs. Warren, Channing, Stevens and Bowditch, that her comslaint was the same as her brothers and that unless the worm was extracted, she also must inevitably fall its victim. After deliberate consultation, these eminent physicians decided to make a direct incision into Margaret's stomach, and seize the reptile, if possible, with a pair of hooked tweezers—a matter of life or death to the patient. She was, with great reluctance, induce to inhale the ether; when fully insensible, Dr. Warren applied the knife with wonderful precision and skill; and, within the space of sixty seconds, he inserted his instruments and brought out to the astonishment of all, a coil of living tape worm, forty-one feet eleven inches in length! It was of a blue, ish color, of about the size of a coarse thread.—So completely was the patient under the influence of the ether, that she observed, on coming to her senses: 'O! I have had a pleasant dream, and feel relieved!' The wound was dressed with great care, and she has scarcely complained of pain since the operation. This, we are told, is the only case on record where the tape-worm has been literally cut from the human stomach: and for this operation humanity and the scientific world are indebted to the extraordinary skill of Dr. Warren. All honor and praise be his! We are informed that out of a company of some thirty practitioners witnessing the operation, there was not a face unvisited by tears of joy and gratitude as they beheld this triumph of modern surgical science.

YOUTHFUL PERSEVERENCE.—A lad about thirteen years of age arrived in this City by the cars night before last. His story, though brief, is an interesting one, and exhibits a strength of close-clinging affection, which it is a pleasure to record. His mother and sister left Ireland about a year ago for America, and the boy being then a bound apprentice, was not permitted to accompany them, although he desired to do so. Some eight months after their departure, the little fellow, without a penny in his pocket, ran away from his master, walked to Dublin City, told his story to the Captain of an American ship, and tearfully solicited his aid in taking him to his mother. The Captain told him that the United States was a very large country, and should he get there he might not find the object of his search; but the little 'Japhet' was determined to 'try,' and finally got the Captain's consent to take him across the ocean in the capacity of a second cook. The vessel arrived at New-York, and the little fellow, all alone, searched the great Metropolis throughout—enquiring of the Irish families of the whereabouts of his mother; but to no purpose—no one knew her. During this search, which continued more than a week, the little fellow met his current expenses by doing chores in the streets, such as holding horses, &c.—for a lad of that kind could not be dishonest Failing in New-York, he worked his passage on a steamer to Albany—reached that City, and worked his way to Buffalo, thence to Sandusky, and on to Cincinnati—making a journey, in all, of about four thousand miles, in search of his mother: Upon his arrival here, he immediately sought out the Irish residents, and, for the first time, heard of the object of his long and singular pilgrimage. He learned that his mother and sister had lived in Cincinnati, but about a month since had moved to Vanceburg, Ky. The little 'Japhet,' in the fullness of his joy, was determined that an hour should not be lost, and went to Captain Grace, of the Brilliant, yesterday, and told his story. The Captain took him on board, gave him some money and provided him comfortably for the passage, and doubtless ere this, the little fellow is in the arms of the loved ones of his search. It is a fact not unworthy of record, presenting, as it does, a pleasant incident in the train of the story, that while on board the Brilliant, the boy was recognized by a gentleman who was passenger on the same vessel upon which he crossed the ocean, fully corroborated his story!—Cincinnati Commercial,

SMART WEED.—Smart weed made into tea is said to be a good remedy for cholic. When cut and dried in full bloom, it is said to be an excellent preventative for botts in horses, and an excellent physic likewise. About one pound per week should be given.

A patent California cook stove has been invented, which may be folded up and put into a pair of saddle bags.

Ingenuity of Science.

Who would have imagined, when gun-cotton was produced by Mr. Schonbein, and the world was threatened with destruction by being blown up by this terrible explosive material, that within a few months it should be discovered to be an excellent styptic for dressing cuts and wounds? But so it is Dissolved in ether and applied to the severest cut, it forms a covering of singular closeness and adhesiveness, protects the wound and excludes atmospheric air, or any irritating matter, so that the process of healing is carried on speedily and effectually; and when all is well, the 'protectionist,' having done its duty, is removed. So also has Dr. Simpson, of Edingburgh, we are informed, similarly applied chloroform and gutta percha! This mixture, in a liquid condition, at about the consistence of fine honey, is kept in a phial or bottle, and when an accident of the kind to which we have referred occurs, it is simply poured upon the wound; chloroform instantly evaporates, and the gutta percha remains a perfectly flexible second skin, over the injured part, preserving it for weeks if necessary, without the need of dressings, bandages, or any other appliance, till there is no more occasion for this admirable agent. When we call to mind the much human pain that will thus be alleviated, how many cures effected were hitherunto there have been danger and uncertainty, and how a number of surgical operations will be simplified it may not be considered too much to rank such inventions among the most valuable that could be discovered and applied for the benefit of mankind.—London Literary Gazette.

Fremont's Nondescript.

MR. ITEMS:—Your allusion, a day or two since, to the great Nondescript now exhibiting in Broadway, reminded me of something I had seen a few weeks ago in one of the streets of our City, and I cannot resist taking the liberty of asking your assistance in a very interesting inquiry. I saw in Allen-st. before an old ash-cart a wonderful looking beast, which, in my excess of verdance, I took to be a horse, but which I am now convinced could have been no such thing. The animal had curiously curled hair, resembling more the wool of a brown sheep than anything else. The hair—no—wool I should say, for I am convinced it was wool, on the fetlock was exceedingly long and strange to behold. I looked at it a considerable time, but a press of business calling me, I was unable to make any inquiries of the driver as to the origin of his animal.

The descriptions of the wonderful creature captured by Col. Fremont—I say 'descriptions' for I have not seen it—nothing, nothing I assure you has prevented me from examining so rare an object but a press of business—struck me very forcibly as answering exactly to the beast I saw in Allen-st. in every particular except the tail and the mane. I have most anxiously endeavored to find the strange ash-cart animal, but (what I deem a very curious circumstance) ever since the wonderful nondescript has been on exhibition it has been nowhere seen. Now if it could be found, perhaps some light could be thrown upon the parentage of these wonderful quadrapeds, existing, as I am well satisfied, in parts of our land so remote from each other. It would be interesting to discover the causes of the one having hair on his tail and neck and the other none. If inquiries are made for the owner of the ash-cart, we may obtain information of his curious animal, and I doubt not, greatly advance the ends of Natural Science. Very truly yours. INQUIRER.

[N. Y. Tribune.

The New-York papers have at length discovered the remarkable animal said to have been captured by Col. Fremont, on the Rocky Mountains, to be an arrant humbug. Of coarse it is. This identical animal was exhibited at Pittsburg about a year and a half since, and we feel authorized in saying that the exhibition did not make sufficient to buy the animal oats—to say nothing of its owner's whiskey—Pittsburg Chronicle.

Vegetable Instinct.

If a pan of water be placed within six inches on either side of a stem of a young pumpkin or vegetable marrow, it will in the course of the night approach it, and will be found in the morning with one of its leaves floating on the water. This experiment may be continued nightly until the plant begins to fruit. If a prop be placed within six inches of a young convulvulus or scarlet runner, it will find it, although the prop be shifted daily. If, after it has twined some distance up the prop, it be unwound and twined in the opposite direction, it will return to its original position or die in the attempt; yet, notwithstanding, if two of these plants grow near each other, and have no stake around which they can entwine, one of them will alter the direction of its spiral, and they will twine round each other. Duhamel placed some kidney beans in a cylinder of moist earth; after a short time they began to germinate of course sending the plume upwards to the light and the root down into the soil. After a few days the cylinder was turned one-fourth round, and again and again this was repeated, until an entire revolution of the cylinder had been completed. The beans were then taken out of the earth, and it was found that both the plume and radicle had bent to accommodate themselves to every revolution, and the one, in its effort to ascend perpendicularly, and the other to descend, had foymed a perfect spiral. But although the natural tendendency of the roots is downwards, if the soil beneath be dry, and any damp substance be above, the roots will ascend to reach it.—Farmers' Magazine.

To Destroy Caterpillars.

MESSRS. EDITORS:—I have heard much inquiry concerning the best method of destroying the worm, or caterpillar, which makes such havoc with our apple and peach tree; the course I pursue is as follows:—I take a half inch auger, and bore as nearly as I can judge, into the heart of the tree, fill the hole with sulpher, plug it up with a branch cut from the same tree, make it air tight, and in forty-eight hours the result is seen. This plan I have found efficient, and if the information is of any importance to you, it is at your service.—Boston Cultivator.

CAUTION EXTRA

A man by the name of CLAPP has engaged with a young man of the name of S. P. Townsend, and uses his name to put up a Sarsaparilla, which they call Dr. Townsend's Sarsaparilla, denominating it GENUINE, Original, etc. This Townsend is no doctor, and never was; but was formerly a worker on railroads, canals, and the like. Yet he assumes the title of Dr., for the purpose of gaining credit for what he is not. This is to caution the public not to be deceived, and purchase none but the GENUINE ORIGINAL OLD Dr. Jacob Townsend's Sarsaparilla, having on it the Old Dr's. likeness, his family coat of arms, and his signature across the coat of arms.

Principal Office, 102 Nassau st., New York City

OLD DR. JACOB TOWNSEND,

THE ORIGINAL DISCOVERER OF THE

Genuine Townsend Sarsaparilla.

Old Dr. Townsend is now about 70 years of age, and has long been known as the AUTHOR and DISCOVERER of the GENUINE ORIGINAL "TOWNSEND SARSAPARILLA." Being poor, he was compelled to limit its manufacture, by which means it has been kept out of market, and the sales circumscribed to those only who had proved its worth, and known its value. It had reached the ears of many, nevertheless, as those persons who had been healed of sore diseases, and saved from death, proclaimed its excellence and wonderful

HEALING POWER.

Knowing, many years ago that he had, by his skill, science and experience, devised an article which would be of incalculable advantage to mankind when the means would be furnished to bring it into universal notice, when its inestimable virtues would be known and appreciated. This time has come, the means are supplied; this GRAND AND UNEQUALLED PREPARATION is manufactured on the largest scale, and is called for throughout the length and breadth of the land, especially as it is found incapable of degeneration or deterioration.

Unlike young S. P. Townsend's, it improves with age, and never changes, but for the better: because it is prepared on scientific principles by a scientific man. The highest knowledge of Chemistry and the latest discoveries of the art, have all been brought into requisition in the manufacture of the Old Dr's Sarsaparilla. The Sarsaparilla root, it is well known to medical men, contains many medicinal properties and some properties which are inert or useless, and others, which if retained in preparing it for use, produce fermentation and acid, which is injurious to the system. Some of the properties of Sarsaparilla are so volatile, that they entirely evaporate and are lost in the preparation, if they are not preserved by a scientific process, known only to those experienced in its manufacture. Moreover, these volatile principles, which fly off in vapor, or as an exhalation, under heat, are the very essential medical properties of the root, which give to it all its value.

Any person can boil or stew the root till they get a dark-colored liquid, which is more from the coloring matter in the root than from any thing else; they can then strain this insipid or vapid liquid, sweeten with sour molasses, and then call it "SARSAPARILLA EXTRACT or SYRUP." But such is not the article known as the

GENUINE OLD DR. JACOB TOWNSEND'S SARSAPARILLA.

This is so prepared, that all the inert properties of the Sarsaparilla root are first removed, every thing capable of becoming acid or of fermentation, is extracted and rejected; then every particle of medical virtue is secured in a pure and concentrated form; and thus it is rendered incapable of losing any of its valuable and healing properties. Prepared in this way, it is made the most powerful agent in the

Cure of innumerable diseases.

Hence the reason why we hear commendations on every side in its favor by men, women, and children. We find it doing wonders in the cure of CONSUMPTION, DYSPEPSIA, and LIVER COMPLAINT, and in RHEUMATISM, SCROFULA, PILES, COSTIVENESS, all CUTANEOUS ERUPTIONS, PIMPLES, BLOCTHES, and all affections arising from

IMPURITY OF THE BLOOD.

It possesses a marvellous efficacy in all complaints arising from Indigestion, from Acidity of the Stomach, from unequal circulation, determination of blood to the head, palpitation of the heart, cold feet and hands, cold chills and hot flashes over the body. It has not its equal in Colds and Coughs; and promotes easy expectoration and gentle perspiration, relaxing stricture of the lungs, throat, and every other part.

But in nothing is its excellence more manifestly seen and acknowledged then in all kinds and stages of

FEMALE COMPLAINTS.

It works wonders in cases of Fluor Albus or Whites, Falling of the Womb, Obstructed, Suppressed, or Painful Menses, Irregularity of the menstrual periods, and the like; and is as effectual in curing all the forms of Kidney Diseases.

By removing obstructions, and regulating the general system it gives tone and strength to the whole body, and thus cures all forms of

Nervous diseases and debility,

and thus prevents or relieves a great variety of other maladies, as Spinal irritation, Neuralgia, St. Vitus' Dance Swooning, Epileptic Fits, Convulsions, &c.

It cleanses the blood, excites the liver to healthy action, tones the stomach, and gives good digestion relieves the bowels of torpor and constipation, allays inflammation, purifies the skin, equalises the circulation of the blood, producing gentle warmth equally all over the body, and the insensible perspiration; relaxes all strictures and tightness, removes all obstructions, and invigorates the entire nervous system. Is not this then

The medicine you pre-eminently need?

But can any of these things be said of S. P. Townsend's inferior article? This young man's liquid is not to be

COMPARED WITH THE OLD DR'S,

because of one GRAND FACT, that the one is INCAPABLE of DETERIORATION, and

NEVER SPOILS,

while the other DOES; souring, fermenting, and blowing the bottles containing it into fragments; the sour, acid liquid exploding and damaging other goods! Must not this horrible compound be poisonous to the system?—What! put acid into a system already diseased with acid! What causes Dyspepsia but acid? Do we not all know that when food sours in our stomachs what mischiefs it produces? flatulence, heartburn palpitation of the heart, liver complaint, diarrhœa, dysentery, colic, and corruption of the blood? What is Scrotula but an acid humor in the body? What produces all the humors which bring on Eruptions of the Skin, Scald Head, Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, White Swellings, Fever Sores, and all ulcerations internal and external? It is nothing under heaven, but an acid substance, which sours, and thus spoils all the fluids of the body, more or less. What causes Rheumatism but a sour or acid fluid which insinuates itself between the joints and elsewhere, irritating and inflaming the delicate tissues upon which it acts? So of nervous diseases, of impurity of the blood, or deranged circulations, and nearly all the ailments which afflict human nature.

Now is it not horrible to make and sell, and infinitely worse to use this

SOURING, FERMENTING, ACID "COMPOUND" OF S. P. TOWNSEND,

and yet he would fain have it understood that Old Dr. Jacob Townsend's Genuine Original Sarsaparilla, is an IMITATION of his inferior preparation!!

Heaven forbid that we should deal in an article which would bear the most distant resemblance to S. P. Townsend's article! and which should bring down upon the Old Dr. such a mountain load of complaints and criminations from Agents who have sold, and purchasers who have used S. P. Townsend's FERMENTING COMPOUND.

We wish it understood, because it is the absolute truth, that S. P. Townsend's article and Old Dr. Jacob Townsend's Sarsaparilla are heaven-wide apart, and infinitely dissimilar; that they are unlike in every particular, having not one single thing in common.

As S. P. Townsend is no doctor, and never was, is no chemist, no pharmaceutist—knows no more of medicine or disease than any other common, unscientific, unprofessional man, what guarantee can the public have that they are receiving a genuine scientific medicine, containing all the virtues of the articles used in preparing it, and which are incapable of changes which might render them the AGENTS of Disease instead of health.

But what else should be expected from one who knows nothing comparatively of medicine or disease! It requires a person of some experience to cook and serve up even a common decent meal. How much more important is it that the persons who manufacture medicine, designed for should know well the medical properties of plants, the best manner of securing and concentrating their healing virtues, also an extensive knowledge of the various diseases which affect the human system, and how to adapt remedies to these diseases!

It is to arrest frauds upon the unfortunate, to pour balm into wounded humanity, to kindle hope in the despairing bosom, to restore health and bloom, and vigor into the crushed and broken, and to banish infirmity that OLD DR. JACOB TOWNSEND has SOUGHT and FOUND the opportunity and means to bring his

within the reach, and to the knowledge of all who need it, that they may learn and know, by joyful experience, its

Transcendent Power to Heal.

DR. JACOB TOWNSEND. NEW YORK, Oct. 5, 1848.

WALKED ACROSS THE ROOM

with the aid of crutches. Since then, I have walked in the street: have gone alone from 36 Spruce-street to the Park; thence to Lovejoy's Hotel and back. I have been to 85 Nassau street two different times, and am now frequently visiting my neighbors. During all this time, I have taken but two bottles of Old Dr. Townsend's Sarsaparilla. Oct. 4. I procured another bottle to-day (5th Oct.) I walked twice across the floor without the aid of crutches. I have also nearly recovered from obstruction of water, which gave me great distress. The pain in my back has likewise left me. I and my family have no earthly reason to ascribe my recovery to any other cause but to

OLD DR JACOB TOWNSEND'S SARSAPARILLA.

ALEX. WELSH, 36 Spruce-st.

P. S.—Several able physicians despaired of my ever walking or even raising myself from my bed again.

JUST PUBLISHED.
ALLEN'S COMPEND OF AMERICAN AGRICULTURE.

R. L. ALLEN, Esq., author of the popular work entitled 'Domestic Animals, their Diseases and Remedies,' of which thirteen editions have been published in twelve months, has, after years of practical experience and close investigation, completed his Great Work of Practical Agriculture, illustrated by about 100 engravings. The work will be bound handsomely and substantially in cloth, and furnished at one dollar, single copies, can be sent by mail to any part of the United States.

This work, we most fully believe, is destined to have a more widely extended circulation than any work of the kind heretofore published. Mr. Allen, knowing the wants of the community, has met those wants in a plain, concise and familiar manner, and has made a work intelligible to all. It will be a book for

THE WHOLE PEOPLE,

Its cheapness will cause a large sale, and it will be a Book for Everybody, as well for the man who consumes the products of the earth, as for him who raises them.

150 AGENTS,

active, intelligent and honest, are wanted, to sell this book in every state in the Union.

UNDERTAKING IN GENERAL.

IT is an old maxim "a bird in the hand is worth two in the bush," ie. an advantage, to the Public to have Coffins ready made, of all sizes and descriptions, trimmed and polished in the latest styles. The undersigned having been connected with the undertaking and furnishing business for five years, (having furnished five hundred Coffins in that time,) We would refer to our former patrons that the public may be satisfied we have given entire satisfaction in every case; also having had private instruction from the most experienced undertaker in the city of New York in his styles of making and trimming; We now flatter ourselves, we are prepared to give entire satisfaction to the Citizens of Plainfield and vicinity.

We have been to considerable expense in fitting up, that none may be disappointed we would respectfully solicil the Public generally to give us a call before purchasing elsewhere.

J. W. S. MARTIN, Principal.

Also, Cabinet, Chair, & Sofa,

MANUFACTORY.

We would inform the Citizens of Plainfield and vicinity that we have from a thousand to fifteen hundred dollars worth of ready made Furniture on hand, consisting of Black Walnut, Maple, and Mahogony, to suit the taste, and pocket.

Our motto is Cheap for the "Chemicals."

Thankful for the encouragement we have already received; having had a perfect rush ever since we refused that proposal which was directly opposed to the peoples interests: We are going through the world on our own hook, without any incombrance.

EXECUTED WITH NEATNESS AND DISPATCH, ON REASONABLE TERMS.

THE WIFE.

BY JOHN G. WHITTIER.

She was a beautiful girl, when I first saw her. She was standing up at the side of her lover, at the marriage altar. She was slightly pale—yet, ever and anon as the ceremony proceeded, a faint tinge of crimson crossed her beautiful cheek, like the reflections of a sunset cloud upon the clear waters of a quiet lake. Her lover, as he clasped her hand within his own, gazed on her for a few moments, with unmingled admiration, and the warm and eloquent blood shadowed at intervals his manly forehead, and "melted into beauty on his lip."

And they gave themselves to one another in the presence of Heaven, and every heart blessed them, as they went their way rejoicing in their love.

Years passed on, and I again saw those lovers. They were seated together where the light of sunset stole through the half-closed and crimson curtain, lending a richer tint to the delicate carpeting and the exquisite embellishment of the rich and gorgeous apartment. Time had slightly changed them in outward appearance. The girlish bouyancy of the one had, indeed, given place to the greater perfection of womanhood, and her lip was somewhat paler, and a faint line of care was slightly perceptible upon her brow. Her husband's brow, too, was marked somewhat more deeply than his age might warrant; anxiety, ambition, and pride had grown over it, and left the traces upon it; a silver hue was mingled with the dark of his hair, which had become thin around his temples, almost to baldness. He was reclining on his splendid ottoman with his face half hidden by his hand, as if he feared that the dread and troubled thoughts which oppressed him were visible upon his features.

'Edward, you are ill to-night,' said his wife, in a low, sweet, half-inquiring voice, as she laid her hands upon his own.

Indifference from those we love is terrible to the sensitive bosom. It is as if the sun of Heaven refused its wonted cheerfulness, and glared upon us with a cold, dim, and forbidden glance. It is dreadful to feel that the only being of our love reuses to ask our sympathy, that he broods over the feelings which he scorns or fears to reveal, dreadful to watch the convulsive features and the gloomy brow, the indefinable shadows of hid len emotions, the involuntary sigh of sorrow in which we are forbidden to participate, and whose character we cannot know.

She essays once more. 'Edward,' she said slowly, mildly, and affectionately, 'the time has been when you were willing to confide your secret joys and sorrows to one, who has never, I trust, betrayed your confidence. Why, then, my dear Edward, is this cruel reserve? You are troubled, and yet refuse to tell me the cause.'

Something of returning tenderness softened, for an instant, the cold severity of the husband's features, but it passed away, and a bitter smile was his only reply.

Time passed on, and the twain were separated from each other. The husband sat gloomy and alone in the damp cell of a dungeon. He had followed ambition as his God, and had failed in a high career. He had mingled with men whom his heart loathed; he had sought out the fierce and wronged spirits of the land, and had breathed into them the madness of revenge. he had drawn his sword against his country; he had fanned rebellion to a flame, and it had been quenched in human blood. He had fallen, miserably fallen, and was doomed to die the death of a traitor.

The door of the dungeon opened, and a light form entered and threw herself into his arms. The softened light of sunset fell upon the pale brow and wasted cheek of his once beautiful wife.

'Edward, my dear Edward,' she said, 'I have come to save you; I have reached you after a thousand difficulties, and I do thank God, my purpose is nearly executed.'

Misfortune had softened the proud heart of manhood, and as the husband pressed his pale wife to his bosom, a tear trembled on his eyelash. 'I have not deserved this kindness,' he murmured, in the choked tones of agony.

'Edward,' said his wife in an earnest but faint and low voice, which indicated extreme and fearful debility, 'we have not a moment to lose. By an exchange of garments you will be enabled to pass out unnoticed. Haste, or we may be too late. Fear nothing for me, I am a woman, and they will not injure me for my efforts in behalf of a husband dearer than life itself.'

'But, Margaret,' said the husband, 'you look sadly ill. You cannot breathe the air of this dreadful cell.'

'Oh, speak not of me, my dear Edward,' said the devoted woman. 'I can endure anything for your sake. Haste, Edward, and all will be well,' and she aided with a trembling hand to disguise the proud form of her husband in a female garb.

'Farewell, my love, my preserver,' whispered the husband in the ear of the disguised wife, as the officer sternly reminded the supposed lady that the time allotted to her visit had expired. 'Farewell! we shall meet again,' responded the wife; and the husband passed out unsuspected, and escaped the enemies of his life.

They did meet again—the wife and husband; but only as the dead may meet—in the awful communings of another world. Affection had borne up her exhausted spirit, until the last great purpose of her exertions was accomplished in the safety of her husband—and when the bell tolled on the morrow, and the prisoner's cell was opened, the guards found, wrapped in the habiliments of their destined victim the pale, but beautiful corpse of the devoted WIFE.

A THOUGHT.—A seed, buried in the earth for centuries, may contain the power of vitality, and by the action of light and heat, spring up and yield an abundance of fruit. A thought casually dropped—in the corner of a letter—at the bottom of a newspaper column—or amid a crowd of juveniles—may remain unproductive for years, and at last spring up to gladden and refresh thousands. A thought may be remembered forever. Think of this, ye who are feeding the immortal mind and stamping its destiny. Let not an impure sentence go forth from your pen or your lips. Drop everywhere the good seeds of truth and they will not be lost. The word of reproof—the judicious counsel—the pleasant suggestion—the earnest advice—will be recalled at a future day. Think right, and scatter broadcast the thoughts that will spring up to everlasting life.—Portland Umpire.

Hoaxing A Widow in Church.

There is no part in the world where a new preacher, whether a new light or a blue light, produces a greater sensation than in Boston, though after he has gone, the people may relapse into their quiet paths; still they have no objections to wander out of them in search of any novelty in religion, and if they do not always change their belief with every fresh importation, they at least pay him the compliment of hearing what he has got to say.

There happened to be, a few years since one of those wandering theological meteors blazing around Boston, and people from every lane and by-way looked to see it, not with pieces of smoked glass in their fingers, but with ten cent pieces and York shillings, to drop into the green box, by way of adding fuel to the flames. So great was the crowd that the ordinary rules about the quiet possession of the pews, for which the owners had paid, was entirely broken down; every body took that seat which suited him best, and those who came late sat down in the places left to them by those who came early.

One pleasant Sunday morning Mackay went to church betimes, took his seat in a central pew, just under the shadow of the pulpit, and sat bolt upright, with his arms extended with an apparent degree of unnatural rigidity down by his side. He was presently surrounded by half a dozen females nearly all of whom were strangers to his person, and in a little time the church was full to overflowing. The psalm was sung, the prayer said, the sermon delivered in the preacher's best style. He dwelt particularly upon the requirements of the great precept of brotherly love, upon the beauty of benevolence, on the pleasure which arises not only from clothing the naked and feeding the hungry, but from attention to the minute and graceful courtesies of life by which the thorny path is softened and adorned. In the language of critics in such matters, "there was not a dry eye in the place;" the appeal found its way to every heart. All of Mackays immediate neighbors were sensibly affected; he wept with them; the big tears chased each other down his cheeks. While every one else was busy with their handkerchiefs wiping away the water that the orator, like a second Moses had, by the strokes of eloquence, caused to gush from their flinty hearts. Mackay held his arms stiff and straight, while half a glass of liquid suffused his face. The dried eyes of his female friends were not slow to observe this; for in addition to the evident signs of deep feeling which he exhibited, his face was rather a handsome face. He wriggled, fidgetted, looked confused and interesting, but raised no hand, searched for no handkerchief, and seemed to be in great distress. At length a young widow lady, who sat beside him, remarked that he was ill at ease, and—Heaven bless the female heart! it always melts at any mysterious sorrow—after one or two downcast looks and fluttering pauses, she said in an under tone:

"Pray, sir, is there anything the matter with you? You appear to be unwell."

"Ah! madam," breathed Mackay in a whisper, "I am a poor paralytic, and have lost the use of my arms. Though my tears have flowed in answer to the touching sentiments of the pastor, I have not the power to wipe them away."

In an instant a fair hand was thrust into a reticule, and a white handkerchief scented with the otto of rose, was applied to Mackay's eyes; the fair Samaritan seeming to rejoice in the first opportunity of practicing what had been so recently preached, appeared to polish them with right good will. When she had done, Mackay looked unutterable obligations, but whispered that she would increase them a thousand fold if she would as it wanted it very much, condescend to wipe his nose. The novelty of the request was thought nothing of, the widow was proud of the promptitude she had displayed in succoring the distressed; and to a person who has done you one kind action, the second seems always easy. Her white hand and whiter handkerchief were raised to Mackay's cutwater, but the moment that it was completely enveloped in the folds of the cambric, he gave such a sneeze as made the whole church ring; it was in fact more like a neigh. The minister paused in giving out the hymn; the deacons put on their spectacles to see what was the matter; and in an instant every eye was turned upon Mackay and the fair Samaritan, the latter of whom, being so intent upon her object, or so confounded by the general notoriety she had acquired, still convulsively grasped the nose.

There were hundreds of persons in the church who knew Mackay and his propensities well, and a single glance was sufficient to convince them that a successful hoax had been played off for their own amusement. A general titter now ran round the place, "nods, becks, and wreathed smiles," were the order of the day. Men held down their heads and laughed outright, and the ladies had to stuff the scented cambric into their mouths, which had been so recently applied to the sparkling founts above. At length something like order was restored, the hymn sung, and the blessings given, amid stifled noises of various kinds, when the congregation rose to depart.

The widow, up to this point, feeling strong in the consciousness of having performed a virtuous action upon a good-looking face, heeded not the gaze of the curious, nor the smiles of the mirthful; but what was her astonishment when Mackay rose from his seat, lifted one of his paralytic hands and took his hat from a peg above his head, and with the other began searching his pockets for his gloves. The unkindest cut of all was yet to come, for Mackay, having drawn them on, and opened the pew-door, turned, and bowing to his fair friend, put this question, in a tone the most insinuating, but still loud enough for fifty people to hear:

"Is it not, madam, a much greater pleasure to operate upon a fine-looking Roman nose like mine than upon such a queer little snub as you have?"

PERFECT HAPPINESS.—A laundress, who was employed in the family of one of our former Governors, said to him, with a sigh:

'Only think, your excellency, how little money would make me happy!'

'How little, madam?' says the Governor.

'Oh! dear sir, one hundred dollars would make me perfectly happy.'

'If that is all, you shall have it,' and he immediately gave it to her.

She looked at it with joy and thankfulnes, and, before the Governor was out of hearing, exclaimed:

'I wish I had said two hundred.'

SAILOR AND HIGHWAYMAN.—A sailor was once traveling in a coach which was attacked by robbers.

'Your money,' said one of the robbers to the sailor.

'You shan't have it,' said Jack.

'Then I will blow out your brains.'

'Blow away—I may as well be without brains, as without money. Drive on coachee.'

The Lynn Forum says—"The use of bass-viols in the churches is a bass-violation of the sabbath."

"O, just look out of the window, Mr. Editor, and see those string of men and boys, with poles on their shoulders. What do you suppose they are after?" "They are after fish in the pond, I presume." "No, sir. They are all one after the other" "Begone, you ink-faced wretch"

A countryman very much marked with the small pox applied to a justice for redress in an affair where one of his neighbors had ill treated him; but not explaining the business so clearly as the justice expected, 'Fellow,' said he, in a rage, 'I don't know whether you were innoculated for the small pox or not, but I am sure you have been for stupidity.'—'Why, an't please you,' replied the man, 'perhaps I might, as you say, be innoculated for stupidity; but there was no occasion to perform that on your worship, for you seem to have had it in the natural way.'

PUNCTUATION.—Some gentlemen talking of the inattention of writers to punctuation, it was observed that the lawyers used no stops in their writings. I should think nothing, said one of the company, of their not using commas, semicolons, or colons, but the worst is, they put no periods to their works.

A Good One.

There is an anecdote that William Ladd, the 'Apostle of Peach,' used to tell upon himself with infinite gusto. When the temperance movement first came into notice, Mr. Ladd, though an ardent reformer, was not quite prepared to go the entire pledge. He was willing to eschew rum, gin, brandy, sour cider,' and all that? but he could'nt go the abandonment of his wine. In fact, he had great doubts about the possibility of getting corned on the generous fluid. His wine-cellar was getting low; but every body was signing the pledge, and it must be replenished in a shady way or not at all. Being at Portland about this time, he bought a barrel of fine old wine, and employed 'Uncle Siah,' a well known teamster to haul it to Minot, saying—

'Here, take this barrel of oil with the other articles.'

He reached home first, and after seeing the 'oil' carefully deposited in the cellar, he came out to the door to settle for the hauling.

'Well, Uncle, Siah,' said the Captain, rubbing his hands, 'I really wish I had something good for you to drink; but the temperance folks are making such a confounded noise we a—a—have to banish it entirely from our houses.'

But 'Uncle Siah' had already a brick in his hat, and was holding himself rather unsteadily by the wheel.

'It's n-n-no m-m-matter, Cappen,' he hiccupped, 'n-n-not the least k-k-knose—hic—sequence. I d-d-don't need any—I w-w-was dry. b-b-but I took a g-g-good swig out of your c-c-cask. It's ca—hic—capital oil, Cappen. Pure w-w-winter strained, and no m-m-mistake!'

The Captain came out a rank tee-totaller at the next temperance meeting.

MEAN CASE.—Some years since when money was scarce, and almost every thing was done in the way of trade, a main named Jones called into the grocery and dry goods store of one Mr. Brown, and asked for a darning needle, offering in exchange an egg. After receiving the needle, Jones said:

'Come, sir, ain't yon going to treat?'

'What on such a trade as that?' inqui- Mr. Brown.

'Certainly–a trade's a trade, let it be big or 'little.'

'Well, what will you take?'

'A glass of wine,' said Jones.

The wine was poured out, when the sponge once more said—

'Would it be asking too much to request you to put an egg into this wine? I am very fond of wine and egg.'

Appalled by the man's meanness, the store-kepper took the idental egg which he had received for the darning needle, and handed it to his customer, who, on breaking it into his wine glass, discovered that it contined a double yolk.

'Look here,' said the sponge, 'don't you think you ought to give me another darning needle; this, you see is a double egg.

GOING HIS DEATH.—Capt. Liv, of the Floating Temple, on the occasion of the grand ball the other night, met among the company an old customer of his, who was indebted to the Captain for a bill of groceries of some years standing, who politely reminded him of the matter and requested him to liquidate the liquor bill.

'Can't do it,' replied the debtor.

'Don't mean to say you won't?' suggested the captain.

Well I do,' was the response.

'You're a good stone-cutter, and have some good marble in your yard?' was the further inquiry.

'Yes.'

'Well, if youll make me a tombstone, I'll just die for the sake of getting that debt of you, and call it even.'

'I won't do that, either,' said the customer: and the captain sloped.

The following fact we take from a recent work by a physician. A mother who was uneasy about the health of a child who was out at nurse, dreamed that it had been buried alive. The horrid thought woke her; and she determined to set off for the place without a moment's delay. On her arrival she learned that after a sudden and short illness, the child had died, and had just then been buried. Half frantic from this intelligence, she insisted upon the grave being opened, and the moment the coffin-lid was raised she carried off the child in her arms. He still breathed, and maternal cares restored him to life. The truth of this anecdote has been waranted—we have seen the child so wonderfully rescued–he is now in 1848, a man in the prime of life, and filling an important post.

PLAINFIELD GAZETTE.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Thursday, May 10, 1849.

☞ All communications must bear the name and address of the writer; not for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith, otherwise no attention will be paid to them.

The fundamental principles of our Government are based upon the equal rights of all. The great mass of the people ever have been at heart in favor of these democratic republican principles. The whole history of the people of this country in their seperation from Great Britain, and through all the successive changes of the administrations of our Government, from that period until the present time; show conclusively that they have never lost sight of those democratic principles which are the foundation of our Government. But there has always been, and probably always will be, ambitious individuals seeking their own aggrandisement, at the expense of the rights of the people; who have never ceased to operate on the fears, prejudices, or cupidity of their fellow man, to effect their own ambitious purposes. In a country so vast as ours, and with such a diversity of employments and apparent opposition of interests; it has been no difficult matter to find sufficient numbers who, either from a repugnance to labor, or for the want of employment, or the ten thousand other apparently good and sufficient reasons to be dissatisfied with their condition, to find material sufficient to form a party directly opposed to the true interest of themselves, and of their country.

But notwithstanding all this, it is a great satisfaction to know that the great mass of our countrymen, have ever had at heart the desire of their countrys good; having full knowledge and confidence that in the equal rights of all their own individual rights alone can exist. The consciousness of this is what upholds the liberties of our country, and is what must work out the liberties of all mankind. This is now evident to the greatly increasing number of the intelligent of the great mass of the people of our own country and of the whole world.

These equal rights, and more enlightened and liberal principles, are what actuated the hearts, and guided the minds of the people in their choice of a candidate for President in 1848.

Gen Taylor being the successful hero of one of the most popular wars this country was ever engaged in; all eyes were naturally turned towards him as a candidate for the presidency. And as we have before stated all those by whatever name known, professing and wishing to see sustained democratic principles, knowing that he had always been disconnected with politics, and wishing to make known to the world their opinion of the justness of the war, and also to show that republics are not ungrateful, he was nominated as a candidate for the presidency; not as the candidate of the whig or democratic party, but by independent bodies of men of all parties, who hoping thereby to do away with that spirit of intolerance and proscription that had hitherto too much disgraced the political parties of our country.

Gen. Taylor when called on to respond to these nominations declared he would only accept as a candidate of the people; that he would and did accept nominations from all parties.

It was said and believed that Gen. Taylor was an honest and patriotic soldier who had upheld the honor of his country, believed to be in favor of the enfranchisment of the slave, or at any rate the only candidate who could be relied on in regard to the Wilmot Proviso; this, together with its not being known to which of the two great political parties he belonged, not having made, nor would not make any declaration of principles up to the time of his election, but repeatedly declaring that he would not be the candidate of a party, but of the people; that in the administration of the government he should be guided by the examples of the earlier presidents, that he had nothing but the good of the country at heart, "having no enemies to punish, nor friends to reward;" consequently not being the president of a party he would necessarily be left free to make his appointments from all parties. As he says in his letter to Jas. W. Taylor. "In no case can I permit myself to be the candidate of any party, or yield myself to party schemes."

Letter to F. S. Bronson.—I need hardly add, that I cannot, in any case, permit myself to be brought before the people exclusively by any of the political parties that now so unfortunately divide the country, as their candidate for this office.

Letter to Wm. M. Murphy and others.—I shall offer no active opposition to the use of my name in connexion with this responsible office, as long as they continue to use it thus independent of party distinctions.

Letter to Peter Sken Smith.—In being thus nominated, I must insist on the condition—and my position on this point is immutable—that I shall not be brought forward by them as the candidate of their party, or considered as the exponent of their party doctrines.

First Allison Letter.—I have no private purposes to accomplish—no party projects to build up—no enemies to punish—nothing to serve but my country. * * * If elected, I would not be the mere President of a party.—I would endeavor to act independent of party domination. I should feel bound to administer the government untrammelled by party schemes.

Gen Taylor's Inaugural.—The appointing power vested in the President imposes delicate and onerous duties. So far as it is possible to be informed, I shall make honesty, capacity, and fidelity indispensable prerequisites for the bestowal of office; and the absence of either of these qualities shall be deemed sufficient cause for removal.

We are now told after his election that Gen. Taylor is a whig! And the whigs pretend to claim the offices as a reward for their partizan services in electing him! Gen. Taylor claimed to be elected by and as president of the whig party!!

All men know that Gen. Taylor was not, nor could not be elected as the advocate or exponent of whig principles, they having been repudiated by the great mass of the intelligent, honest and hard working democracy of our country; but because he was the hero of a war which was popular with all who had a spark of patriotism or true democracy in their hearts, and who considered the war just and necessary, to show to the world the necessity of respecting our rights, and because they believed him honest, and that he would faithfully according to the promises above given, carry out those democratic measures that the mass of the people are known to be in favor of.

Now all this is matter of history. Then upon what ground do the whigs claim office? When and where did they make a declaration of principles? Or when and where did Gen. Taylor make a declaration of whig principles, that they should now claim office at his hands? Was he elected by whigs? All know this was not nor could not be done.

We have feebly attempted in this article to set forth that the great mass of the people, having only the good of their country at heart, and having full knowledge and confidence, that in the equal rights of all their own individual rights alone can exist, selected Gen. Taylor for the reasons above given, to see that those rights were fairly and honestly protected and faithfully administered; and woe be unto him if he violates the most solemn and only pledges he did give, and attempts to give us in their place whig principles, which the people always have and always will repudiate.

Whose business is it?

Can any one tell when we are to have the streets laid out, and cleared of rubbish, that are already opened? To say nothing about the impressions that strangers may receive who visit our Village, certainly a due regard to the convenience of our own citizens should induce them to act in this matter. We speak more particularly of those leading from the Rail Road depot, their past and present condition is a disgrace to the public spirit of our citizens.

☞ "Rosa" was received to late for this number, but will appear in our next.

Death of Mr. Elias Day.—Notwithstanding our Legislature at its last session granted an act of incorporation to certain citizens of Newark permitting them to be charitable, yet we percieve by the papers of that place, that a Mr. Elias Day on his return home from the South to see his Mother before he died, (he was in the last stage of consumption) was refused admittance into two hotels in that city, although he begged "for heaven's sake not to be turned away, but to put him into a wash-room, kitchen, or anywhere; I am a human being," he had money and would pay; he was finally taken care of by a Mr. Compton, who acted the good Samaritan although having no special act permitting him to do so! He died during the night.

THIRTY-FIRST CONGRESS.

As there will be no more Congressional elections until August, it may be as well to post the books. The members elected to the new House of Representatives are as follows:

Whig maj. if remaining 66 members are of same politics as in last Congress,		9

This however is not to be expected. The Whigs will probably lose one or more members in North Carolina, and also in Indiana and Maryland. They may gain one or two in Kentucky. A Democratic gain of five members would give the Democrats the House as well as the Senate, which last body they will have by a majority of 8 or 10.

The Senate as now constituted stands thus:

Democrats elected	33
To be elected in Alab. and Illi.	2	35
Whigs elected,		25
Total, with a full Senate		60

It is however to be noted that Mr. Howard, Dem. of Maryland, holds his place by appointment of the Governor, and may be superseded by the new Legislature, which is to be chosen in October next, and convenes on the 31st of December. If a Whig Legislature should be chosen, they would of course elect a Whig to the Senate in place of Mr. Howard.

On the whole, it is plain that the Whigs will have no power to carry any strong party measure in the new Congress, such as an increase of duties on imports, or a repeal of the Sub-Treasury. Even if such a measure could be got through the House, which is not probable, they would be arrested in the Senate. The public may therefore rely on the continuance of the same general policy which has been pursued of late, with so much advantage to the country, and satisfaction to the people. The day of high Tariffs, National Banks, &c. is past. Many of the Whigs, as well as the Democrats, are glad it is so. Certainly from Gen. Taylor's administration, no countenance can be expected to extreme measures.—Journal of Commerce.

Ten Hour Law.

The ten hour law in Maine went into effect last Friday. The law provides that ten hours shall be a legal day's work and no man shall be compelled to perform more except by special contract; from this provision monthly labor and agricultural employments are excepted. No corporation or manufacturer is allowed to employ a minor under 16 more than ten hours a day under the penalty of a fine not exceeding $100

Effect of the Free Trade Tariff in Draining the Country of Specie.—The amount of Specie entered at the New-York Custom House yesterday May 7th. was $902,540. The value of gold dust $2,150.

Fire.—The N. J. Dye and Print Works at Rahway, N. J. took fire about 1 1-2 o'clock P. M. on Saturday 5th inst. in the hot room used for drying the piece from the printing machine. It was soon extinguished. The damage, principally by water, is fully covered by insurance. Loss, $2,000.

What position ought a just government to take in reference to the grant of charters, conferring special privileges? I answer—the ground of general legislation, and consequently the denial of every special application.

The evils of partial legislation—of the grant of monopolies—of chartered and exclusive privileges—cannot be enumerated within our present space; nor shall I attempt to set them all down here. But I invite the reader to examine the statute-books of any of the States of the Union, and to note what passes at every legislative session. In the State of New-York the laws of each session fill a large octavo volume; and this volume is chiefly composed of partial laws—laws not made for all, but for a few resipients of legislative justice or savor.

By some of these laws the claim of this charater require a special law for its adjustment? Because we brought from England with us a law maxim, denying to the subject the right of suing the sovereign. The King is presumed to be incapable of denying a just claim of the subject; and if he will only just mention it to him by an humble petition, and present it to him on bended knee, why, he will get his money from the royal purse. In other words, the King is willing to be dunned, but will not be sued. We have adopted this delicate sentiment, and driven all claimants against the State to become legislative duns. Because a sovereign King cannot be called to answer in a tribunal, presumed to be his subservient creature, and which has no power to coerce him, therefore a citizen of a Republic cannot resort to a court of justice and establish his claim against the State. A citizen, therefore, having a just claim, must petition the Legislature for redress, and must retain some agent to wait upon legislative justice. This latter personage enlightens the representatives of the people by his private conversations, regales them with his wit, and conciliates them with dinners and wine, and other 'creature comforts.' He succeeds.

One claim is disposed of, but many remain, some of which are allowed, some are looked into and forgotten, and others are not examined at all. The persevereing and bold claimnant, having many friends and acquaintances, may get more than he deserves, or nothing at all. This whole procedure is wrong, and arises from the stupid aping of institutions which have no analogy to our own. If the State owe a citizen, it ought to pay him. If it does not one him, it ought not to give him any thing. If it owes and will not pay, the citizen ought to be enabled to sue the State, and, upon a recovery, ought to be paid out of the public treasury. The State condescends to sue the citizen in our courts—why condescend a little further, and be sued in them?

The remedy consists in the enactment of a general law, which shall afford to every citizen the same measure of redress against the State, which the State ordains between its citizens; and the denial to the legislature of the power of allowing any claim to a private citizen. Let justice be done in these cases by the courts.

Another large class of special laws arises from the incorporating of cities and villages, the laying out of highways, incorporating academies, &c. All that is proper to effect in these cases, can be done by general laws. Let, for instance, a general law declare that a village containing a certain number of inhabitants may become a body politic and corporate, by the consent of a certain majority of its inhabitants who are legal voters, to be given in a prescribed manner, with public notice, &c., and filed in some proper office of record—and that when so incorporated, certain powers, well defined by the general law, shall pertain to this municipal corporation.

But there is one branch of special legislation to which I wish more particularly to invite attention; and I would inquire why such legislation is necessary in reference to the business of banking upon safe principles to any particular class of men, why can it not make a general law prescribing the mode in which anybody can enter into this business? If ten or twenty good citizens, under certain restrictions and limitations, can be safely intrusted by a special charter to carry on this business, why cannot all good citizens be intrusted with the same power? If the public are safe in one case, would they not be in the other? If the business were thrown open to all men on the same terms, and under the same restrictions, would any more eventually embark in it than the public wants required? Would not individual sagacity, in this as in all other cases, be found to respond to the demands of the community far better than legislative wisdom? Would not capital be aggregated at such places as the public wants required? If so, what is the objection to general legislation on this subject? I do not now speak of the merits of banking or paper money, but the evils of special legislation.

If banking be a legitimate mode of making gain, then all men who can do so have an equal right to embark in it. If it be an improper mode of acquiring gain, then it ought to be prohibited to all alike. If it can be allowed with safety to any class of men who are able to take stock under a special charter, then it can be safely allowed to all men who are able to take stock under a general law. If banking, as gennerally exercised in this country, is to be continued, the evil to be feared is that it may be allowed to be conducted in a wrong way, and upon false principles; and this evil principle may creep into a general law. If you can shut it out from a special charter in opposition to the selfish interests of the corporators, how much more easily can you not exclude it from a general law? If you allow banking, let it be free, control it by general laws, and thus affirm that what is good and proper for one man or set of men is good and proper for all. But it is objected that there will be an excess of banking. That will correct itself, as does all overdoing of trade and business. In the long run, so much will be done as shall be expedient, and no more, if the general law be wisely framed and property guarded.—Essays on Human Rights.

Arrival of the America.

The French Government has come to the important resolution of an armed intervention to re-instate the Pope at Rome. A force adequate to emergency has already sailed for Civita Vechia.

The warlike contest between these several States of the Continent continues with fury, and with the most disastrous results to all parties engaged.

The Danes are now enforcing a strict blockade of all the German ports, and it is stated that emigrant vessels will not hereafter be allowed to pass unmolested.

Perfect tranquility now prevails here. Loyal addresses from all parts of Upper Canada are pouring into the Governor-General. Both Houses of Parliament are quietly proceeding with business.

The Emancipation Convention.—A telegraphic despatch to the Louisville Courier states that the convention of the friends of Emancipation was organized at Frankfort, Ky., on the morning of the 25th, by the election of Col. Henry Clay, of Bourbon, as President.

Twenty-three counties were represented, and some one hundred and fifty delegates were adopted:

1st. 'That hereditary slavery, as it exists among us, is contrary to the rights of mankind—opposed to the fundamental principles of a free government, inconsistent with a state of sound morality, and hostile to the prosperity of the common wealth, and therefore ought not to be perpetuated.

2d. 'Any scheme of emancipation adopted ought to be prospective, operating on the negroes born after the adoption of the scheme.'

The following points were recomended to be inserted in the new constitution.

1st. 'Absolute prohibition of the importation of slaves into Kentucky. 2d. That complete power should be lodged with the people of Kentucky to perfect, under the constitution, a system of gradual prospective emancipation of the slaves.'

Navigation of the Lakes.—Twenty-four years ago. There was but a single steamboat on the waters of the Upper Lakes. On the opening of the navigation the present season, there were on the entire length of the lakes 140 steamers, 5 barques 93 brigs, 548 schrs., and 128 sloops, with an aggregate tonnage of the United States. Some of the steamboats are of nearly 1,600 tons burden, and of costly construction.

Indication of Public Sentiment.—Twenty-four Thousand, Five Hundred and twenty two citizens of Massachusetts prayed for the commutation of the sentence of Washington Goode. GREAT TELEGRAPHIC FEAT.--The New-Orleans papers of April 21 publish nearly two columns of the foreign news by the Europa, received at St. Johns, New-Brunswick on the 19th, transmitted by Mr O'Reilly's Western line. This is the greatest feat on record. It is not less than 3,000 miles from St. Johns to New-Orleans.

From the city inspector's report, it appears that there were erected 1,191 buildings in the city of New York during 1848 being 655 less than in the preceding year —Journal of Commerce.

INGENIOUS.—E. H Howard, late postmaster at Shepoygan, Wisconsin, has started for California, in a boat wagon of his own construction. The box of the wagon is a boat, set on steel springs, the whole of which is covered with oil-cloth; making a very comfortable house. The establishment is so arranged that, upon reaching a river, the running gears of the wagon can be unshipped in a few minutes, and taken aboard the boat while crossing the stream. This is decidedly the best overland outfit we have noticed.

DUMAS' NEW WORK.

France in the Sixteenth Century.

DIANA OF MERIDOR;

OR THE LADY MONSOREAU.

An Historical Romance.

BY ALEXANDER DUMAS,

Author of "The Count of Monte Cristo," "The Three Guardsmen," etc. etc.

Complete in two large Octavo Volumes of 538 pages, printed on the finest white paper.

WITH NUMEROUS ILRUSTRATIVE ENGRAVINGS

Price for the entire work, $1.

IT is a question whether, for the purpose of inditing a brilliant story, a more happy period of time or implements so ready could have been selected by an author than is comprised within the era of the closing dynasties of the Henries of the House of Valois.

The vestiges of a feudal subserviency, and the power wielded by certain orders, two centuries ago, are in our day, barely discoverable. Then it was the burnished mail, the lance and the gauntlet—now, it is the reaping hook, the ploughshare and the spade; in those times the lord commanded the lives as well as the services of his retainers—in these, the serf is lord equally with he who was once his master. This change is, doubtless, for mankind, a noble and profitable one, but it has stripped life of its romance—its dazzle—its historical splendor. Science, art and civilization have uprooted the lists of the tournament and every trace of chivalry, which spread so bright a halo over the ages gone by; and it is only in perusing the pages of a Scott or a Dumas, that the pictures of those days of prowess and renown are at all presented to our mind.

As in everything he undertakes, Dumas in this instance performs his task admirably. He seizes the period following the decease of the weak, witless Charles IX. when that monarch's brother, under the title of Henry III. has ascended the throne The queen-mother, the cruel Catharine de Medices, has retired from state affairs only the more swiftly to circumvent the destruction of those she suspects. Henry of Navarre, afterwards the great Henry IV. with his consort, flies the court, and is at the extremity of the kingdom, preparing his followers to maintain independence and the Protestant league. In such a state are affairs when the story opens, a story in which the reader will not alone be delighted and astonished by the plot upon plot ingeniously wove into the narrative, but charmed and instructed both by the beauty of style and youthful vigor in which the work is unfolded. Every new book of Dumas' is only a fresh literary gem thrown in the casket, the brightest of which will be pronounced by every person on perusal to be "Diana of Meridor; or the lady of Monsoreau."

☞ Any person in the United States can have a copy of the above work sent them by return of mail, on sending $1 to the publisher.

HOW TO MAKE CREAM CHEESE.—For two cream cheeses, take six quarts of new milk, and one of sweet cream, to which add two or three spoonfuls of rennet, and let it stand until sufficiently firm —spread a linen cloth in a large basin of cold water, lay the curd gently on it, tie the cloth and hang it up to drain four or five hours in a cool place; then change the cloth, and put the curd into a vessel, the circumference of a common plate and press it moderately six or eight hours, when it must be taken out, and turned, and split horizontally with a thread; lay the cloth between the two cakes, and again put them in press for 12 or 14 hours; if then pressed enough which can be ascertained by their firmness, keep them in fresh grass a few days, turning them morning and evening. The price of these cheese, about the fill of a common dining plate, is 25 cents.

EVIL COMPANIONS.—Lord Chief Justice Holt in his younger years was a wild one, and walked for some time, in a path that apparently led to the gallows, rather than to the Bench. Fortunately for himself, and the, world however, he turned a short corner—became a reformed man—a great and good one. But although on relinquishing his dissipated habits, he cut the acquainiance of his abandoned associates he had in after life repeated opportunities of meeting them again One of them arrainged before him for highway robbery and being convicted, sentence of death was passed on him. The Chief Justice, before his execution, took occasion to visit him, and inquire what had become of a certain set which, in early life, they had both been connected. 'Alas,' said the prisioner making a low bow, 'they are all hanged, your lordship, but you and I.'

EMIGRANTS.—More than 23,000 alien passengers have arived at Boston during past eight days.

Plainfield, N. J. 1td.

CAUTION EXTRA

A man by the name of CLAPP has engaged with a young man of the name of S. P. Townsend, and uses his name to put up a Sarsaparilla, which they call Dr. Townsend's Sarsaparilla, denominating it GENUINE, Original, etc. This Townsend is no doctor, and never was; but was formerly a worker on railroads, canals, and the like. Yet he assumes the title of Dr. for the purpose of gaining credit for what he is not. This is to caution the public not to be deceived, and purchase none but the GENUINE ORIGINAL OLD Dr. Jacob Townsend's Sarsaparilla, having on it the Old Dr's. likeness, his family coat of arms, and his signature across the coat of arms.

Principal Office, 102 Nassau st., New York City

OLD DR. JACOB TOWNSEND,

THE ORIGINAL DISCOVERER OF THE
Genuine Townsend Sarsaparilla.

Old Dr. Townsend is now about 70 years of age, and has long been known as the AUTHOR and DISCOVERER of the GENUINE ORIGINAL "TOWNSEND SARSAPARILLA." Being poor, he was compelled to limit its manufacture, by which means it has been kept out of market, and the sales circumscribed to those only who had proved its worth, and known its value. It had reached the ears of many, nevertheless, as those persons who had been healed of sore diseases, and saved from death, proclaimed its excellence and wonderful

HEALING POWER.

Knowing, many years ago, that he had, by his skill, science and experience, devised an article which would be of incalculable advantage to mankind when the means would be furnished to bring it into universal notice, when its inestimable virtues would be known and appreciated. This time has come, the means are supplied; this GRAND AND UNEQUALLED PREPARATION is manufactured on the largest scale, and is called for throughout the length and breadth of the land, especially as it is found incapable of degeneration or deterioration.

Unlike young S. P. Townsend's, it improves with age, and never changes, but for the better: because it is prepared on scientific principles by a scientific man. The highest knowledge of Chemistry, and the latest discoveries of the art, have all been brought into requisition in the manufacture of the Old Dr's Sarsaparilla. The Sarsaparilla root, it is well known to medical men, contains many medicinal properties and some properties which are inert or useless, and others, which if retained in preparing it for use, produce fermentation and acid, which is injurious to the system. Some of the properties of Sarsaparilla are so volatile, that they entirely evaporate and are lost in the preparation, if they are not preserved by a scientific process, known only to those experienced in its manufacture. Moreover, these volatile principles, which fly off in vapor, or as an exhalation, under heat, are the very essential medical properties of the root, which give to it all its value.

Any person can boil or stew the root till they get a dark-colored liquid, which is more from the coloring matter in the root than from any thing else: they can then strain this insipid or vapid liquid, sweeten with sour molasses, and then call it "SARSAPARILLA EXTRACT or SYRUP." But such is not the article known as the

GENUINE OLD DR. JACOB TOWNSEND'S SARSAPARILLA.

This is so prepared, that all the inert properties of the Sarsaparilla root are first removed, every thing capable of becoming acid or of fermentation, is extracted and rejected; then every particle of medical virtue is secured in a pure and concentrated form; and thus it is rendered incapable of losing any of its valuable and healing properties. Prepared in this way, it is made the most powerful agent in the

Cure of innumerable diseases.

Hence the reason why we hear commendations on every side in its favor by men, women, and children. We find it doing wonders in the cure of CONSUMPTION, DYSPEPSIA, and LIVER COMPLAINT, and in RHEUMATISM, SCROFULA, PILES, COSTIVENESS, all CUTANEOUS ERUPTIONS, PIMPLES, BLOCTHES, and all affections arising from

IMPURITY OF THE BLOOD.

It possesses a marvellous efficacy in all complaints arising from Indigestion, from Acidity of the Stomack, from unequal circulation, determination of blood to the head, palpitation of the heart, cold feet and hands, cold chills and hot flashes over the body. It has not its equal in Colds and Coughs; and promotes easy expectoration and gentle perspiration, relaxing stricture of the lungs, throat, and every other part.

But in nothing is its excellence more manifestly seen and acknowledged than in all kinds and stages of

FEMALE COMPLAINTS.

It works wonders in cases of Fluor Albus or Whites, Falling of the Womb, Obstructed, Suppressed, or Painful Menses, Irregularity of the menstrual periods, and the like; and is as effectual in curing all the forms of Kidney Diseases.

By removing obstructions, and regulating the general system, it gives tone and strength to the whole body, and thus cures all forms of

Nervous diseases and debility,

and thus prevents or relieves a great variety of other maladies, as Spinal irritation, Neuralgia, St. Vitus' Dance Swooning, Epileptic Fits, Convulsions, &c.

It cleanses the blood, excites the liver to healthy action, tones the stomach, and gives good digestion, relieves the bowels of torpor and constipation, allays inflammation, purifies the skin, equalises the circulation of the blood, producing gentle warmth equally all over the body, and the insensible perspiration; relaxes all strictures and tightness, removes all obstructions, and invigorates the entire nervous system. Is not this then

The medicine you pre-eminently need?

But can any of these things be said of S. P. Townsend's inferior article? This young man's liquid is not to be

COMPARED WITH THE OLD DR'S,

because of one GRAND FACT, that the one is INCAPABLE of DETERIORATION, and

NEVER SPOILS,

while the other DOES; souring, fermenting, and blowing the bottles containing it into fragments; the sour, acid liquid exploding and damaging other goods! Must not this horrible compound be poisonous to the system?—What! put acid into a system already diseased with acid! What causes Dyspepsia but acid? Do we not all know that when food sours in our stomachs, what mischiefs it produces? flatulence, heartburn, palpitation of the heart, liver complaint, diarrhea, dysentery, colic, and corruption of the blood? What is Scrotula but an acid humor in the body? What produces all the humors which bring on Eruptions of the Skin, Scald Head, Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, White Swellings, Fever Sores, and all ulcerations internal and external? It is nothing under heaven, but an acid substance, which sours, and thus spoils all the fluids of the body, more or less. What causes Rheumatism but a sour or acid fluid which insinuates itself between the joints and elsewhere, irritating and inflaming the delicate tissues upon which it acts? So of nervous diseases, of impurity of the blood, or deranged circulations, and nearly all the ailments which afflict human nature.

Now is it not horrible to make and sell, and infinitely worse to use this

SOURING, FERMENTING, ACID "COMPOUND" OF S. P. TOWNSEND,

and yet he would fain have it understood that Old Dr. Jacob Townsend's Genuine Original Sarsaparilla, is an IMITATION of his inferior preparation!!

Heaven forbid that we should deal in an article which would bear the most distant resemblance to S. P. Townsend's article! and which should bring down upon the Old Dr. such a mountain load of complaints and criminations from Agents who have sold, and purchasers who have used S. P. Townsend's FERMENTING COMPOUND.

We wish it understood, because it is the absolute truth, that S. P. Townsend's article and Old Dr. Jacob Townsend's Sarsaparilla are heaven-wide apart, and infinitely dissimilar; that they are unlike in every particular, having not one single thing in common.

As S. P. Townsend is no doctor, and never was, is no chemist, no pharmaceutist—knows no more of medicine or disease than any other common, unscientific, unprofessional man, what guarantee can the public have that they are receiving a genuine scientific medicine, containing all the virtues of the articles used in preparing it, and which are incapable of changes which might render them the AGENTS of Disease instead of health.

But what else should be expected from one who knows nothing comparatively of medicine or disease! It requires a person of some experience to cook and serve up even a common decent meal. How much more important is it that the persons who manufacture medicine, designed for should know well the medical properties of plants, the best manner of securing and concentrating their healing virtues, also an extensive knowledge of the various diseases which affect the human system, and how to adapt remedies to these diseases!

It is to arrest frauds upon the unfortunate, to pour balm into wounded humanity, to kindle hope in the despairing bosom, to restore health and bloom, and vigor into the crushed and broken, and to banish infirmity that OLD DR. JACOB TOWNSEND has SOUGHT and FOUND the opportunity and means to bring his

within the reach, and to the knowledge of all who need it, that they may learn and know, by joyful experience, its

Transcendent Power to Heal.

DR. JACOB TOWNSEND. NEW YORK, Oct. 5, 1848.

WALKED ACROSS THE ROOM

with the aid of crutches. Since then, I have walked in the street: have gone alone from 36 Spruce-street to the Park; thence to Lovejoy's Hotel and back. I have been to 85 Nassau-street two different times, and am now frequently visiting my neighbors. During all this time, I have taken but two bottles of Old Dr. Townsend's Sarsaparilla. Oct. 4. I procured another bottle to-day (5th Oct.) I walked twice across the floor without the aid of crutches. I have also nearly recovered from obstruction of water, which gave me great distress. The pain in my back has likewise left me. I and my family have no earthly reason to ascribe my recovery to any other cause but to

OLD DR JACOB TOWNSEND'S SARSAPARILLA.

P. S.—Several able physicians despaired of my ever walking or even raising myself from my bed again.

JUST PUBLISHED.
ALLEN'S COMPEND OF AMERICAN AGRICULTURE.

R. L. ALLEN, Esq., author of the popular work entitled 'Domestic Animals, their Diseases and Remedies,' of which thirteen editions have been published in twelve months, has, after years of practical experience and close investigation, completed his Great Work of Practical Agriculture, illustrated by about 100 engravings. The work will be bound handsomely and substantially in cloth, and furnished at one dollar, single copies, can be sent by mail to any part of the United States.

This work, we most fully believe, is destined to have a more widely extended circulation than any work of the kind heretofore published. Mr. Allen, knowing the wants of the community, has met those wants in a plain, concise and familiar manner, and has made a work intelligible to all. It will be a book for

THE WHOLE PEOPLE,

Its cheapness will cause a large sale, and it will be a Book for Everybody, as well for the man who consumes the products of the earth, as for him who raises them.

150 AGENTS,

active, intelligent and honest, are wanted, to sell this book in every state in the Union.

N. B.—A cash capital of from $25 to $50 will be necessary. Address, post paid,

UNDERTAKING IN GENERAL.

IT is an old maxim "a bird in the hand is worth two in the bush," ie. an advantage, to the Public to have Coffins ready made, of all sizes and descriptions, trimmed and polished in the latest styles. The undersigned having been connected with the undertaking and furnishing business for five years, (having furnished five hundred Coffins in that time,) We would refer to our former patrons that the public may be satisfied we have given entire satisfaction in every case; also having had private instruction from the most experienced undertaker in the city of New York in his styles of making and trimming; We now flatter ourselves, we are prepared to give entire satisfaction to the Citizens of Plainfield and vicinity.

We have been to considerable expense in fitting up, that none may be disappointed we would respectfully solicil the Public generally to give us a call before purchasing elsewhere.

The Dead Shot.

Old Gordon, the merchant, sat one afternoon recently in his counting room, sleepily gazing at the columns of a daily journal, and was gradually growing indifferent to all things around him through the medium of a pleasant doze, when he was aroused by an unusual noise outside of the window, and rising cautiously to his feet, he peered earnestly into the small back yard adjoining. This attracted the notice of one of his junior partners, who coming quietly behind him and gazing over his shoulder a moment without seeing anything to satisfy his curiosity, earnestly inquired the cause of the excitement The old gentleman motioning him to silence, and, whispering in his ear said, 'There's a rat in the spout!' and rubbing his hands with quiet satisfaction, intimated also his intention of killing the reptile.

Down stairs into the yard, on tip-toe, went old Gorden, followed as quietly by the junior—and sure enough, there evidently appeared to be something scratching its way up the tin channel to the roof.

'Rap the spout with a stick!' says the old gent, which was promptly done; but no rat came forth. A stick was poked in from below, but without the desired effect, though the inmate appeared to be thrown into a great state of excitement thereby.

In the midst of this gymnastic exercise, it suddenly occurred to the old gent that he had nothing to operate effectively with, in case they ejected the intruder; so the junior was despatched to bring the old gun out of the fire-proof, and slip a few buckshot into it: and a few moments served to mount the old gent upon the window sill, of the adjacent coal-hole, poising skifully in his hand a terrific looking shooting iron, as long as himself.

'Now it's coming!' shouted the junior, exultingly; and the old gent brought the piece promptly to his shoulder, trembling the while with the most intense earnestness, just as a dark object rushed from the bottom of the spout. Slap! bang! went the shooting iron, and the old gentleman pitched back violently through the window. The smoke and report perfectly bewildered the junior, who recovered himself just in time to see old Gorden's head appear above the window ledge, with his face beautifully tattoed with charcoal, and hear him exclaim anxiously—

'Is it killed?'

'Dead as a door-nail!' shouted a voice above their heads, and, gazing up in astonishment, they saw the head of an urchin poked over the roof, while his outspread fingers gyrated pleasantly from the end of his nose. The junior, seized with a sudden suspicion, hurried to the corner where the shot was lodged, and, looking down, exclaimed with some embarrassment—

'Why, it aint no rat, after all?'

'Why!' said the old gent, doubtingly—'gracious me; what is it, then!'

'By thunder?' says the junior, darting through the door—'it's only a stone with a string tied round it.'—Phil. Sunday Dispatch.

May Morning.

Hark the rich melodious swell
That in the heart's most secret cell,
Rings enchantingly!
As if from her crystal home had strayed
A moonlight fay,—and blithely played
Her midnight minstrelsy.

And louder swells the lively notes,
More and more harmonious floats
Upon the quickened ear:
The soft breathing of that strain,
Now dying low—then bursts again
Its loudest, wildest sphere.

Now softly murmuring—dying
As maiden's notes when sadly sighing
In her secret bower,
She dares but breath in lowest word,
For fear a leaf may catch a chord—
Or some blushing flower.

Such a varying strain I heard,
This May-morning from a bird,
High perched upon a tree;
'Til it seemed as poised there,
A fairy in the balmy air,
It sung so bewitchingly.

Soon it flitted o'er the plain,
Uttering its wildest strain—
Methought a spirit bright,
Had the golden portals riven,
And thro' the gates of Heaven,
Ta'en a momentary flight.

And each wild echo as it rung,
O'er my spirit softly flung,
A veil of harmony:
'Til in that wild airy strain,
The fiercest agony, and pain,
Was all forgot by me.

Yet this charmer was not all,
That tore away the drooping pall,
Of anguish from my soul;
The balmy breezes bore to me,
Fragrance from lowly bush, or tree,
Which soothing o'er me stole.

And blossoms dancing on the air,
Seemed spirits beautiful and fair,
That had wandering come,
In their freaks and frolics wild
From the grotto fair and mild,
The faries magic home.

Ever and anon the humming bee
From the white and flowery tree,
Glided on the air:
As it from the floweret sprang,
Wildly its little bugle rang,
Its music soft and clear.

From the heaven's bluey crown,
The golden sun looked laughing down,
On this lovely scene;
'Til the earth was smiling found,
And the whole extended ground,
Covered with waving green.

And the little murmuring brook,
That was onward rushing, spoke,
Contentment to the mind;
And in its gentle flow,
And the sunshine's softest glow,
Gushed joy for mankind.

On a distant hill of green,
A scattered flock of sheep were seen,
In their gambols fleet;
And ever and anon I'd hear,
Burst upon the freshening air,
The melancholy bleat.

This brought the days of eld
When in childhood first I held,
My gambols wild and free;
And over the wide-spreading lawn,
Swift as the young and startled fawn,
I sprang merrily.

But those days are gone, and now
Years are stealing on my brow
With measured tread and slow,
And the fainting song of time,
With its melancholy chime,
Comes throbbing soft and low.

Far adown the distant vale,
I hear the solitary wail
Of hours idly spent,
And with the ever dying song,
As it gushes slow along,
The passing years are blent.

But a momentary gleam,
Like a shadow on a stream,
Stole softly over me;
I knew this scene would fade away,
And winds and lightning have their sway
In wildest revelry.

Thus it is with earthly forms—
As in silent, fearful storms
Death holds a lasting sway;
And in the darkness and the gloom,
Of the low and solitary tomb,
All mouldering lay.

The sheep upon the sloping hill—
The gentle whisperings of the rill—
The music of the bird—
The flying of the ladened bee
From his city in the tree—
Were seen by me, and heard.

And all combined without alloy
To fill my heart with purest joy,
So beautiful and bright;
As if some fairy's magic wand
Had waved, and ushered fairy land,
Before my anxious sight.

Such was the earliest morn of May
As in a revery I lay
Beneath a thorny bush,
Where often I had heard,
The glad music of that bird
The brown colored thrush.

Tho' I've wandered from the tree,
That lovely scene is still to me,
A glowing vision;
Like the scenes that often rise
Before the wondering eyes,
In lands Elysian.

May 1, 1849. ROSA.

The Fatal Trick.

Upon one evening, a party of collegians and young bloods of the town had met together at my room to play and carouse. In fact, it was a regular meeting of the Sud hunters, who assembled twice in every week. We kept it up jollily until midnight, having in that time managed to get full of Bacchus, when Somers proposed that we should sally forth and astonish the town by some well-planned and well-directed piece of mischief. Without any one of us having a very clear conception of our actions or intentions, we hailed the proposition with drunken rapture and started forth.

A travelling menagerie had arrived in the town the day before, and among the wonders it contained was a young bear.—The poor animal had been so well beaten, that he became very humble, and acquired a number of amusing tricks. Of this we were all aware, having visited the menagerie the day before. Just as we passed the spot where the animals were confined, it occurred to me what rare sport it would be to capture young Bruin and place him in the chemical lecture room, to astonish on the next day, the professors and the class.

No sooner had I made a proposition to this effect than it was adopted, and all volunteered their assistance in carrying it into execution. The tent or pavilion which covered the beasts, was erected in the great yard of the principal tavern. The cages, each containing one or more animals, were iron grated boxes, standing on wheels, by means of which they had been dragged into the town. They were ranged around the interior of the tent, forming a circular array of wood and iron. Not imagining that any one would disturb the animals, the showmen and keepers had retired to rest along with the inmates of the tavern, leaving the tents entirely unwatched. Thus we were afforded a clear field in which to execute our scheme. After several of our number had been posted as sentinels, the rest crept in under the canvass, and entered the arena. It was some time before we could, in the deep darkness of the place, identify the cage in which our friend Bruin had been placed to sleep After stumbling over divers things which lay scattered about, and peering here and there in the dark, we found the object of our search. There, in a substantial cage, was the dim outline of the animal, his two white eyes flashing drops of fire at being aroused from his quiet slumber.

The next difficulty that occurred to us was the mode of conveying him to the college, which was several hundred yards distant Some of the revellers proposed that we should throw a halter around his neck and so drag him along. We rejected this, not from any personal fear, since we had arrived at that point which makes one oblivious of danger, but lest we should be seen by some late straggler, and have our fun spoiled. A better plan was, after much scheming, devised, and one which met with universal acquiescence.

In the tavern-yard stood a water hogshead, with a sliding lid fastened by means of hasp and staple. We had only to roll this in, slide down the box from the wheels, open the door immediately in front of the hogshead, and drive the animal in. We could then push down the lid of the cask, secure it by means of a rope passed through the staples, and roll our prisoner and prison-house to the college.

No sooner was this suggested than we hastened to put it into execution. The cage, with our united efforts, was slid quietly down from the wheels—Bruin growling all the while with anger—the hogshead was rolled in and placed open end in front of the cage and the animal stirred up with our canes. With a terrific yell he rushed in, and we closed the lid suddenly down upon him, fastening it at the same time in a secure manner. The yell of the bear had roused the other animals, and our ears were regaled for the next ten minutes with a variety of hideous sounds, that wakened fearfully the sleeping echoes of the night The animal in the hogshead growled, and his voice came like distant thunder, so deadening was it by the wood in which he lay. His fellows had no incumbrance to their voices, and they howled as clearly as though they had been in their native forests.

Fearful of being discovered, we remained quiet for a time, holding our breaths in suspense. But no one disturbed, or thought of disturbing us. The animals often started a chorus of strange noises during the night, and the keepers thinking nothing unusual to be the matter, merely cursed the unruly beasts for destroying the unity of their rest, and turning back, went to sleep again

As soon as quiet was restored, we slit a hole in the canvass, for we were afraid to emerge by the aperture which faced the tavern, rolled our hogshead through the yard to the back gate, which we unfastened, and then passing into the road, started at a quick rate for our spot of destination. Over and over went the hogshead, the animal within growling at the rough treatment he experienced, we were nearly convulsed with laughter at the uncouthness of the noise which he made.

At length we reached the back part of the college, when one of our party climbed over the wall and unfastened the gate We rolled in our prize to the back door of the labratory, which was the place where our professor of chemistry lectured. We found that in consequence of the narrowness of the door, the hogshead would not enter. Such being the case, we were about to start the animal through the open door, when an idea more redolent of fun struck the fancy of Somers. Back of the lecture-room was a small apartment containing odds and ends, and which was not visited, perhaps, once a month. He said rightly, that if we placed Bruin in this apartment, he would not likely be discovered until some time during the lecture of the chemical professor, when the noise he would be apt to make attracting attention, the plot would readily be brought to a crisis. We joined our strength, and, upon our shoulders, up went the hogshead, until it was placed on a level with the window. A light young fellow, the smallest of the party, climbed up, hoisted the window, and slided up the lid of the cask. We shook the hogshead violently, but at first to no purpose. The animal was thoroughly frightened, and lay still, or with only an occasional growl. We shook it again, and he started. There was but one possible mode of progression, which was straight forward—and the brute gave a spring through the window. There was a crash of glass, a howl, and the terrified animal, crouching in the corner, remained silent Our little companion closed the sash and leaped down. We rolled the hogshead up into a corner of the yard, and, returning to our rooms, continued our revelry till near day-light.

It was about noon when I awoke. I hurried on my clothes, passed a wet towel round my head, swallowed some soda water, and afterwards a cup of coffee, and then hastened to the college. It was the hour of the professor of chemistry, and I entered the room just as he had commenced to descant upon the subject. The class were all wrapt in attention—for the lecturer was an able man, and was treating upon "Light," a matter of interest, and capable of beautiful illustration. He had scarcely finished his short and eloquent exordium, before we heard a crash of bottles and a low, startling growl in the next room. The professor started, and stopped a moment, while those of the class not in the secret, looked at each other in astonishment. There was a pause of a few seconds' duration—and then the professor proceeded.

I began to feel alarmed. I remembered what had been done the night before. Under ordinary circumstances, there was no danger to be apprehended. The bear was tame enough, and had been whipped until he had imbibed a proper sense of the superiority of man. But from the sounds I judged that Bruin had worked himself into the room, only separated from us by a thin partition full of windows, in which were kept the various drugs used in illustrating experiments. There were a great many carboys and bottles of acid in that room. Should he overset any of these, and their contents touch his skin, he would be apt to break through the windows of the apartment, and do some mischief before we could secure him. By the looks of my companions I saw they entertained the same fears.

There was another crash and growl. The professor stopped again, and the class looked around in dismay. Those who were acquainted with the cause of the noise, could scarcely keep their countenance. In spite of the alarm under which they labored, there was something so ludicrous in the growl, especially when we figured to ourselves the coming consternation of the class, that they could hardly refrain from laughing outright. The professor, who could not tell from whence the sound proceeded, and thought it a trick of the class, reproved them severely, and then continued his lecture. 'Gentlemen,' said he, preparing for a brilliant experiment, 'I will show you a most startling effect.'

And he did. Hark! there was a sudden crash, as if every bottle in the place had been destroyed at once—a smoke rose up—there was a terrific howl that made the blood curdle and the marrow thrill—and, through that frail glass—Father of Truth! we had mistaken the cage—there leaped forth infuriated with the burning liquid, which streamed over him—horror!—an untamed royal tiger.

No words can describe the consternation of the class. Not one stirred. Petrified by horror—motionless—breathless—there we sat. Not a muscle quivered, so rigid were we with our intense fear. It was our preservation. Maddened with the pain, the animal rushed on with terrific bounds, and meeting with no obstacle passed down the stairs into the great hall. There, as he leaped and rolled, and howled in his agony, the eldest daughter of our janitor, coming with a message unwittingly entered. She screamed and fell. The tiger, frantic with the acid, which was eating to his very flesh, heeded her not. On he passed, and the girl lived. Better had she died, for never more shone the light of reason on her vacant eyes. From that day forth she was a gibbering, incurable idiot.

On passed the tiger—on! on! on!—through the streets, with the populace flying to every side for shelter—passed his old prison, where the keepers stood wondering at his escape—on he went, bound after bound, howling, screaming with agony On he went, while behind, before, and around, rose up the mingled cry of men, women, and children—"The tiger! the tiger!"

At the extremity of the main street, a traveller was riding quietly to his home. He heard the noise behind him, and, casting his eyes around, saw the cause. He spurred his horse, who started snorting with terror, for he saw the coming of the mighty animal as well as his master. It was in vain. The tiger noted not the man. He only saw the terrified steed. One leap—the distance was just saved—and he struck his claws into the hind quarters of the horse, who, unmindful of this double burthen, rushed on, bearing the fearful load as though it were a feather's weight. The man received no hurt. With the presence of mind and coolness most determined—for it resulted from despair—he drew his bowie-knife from his bosom, and, with a firm stroke, buried it to the hilt in the neck of the tiger. The spinal marrow of the royal brute was severed, and he died on the instant. But he did not release his hold. Still, with the death grip, he clung to his place, his eyes glassed and glaring, and his claws sunk deep into the flesh. On went the horse, snorting, plunging and rearing in mingled pain and terror, on he went, until exhausted by fatigue and loss of blood he fell prostrate. Those who came that way an hour after, cautiously and timidly, saw the three streatched together. They watched awhile and found they did not move. They stole up—lo, the horse and tiger were dead, and over their lifeless forms was the traveller, insensible, though alive, and still grasping in his hand the friendly knife.

Hiram, my boy,' said a tender father to his son, you must be more careful of yourself than you are. You have not the constitution of some.'

'Don't b'lieve it, dad—don't b'lieve a word on't—I've got the constitution of a horse. There ain't no breaking up or down on me. Dang it, if I don't believe I've got the constitution of the United States.'

☞ All communications must bear the name and address of the writer; not for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith, otherwise no attention will be paid to them.

"L," Is informed that we do not insert any communication unless in compliance with the notice at the head of our columns.

All those wishing to have Daguerreotype Portraits of themselves or families taken, should not lose the present opportunity to secure them; the Messrs S. C. & M. H. Bullard are taking them in the best style of the Art, at exceedingly low prices, at their room in the brick building opposite John Ayers' Hotel. Ladies and Gentlemen please give them a call.

As all are interested and benefited by a good walk to and from the R. Road Depot, cannot something be done to effect it; while our overseer is doing all the law allows him to do, would not a small voluntary contribution enable him to make so desirable an improvement; our mite is ready.

Plainfield Post Office.

We perceive by a notice in the Plainfield Union, that Dr. Lewis Craig has been appointed Posmaster of Plainfield, in the place of Elias Kirkpatrick Esq. removed.

The removal of the Postmaster in this Village, contrary to the openly expressed will of the people, is a shameful violation of their rights, and a direct violation of the pledges given by Gen. Taylor in his inaugural address; and taken altogether is about as small a crop of potatoes as have been gathered in this section of the country within the memory of the oldest inhabitant.

The Union says that the Dr. is "deserving of the office." For what? Was not the candidate selected by the people of this place at a public meeting called for that purpose deserving; or had he not performed sufficient partizan services to entitle him to the appointment from a no party President? Is this the reason why one was deserving and the other not? What is the inference to be drawn from this deserving appointment? Are the people fools think ye, made to be humbugged by leaders of party on as shallow pretexts as these?

If Gen. Taylor in the acceptance of the nomination of the Philadelphia Convention, and of other bodies of men throughout the Union, had given any countenance to whig measures, and had honestly said that in their adoption the best interests and welfare of the country consists, and to carry them out a change of men whose opinion should coincide with those measures would be necessary; then if elected should such appointments and removals be made, none could have had cause to complain. But when he gave the people by his letters and speeches upon all occasions to understand, that he would not accept as a party candidate of neither party; and even after his election, while taking the oath to support the Constitution he expressly declared, "I shall make honesty, capacity and fidelity indispensable prerequisites to the bestowal of office, and the absence of either of these qualities shall be sufficient cause for removal."

Does any one say that Elias Kirkpatrick Esq. the person removed is not honest, or that he is not capable, or that he is wanting in fidelity. All our citizens know that there is no cause for removal on any of these grounds. We ourselves know that many of our most respectable whig citizens have voluntarily expressed regret of any change at all, and in the event of a change, the present appointment is not their choice, but in direct opposition to it. As we stated above, all this would be a matter of utter insignificance if it was not a direct and gross violation of all pledges given by all who upheld the nomination of Gen. Taylor; and he himself while under the solemn sanction of an oath to support the Constitution, in his inaugural, explanatory of his course under that constitution, he expressly declares; that honesty capacity and fidelity indispensable prerequisites to the bestowal of office, and the abscence of either of these qualities shall be deemed sufficient cause for removal.

It may not be amiss to call the attention of the people to a few facts in our Country's History. The people should ever bear in mind that our Country's Prosperity is the result of democratic measures, and that the democrats have ever openly avowed their principles, and faithfully and fearlessly carried them out, knowing that the people ever have and ever will sustain them at the ballot-box. As evidence of this look over our history; in their action on the Alien and Sedition laws of John Adams, in their support of the war of 1812 for the freedom of the Seas, their opposition to, and final overthrow of that corrupt institution the U. S. Bank, the adoption in its place of the Sub-Trearury, and also of a Revenue Tariff, the Annexation of Texas, their declaration of and support of the war against Mexico, the Annexation of New-Mexico and California as indemnity for the past and security for the future, and the election of the hero of that war as a declaration of its justice, and popularity, and lastly though greater than all, that the time has come to carry out that solemn declaration made to the world, that all men are born free and equal, and are entitled to Life, LIBERTY, and the pursuit of Happines. And now all they require is, that Gen. Taylor will carry out the above democratic measures, and faithfully remain true to the pledges he has given.

We will conclude this with the testimony of Gen. Taylor as given in his Inaugural, to the high state of prosperity the policy of democratic measures under Divine Providence have brought the conntry; and the incontestible evidence this is of their correctness and superiority to those of our opponents, the whigs.

"In conclusion, I congratulate you, my fellow citizens, upon the high state of prosperity to which the goodness of Divine Providence has conducted our common country."

"Let us invoke a continuance of the same protecting care, which has led us from small beginnings to the eminence we this day occupy, and let us seek to deserve that continuance by prudence and moderation in our counsels; by well directed attempts to assuage the bitterness which too often marks unavoidable differences of opinion; by the promulgation and practice of just and liberal principles and by an enlarged patriotism which shall acknowleege no limits but those of our own wide spread republic."

Messrs Printers:—Did you ever dream; If not, then you have missed some pleasure. I will however tell you mine, which if you think proper you may publish.

It was a few evenings since, after the labor and fatigue of the day, I threw myself upon my humble cot to rest my weary limbs, soon, Somnus that blessed deity of rest, soothed my aching bones by his gentle embrace; then it was that Morpheus, that old tantilizing fellow, who has so often deceived both man and maiden, by his delusive dreams, began to play upon my senses; and methought I heard in the distance sounds of music, which at once called to remembrance, things of bygone days. As I listened with rapturous emotions, methought I heard sweet sounds, at one time soft and gentle, at another lofty and sublime; and methought shurely our once much loved Plainfield Brass Band, has again condesended to cheer us with their life inspiring music, and Oh how many of our worthy citizens will welcome them with smiles of approbation; and even I was preparing to give them a fatherly embrace, and deliver to them a most eloquent address of thanks; and I gazed in every direction to catch a glimpse of well known and much loved faces, but alas how often are we poor mortals disappointed, for when they came into view, I could recognize among the number but one of our own admired band; this was Mr. Augustus Frazee, who I have understood (since I awoke) is the leader of a young and interesting, Band from Somerville, and who had condesended to visit our beautiful and industrious Village and regale our citizens with their admirable music. After partaking of a good and substantial supper prepared by our neigbor R. Frazee, they then adjourned to the large room in his handsome hotel, where they performed several pieces, which were listened to by some of our most worthy citizens. In the evening they marched through our principal streets discoursing music most eloquent, and if like Orpheous of old they did not cause the trees to dance, they made many a bosom throb with pleasure. May they again viset us, and while they thus help to lighten the cares of life by innocent pastime, they may rest assured they will ever receive a hearty welcome from the generous and good; as well as

The Late Riot.

Our City has been intensely agitated, a riot of a most outrageous and disgraceful character has taken place, the military have been called out, property destroyed, blood shed, and, for the last thirty-six hours, New-York has worn the aspect of a civil war, all because two actors had quarraled! The contrast between the fact and its consequences would make the whole seem absurd and incredible were not our streets even now lined with soldiers to prevent father outrage, while the stricken and sorrowing keep watch in desolate homes over the bodies of the dead.

Had none fallen in the affray but the real rioters who were personally engaged in the attack on the theater and its legal defenders, however much the destruction of human life might be deplored, a certain justice in the event would strike every mind and strengthen the satisfaction natural to the lover of order, when Law triumphs over wanton and brutal violence. But such an occasion the innocent and the guilty are struck down together, and however necessary the victory, there is something inexpressibly painful in its cost.

It is urged by many that Mr. Macready should not have appeared on Thursday night after having been driven from the stage on Monday. We do not see the justice of that argument. He had been driven from the stage by a gang of ruffians; he was asked to return to it by some of our most estimable citizens. He was right in following their request, and it was the duty of the authorities to protect him in so doing. Else of what use are authorities at all? If it please a mob to declare that an obnoxious newspaper shall not appear, is its publisher to submit to dictation? No freeman will say yes, but all will applaud and uphold the resolution which mantain, the freedom of the press to the last. The two cases are precisely of the same kind. Every man exercising a lawful vocation has a claim to the whole protection of Society.—Tribune.

Verdict.

The jury retired at 6 1-2 o'clock and after being out a short time, returned and delivered the following verdict:

We believe that Geo. A Curtis, John McDonald, Thos. Aylwood, George Lincon, Timothy Burns, Henry Otten, George V. Brown, Wm. Butler Geo. W. Taylor, Owen Burns, Thos. Belman, Neil Gray Mellis, Asa F. Collins, Wm. Harmer, Thomas Keirnan, Mathew Cahill, Geo. N. Gedney, came to their deaths by gun shot wounds from balls fired by the Military during the riot before the Opera House on Thursday evening, 10th May inst. by order of the civil authorities of the City of New-York; and that the circumstances existing at the time justified the authorities in giving the order to fire upon the mob. We farther believe that if a large number of the Police had been ordered out, the necessity of a resort to the use of the Military might have been avoided.

AFFLICTING FIRE.—About 6 o'clock on Monday morning a house belonging to Jacob Vreeland and occupied by Nelson Van Syle, (wood-turner,) in Cedar Grove, Caldwell township, was burned to the ground. Mrs. Van Syle and her child, an infant of 4 months, perished in the flames.

THE CHOLERA AT THE SOUTHWEST.—The Louisville Courier of the 8th inst. notices five cases of cholera in that city on the previous day. Among them were George Roberts, merchant (dead), Thomas Conn, recently superintendent of the Kentucky River improvements, and the lady of Mr. Fowler, of Fulton-st.

'Cases of the cholera and small pox are occurring at various localities on the Missouri River.'

CINCINNATI, May, 14th—3 P. M.

The board of Health report 46 cases and 7 deaths from cholera during 24 hours ending Sunday noon, and 24 cases and 3 deaths during the 54 hours ending noon to day, making since Saturday noon a total of 66 cases and 10 deaths.

ST. LOUIS May 12.

The cholera is increasing in virulence in this city—the deaths numbering about twenty per day On the Missouri river, and among emigrants it is very bad.

ENGLAND.

In the House of Lords the first reading of the Navigation Bill took place on the 25th ult: the second was to be had on the 7th inst.

In the Commons on the 23d, in answer to a question put by Mr. Hume, Sir G. Grey stated that Mr. Duffy would be brought up for trial the fourth time at the next commission.

Mr. Hume thought the repetiton of the trials had the appearance of persecution.

IRELAND.

Singular Phenomenon.

A late Kilkenny paper contains the following: 'On Saturday evening week an unusual darkness suddenly gathered round this city and vicinity, insomuch that we ourselves were obliged to have recourse to candlelight in order to finish some writing in which we were engaged. A heavy shower fell at the time, but could not sufficiently account for the dense gloom which prevailed; but it is entirely explained by the fact that the fluid which descended from the clouds was impregnated with some dark-coloring matter, so that, to the great dismay of the laundry-women here, white clothes were actually stained when immersed in it.'

Our Dublin express which left that city last night has just arrived but its contents are unusually barren. Nothing is talked of but the spread of disease, the destitution of the people, and the utter inability of the country to provide a remedy for evils of such an alarming and extensive nature.

FRANCE.

The Socialist meetings continue to give great anxiety to the Government; no less than seventy-six persons have been arrested for opposing the police in their attempts to disperse the meetings. Yesterday six persons were arrested at Verrailles for attempting to seduce the soldiery from their duty; they have been examined and committed for trial.

We are glad to learn that the Cholera continues to abate; the last reports is 10 deaths in Hospital and 6 in other establishments in one week, there remained only 52 cases in the Hospital.

On the 20th, the discussion of the bill relative to the Press was commenced, the Ministry demanding its continuance in force until the 1st of August. The committee to which the bill had been referred, acceded to the demand, but reduced by one-half the cautionnment, or security in money required from editors, and suppressed it altogether for those published within the 45 days proceeding the elections to the Asssembly.

ITALY.

Manifesto had been issued to England and France, declaring that the Roman people have a right to select their own form of Government without the interfereance of any foreign power.

Market for Breadstuffs.

The market for breadstuffs has been inanimate during the week, with limited operations, and a decline on last weeks prices of 2d a 3d on Wheat, 6d a 9d on Flour, and 1s to 2s 6d on Indian Corn — Best Western Canal Flour is worth 23s a 23s 3d per bbl.; Philadelphia and Baltimore do 23s a 23s 6d; New-Orleans and Ohio do 23s 6d a 24s; Canadian 53s a 24s. Indian Corn 29s 6d a 31s; White 31s a32. Corn Meal 14s a 15s per bbl.

The Southern Mail brings acounts from Florida that represent the destruction of the Cotton and Corn clops to be very general. Planters fortunately have plenty of cotton seed left for replenishing.

New-Orleans papers of the 9th inst. represent the clearances of Cotton from that port the previous day to have been very large. To foreign ports 55,763 bales; to New-York 280 do Crevasse above Carrollton is still unchecked, and it is said if it is not stopped in three days or less time that the water would probably reach the city and overflow it.

Letters from Independence, Missouri, state that the Cholera was prevailing among the California emigrants encamped at that place.

☞ A hog was recently butchered in Broome County N. Y. which weighed 2, 000 lbs. The skin was preserved, and and is to be sent to the City for exhibition.

LHE SOUTH PASS—ALKALINE WATER—ROCK SALT—NEW GOLD MINE.—The Liberty (Mo.) Tribune says; 'Many of the way streams are so strongly impregnated with alkali that they dare not let their cattle drink. On the shores of many, the crust is formed an inch thick. They break up this crust, scrape off the dirt on the bottom and top, and find it pure saleratus. Strange as this may seem, it is nevertheless true, and the writer collected in a short time 75 lbs. A mountain of pure rock salt has been discovered near the Mormons settlement. The Mormons have discovered a gold mine 150 miles southwest from the Salt Lake.—The last end of the journey to the Salt Lake, say 200 miles, is attended with little fatigue. Nearly all the way the roads are as good as on any prairie in the West.'

Medical Convention at Boston.

In the American Medical Convention, in session at Boston, on Wednesday, last week, Dr. Nathan R. Smith, of Maryland, read a long report from the Comittee on Surgery, most unequivocaly defending the use of chloroform. The report says:

'It has been administered to millions of subjects, and we have but fifteen cases of autheuticated deaths supervening from its use. Alarm, therefore, on the subject is needless. Much more cause is there for alarm, much more reason to apprehend a fatal termination in taking an ordinary railroad journes, than in inhaling chloroform, at the hands of a judicious and careful practitioner.

'It is admissible to proceed with a surgical operation in dangerous cases, without the use of chololorm, because safety and immunity from pain are secured. It should not be used where there is a disease of the heart; and in inhalation care should be taken that atmospheric air be mixed with the chloroform. Inhalation should stop the moment that insensibility is attained. Professor Simpson has published his opinion that one hundred lives has been preserved by the use of chloroform where one has been lost by it. He further says that the mortality, where chloroform is used, is much less than in similar cases where it is dispensed with.'

The Committe on Obstetrics also reported decidedly in favor of the use of Chloroform, and the 'wonderfel advantages' Obstetric practice has gained through the introduction of Anasthetical agents. Etherization has now been used in thousands of cases, and in no one instance has the slightest injury resulted to the mother. It is added that anasthetics may not only be given in all cases of labor, but that they may not rightfully be witheld.

A WORLD ON FIRE.—Lieut. Maury, Superintendent of the National Observitory, Washington, says, in a late address:

'It may be that there is now, at this very time, in the firmament above, a world on fire. Argus, a well-known star in the southern hemisphere, has suddenly blazed forth, and from a star of the second or third magnitude, now glares with the brilliancy of the first.'

The above, from the pen of one whom we are proud to acknowledge as a scholar of high scientific attainments, has been widely copied by the press. The writer has, however, been a good deal puzzled, by Lieut. Maury's explanation of the increased splendor of the star Argus. For, taking as example the most powerful light attainable by combustion, that of the Oxy-hydrogen jet upon lime or phosphorus, or steel burning in oxygen gas, we do not obtain a light that would be even visible, if viewed in a line with direct solar rays. Now if the light of the fixed stars is of the nature of that emitted by our sun, and it is believed that this fact is generally admitted, how could the combustion of a sun add to its brilliancy.

Again, would not the powerful stellar light required to traverse the immense distance from the fixed stars to our planet be entirely obscured by the vast quantity of matter volatilized in the process of burning so large a body, and accumulating in one dense cloud around the whole? Our own sun has from time shown large spots of obscured light (which are perhaps burning volcanoes) and may not Argus likewise have been similarly affected, and, either have obliterated these dull spots, or perhaps revolving upon its axis have turned his bright side towards us? At any rate the writer cannot subscribe to the burning up of Argus.—S B D. [Tribune.

From Independence, we learn that the notorious Captain Howard has been discharged from custody, (on account of shooting Freeman,) it appearing that he had acted in self-defence. Freemam, it stated, was a counterfeiter.

DRATH OF MRS. GALLATIN.—The venerable leader of the Democracy of Ninety-Eight, and cabinet adviser of Jefferson and Madison, still lingers on the shores of time, but his consort is no more. Mrs. Gallatin, whose demise took place last night, was upward of fourscore.

OUTS WORTH KEEPING.—Keep out of debt—out of quarrels—out of law—out of politics—out of idleness—out of mischief—out of a draft—out of thin soled shoes—out of damp clothes—out of badly ventilated rooms—out of the reach of brandy and water—out of the company of the vicious and depraved—out of public office—out of matrimony, unless you are in love—in a word keep out of the way of temptation of every kind.—City Item.

Married, at West Harwhich, 16th inst. James Berry, Esq., of south Dennis, to Mrs. Hannah Kelley, of Dorchester. Mr. Berry was married in 1822 to the above named Mrs. Kelley, and about five years afterwards he was divorced from her, she having previously married a Mr. Greenwood. Since his divorce Mr. B has been married twice and has buried both wives, He has now married his first love. Is the present Mrs. Berry his first or fourth wife?

THE CAUSE.—'What under the sun can be the cause of that bell ringing to-day?' said young Sam, to his friend, as they approached Camden.

'If I was to express an opinion on the subject,' returned Isaac, solemnly, 'I should say it is my deliberate conviction, that somebody was pulling the rope.'

Legal Weights ana Measures.—No doubt these are all legally accurate. Now the thingmost advantageous to us, who buy by weight and measure, would be for congress to devise some plan to have them used. The amount of fraud daily practised by false weights and measures, if told, would be beyond human belief. We seize and confiscate the poor, petty, short pound of butter, while the short weight hogshead of sugar goes free. And the head of a tobacco hogshead, weighing alone more than the whole cask is tared at, is looked upon as a good joke. And it is a notorious fact that many yard sticks are only 35 inches long. Are children ever taught in school, I never was, that there is no standard, or beginning point, of weights and measures? [The metrical system of France is founded on the fourth part of the terrestical meridian. This quadrant is divided into 10,000,000 equal parts, one of which is equal in length to a metre. The standard yard of Great Britain and the United States, when compared with a pendulum vibrating seconds of mean time in the latitude of London, in a vacuum; at the level of the sea, is in the proportion of 36 inches to 39. 1393; that is, if all that part of the pendulum, which lies between the axis of suspension and the centre of oscillation, be devided into 39 1,393 equal parts, then will 10,000 such parts be an inch, 12 whereof make a foot, and 36 whereof make a yard. Take a cube of one such inch of distilled water, at 62°F.; let it be weighed by an weight into252,458 equal parts, then will 1,000 of these parts be a standard pound avoirdupois. Then 10 of these pounds of distilled water, at 26°F., the barometer being at 30 inches, will be one imperial gallon of Great Britain, which gallon will contain 277 274-100 cubic inches; consequently the imperial pint will hold 1 1-4 lbs, and the imperial bushel, 80 lbs. of distilled water, at the above-named temperature. The wine gallon of the United States contains only 231 cubic inches, and the Winchester bushel 5, 150 42-400 inches.—Eds] 'Three barleycorns make an inch;' but how long is a barleycorn? And how much is the weight of a 'grain?—What odd customs prevail among dealers in buying and selling articles. For instance, what is always sold by the bushel, and never measured but weighed—60 lbs. making a legal bushel. Salt is usually sold by the bushel, barrel, or sack, yet is sometimes weighed to ascertain the measure. New-York salt is 56 lbs. to the bushel, while western salt, I believe, is only 50 lbs. Dried apples are generally sold by the bushel; yet, in many places, they are never measured, but weighed, 22lbs, only to the bushel, which will make about three pecks. Cotton seed is sold by the bushel, but every 25 lbs. is counted for that measure. The usual custom, upon sugar plantations, is to weigh molasses, every 12 lbs. being counted a gallon, yet nobody ever thinks of selling it by the pound. And so I might go on through a long chapter of similar absurdities.—American Agriculturist.

Not long since, a clergyman in connecticut was reading to his congregation the beautiful and poetical psalm of David wherein he says: "Mercy and Truth are met together; Righteousness and Peace have kissed each other." At this passage a little girl in the assembly manifested a great interest, and whispered to her mother—"That's just as true as you live. I see Righteousness Hill a kissing Peace Peabody behind the smoke-house—but how did the minister know it."

His brawny arm beclasped her waist,
With love their eyes did burn;
From his warm lips she snatched a taste,
And then he tasted hern.

"Charles," said a father to his son, while they were working in a saw-mill, "what possesses you to associate with such girls as you do? When I was of your age I could go with the first cut."

"But," said Charles, "the first cut is always the slab, did you know that?"

"Help me turn this log, Charles, quick!"

Beans.—See that your beans are carefully cultivated, and kept clear of weeds. The ground should be frequently stirred, but never in damp weather, or when the foliage of the crop is wet with the morning or evening dew. By moving the light soil when the leaves are moist, rust is engendered, which arrests the growth of the plants, and greatly diminishes, if it does not destroy the crop.

A country editor, in speaking of a steamboat, says; 'She had twelve berths in her ladys' cabin.' 'Oh, life of me,' exclaimed an old lady, upon reading the above, 'what a squalling there must have been.

Novel Mode of Travel.—A family, consisting of father, mother, and six children, passed through Cincinnati lately. They had travelled all the way from Laporte county, Ia., in three wheelbarrows, intending to reach Pennsylvania, from which State they had emigrated three years ago. Their blankets, wearing apparel, and some few utensils used in preparing and distributing food among the family, were in one barrow, and the younger children were stowed away in the others, the father and elder boys taking turns in wheeling them along.

A Curiosity.

An English paper states that there has been exhibiting at the Egyptian Hall London, a full length minature of a female discovered by Mr. Eades in a block of marble which he was preparing for an obelisk; discovered perfect in itself. Mr. Eades thus describes it:

'This unprecedented phenomena of human nature is a most mysterious and truly astonishing full length miniature of a lady, three inches in height, in the costume of the aristocracy of the present time: posessing the most accurate and pleasing features, graceful figure, beautiful ringlets—upon the head of an elegent cottage bonnet, to which is attached a superb veil; under her arm she carries a fashionable muff, which has the apearance of one of the most recherche of the Hudson Bay Company. The incomparable minature hs abeen examined by several eminent antiquaries, scientific gentlemen, first rate artists, and numerous distinguished ladies and gentlemen, who have unanimously pronounced it to be the finest specimen beheld, and may be challenged against the world!—so perfectly uniform in every particular, combining grace an elegance that it appears a production of Mr. Martin's or some other celebrated artist.'

The funniest article yet, is a patent iron shirt with precusion collars. It never wears out, and by touching a spring, a new collar jumps up, until a half-dozen are exhausted.—A patent sheet-iron neckcloth accompanies it.

CAUTION EXTRA

A man by the name of CLAPP has engaged with a young man of the name of S. P. Townsend, and uses his name to put up a Sarsaparilla, which they call Dr. Townsend's Sarsaparilla, denominating it GENUINE, Original, etc. This Townsend is no doctor, and never was; but was formerly a worker on railroads, canals, and the like. Yet he assumes the title of Dr., for the purpose of gaining credit for what he is not. This is to caution the public not to be deceived, and purchase none but the GENUINE ORIGINAL OLD Dr. Jacob Townsend's Sarsaparilla, having on it the Old Dr's. likeness, his family coat of arms, and his signature across the coat of arms.

Principal Office, 102 Nassau st., New York City

OLD DR. JACOB TOWNSEND,

THE ORIGINAL DISCOVERER OF THE

Gennine Townsend Sarsaparilla.

Old Dr. Townsend is now about 70 years of age, and has long been known as the AUTHOR and DISCOVERER of the GENUINE ORIGINAL "TOWNSEND SARSAPARILLA." Being poor, he was compelled to limit its manufacture, by which means it has been kept out of market, and the sales circumscribed to those only who had proved its worth, and known its value. It had reached the ears of many, nevertheless, as those persons who had been healed of sore diseases, and saved from death, proclaimed its excellence and wonderful

HEALING POWER.

Knowing, many years ago that he had, by his skill, science and experience, devised an article which would be of incalculable advantage to mankind when the means would be furnished to bring it into universal notice, when its inestimable virtues would be known and appreciated. This time has come, the means are supplied; this GRAND AND UNEQUALLED PREPARATION is manufactured on the largest scale, and is called for throughout the length and breadth of the land, especially as it is found incapable of degeneration or deterioration.

Unlike young S. P. Townsend's, it improves with age, and never changes, but for the better; because it is prepared on scientific principles by a scientific man. The highest knowledge of Chemistry, and the latest discoveries of the art, have all been brought into requisition in the manufacture of the Old Dr's Sarsaparilla. The Sarsaparilla root, it is well known to medical men, contains many medicinal properties and some properties which are inert or useless, and others, which if retained in preparing it for use, produce fermentation and acid, which is injurious to the system. Some of the properties of Sarsaparilla are so volatile, that they entirely evaporate and are lost in the preparation, if they are not preserved by a scientific process, known only to those experienced in its manufacture. Moreover, these volatile principles, which fly off in vapor, or as an exhalation, under heat, are the very essential medical properties of the root, which give to it all its value.

Any person can boil or stew the root till they get a dark-colored liquid, which is more from the coloring matter in the root than from any thing else; they can then strain this insipid or vapid liquid, sweeten with sour molasses, and then call it "SARSAPARILLA EXTRACT or SYRUP." But such is not the article known as the

GENUINE OLD DR. JACOB TOWNSEND'S SARSAPARILLA.

This is so prepared, that all the inert properties of the Sarsaparilla root are first removed, every thing capable of becoming acid or of fermentation, is extracted and rejected; then every particle of medical virtue is secured in a pure and concentrated form; and thus it is rendered incapable of losing any of its valuable and healing properties. Prepared in this way, it is made the most powerful agent in the

Cure of innumerable diseases.

Hence the reason why we hear commendations on every side in its favor by men, women, and children. We find it doing wonders in the cure of

CONSUMPTION, DYSPEPSIA, and LIVER COMPLAINT, and in RHEUMATISM, SCROFULA, PILES, COSTIVENESS, all CUTANEOUS ERUPTIONS, PIMPLES, BLOCTHES, and all affections arising from

IMPURITY OF THE BLOOD.

It possesses a marvellous efficacy in all complaints arising from Indigestion, from Acidity of the Stomach, from unequal circulation, determination of blood to the head, palpitation of the heart, cold feet and hands, cold chills and hot flashes over the body. It has not its equal in Colds and Coughs; and promotes easy expectoration and gentle perspiration, relaxing stricture of the lungs, throat, and every other part.

But in nothing is its excellence more manifestly seen and acknowledged than in all kinds and stages of

FEMALE COMPLAINTS.

It works wonders in cases of Fluor Albus or Whites, Falling of the Womb, Obstructed, Suppressed, or Painful Menses, Irregularity of the menstrual periods, and the like; and is as effectual in curing all the forms of Kidney Diseases.

By removing obstructions, and regulating the general system, it gives tone and strength to the whole body, and thus cures all forms of

Nervous diseases and debility,

and thus prevents or relieves a great variety of other maladies, as Spinal irritation, Neuralgia, St. Vitus' Dance Swooning, Epileptic Fits, Convulsions, &c.

It cleanses the blood, excites the liver to healthy action, tones the stomach, and gives good digestion relieves the bowels of torpor and constipation, allays inflammation, purifies the skin, equalises the circulation of the blood, producing gentle warmth equally all over the body, and the insensible perspiration; relaxes all strictures and tightness, removes all obstructions, and invigorates the entire nervous system. Is not this then

The medicine you pre-eminently need?

But can any of these things be said of S. P. Townsend's infer or article? This young man's liquid is not to be

COMPARED WITH THE OLD DR'S,

because of one GRAND FACT, that the one is INCAPABLE of DETERIORATION, and

NEVER SPOILS,

while the other DOES; souring, fermenting, and blowing the bottles containing it into fragments; the sour, acid liquid exploding and damaging other goods! Must not this horrible compound be poisonous to the system?—What! put acid into a system already diseased with acid! What causes Dyspepsia but acid? Do we not all know that when food sours in our stomachs what mischiefs it produces? flatulence, heartburn palpitation of the heart, liver complaint, diarrhœa, dysentery, colic, and corruption of the blood? What is Scrofula but an acid humor in the body? What produces all the humors which bring on Eruptions of the Skin, Scald Head, Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, White Swellings, Fever Sores, and all ulcerations internal and external? It is nothing under heaven, but an acid substance, which sours, and thus spoils all the fluids of the body, more or less. What causes Rheumatism but a sour or acid fluid which insinuates itself between the joints and elsewhere, irritating and inflaming the delicate tissues upon which it acts? So of nervous diseases, of impurity of the blood, or deranged circulations, and nearly all the ailments which afflict human nature.

Now is it not horrible to make and sell, and infinitely worse to use this

SOURING, FERMENTING, ACID "COMPOUND" OF S. P. TOWNSEND,

and yet he would fain have it understood that Old Dr. Jacob Townsend's Genuine Original Sarsaparilla, is an IMITATION of his inferior preparation!!

Heaven forbid that we should deal in an article which would bear the most distant resemblance to S. P. Townsend's article! and which should bring down upon the Old Dr. such a mountain load of complaints and criminations from Agents who have sold, and purchasers who have used S. P. Townsend's FERMENTING COMPOUND.

We wish it understood, because it is the absolute truth, that S. P. Townsend's article and Old Dr. Jacob Townsend's Sarsaparilla are heaven-wide apart, and infinitely dissimilar; that they are unlike in every particular, having not one single thing in common.

As S. P. Townsend is no doctor, and never was, is no chemist, no pharmaceutist—knows no more of medicine or disease than any other common, unscientific, unprofessional man, what guarantee can the public have that they are receiving a genuine scientific medicine, containing all the virtues of the articles used in preparing it, and which are incapable of changes which might render them the AGENTS of Disease instead of health.

But what else should be expected from one who knows nothing comparatively of medicine or disease! It requires a person of some experience to cook and serve up even a common decent meal. How much more important is it that the persons who manufacture medicine, designed for should know well the medical properties of plants, the best manner of securing and concentrating their healing virtues, also an extensive knowledge of the various diseases which affect the human system, and how to adapt remedies to these diseases!

It is to arrest frauds upon the unfortunate, to pour balm into wounded humanity, to kindle hope in the despairing bosom, to restore health and bloom, and vigor into the crushed and broken, and to banish infirmity that OLD DR. JACOB TOWNSEND has SOUGHT and FOUND the opportunity and means to bring his

within the reach, and to the knowledge of all who need it, that they may learn and know, by joyful experience, its

Transcendent Power to Heal.

DR. JACOB TOWNSEND. NEW YORK, Oct. 5, 1848.

WALKED ACROSS THE ROOM

with the aid of crutches. Since then, I have walked in the street: have gone alone from 36 Spruce street to the Park; thence to Lovejoy's Hotel and back. I have been to 85 Nassau-street two different times, and am now frequently visiting my neighbors. During all this time, I have taken but two bottles of Old Dr. Townsend's Sarsaparilla. Oct. 4. I procured another bottle to-day (5th Oct.) I walked twice across the floor without the aid of crutches. I have also nearly recovered from obstruction of water, which gave me great distress. The pain in my back has likewise left me. I and my family have no earthly reason to ascribe my recovery to any other cause but to

OLD DR JACOB TOWNSEND'S SARSAPARILLA.

ALEX. WELSH. 36 Spruce-st.

P. S.—Several able physicians despaired of my ever walking or even raising myself from my bed again.

EXECUTED WITH NEATNESS AND DISPATCH, ON REASONABLE TERMS.

From the Scalpel.

To what Extent is Medicine entitled to Confidence?

"Truth only doth judge itself."

The great power and uniformity of nature, both in producing and curing disease, has ever elicited the admiration of the philosophic physician. As a necessary consequence of the enjoyment of this "vantage ground of truth, a hill not to be commanded, where the air is always pure and the sky serene." he looks through a clear intellectual atmosphere, upon the futile, though too often fatal efforts, of his more confident, because less philosophical brethren, and is at a loss to discover the shadow of a reason for the quantity, variety, and power, of the medicines they administer to their unfortunate patients.

He need be in no doubt of the true origin of this confidence, either in the doctor or patient. Pride of opinion and self-love, are the talismanic words that irradiate the mists of ignorance, and impart that emphatic self-assurance, always most unyielding where there is the least knowledge.

"A mixture of a lie doth ever add pleasure. Doth any man doubt, if there were taken out of men's minds, vain opinions, flattering hopes, false valuations, imaginations as one would, and the like, but it would leave the minds of a number of men, poor shrunken things, full of melancholy and indisposition, and unpleasing to themselves?" So said the philosopher a century ago, and our nature has undergone no change. The priest, the doctor, the lawyer, the soldier, the merchant, and the sexton, are still at their old trades—marrying, canting, and begging, physicking, cheating, and lying, slautering, and burying the dead.

The artisan and the farmer, do not enter the lists with their more aspiring fellow-operators on human credulity, only because their opportunities for attaining an elegant finish in rascality, have made them less agreeable deceivers. They must therefore practice in a smaller way, principally upon each other; or, if at all upon the professions, it is only permitted because their more exalted brethren have no leisure to protect themselves from petty peculation, being engaged in the more profitable business of wholesale robbery.

The poor sexton now that porcelain teeth are fashionable, and sewing so valueless to Christian shop-keepers, that young girls are obliged to sell their hair or their virtue, while yet partially alive, will, we fear, prove an exception to the moral code of his fellows, only from pure inability to "do better for himself."

This is no episode, dear reader, dragged in to gratify an uncamiable disposition; it is part of the bone and marrow of our discourse. We have committed this little cockle-shell to the waves of popular opinion and prejudice, as an entering wedge of a glorious reform, and it behoves us, in the very outset, to convince the reader that the necessity for that reform, originates in causes deeply interwoven with the entire structure of society. Though this candid avowal of our sentiments may shock the self-esteem of many, the truth that we utter will secure their respect.

One other preliminary is necessary, before we proceed with our proper subject: we must have a clear understanding with our non-professional readers, and assure them, that however we may value their approbation of our labors, because of an ample supply of self-esteem, we have not the slightest regard for their professional opinions. It is our pride to have discovered the worthlessness of medical speculation, and the meagreness of our actual knowledge of the efficacy of medicine, even in the hands of the sincere physician. Of course we can attach no importance to the notions, of such as know nothing of the laws that produce and cure disease, or use the their profession merely as a trade.

The causes of disease will always be found to originate in some disurbance of the very agents nature uses to cure them; viz., air, warmth, food, water, and sleep. If we add to these great natural causes, mental disturbance, and specific ones, such as poisons, and changes of the natural electric equilibria of the body, we are quite sure we cover the whole ground of the causes, and a great part of the reliable means of cure. It shall be our particular business, as we proceed, to consider the actual state of our knowledge, of the specific efficacy of certain medicines, in curing particular diseases.

We shall give few medical speculations with regard to the manner in which medicines cure disease (for this they sometimes undoubtedly do), because these are generally of no value whatever.

The reliability of any medicine to check a particular disease, can only be proved by its action on an immense number of individuals, of similar general physical condition, under like circumstances of temperature, diet, etc., etc.

It is this, that makes the observations of a well-disciplined mind, in an army surgeon, of such immense value to the world. A physician in city practice has little opportunity to make any observations of value, as guides to his future conduct. He is sent for, in most cases, by persons who are utter strangers to mental discipline and self-restraint, generally with the view of carrying out the notions of the patient, or the relatives, however absurd they may be. If he does not immediately assent-to their propositions, he is either discharged, or viewed with suspection. This begets a total want of confidence in both parties, that disturbs the equanimity of the patient, and paralyzes any effort nature may be inclined to make for his benefit, even if his physician be philosopher enough to respect her laws.

Air, warmth, food, and water, afford all the elements essential to the production and renovation of the human body. Sleep is equally necessary, in restoring its powers when fatigued. This, however, is only needful to the brain and voluntary muscles: the heart, lungs, arteries, and viscera, never sleep. Breathing, the circulation of the blood, the secretion of all the fluids, absorption, etc. go on while life lasts. Their cessation even for a few moments, is death.

These, then, are emhpatically the "vital stimuli." The distinguished physiologist, Muller remarks, "They are the only efficient means of restoring the body after sickness." What a reflection for the consumers of quack medicines and the prescriptions of our learned brethren, the medical philosophers in general.

Again—"There are many other stimuli which excite reaction, and which are not essentially renovating, and, indeed, for the most part, have no restorative action on the organs; and which, instead of producing symptoms or phenomena of reaction, have no vivifying influence, but, on the contrary, are injurious, in proportion to the change effected by them in the organic composition." "An endless injury has been done to medicine, and many lives have been lost, through the error of confounding all agents which excite reaction in the system with those that are absolutely essential to life, and which renovate, while they stimulate, the organs; the false notion having been thereby induced, that because certain stimuli feed, as it were, the flame of life, stimulating agents, generally, are necessary to life." Read that, ye wretched hucksters of medicines, whether with a diploma in your pocket, or a steam-mill to manufacture, and a newspaper and a score of clergyman to advertise your contemptible wares. What man, that can think as a rational being, does not feel that the great physiologist speaks the truth?

Medicine, as such, can never be incorporated with the human organism. It may, and it often does, "modify" its action, aye, even unto death; but it can add nothing to its substance It is not, therefore, a renovating or vivifying agent. Air, warmth, food and water, are the only substances capable of being incorporated with the solids: they not only help to continue, but they actually receive life, from the body.

Shall we then, reject, medicine altogether? We answer, no. In the present state of our knowledge, we are not at liberty, as true observers and humanitarians, to do so. Quinine will cure fever; mercury will cure syphilis; colchicum and hydriodate of potass will often cure rheumatism; opium will relieve pain; and numbers of other agents will effect positive, aye, and beneficial results upon the human body. Even the lancet has its legitmate uses, as we have already said. But beware of the man who speaks lightly of such an agent. It is to be hoped, as our knowledge of the true laws of nature improves, we shall be able to dispense with all these remedies.

We will now speak of the specific causes of disease, and the use of particular remedies, such as are intelligible to our instincts, or are sanctioned by sufficient observation to place the their beneficial effect beyond doubt.

The first and greatest cause of disease, beginning with its effects in early life, is cold. We can do no better than to refer our reader to the paper in our March number, from our accomplished correspondent on the effect of cold on infants.

We pity the presumption and ignorance of those conceited mothers, whose insane folly contents itself with adorning their helpless progeny with the tawdry trappings of infancy, when the very finger of nature points to the first great demand of its organism. Observe the tenacity with which the young of all animals cling to the body of the parent, in order to make up for the heat of the womb or the egg, which has just been exchanged for the cold of the outer world. If the hen or the cat desert their offspring they die! What numbers of infants have been chilled to death in the city of New York, nay, within the very chamber where they were born, and under the eye of a mother who would lay down her life for her child!

The temperature of the human body—of the adult in health—is about 97 to 98 degree's of Fahrenheit's thermometer. This is ascertained by placing the thermometer in the mouth. The blood itself is from 100 to 101 degrees: it is therefore hotter than the solids. This degree of heat, however, is only found near the heart, and in healthy persons. Breshet and Beckquerel found it at 98 degrees in the arm-pits, 96 in the loins, 94 in the thigh, 93 to 91 in the leg, and 90 in the sole of the foot.

This serves to show the reason why injuries heal sooner near the heart, and why acute inflammation is more violent. As a necessary sequence of this, it also shows why wounds heal with more diffculty in the leg.

In the last number, we showed that position will remedy this. If the person lies down, the blood will return more readily from the veins into the heart. If the heat and pain increase, then, when the body is recumbent, let the leg be raised. This affords facilities for the return of the blood from the veins, and prevents its too ready access to the part by the arteries; for it cannot so readily "run up-hill." Never forget this, reader it will give you power to do an immense deal of good to your fellows afflicted with injuries, disease, and ignorance.

The blood going from the heart, or that in the arteries, is from two to five degrees higher in temperature than that returning to the heart, or in the veins. There is a disease, or malformation, observable at birth in which, from the failure of a valve in the heart to close, the blood goes but partially through the lungs: it is therefore, although contained in the arteries, partly in the condition of venious blood. The heat of this unaerated blood is often found as low as 79 degrees. Turtles, serpents, and all cold-blooded animals have the two kinds of blood mingled, and are of a corresponding low temperature. In Asiatic cholera, a thermometer placed in the mouth rises only to 75 or 79 degrees. We have ourselves made this experiment, and can testify to the truth of Muller's observation This leads us imperatively to the practice we advocate in cholora—see the March number.

In warm climates, the temperature ranges from two, to three or four degrees higher than in cold. The temperature of the body is found, even in health, to vary about five degrees. In the ordinary state of our atmosphere, when the thermometer is at 60 degrees, the body is at 98 degrees. It will occasionally run up to 102, or even 103 degrees, when the thermometer is 90 or 100 degrees. Diseases of a febrile or exciting character raise it; and exhausting ones, such as cholera, and repaid discharges of any kind, lower it.

In the article on consumption, we endeavored to show that heat and organic strength, were closely associated with large lungs and a powerful circulation. The only facts that we can find space for in this article, are those published by Mr. Newport in the Philosophical Transactions of 1837. He there showed that the larvæ of insects, in which the respiratory organs are much smaller than the perfect insect, and which have no wings, and consequently little motion, have a much lower temperature than the perfect insect. All rapidly-flying insects have large breathing apparatus, and a much higher temperature than those that crawl.

During sleep, and the hybernation, or winter inactivity of animals, respiration diminishes, and the temperature falls. This remarkable state is produced in all those animals, when the temperature falls so low that it is not sufficient to stimulate their nervous system. There is, of course, some pecularity in this, as they are of the same temperature, when not in their winter sleep, as other warm blooded animals that do not become torpid. The bat and the hedgehog are familiar examples of hybernating animals. The bear and beaver hybernate imperfectly. During this state, respiration gradually fails, until in some of the animals, it ceases entirely. This is proved, by the fact that they can be placed in gas destructive to their lives when they are not hybernating. The blood also nearly ceases circulating—moving slightly, and that only in an undulating manner, in the large vessels near the heart.

The wonderful effect of warmth on living animals, was very apparent in some experiments on rabbits. When they had been subjected to starvation and cold, to such an extent that a number of them died and others were not able to stand, the elevation of the temperature of the room in which they were kept, caused some of them to arise and run about, taking food freely. Digestion continued in those that were kept warm, and recovery took place; while those that were again subjected to cold after eating, died. Thus it will be seen that warmth is a great medicine, a great vital stimulus. The influence of the nerves upon the development of heat, is well known to physiologists. When a principal nerve going to a limb is divided, the temperature of that limb immediately falls. Digestion also ceases, when the great nerve going to the stomach is divided.

The effect of fever in raising the temperature is familiar to all. That of passion is not less so: it affects animals in like manner. Mr. Newport observed, that by irritating an humble-bee in a box, it imparted four degrees of heat to three cubic inches of air, within five minutes: its own temperature being increased seven degrees. Does the reader ask, what has this to do with man? We answer, it is a physiological fact, equally applicable to him as to the insect. Keep down your temper. If you are in health, your circulation is rapid enough. Passion produces a temporary state of disease: it may prove too much for you. Persons have dropped dead during passion, from apoplexy, and the bursting of blood-vessels of the lungs, or weakened and dilated arteries in other parts, called aneurisms. If they recover from their rage, there is still the never-to-be-forgotten law, first enunciated by th egreat Hunter, "Increased action is followed by diminished power." This is equally as applicable to the human arteries, as to the overstrained hose of an engine. Every fit of passion weakens the organism.

But we must close this article, with this assurance, that, as warmth is essential to the development and continuance of life, it is one of those great medicines which our very instinct calls upon us to secure with the greatest care.

In our next, we shall consider the effect of particular kinds of medicine, food, and stimulating drinks. The reader can profitably recur to the article on consumption in our last number, as these subjects are intimately connected. Also, to the admirable paper of our accomplished correspondent, both in that and the present number.

A Corn Story—We have had fish stories, dog stories, snake stories, etc., in abundance, of late; now for a corn story that 'flogs' them all down. Some editor South tells the following tall one:

Being one day in the village of Y——, S. C., I listened to several planters stating the amount of corn gathered from an acre, the number of ears produced by a single stalk, &c. At length one, who had remained silent, commenced:—

'Well, I'll now tell my tale. Last spring while walking in my cornfield, I observed a stalk growing very luxuriently and being curious to know if it would produce better than others I stuck a stick which I had in my hand, beside it. I thought no more about it, until being in the field one day about gathering time, I observed a very extraordinary stalk of corn, and on counting the ears, I found thirteen full grown, besides several nubbins. It now occurred to me that this must be the stalk I had marked in the spring, and on looking for my stick I found an ear growing on that!'

A little girl meeting a countryman with a load of slaughtered swine, dropped the curtesy. The rustic laughed without returning the civility. "What," said he, "do you curtsey to dead hogs?" "No, sir," replied the little miss, "I curtisied to the live one."

'Ma somebody's going to die!' said a knowing little fellow who was looking out of the window into the street.' Why?' asked the anxious mother. 'Cause the Doctor has just gone by.'

Reward of Merit.—'Sam,' said one little urchin to another, yesterday—'Sam, does your schoolmaster ever give you any rewards of merit?'

'I s'pose he does, was the rejoinder; he gives me a lickin' regularly every day, and says I merit two!'

☞ 'My father was one of the framers of the new constitution,' said a youth of partrician blood the other day, to another of more plebian origin. 'Who cares for that?' quoth the latter, 'my father was one of the framers of the new meeting house.'

A wise Remark.—Some men are wise, and some are otherwise.

In nothing consists the dignity of man more than in self-government.

'It takes three springs,' says the Comic Almanac, 'to make one leap year.'

The climax of human indifference has arrived when a woman don't care how she looks.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Thursday, May 24, 1849.

☞ All communications must bear the name and address of the writer; not for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith, otherwise no attention will be paid to them.

We have received from the publisher, Mr. Edward Walker 114 Fulton St N. Y. A copy of a work entitled 1776! A Faithful chronicle of the war of American Independence. And a most splendid book it is, containing some seventy-eight engravings illustrative of the most important events of American History. It is a splendid specimen of American bookmaking, which is the very least part of its value, containing as it does that, that should be dear to every true hearted American; no library can be complete without it, and every young man should read, and be actuated by the spirit of those whose deeds it records.

We have also received from the same publisher The History of Romanism, from its earliest origin to the present time, by Rev. John Dowling D. D. splendidly embelished with fifty highly finished engravings This also is a most important work, and should be read by all who wish to understand the subject of which it treats. We add an extract from the (Philadelphia) Presbyterian as being better qualified to judge on such matters than we are.

Such a work required deep and protracted research, and it affords evidence that diligence, caution and judgement, in the selection and arrangement of materials, have not been wanting. The author has availed himself of the writings of both protestants and papists, and has brought together a greater mass of information on the history, the spirit, and the doings of Popery than we have ever before seen in one volume.'

Copies of the above works can be seen at the office of this paper.

THE SCALPEL.—We have received the third number of this journal. It fully sustains the high reputation gained by the first numbers, and deserves an extensive circulation for its very able expositions of the science of medicine, and its fearless exposure of quackery. An article from its pages will be found on our outside.

☞ Mr. Lutz, Collet Hall, Elizabethtown, sells clothing as cheap as any dealer in New York or elsewhere. See his advertisement.

☞ The attention of all wanting Monuments, Headstones, &c. &c. is requested to the advertisement of Mr. Wilcox.

☞ Wm. Howard can always be found at his Shaving and Hair dressing saloon, next door to the Gazette Office.

☞ All those wanting good Pumps of the best White Oak, cheap for cash, call on David Freeman.

☞ Boots and Shoes, a good assortment will be found at the new store of John Boylan.

☞ We invite the attention of Blacksmiths and others to the advertisement of Mr. Baldwin in another column. Mr. B. has a very extensive assortment which he will sell in lots to suit, at New York prices; try him and see.

An intelligent, free people are always to be trusted.—New Jersey Advocate.

Did the Advocate italicise the above words to make their inconsistency in its columns the more glaring? Was it by their declaration of principles at the Philadelphia convention that the whigs trusted the people? The whole of the Advocates article would appear as if written to burlesque whig principles.

Before the election the Locofocoes denounced General Taylor because he refused to make any pledges. Now they denounce him daily for breaking his pledges. How is this?—New Jersey Advocate.

No, not because he did not make any pledges, but because he did not declare any principles, he broke his pledges, not his principles; for neither he nor the Philadelphia Convention dare make any to break! That's how it is.

MAINE.—There being no choice by the people of Governor, the Senate re-elected John W. Dana Dem. he received 26 out of 28 votes cast.

ROBBERY AT BOSTON.—Quincy Stone Bank situated at Quincy, was robbed this morning May 22d, of $5,000 in bank bills.

As no one has attempted to justify the appointment of our present Postmaster, the following communication on the subject may appear superfluous; but as we are in favor at all times, and on all subjects, of having the opinions of the people, we insert it.

Messrs. Editors:—I perceive by reading your last number, that you are still opposed to tyranny and oppression, and whatever is anti democratic; for you seem not to approve of the recent change of the Post Office, which was done contrary to the wishes of the people. But then perhaps you have not considered the old adage, that the king can do no harm. It is well known that the citizens of Plainfield assembled agreeable to previous notice, to select a person to fill the office of Post Master, (knowing that party spirit would remove the one then in office, although he was every way qualified and quite as accommodating as the present incumbent,) and it is also true that a person well known for his honesty and Christian deportment was nominated and almost unanimously elected to receive the appointment, and a petition to that effect forwarded to the Post Master General, for his approval, which seems to have been entirely disregarded. But as the meeting was mostly composed of the laboring class, and they were so impolitic as to select a poor man, one not given to flattery or much acquainted with party intrigue; therefore the man of power, more considerate than the common herd, and influenced by some of his own political creed, thought it more humane and politic to appoint one of a higher class; one from another County, and who stands in no need of any pecuniary assistance; thus giving our citizens to understand that they may still continue to be hewers of wood and drawers of water; and mind their own business, and not trouble themselves about government affairs again until another election, when they will probably again be told they must rally to the polls and cast their votes for some good and wealthy whig to take charge of their affairs, least it should fall into the hands of some honest poor man. P.

For the Plainfield Gazette.

It is the custom of many persons to speak of the world as a wilderness, where nothing useful or beatiful can grow; as a vale of tears, where there is nothing calculated to gladden the heart, and cause it to throb with joy; as a place where everything is at war with man, causing him to wish for death in order to escape from the scene of so much wretchedness. I look upon all such teaching as wrong: for it represents the works of the Creator as falling short of answering the end for which they were designed. He made everything for a wise purpose: and what the All-wise has pronounced good, his creatures should be careful how they call evil.

The earth, though not as lovely as when it came from the hands of the Creator, is yet beautiful; it is still a pleasant home for man, with everything to minister to his comfort and happiness. The sun shines as brightly as when he first sent his beams to cheer and warm; seed-time and harvest, winter and summer, day and night, continue in their regular order to testify the regard of the Creator for his creatures; the birds warble as sweetly in the trees and the flowers give out their fragrance in the field and by the roadside as they have ever done, to gladden the heart of man; and if he would but open his eyes and behold the thousand glorious objects which surround his footsteps, and which were created expressly for his happiness, he would confess that he had abundant reason to rejoice that he lived in a world so full of the sublime and beautiful.

The world is full of beauty, but man has become so absorbed by his love of ease or by his efforts to get rich, that he has no time for the contemplation of the glory of God as manifested in his works. His evil passions have caused him to make war upon his brother, and to rob him of the privilege of enjoying the fruits of his labor. Hence, although the earth produces enough for all, the rich and the strong riot in plenty, while the poor are often forced to starve. But this is not the fault of nature; were men content with what is sufficient for their happiness, there would be no cause for suffering or complaint; but all might have enough and to spare.

If tears are shed, it is not according to the will of God. He "causeth his sun to rise on the evil and the good, and sendeth his rain on the just and on the just and on the unjust." He has contrived everything for the happiness of his creatures, and he has expressly enjoined it upon them to love one another and seek each other's good. Ah, if men but lived in obedience to the law of kindness—"Do to others as ye would that others should do unto you"—tears would cease to flow because the fountain would be dried up. When men shall love one another as themselves, we shall then hear no more cant about our world being an unfit abode for rational creatures; for its beauty will then no longer be married by the evil passions which now too generally fill the bosoms of men, and often cause them to ravage it with fire and sword.

Let us enjoy the beauties of nature which surround us on every hand, and our minds will naturally adore the Being who has made everything so lovely. If we will but take a walk into the fields, in the woods, on the mountains top, or by the seashore, we shall behold marks of the divine goodness in the objects around us. Everything proclaims in a voice not to be mistaken that the world was created as a fit abode for man; and had he lived in accordance with the law of his being, he might have been perfectly happy. And although he has not in all things obeyed the commands of his Creator, yet his lot is far from being miserable; and if he is in a proper frame of mind, he can truly exclaim "The earth is full of the goodness of the Lord." A. J.

STEAMBOAT EMPIRE.

The Coroner's Jury returned their verdict last evening. It censures the pilot of the Empire and attributes the collision to his neglect, carelessness or want of judgment.

A Coroner's Jury at Fishkill are to meet again to-morrow morning. Seven bodies have been taken to that side and three on this.

As the deck begins to give way and go to pieces valuable freight is reached.

In the clothing recovered sevearl sums of money in specie and bank notes have been found.

Another body was recovered this afternoon—making ten in all.

The raising of the wreck will be commenced on Monday.

NEWBURG, Monday May 21

Five more bodies have been recovered this afternoon from the wreck of the Empire, three of whom are identified as the remains of the Ladd brothers, from Stonington, Conn. and four of them were missing.

The other two bodies are unknown, but supposed to be immigrants.

Mrs. Ladd, the mother, is still here.

No efforts have yet been made to raise the Empire. The delay is exciting deep feelings. The opinion prevails that the boat is so much injured as not to be worth repairing and that its machinery will be taken out and the wreck left to the mercy of the elements. But it is due to the public, and especially to the survivors and friends of the missing, that the boat should be raised, and that as speedily as possible.

Many are waiting here, hoping to find the remains of their dearest friends.

The Corner's Jury is sitting on the other side of the river. The total number of bodies found is 17.

☞ The May term of the several Courts for Essex County was opened at the Court House in this city at 10 1-2 o'clock Tuesday morning—Hon. Jos. F. Randolph, of the Supreme Court, presiding. The following list comprises the names of the Grand Jury:

Sam'l H. Pennington. Foreman.

J. Henry Clark,	Edward Doughty,
Oliver Bonnel,	Theodore D. Weld,
James B. Laing,	James B. Pinneo,
John Chadwick,	Jacob Griger,
Henry Donnington,	Isaac M. Ward,

Charles Smith,	Daniel D. Reynolds,
Samuel Smith,	William Parsel,
Isaac H. Pierson,	Josiah Speer,
Levi Clark,	David M. Fitzgerald,
Ed. G. Faitoute,	Andrew Teed,

Elihu Day,

The Civil list of the term embraces nine issues from the Supreme Court, including two of the famous New York Cases, and 22 Circuit cases. There are 15 prisoners in jail, whose cases will receive the attention of the Grand Jury, including one for murder (J. C. Cowan,) and 9 for assaults, &c.—Newark Adv.

DEATHS IN NEW ORLEANS.—A correspondent of the Charleston Courier says that the total number of deaths in New-Orleans, in the last twelve months ending May 1, were 9,236, of which about 4,000 were of cholera.

TWENTY-TWO DAYS LATER FROM CALIFORNIA.

Meetings for the Organization of a Government.

BALTIMORE, Wednesday, May 16

The Southern mail has arrived with New-Orleans papers to the 9th inst. which state that meetings had been held at San Francisco and resolutions passed to organize a Legislative Assembly to be composed of fifteen members, who are to be charged with the framing of laws for the preservation of order and the protection of trade. It was also resolved to elect three Judges.

Another letter, dated Vera Cruz, 24th ult. says that it was reported that the people of California had organized a Government, which disavowed the authority of Gen Smith as Governor, and annulled his order prohibititing foreigners from working at the mines.

BOSTON, Friday, May 18.

A letter received here from a highly respectable source, dated San Francisco, March 12, gives the following interesting intelligence:

"There are at present 28 sail of vessels in port, among which is the bark Tasso from Valparaiso, which is the only American vessel, all the rest being foreigners. Emigration to the mines has commenced, and the number there from Valparaison is not far short of 3,500, and from Talcahuana 500.

It is thought that the steamship California, which has now been deserted for some time, will be able to get away by or on the 20th of April, manned by amateur sailors, consisting of such as wish to get back home with their gold.

The agent of the steamer has offered $200 per month for regular sailors, in vain.

Conflagration at St. Louis.

ST. LOUIS, Friday, May 18.

Our City was visited with a most destructive fire this morning, which consumed nearly half of the business portion of the city before the flames could be arrested. Included in the buildings destroyed were five Banking Houses, and every Insurance Office in the place.

Twenty-seven steamboats, lying at their wharves, caught fire, and shared in the general conflagration.

The Telegraph Office, which was subsequently removed to the other side of the river, was also consumed.

The loss, which is very heavy, cannot, in the present confused state of things, be correctly given, it is estimated at $6,000,000.

The whole number of houses destroyed is 418. The number of lives lost is supposed to be about 20.

The fire broke out at 10 o'clock, on the night of the 7th, on board the White Cloud, lying along the Levee. The wind was blowing a gale at the time, and the fire communicated to the stores on the river front of the city and to the adjoining steamboats. The fire was checked on Friday. Nearly the whole Levee in front of the city was destroyed, between Locust and Chestnut sts. The fire was stayed on Market-st. by blowing up the drug store of Messrs. Doenich & Valloux. There were three persons killed by an explosion on board the Alic steamboat, and Mr. Thomas B. Targee. an auctioneer, was killed during the fire in the city. He threw a keg of powder into the store of Doenich & Valloux, for the purpose of stopping the flames at the point, but the explosion took place before he got away from the building.

Frightful Progress of the Crevasse.

BALTIMORE, Friday, May 18.

The Southern mail has come to hand with New Orleans dates to the 11th inst. They state that the Dryades-st Market was entirely surrounded by water from the late crevasse, and Bacchus-st the next one toward the river, was seriously threatened. It is estimated that the water rose last night from six to twelve inches. The inhabitants in this portion of the city have become somewhat exasperated at the raising of the lower bank of the new Canal, which prevents the water from passing below, and causes it to set back more than it otherwise would. Anticipating some such demonstration last night, watchmen were stationed along the Canal to protect the bank, but notwithstanding the precaution, two or three breaches were made by parties of men, throngh which the water was pouring with great velocity. Contrary to expectation, this has not lowered the water of any consequence in the back streets. Dryades, Benton, White and Herculus sts are all nearly overflowed, and the water is gradually approaching the back streets of Lafayette. The crevasse below Algiers is rapidly increasing, and there is no present prospect of stopping it.

NEW ORLEANS, May 16th.

This afternoon accounts from the Crevasse at Sauve's plantation are more and more discouraging. There seems to be no prospect of stopping the flood. The rise of water in the rear of the city continues, and this morning was up to Philadelphia-st. pouring over the new canal with great force.

Major General WORTH, of the U. S. Army, is no more. Intelligence of his death has been recieved in this city. He expired at Antonio de bexar. He fell a victim to the prevailing Cholera on the 7th inst.—deeply deplored by officers and men of the Army.

May 17.

The picayune deplores the loss of Gen. Worth, and gives some farther details of his death. The Cholera prevails to an alarming extent, over 100 deaths had occurred at San Antonio.

The Crevasse is making fearful headway. It is said that cat-fish are caught in the streets of New-Orleans.

The Telegraph lines from New-Orleans to Baton Rouge, 120 miles were prostrated by a storm last Thursday.

The following article from the Journal of Commerce on the Astor House riot, and riots in general, will doubtless coincide with the views of all order loving citizens, as they do with our own.

The Opera House Riots.

By the late events, a great and salutary principle has been established and impressed upon the public mind, viz: that every individual of the community is entitled to the whole moral and physical protection of that community, for his person, property, and the exercise of all lawful pursuits, or industry; and that no man or collection of men can deprive another of these inherent rights, unless by due course of law, and for just cause, to be by law determined.

'If, as Civis argues, the authorities had the right to order the Theatre to be closed, and the owner or lesse. and others depending upon the same for their means of subsistence, to be deprived of their property, or their earnings, they would have an equal right to invade the Church or Tabernacle, the Factory of the Machinist, the ship yard of the Naval Architect, the Warehouses of the Merchant, the office of the Professional man, and the dwelling of the private citizen!

Where is the line to be drawn, that shall exclude any man from the enjoyment of his just rights, and his social guranties?

Mr. Forrest and Mr. Macready are both Actors. Rivals they might be in generous emulation to excel in a profession, which, for its highest walks, requires intellectual power, literary acquirement, and vivid perception

The admirers or patrons of either are entitled to the peaceable enjoyment of their rights and opinions, by paying or withholding their money to or from either; and if the Actors themselves are at feud, neither has a right to enlist public violence and outrage on his side, to put down a rival,—more than the merchant, the mechanic, the butcher, or the baker can have, to crush a supposed competitor.

Let us suppose that Louis Philippe, Queen Victoria, or a Sovereign whose will alone is law, like the Emperor Nicholas of Russia, should, by special decree, prohibit Mr. Forrest from exercising his vocation—what eloquence of voice and of pen would be invoked, to contrast the blessings of the liberty we here enjoy with such cruel tyranny. Shall we then permit any, and these not the best of our own citizens, to exercise a despotic power over their fellows, unregulated by the same intelligence which animates an enlightened Autocrat?

Of all despotisms, that of a Mob is the worst. The citizens of New York have dethroned the TYRANT, and we still breathe the air of LIBERTY!

NEW YORK, May 15th, 1849.

IRELAND

Fearful Destitution.

Sir Robert Peel, speaking of the condition of Ireland in the House of Commons, said its parallel could be found only in Algiers on the Punjaub, when suffering all the miseries of war. Bearing in mind by whom this was spoken, and to whom addressed—not by a demagogue, to an excitable multitude; not by a disaffected Irishman to his more deeply disaffected countrymen—a more correct idea may be formed of the state of the country than from a perusal of the different papers; for many of these are accused of exaggeration—and no wonder: it requires a thorough knowledge of Ireland's present condition, or a strong faith in her journalists, to give credence to all we read. In some places juvenile culprits, stealers of a few potatoes, have entreated with an earnestness that gained its prayer, to be transported; and this with a full knowledge of the horrors of a convict life, but preferring the sharpest agony to the gnawing fangs of hunger Others have actually been taken up for attempting to break into jail!

CINCINNATI, May 21

Yesterday morning ten frame buildings on Main-st. near the corporation line, were destroyed by fire. By this calamity twenty poor families are rendered houseless. The buildings were not of much value. Stoop & Hubbell's Plow factory was also burned.

☞ THAT CASE OF SMALL POX.—The unfortunate sudject of this disease, R Dunlap, who was mentioned in the Daily some time since, died as is supposed, during the night of the 5th of May, and there is too much reason to fear is the result of the want of proper care. The facts are these: On the 22d of April he was turned out of his boarding-house in Mechanic-st. because the person who kept it had small children who, it was feared, might take the disease. The night following he spent in an old omnibus without bed or covering, and the succeeding day he was walking to and fro, along the Railroad, till about 6 o' clock, when he was advised, by the Overseer of the Poor, to go into a little cabin, made of boards, in which a straw bed had recently been emptied.

Here, shivering with cold, with nothing to cover him except a amall piece of very thin old carpet, and a chair cushion under his head I found him. Nothing was offered him by tne authorities except the above advice–although he had tasted no food that day except a little pie, which caused so much pain in consequence of the soreness of his mouth that he was unable to eat it. He had money enough to pay for all that he needed, but he was literally cast out, and no one would suffer him to approach them.

If any one doubts this being a Christian country, we would inform all such, that the next article in the same column from which we make the above extract, is an account of an address delivered before the Young Men's Missionary society; established we suppose for the conversion of the heathen!!

PERSONAL DAMAGES.—John Flagg has recovered $800 damages against the town of Millbury, for injuries sustained through a bad road in the town. Wm. W. Boyington has recovered $950 at Springfield, of the Western Railroad Co. for the burning of his shop through a spark from one of the Company's engines. The Connecticut Railroad Company have filed a motion for a new trial, in the case in which Ezra H. Corning obtained a verdict of $9,040, on the ground of excessive damages.—Boston Courier.

GUTTA PERCHA.—The productions of this remarkable gum, comprise every species of moulding and interior decorations, and nothing can be more perfect than gutta percha, posessing unrivalled adaptation to decorative purposes. Smoothness and high finish are easy of attainment in any substance capable of fusion in a mould; but what is most admirable in gutta percha casts is, that, while they present an appearance closely resembling the finest polished oak, their points and edges, where the design requires it, are as sharp and crisp as if they had been done with the knife of the most skilful carver. The material is equally applicapable to the minutest and the boldest designs; and, as to durability, is less frangible, not merely than any other known composition, but perhaps than oak itself In this respect indeed, it is quite equal to papier mache. In its simple and purified state, it presents, when thrown into the shape of trays, inkstands, card-baskets, &c., a natural veining which has all the capricious and beautiful variety of oak and other highly-prized woods. By various chemical admixtures, its color can be changed at will, an exceeding smoothness of surface can be obtained, or a decided metallic appearance. The ductility of gutta percha, and the closeness its texture, render it invaluable for many purposes. In short, space would not suffice to mention the many purposes to which this remarkable product has been already found applicable, while there seems reason to believe that those most conversant with the subject are but beginning to discover the innumerable ways in which it may be made subsurvient to the benefit of man.

VESSEL WRECKED BY A WHALE.—A letter from Nicaragua says: We had quite a singular loss of a brig called the Frederic, Capt. Spinola, off Porto Anna, in Nicaragua, the other day. On the 4th of March, he sailed from Realejo, and when he had made four days sail, standing about 60 leagues from off this point, a whale came with tremendous force against the keel, carrying away it and several planks; and, of course, the water began to fill the vessel immediately. The Captain, to save her, began to throw out his cargo, but all to no purpose; and after a fruitless attempt of some 24 hours, he was obliged to abandon her. Cargo and vessel a total loss. She had a cargo of near $40,000, belonging principally to the inhabitants of San Miguel. She was loaded with indigo and hides, and bound for Lima, where she was owned; and I am under the impression that nothing was insured, owing to the fact that we have no way of insuring on this coast.

A HINT TO CALIFORNIANS.—Punch says that the best season for gold digging is—when you are in the vein.

The political papers of Portland have been making quite a sympathetic touse over a little slave boy who was purchased in Matanzas, by a company of ship-masters, and brought by one of them to this city, to be educated and established in business. The act is a very good one—admitting that it is right to purchase human beingsunder any pretense, and thereby acknowledge the right of men to deal in human flesh, and aid in keeping slave-breeding profitable,—but it is certainly singular that American captains are willing to contribute over $200 to redeem a stranger of another nation from slavery, while they are at the same time zealous supporters of their own government which sanctions the sale of just such children here! It also appears a little hypocritical for political papers to express so much sympathy for this young stranger while they are spending their whole time in supporting a government that permits and sanctions the sale and enslavement of others. How easy it is for some people, who strain at a gnat, to swallow a sawmill. They can shed tears of sympathy over the oppressed of other lands, while crushing their own countrymen beneath their feet!—Pleasure Boat.

Hail Columbia! happy land! Home of the brave! Asylum of the oppressed! Refuge from oppression where girls have their ears cut off and their owners' names burnt into their flesh with hot irons! Happy land! full of churches, priests, and Printing Presses, who talk about the glorious Gospel of the grace of God, yet open not their mouths when the smoke of living flesh ascends as a testimony against them; What a commentary on the freedom of the Gospel and of the Press!!

Gold is the God of this world. Only whisper the word, and its worshippers fall down on their knees. Breathe it in the valley, and it is heard at the mountain-top. Tell where it can be found, and the millions rush to the spot faster than they would go to heaven.

NEW USE OF THE SUNFLOWER.—It is stated that one pint of Sunflower seed mixed in animals food, on the appearance of the first symptons of founder, will give immediate and certain relief.

A WET NURSE.—A metropolean housekeeper recently advertised for a wet nurse. A young Irish girl offered herself. 'How old are you, Bridget?' 'Sixteen ma'am.' Have you ever had a baby?' 'No, ma'am, but I am very fond of them.' 'Then I'm afraid you will not do.' 'Oh please ma'am, I know I'll do; I'm very easy to teach.'

'GOING AT WHILE THEY ARE YOUNG.'—A marriage recently took place at Quebec, Canada, in which the bridegroom was aged 14, and the bride 13 years. The boy imposed upon the clergymen by wearing false whiskers, and the girl by cotton breastworks.

A Sleepy deacon, who sometimes engaged in popular games, hearing the minister use the words 'snuffle off this mortal coil,' started up, rubbed his eyes, and exclaimed. 'Hold on, its my deal!'

A barrister observed to a learned brother in court a short time since, that the wearing of whiskers was unprofessional. 'Right,' replied the friend, a lawyer cannot be too 'barefaced.'

CAUTION EXTRA

A man by the name of CLAPP has engaged with a young man of the name of S. P. Townsend, and uses his name to put up a Sarsaparilla, which they call Dr. Townsend's Sarsaparilla, denominating it GENUINE, Original, etc. This Townsend is no doctor, and never was; but was formerly a worker on railroads, canals, and the like. Yet he assumes the title of Dr., for the purpose of gaining credit for what he is not. This is to caution the public not to be deceived, and purchase none but the GENUINE ORIGINAL OLD Dr. Jacob Townsend's Sarsaparilla, having on it the Old Dr's. likeness, his family coat of arms, and his signature across the coat of arms.

Principal Office, 102 Nassau st., New York City

OLD DR. JACOB TOWNSEND,

THE ORIGINAL DISCOVERER OF THE

Genuine Townsend Sarsaparilla.

Old Dr. Townsend is now about 70 years of age, and has long been known as the AUTHOR and DISCOVERER of the GENUINE ORIGINAL "TOWNSEND SARSAPARILLA." Being poor, he was compelled to limit its manufacture, by which means it has been kept out of market, and the sales circumscribed to those only who had proved its worth, and known its value. It had reached the ears of many, nevertheless, as those persons who had been healed of sore diseases, and saved from death, proclaimed its excellence and wonderful

HEALING POWER.

Knowing, many years ago, that he had, by his skill, science and experience, devised an article which would be of incalculable advantage to mankind when the means would be furnished to bring it into universal notice, when its inestimable virtues would be known and appreciated. This time has come, the means are supplied; this GRAND AND UNEQUALLED PREPARATION is manufactured on the largest scale, and is called for throughout the length and breadth of the land, especially as it is found incapable of degeneration or deterioration.

Unlike young S. P. Townsend's, it improves with age, and never changes, but for the better: because it is prepared on scientific principles by a scientific man. The highest knowledge of Chemistry, and the latest discoveries of the art, have all been brought into requisition in the manufacture of the Old Dr's Sarsaparilla. The Sarsaparilla root, it is well known to medical men, contains many medicinal properties, and some properties which are inert or useless, and others, which if retained in preparing it for use, produce fermentation and acid, which is injurious to the system. Some of the properties of Sarsaparilla are so volatile, that they entirely evaporate and are lost in the preparation, if they are not preserved by a scientific process, known only to those experienced in its manufacture. Moreover, these volatile principles, which fly off in vapor, or as an exhalation, under heat, are the very essential medical properties of the root, which give to it all its value.

Any person can boil or stew the root till they get a dark-colored liquid, which is more from the coloring matter in the root than from any thing else; they can then strain this insipid or vapid liquid, sweeten with sour molasses, and then call it "SARSAPARILLA EXTRACT or SYRUP." But such is not the article known as the

GENUINE OLD DR. JACOB TOWNSEND'S SARSAPARILLA.

This is so prepared, that all the inert properties of the Sarsaparilla root are first removed, every thing capable of becoming acid or of fermentation, is extracted and rejected; then every particle of medical virtue is secured in a pure and concentrated form; and thus it is rendered incapable of losing any of its valuable and healing properties. Prepared in this way, it is made the most powerful agent in the

Cure of innumerable diseases.

Hence the reason why we hear commendations on every side in its favor by men, women, and children. We find it doing wonders in the cure of CONSUMPTION, DYSPEPSIA, and LIVER COMPLAINT, and in RHEUMATISM, SCROFULA, PILES, COSTIVENESS, all CUTANEOUS ERUPTIONS, PIMPLES, BLOCTHES, and all affections arising from

IMPURITY OF THE BLOOD.

It possesses a marvellous efficacy in all complaints arising from Indigestion, from Acidity of the Stomach, from unequal circulation, determination of blood to the head, palpitation of the heart, cold feet and hands, cold chills and hot flashes over the body. It has not its equal in Colds and Coughs; and promotes easy expectoration and gentle perspiration, relaxing stricture of the lungs, throat, and every other part.

But in nothing is its excellence more manifestly seen and acknowledged than in all kinds and stages of

FEMALE COMPLAINTS.

It works wonders in cases of Fluor Albus or Whites, Falling of the Womb, Obstructed, Suppressed, or Painful Menses, Irregularity of the menstrual periods, and the like; and is as effectual in curing all the forms of Kidney Diseases.

By removing obstructions, and regulating the general system, it gives tone and strength to the whole body, and thus cures all forms of

Nervous diseases and debility,

and thus prevents or relieves a great variety of other maladies, as Spinal irritation, Neuralgia, St. Vitus' Dance Swooning, Epileptic Fits, Convulsions, &c.

It cleanses the blood, excites the liver to healthy action, tones the stomach, and gives good digestion, relieves the bowels of torpor and constipation, allays inflammation, purifies the skin, equalises the circulation of the blood, producing gentle warmth equally all over the body, and the insensible perspiration; relaxes all strictures and tightness, removes all obstructions, and invigorates the entire nervous system. Is not this then

The medicine you pre-eminently need?

But can any of these things be said of S. P. Townsend's Infer or article? This young man's liquid is not to be

COMPARED WITH THE OLD DR'S,

because of one GRAND FACT, that the one is INCAPABLE of DETERIORATION, and

NEVER SPOILS,

while the other DOES; souring, fermenting, and blowing the bottles containing it into fragments; the sour, acid liquid exploding and damaging other goods! Must not this horrible compound be poisonous to the system?—What! put acid into a system already diseased with acid! What causes Dyspepsia but acid? Do we not all know that when food sours in our stomachs, what mischiefs it produces? flatulence, heartburn, palpitation of the heart, liver complaint, diarrhœa, dysentery, colic, and corruption of the blood? What is Scrotula but an acid humor in the body? What produces all the humors which bring on Eruptions of the Skin, scald Head, Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, White Swellings, Fever Sores, and all ulcerations internal and external? It is nothing under heaven, but an acid substance, which sours, and thus spoils all the fluids of the body, more or less. What causes Rheumatism but a sour or acid fluid which insinuates itself between the joints and elsewhere, irritating and inflaming the delicate tissues upon which it acts? So of nervous diseases, of impurity of the blood, of deranged circulations, and nearly all the ailments which afflict human nature.

Now is it not horrible to make and sell, and infinitely worse to use this

SOURING, FERMENTING, ACID "COMPOUND" OF S. P. TOWNSEND,

and yet he would fain have it understood that Old Dr. Jacob Townsend's Genuine Original Sarsaparilla, is an IMITATION of his inferior preparation!!

Heaven forbid that we should deal in an article which would bear the most distant resemblance to S. P. Townsend's article! and which should bring down upon the Old Dr. such a mountain load of complaints and criminations from Agents who have sold, and purchasers who have used S. P. Townsend's FERMENTING COMPOUND.

We wish it understood, because it is the absolute truth, that S. P. Townsend's article and Old Dr. Jacob Townsend's Sarsaparilla are heaven-wide apart, and infinitely dissimilar; that they are unlike in every particular, having not one single thing in common.

As S. P. Townsend is no doctor, and never was, is no chemist, no pharmaceutist—knows no more of medicine or disease than any other common, unscientific, unprofessional man, what guarantee can the public have that they are receiving a genuine scientific medicine, containing all the virtues of the articles used in preparing it, and which are incapable of changes which might render them the AGENTS of Disease instead of health.

But what else should be expected from one who knows nothing comparatively of medicine or disease! It requires a person of some experience to cook and serve up even a common decent meal. How much more important is it that the persons who manufacture medicine, designed for should know well the medical properties of plants, the best manner of securing and concentrating their healing virtues, also an extensive knowledge of the various diseases which affect the human system, and how to adapt remedies to these diseases!

It is to arrest frauds upon the unfortunate, to pour balm into wounded humanity, to kindle hope in the despairing bosom, to restore health and bloom, and vigor into the crushed and broken, and to banish infirmity that OLD DR. JACOB TOWNSEND has SOUGHT and FOUND the opportunity and means to bring his

within the reach, and to the knowledge of all who need it, that they may learn and know, by joyful experience, its

Transcendent Power to Heal.

DR. JACOB TOWNSEND. NEW YORK, Oct. 5, 1848.

WALKED ACROSS THE ROOM

with the aid of crutches. Since then, I have walked in the street: have gone alone from 36 Spruce street to the Park; thence to Lovejoy's Hotel and back. I have been to 85 Nassau street two different times, and am now frequently visiting my neighbors. During all this time, I have taken but two bottles of Old Dr. Townsend's Sarsaparilla. Oct. 4. I procured another bottle to-day (5th Oct.) I walked twice across the floor without the aid of crutches. I have also nearly recovered from obstruction of water, which gave me great distress. The pain in my back has likewise left me. I and my family have no earthly reason to ascribe my recovery to any other cause but to

OLD DR. JACOB TOWNSEND'S SARSAPARILLA.

ALEX. WELSH, 36 Spruce st.

P. S.—Several able physicians despaired of my ever walking or even raising myself from my bed again.

Old Bear Market.

BY JOHN COOPER VAIL.

A song for old Bear Market,—
And the craftsmen there that tend Shall be the poets target,
While fancy's bow we bend.
Like a loyal, brave defender
To its cherished host we'll join;
For their hearts are true and tender,
As their juicy, red sirloin.

There stands each faithful sentry,
Dealing ever fair and just;
Like Egypt's store of plenty,
When prince Joseph held his trust.
Though thy markets architecture
May not rival Pharaoh's hall,
Each is king, beyond conjecture,
O'er his pure and spotless stall.

We have read in Froissart's pages
Of thy craft in days of yore;
And the wealth of future ages
Will retain their deeds in store;
When thy clan's well guarded banner
Made the haughty foe repent;
And the lords of fief and manor
Craved thy audience at Ghent.

For you, fair Orange County
Reaps the golden-bearded grain;
For you the North-land's bounty
Keeps her harvest fields in train:
For you the swart mechanic
Plies the bellows at his forge;
For you the soul organic
Must its store of wealth disgorge;

For you the hardy German
Ploughs the prairies' fertile soil;
For you great Nature's firman
Cheers the weary son of toil;
For you a thousand barges
Stem the Hudson's silver tide;
And your kingdom still enlarges
With your custom far and wide.

Then let every one endeavor
To guard thy fair renown:
May old Bear Market ever
Be the pride of New York town!
From the ashes of its glory,
When its form in ruin lies,
Like the phœnix of old story,
May a new Bear Market rise.

'Denis, darling, och, Denis, what is it you're doing?'

'Whist, Biddy, I'se trying an expirament!'

'Murder! what is it?'

'What is it, did yer say? Why its giving hot wather to the chickens I am, so they'll be after laying boiled eggs!'

What kind of tree do rhymes grow on? Why poet-tree, of course.

The papers tell us that adventurers are going in flocks to California. This is the way in which geese always travel.--Scotch paper.

The True Aristocrats.

BY C. D. STUART.

Who are the nobles of the earth—
The true aristocrats,—
Who need not bow their heads to lords,
Nor doff to kings their hats?
Who are they, but the men of toil,
The mighty and the free,
Whose hearts and hand subdue the earth,
And compass all the sea!

Who are they, but the men of toil
Who cleave the forests down,
And plant amid the wilderness
The hamlet and the town?
Who fight the battles, bear the scars,
And give the world its crown
Of name, and fame and history,
And pomp of old renown!

These claim no gaud of heraldry;
And scorn the knightning rod;
Their coats of arms are noble deeds;
Their peerage is from God!
They take not from ancestral graves
The glory of their name,
But win, as erst their fathers won,
The laurel wreath of Fame. [Tribune.

THE CAPTIVES DAUGHTER.

A SCOTTISH TALE.

When the tyranny and bigotry of the last James drove his subjects to take up arms against him, one of the most formidable enemies to this dangerous usurpations, was Sir John Cochrane, ancestor of the present Earl of Dundonald. He was one of the most prominent actors in Argyle's rebellion, and for ages a destructive gloom seemed to have hung over the house of Campbell, enveloping in a common ruin all who united their fortunes to the cause of its chieftains. The same doom encompassed Sir John Cochrane. He was surrounded by the king's troops—long, deadly, and desperate was his resistance; but, at length, overpowered by numbers, he was taken prisioner, tried, and condemned to die upon the scaffold. He had bnt a few days to live, and the jailor waited but the arrival of his death-warrant to lead him forth to execution. His family and friends had visited him in prison, and exchanged with him the last, the long, the heart-yearning farewell. But there was one who came not with the rest to receive his blessing, one who was the pride of his eyes, and of his house, even Grizel, the daughter of his love. Twilight was casting a deeper gloom over the gratings of his prison-house—he was mourning for a last look of his favorite child, and his head was pressed against the cold, damp walls of his cell, to cool the feverish pulsations that shot through it like stings of fire, when the door of his apartment turned slowly on its unwilling hinges, and his keeper entered, followed by a young and beautiful lady. Her person was tall and commanding, her eyes, dark, bright, and tearless; but their very brightness spoke of sorrow—of sorrow too deep to be wept away; and her raven tresses were parted over an open brow, clear and pure as the polished marble. The unhappy captive raised his head as they entered—

'My child! my own Grizel!' he exclaimed, and she fell upon his bosom.

'My father!' sobbed the miserable maiden, and she dashed away the tear that accompanied the words.

'Your interview must be short—very short,' said the jailor, as he turned and left them for a few minutes together.

'God help and comfort thee, my daughter!' added the unhappy father, as he held her to his breast, and printed a kiss upon her brow. 'I had feared that I should die without bestowing my blessing on the head of my own child, and that stung me more than death; but thou art come, my love—thou art come! and the last blessing of thy wretched father—'

'Nay, forebear! forbear!' she exclaimed; 'not thy last blessing! not the last! My father shall not die!'

'Be calm! be calm, my child!' returned he; 'would to Heaven that I could comfort thee! my own! my own! But there is no hope—within three days, and thou and all my little ones will be—'

Fatherless, he would have said, but the words died on his tongue.

'Three days!' repeated she, raising her head from his breast, but eagerly pressing his hand; 'three days! then there is hope—my father shall live! Is not my grandfather the friend of Father Petre, the confessor and the master of the king? From him he shall beg the life of his son, and my father shall not die.'

'Nay! nay, my Grizel!' returned he; 'be not deceived—there is no hope!—already my doom is sealed!—already the king has signed the order for my execution, and the messenger of death is now on the way.'

'Yet, my father shall not!—shall not die!' she repeated, emphatically, and clasping her hands together—'Heaven speed a daughter's purpose!' she exclaimed; and, turning to her father, said, calmly—'We part now, but we shall meet again.'

'What would my child?' inquired he, eagerly, gazing anxiously on her face

'Ask not now,' she replied; 'my father, ask not now, but pray for me, and bless me—but not with thy last blessing.'

He again pressed her to his heart, and wept upon her neck. In a few moments the jailor entered, and they were torn from the arms of each other.

On the evening of the second day after the interview we have mentioned, a way faring man crossed the drawbridge at Berwick, from the north, and proceeding down Marygate, sat down to rest upon a bench by the door of an hostelry, on the south side of the street, nearly fronting where what was called the Main-guard then stood. He did not enter the inn, for it was above his apparent condition, being that which Oliver Cromwell had made his head-quarters a few years before, and where, at a somewhat earlier period, James the Sixth had taken up his residence when on his way to enter on the sovereignty of England. The traveller wore a coarse jerkin, fastened round his body by a leathern girdle, and over it a short cloak, composed of equally plain materials. He was evidently a yong man; but his beaver was drawn down, so as almost to conceal his features. In the one hand he carried a small bundle, and in the other a pilgrim's staff. Having called for a glass of wine, he took a crust of bread from his bundle, and, after resting for a few minutes, rose to depart. The shades of night were setting in, and it threatened to be a night of storms. The heavens were gathering black, the clouds rushing from the sea, sudden gusts of wind were moaning along the streets, accompanied by heavy drops of rain, and the face of the Tweed was troubled 'Heaven help thee, if thou intendest to travel far in such a night as this!' said the sentinel at the English gate, as the traveller passed him and proceeded to cross the bridge.

In a few minutes he was upon the borders of the wide, desolate, and dreary moor of Tweedmouth, which, for miles, presented a desert of whins, fern, and stunted heath, with here and there a dingle covered with thick brushwood. He slowly toiled over the steep hill, braving the storm which raged in wildest fury. The rain fell in torents, and the wind howled as a legion of famished wolves, hurling its doleful and angry echoes over the heath. Still the stranger pushed onward, until he had proceeded about two or three miles from Berwick, when, as if unable longer to brave the storm, he sought shelter amidst some crab and bramble bushes by the way-side. Nearly an hour had passed since he sought this imperfect refuge, and the darkness of the night and the storm had increased together, when the sound of a horse's feet was heard, hurriedly plashing along the road. The rider bent his head to the blast. Suddenly, his horse was grasped by the bridle, the rider raised his head, and the traveller stood before him, holding a pistol to his breast.

'Dismount!' cried the stranger, sternly.

The horseman, benumed and stricken with fear, made an effort to reach his arms, but in a moment, the hand of the robber, quitting the bridle, grasped the breast of the rider, and dragged him to the ground. He fell heavily on his face, and for several minutes remained senseless. The stranger seized the leathern bag which contained the mail for the north, and flinging it on his shoulder, rushed across the heath.

Early on the following morning, the inhabitants of Berwick were seen hurrying in groups, to the spot where the robbery had been committed, and were scattered in every direction around the moor; but no trace of the robbery could be obtained

Three days had passed and Sir John Cochrane yet lived. The mail which contained his death-warrant had been robbed; and, before another order could be given, the intercession of his father, the Earl of Dundonald, with the king's confessor, might be successful. Grizel now became almost his constant companion in prison, and spoke to him words of comfort. Nearly fourteen days had passed since the robbery of the mail had been committed, and protracted hope in the bosom of the prisoner became more bitter than his first despair. But even that hope, bitter as it was perished. The intercession of his father had been unsuccessful—and a second time the bigoted, and would be despotic monarch, had signed the warrant for his death. and within little more than another day that warrant would reach his prison.

'The will of Heaven be done!' groaned the captive.

'Amen!' returned Grizel, with wild vehemence; 'but my father shall not die!'

Again the rider with the mail had reached the moor of tweedmouth, and a second time he bore with him the doom of Cochrane. He spurred his horse to its utmost speed, he looked cautiously before, behind, and around him; and in his right hand he carried a pistol ready to defend himself The moon shed a ghostly light across the heath, rendering desolation visible, and giving a spiritual embodiment to every shrub. He was turning the angle of a straggling copse, when his horse reared at the report of a pistol, the fire of which seemed to dash into its very eyes. At the same moment his own pistol flashed, and the horse rearing more violently, he was driven from the saddle. In a moment, the foot of the robber was upon his breast, who, bending over him, and brandishing a short dagger in his hand, said:

'Give me thine arms, or die!'

The heart of the kings servant failed within him; and without venturing to reply he did as he was commanded.

'Now go thy way,' said the robber sternly; 'but leave with me thy horse, and leave with me the mail—lest a worse thing come upon thee.'

The man therefore arose, and proceeded towards Berwick, trembling; and the robber, mounting the horse which he had left, rode rapidly across the heath.

Preparations were making for the execution of Sir John Cochrane, and the officers of the law waited only for the arrival of tne mail with his second death-warrant to lead him forth to the scaffold, when tidings arrived that the mail had been robbed. For yet fourteen days, and the life of the prisoner would be again prolonged. He again fell on the neck of his daughter, and wept and said:

It is good—the hand of Heaven is in this!"

'Said I not,' replied the maiden—and for the first time she wept aloud—'that my father should not die?'

The fourteen days were not yet past, when the prison doors flew open, and the Earl of Dondonald rushed to the arms of his son. His intersession with the confessor had been at length successful; and, after twice signing the warrant for the execution of sir John, which had as often failed in reaching its destination, the king had sealed his pardon. He had hurried with his father from the prison to his own house—his family were clinging around him, shedding tears of joy—and they were marveling with gratitude at the mysterious providence that had twice intercepted the mail, and saved his life, when a stranger craved an audience. Sir John desired him to be admitted—and the robber entered. He was habited, as we have before described, with the coarse cloak and coarser jerkin; but his bearing was above his condition. On entering, he slightly touched his beaver, but remained covered.

'When you have perused these,' said he, taking two papers from his bosom, 'cast them into the fire!'

Sir John glanced on them, started, and became pale—they were his death-warrants.

'My deliverer,' exclaimed he, 'how shall I thank thee—how repay the saviour of my life? My father—my children—thank him for me!'

The old Earl grasped the hand of the stranger; the children embraced him, and he burst into tears.

'By what name,' eagerly inquired Sir John, 'shall I thank my deliverer?'

The stranger wept aloud; and raising his beaver, the raven tresses of Grizel Cochrane fell upon the coarse cloak!

'Gracious Heaven!' exclaimed the astonished and enraptured father, 'my own child my saviour! my own Grizel!'

It is unnecessary to add more—the imagination of the reader can supply the rest; and, we may only add that Grizel Cochrane, whose heroism and noble affection have here been hurriedly and imperfectly sketched, was, tradition says, the grandmother of the late Sir John Stuart of Allan-bank, and great-great-grandmother of Mr. Coutts, the celebrated banker.—Boston Pictorial National Library.

QUEER OCCUPATIONS.—The English tradesman, who furnish any part of the furniture, apparel, or equipage of the Queen's household, deem it a privilege to announce the fact that they are the Queen's own artizans in that particular branch. Thus it has been lately announced that Stiven & Son have been lately appointed 'snuff-box makers to the Queen.' But Douglas Jerrold insists, in his Weekly News, that her gracious majesty does not titillate the muscous membrance of her probocis with pulverized tobacco. If this is true, says a cotemporary, why has the royal female libelled herself by appointing a snuff-box maker? Certain it is that her majesty's illustrious grandmother, of pug-nosed memory, took the strongest 'Irish blackguard" by the fistfull, peppering her ruff with the same pretty liberally in the operation. She, heaven rest her royal remains! had a much stronger penchant for snuff than soap. The snuff-box business is rather a strange one for her majesty to patronize; but it does not equal in oddity another business which is announced by a sign over one of the largest establishments in London: 'Smith & Co., breeches maker to her majesty!' We wonder what Albert thinks of that?

Concert.

Do not forget the Concert which is to be given at the Methodist Episcopal Church in this Village, on TUESDAY Evening, June 5th. by the Choir of the Broad Way Tabernacle, New York, under the direction of Mr. George Andrews. There will be several new pieces sung, never before heard in this Village. The fame of this Choir will doubtless secure a full house.

SUBSCRIBER.

A MODEL TOWN.—A correspondent of the Investigator says: 'the town of Medbury, (N. H.) supports neither doctor, lawyer minister, nor pauper! It is one of the best farming towns in New-Hampshire, has about ninety voters, many of whom are thrifty and wealthy farmers. The people are moral, intelligent, and healthy without the aid of professional gentlemen, and doubtless find their pockets in a better condition than some of their less fortunate neighbors.

How is this? Here is a town whose people are moral, intelligent, and healthy; without the aid of doctor, lawyer, or minister, and also without paupers! The inference to be drawn from this certainly is, that other towns may do without their aid; that the people of Plainfield may also do without their aid; 'and doubtless find their pockets in better condition,' and their labors lighter therefor: the people of Plainfield are certainly heavily taxed for the support of these non-producing classes.

Mankind have so long been the dupes of the above named classes, that a very large portion of the human race actually believe that the world would be destroyed but for their aid! They virtually say by their acts, that mankind could not exist but for the doctor, the lawyer, and the priest! They ask, what will become of the sick without the doctor? Who will expound the law? How will mankind be saved without a priest?

Although this is an important subject, yet time and space will only permit me to glance at it. The doctor, the lawyer, and the priest, are non-producers; consequently, the farmer, the tailor, the black-smith, the shoe-maker, the hatter, &c. must produce for them; and of course the more there are of the non-producing class among any given number, as a town, a city, or a country, the more will be each laboring man's or producers proportion, in said town, city or country; the more hours they must work, and the less wages they must recieve; if all were producers of the necessary wants of mankind, there would be an abundance for all, with but a small amount of labor for each to perform.

Now there are in Plainfield too many of the non-producing class; there are six or eight churches, with a minister to each; three doctors, three or four lawyers, who produce nothing, and whose saleries and fees in the aggregate, together with interest on cost of churches do not amount to less than $10,000 or 12,000 annually, for the producing class to pay. Now there is no more necessity for Plainfield having to pay this sum, than there is for the model town in N. H. If they, there, can by living temperately, honestly, and virtuously, do without doctors, lawyers, and ministers, so they may in Plainfield. All know or can know if they but think for themselves, that the intemperate use of spirituous liquors, tobacco, coffee, tea, beer, wine; intemperance in living, and working; some not working at all, while others work to excess, together with exposure, are almost the sole cause of disease, and create the necessity for doctors; remove the cause and the effects cease; 'be ye temperate in all things,' and there will be no necessity for doctors.

The next is the lawyer. And by these presents, doth give, grant, bargain, sell, alien, enfeoff, convey, and confirm, unto the said party of the second part.—Now the nature of this obligation is such—that no one but a lawyer can understand it,—hence the necessity of lawyers. Does an honest man require the assistance of a lawyer to enable him to pay his debts? How many rogues have evaded the payment of theirs by the aid of a lawyer? These questions, will give their own answers, if you only listen to the echo! 'Owe no man any thing, but love one another;' by complying with this, there will be no necessity for lawyers.

The next is the priest. Was Christ a presbyterian, a baptist, a methodist, a quaker, or a catholic, or all of these, that there is a necessity for so many churches in so small a Village as Plainfield?—Would he recognize all, or any of these churches as teachers of his doctrine; and if any, which? Or, would he not rather rebuke them as he did the pharisees and sadducees of old? Did he not heal the sick and comfort the afflicted? Yet I noticed in a recent number of your paper, that a Mr. Elias Day in the city of Newark, a city of churches, was turned into the street although in the last stages of consumption, and suffered to die in a stable; and still more recently a Mr. Dunlap who died of the small pox, 'in a little cabin made of boards; he was litterally cast out and no one would suffer him to approach them.' 'I was sick and in prison, and ye visited me not.' 'When saw we thee sick or in prison.' 'Inasmuch as ye did it not unto one of these &c.' 'Do unto others as ye would that others should do unto you;' on these hang all the law and the prophets.' So you percieve that the principles of the Gospel are not practised the most, where there are the most ministers or churches, and therefore that they are not necessary to man's salvation. 'Search the Scriptures for they testify of me.' Ministers nor churches are not necessary for that.

Legal Killing.

Day before yesterday Enos G. Dudley was hung at Haverhill, N. H. This morning at 8 o'clock, Washington Gode is to be hung at Boston, and in different parts of the country are other criminals awaiting the same end. This year the gallows is unusually busy.

The hanging which takes place at Boston this morning is private, only a limited number of persons being present by special invitation. It is generally admitted that the ordinance abolishing public executions is a good one, and that it is much better when the law has a man to kill, that the mass of the people should not behold the awful spectacle. The reason of this is that experience has shown open exhibitions of legal killing to have so disastrous an effect on public feeling and morals as to render nugatory one great purpose of the law in punishing, namely, the prevention of crime. Even the most obstinate advocate of Capital Punishment would not wish either to revive the loathsome scenes which attended its infliction when the whole country round flocked to every hanging, or the evils which thence resulted to the community.

But on the other hand it is absurd that an act which it is claimed has a beneficial effect on the public, should be performed in secrecy, or its benefits confined to a small number of privileged individuals. If the gallows be really a useful institution its usefulness cannot consist with its being hidden. If it elevates the tone of morals in a community, if it increases good and hinders evil that the lives of certain offenders should be taken, if the fact that murderers are sure of being put to death prevents murder, surely that fact should be made known the most widely possible, and the greatest possible number of men, women and children should be collected to see them slain. Is it not then plain that the considerations which forbid Capital Punishments to be public forbid their taking place at all?

One of the strongest indications of improvement in the social condition of mankind is the less vindictive and severe treatment of criminals and unfortunate persons. He is a bold, or a blind man who now contends with any hope for the perpetuation of the gibbet or the guillotine. They will ere long be consigned to the obscurity in which molder the thumb-screw, the rack, the weel and other similar inventions. And at last it will be understood that the duty of Society toward offenders is not only to restrain and prevent but to cure, educate and reform.

The hanging of Washington Gode this morning will do more to effect the abolition of Capital Punishment in Massachusetts than any amount of mere argument could do. It is probably the last execution which will take place in that State. —N. Y. Tribune of May 25.

SEVEN DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

Arrival of the Caledonia.

The Caledonia brings £56,000 sterling in specie and 40 passengers, 15 of whom stopped at Halifax. She was to have left for Boston at 9 o'clock, and would be due at her wharf, at about 10 o'clock Saturday morning.

ENGLAND.

The important fact is stated in the London papers of the 11th that a joint note, the production of the Courts of Great Britain and France, has been addressed to the Cabinet of St. Petersburgh, intimating their disapproval of the intervention of Russia in the Austro-Hungarian dispute, and insisting that such interference be with-drawn.

The arguments on the writ of error brought by W. S. O'Brien and McManus have been read before the Lords, and without hearing counsel for the Crown the Law Lords and Judges unanimously decided that the errors assigned by the plaintiffs could not be maintained by the arguments and that the judgment of the Court of Queen's Bench in Ireland must stand affirmed. It is now expected that the sentence of transportation will be carried into effect before the 1st proximo. It is rumored that the prosecution of Duffy is abandoned.

IRELAND.

The Decision against O'Brien and McManus.

The House of Lords had endorsed the judgment of the Court below, and Her Majesty may execute, hang, draw and quarter the prisoners, transport them beyond the seas, immure them in a prison for life, or do anything else she pleases with them.

A report currently believed, says that Mr. Attorney General Monaghan will not again prosecute Duffy. At present the latter gentleman is in London, and is in rather poor health.

Great destitution still prevails in the South and West of Ireland. Starvation is the order of the day.

ROME.

In Italy the advance of the French expedition toward Rome has been checked by the resistance of the Republicans of the Roman States. In two encounters the French were driven back with great loss, and Capt. Oudinot, unprepared for such a reception, has withdrawn his troops four leagues from the city, and there waits for reinforcements and farther instructions from his Government. The French had 180 killed and 400 wounded.

The Work goes On.

The news from the Old World which we this morning publish will send a fever of excitement through this country. Since the beginning of the Revolution, Europe has not presented so deeply convulsed an aspect as now. Hitherto the battle has seemed to rage at some single point and to change from region to region; now it has become omnipresent. We see there a whole continent in the pangs of social dissolution, throwing off by mighty and terrible fever fits the false order, effete institutions, dead forms, priveleges, and deep-seated wrongs which ages had fixed on the People and selfish fools thought to preserve.

IN FRANCE, the center of the Social war the hostility has come near breaking out between the soldiers and their officers, as some say, because to Socialists have corrupted the former. But do they who say this not know that the soldiers are of the People, and must in time hold the same ideas and purposes?

ROME has repelled the French intervention, and added to the Gallic tri-color, that once floated in Italian air for another end, a disgrace which it now deserved, and which subsequent triumphs against the Roman republic can only deepen.

IN GERMANY there are insurrections; long days of bloody fighting in the streets of the beautiful City of Dresden, of fighting not yet ended; in other places outbreaks partially put down, but everywhere the revolutionary earthquake waiting only for its signal to shake the whole super-incumbent mass of things. What rouses Germany now is the question of the National Unity. The Frankfort Parliament may have secured a shadow, but it had the whole people behind it, and its work will never be allowed to fall to the ground. Meanwhile Germany continues victorous in Schleswig; that will only help the Revolution.

Still the Magyears hold their ground, and launch defiance, not only at Austria, which they have beaten, but at Russia, whose hordes are pouring down upon them. In Gallicia the elements are prepared, and Poland only bides her hour. France and England lay protest against the Russian intervention. Protest here means armed opposition,.

The European War is thus begun; the third act of the Revolution has opened. When will the curtain fall upon its catastrophe, and the embattled nations, having buried the remaies of Kings and of all Aristocracies, return in peace to their homes?—N. Y. Tribune.

There is now above $8,000,000, of specie in the Banks of New York and enogh more in the Sub Treasury, to make an aggregate of at least $10,000,000.

Written for the Plainfield Gazette.

About five miles from Plainfield, at the foot of the second mountain, a short distance east from the road crossing to Mount Bethel is an old grave yard of a very ancient date.

During the revolutionary war there was quite a thickly settled neighborhood near this spot. The earliest settlers in the valley uniformly built their dwellings at the foot of the the mountain. The oldest citizens in that part of the country can yet point out to you the spot where their fathers lived, and where themselves were born.

At the time the war began there was perhaps about thirty families living here; and, if they did not have many of the so-called luxuries of life, they had everything to make themselves comfortable. The fathers and their sons tilled the earth; and at that period the land, which is now covered with bushes and in some spots with large trees, produced abundant crops of the finest wheat. (There are many persons living in Warren township who remember the time when wheat was sown in many places on the south side of this mountain, almost to its summit.) There was not one of the settlers but owned cattle and sheep, which in summer roamed over extensive mountain pastures, and in winter were sheltered and fed in comfortable folds. The mothers and their daughters (unlike the women of our times,) employed their hours in the pleasant and healthful labors of the dairy; and in spinning and weaving linen and woolen cloth. There was no attempts among people thus situated to outshine each other in dress or equipage. They could all speak to each other kindly and minister to each others wants. They were all equals, and therefore there was no arrogance on one hand, and servility on the other. They lived happily together, and worshipped God as they thought proper, with none to molest or make them afraid.

At the commencement of the war a man by the name of John Gray was living here with his family. The eldest of his five children, all of whom were robust and active, was Isabella, now eighteen years of age. If any of my fair readers imagine that Isabella was brought up in ignorance; they are mistaken. If they suppose she was a wild country girl, without refinement or maidenly modesty, they err greatly. From her earliest years she was passionately fond of learning; and although at that period there were no "societies for the diffusion of useful knowledge," yet there were many books in the settlement, and as she was beloved by all, ever book was at her disposal. It was not necessary in those primitive times for a young woman to work from fifteen to twenty hours per day, to earn food and clothing; and Isabella, although there was not a more industrious maiden in the settlement, found plenty of time to improve her mind by reading and conversation. Her mother had received a good education in her native country (England), and she was too well aware of the advantages of learning to bring up her children in ignorance.

I am but a poor hand at description, or I would speak of the personal appearance of Isabella. She was not one of your pale beauties, whose freshness has been destroyed by incessant labor with the needle; but the roses bloomed on her cheeks, and her eye sparkled with happiness.—Her labors at the churn and the wheel, instead of injuring her health and destroying her beauty, caused her constitution to become robust, and planted fresh blossoms on her cheeks. Although one of the most beautiful girls of her time, her simple unaffected manners and goodness of heart, won for her the love and gratitude of all.

Isabella was loved by the son of a worthy neighbor, named Johnson. And John Johnson was every way worthy of a maiden so lovely and good. They had been playmates from infancy, and were therefore intimately acquainted with each other. Their parents had always been very friendly, and the children were accustomed to share their labors and pastimes together. But as I only designed to state a few facts, I must leave the reader to fill up the outlines of the picture, while I narrate the melancholy end of three human beings, two of whom were at this time as happy as any of our race; they loved one another devotedly and were looking forward to the period when their nuptials should be solemnized.

No part of the country suffered more from the effects of the war than our own state; and none made greater sacrifices to achieve our independence. Bounded by New-York and Philadelphia, which were both a long time in posession of the enemy, our state was constantly overrun, and every evil that a savage foe could inflict, our people, who were much exposed, were at times obliged to suffer.

At the first appeal to arms, almost every male inhabitant of this peaceful settlement took an active part in defence of their country. Young Johnson had taken farewell of his mistress, and having equiped himself in the best manner he was able, started with his comrades on their way to the camp. They had not proceeded far, however, before an event occurred which was attended with most fatal consequences. In crossing the first mountain, they were met by three men, one of whom was known to be a tory. This was the youngest of the party, and he, it was believed at the time, had some secret grudge against young Johnson. As he commenced abusing Johnson, he was told in return that tories should not be too free with their tongues, as they might soon find the country an unpleasant residence. On this, the tory whose name was Morse, drew a knife and inflicted a mortal wound on Johnson, by stabbing him in the side.—The act was so sudden that no effort on the part of the volunteers could prevent it.

Morse was arrested, and confined to abide his trial. Johnson was borne by his companions to the home which he had so recently left in the enjoyment of health, and in the anticipation of happiness on the close of the war, in being united to the lovely Isabella.

Isabella, although she had shed no tears on parting with her lover, as she did not wish by any act of hers to unnerve him when about starting for the defence of his country, immediately retired to her chamber; and having commended him to the protecting care of her heavenly Father, she could not, in view of the dangers he would have to encounter, help giving vent to her tears. She had, however, become quite composed, and was about engaging in some domestic duty, when she was startled by a cry of distress. On opening the door her mother saw a number of men approaching the house, bearing something on their Shoulders. A few moments sufficed to learn that somebody had been injured, and hurrying to the spot where the party had halted for a moment, they speedily learned that Johnson had met some serious accident. It was not, however, until the party reached the home of the young man that they were apprised of his dangerous condition. Though there were heart-rending cries from the parents, and although even stern-hearted men were not ashamed to weep, Isabella suffered no external mark to betray the grief which was breaking her heart. She took her station at the side of her lover, and while the sands of life where running out, employed herself in wiping the cold sweats from his brow. Once only when the dying man whispered "We shall meet again," did she speak. "We shall soon meet again, John," was the reply.

Ah, there are bitter tears falling over the couch of the wounded man. He had been loved by all his companions, and respected by all who knew him. It was sad to see the young and good die thus. Had he fallen on the field of battle, although his friends would have wept much, yet they would have enjoyed the consolation of knowing that he died in the service of his country.

It is needless to say that the parents of the young man were almost beside themselves with grief. They wrung their hands and refused to be comforted. There lay their eldest-born, whom they loved passionately, in the agonies of death. They well knew that in a few moments more, that son, from whose veins the blood was rapidly oozing, would be alike insensible to the joys or pains of earth. Death was entering their dwelling in his most fearful form; we need not wonder that joy and gladness had departed from the place, and that lamentation and sorrow had taken up their abode instead.

Johnson gradually became weaker, and having told his friends to cease their weeping as he was free from pain, closed his eyes and died without a struggle. Isabella fell from her seat, and in raising her from the floor, a stream of blood flowed from her mouth. O death, could not one victim suffice? Alas, there is loud lamentation in that dwelling, for Isabella has also ceased to live. A blood vessel had burst, and a very short period after Johnson had expired, Isabella's companions were called on to prepare her for the grave. The day following which was the sabbath, John Johnson and Isabella Gray were buried in one grave, and until within a few years a large free-stone pointed out the place where they repose.

It is many years since there has been a single dwelling left standing in this once peaceful and flourishing settlement. Even the places where many of them stood has become overgrown with bushes; and the grave-yard is now almost covered with forest trees. Many headstones, however, yet mark the spot where repose the tender infant, the lovely maiden, the robust youth, as well as persons of mature age. I have often thougt in passing this spot, that after "life's fitful fever" was over, I should like to be buried here. It is a singular custom of ours to bury those we love in the crowded burial places of our towns and cities.—But I digress. And as I have already extended this sketch far beyond my expectation, I will with your permission, give an accout of the murderer's end in another article. J. C. A.

WRECK OF THE EMPIRE.—Mr. Ernot, District Attorney of Duches County, has written to Mr. Churchill, coroner of the jury sitting at Fiskhill, that if that jury shall return a verdict imputing criminal neglect of willful misconduct to one as a cause of the loss of life on board the Empire, the evidence ought to be laid before the Oyer and Terminer Grand Jury of the County. The jurors have also addressed the coroner, stating their belief that all the bodies are not yet recovered, and requsted him to prevent the removal of the wrecked vessel to New-York.

DISASTERS AT SEA AND GREAT LOSS OF LIFE.—The Maria, from Limeric, with 111 emigrants for Quebec, is reported to have foundered in the ice in the Gulf of St. Lawrence—all lost, except five of the crew. The Mary & Elizabeth, from Sunderland, with coals, also reported wrecked in the Gulf. Crew saved. The ship Torrance, which sailed from Liverpool on the 28 March, with a general cargo for montreal, foundered on the 18th ult. The crew, after having been seven days in the ship's boat, were taken on board the Fingalton, and arrived at Quebec.

The New-Orleans Picayune of the 20th, says that the city is about in the same condition. The water had slightly receded. The Tumsburg crevasse was opening wider and causing great destruction of property. Sauve's crevasse remained unchecked, and the inhabitants were suffering distress from the overflow.

The steamer Galveston had arrived with later intelligence from Honduras.

The capture of Bacalar by the Yucateos, was confirmed. The fighting lasted six hours. Two hundred and fifty of the Indians were killed. On the side of the Yucatecos, among the killed was Capt. Kelly of New-Orleans, who was in command of the Americans.

The Pea Patch Island in the Deleware, so long the subject of controversy between New Jersey and Deleware, is now the scene of bustle and activity. The Government works are proceeding rapidly under Major Saunders.

The tradesmen, grocers and others, in the neighborhood of Burlington, will lose, as it is said, about $60,000 by the failure of Bishop Doane.

GUNPOWDER VS. CHOLERA.—When the Cholera visited London in 1832 and '33, the city authorities had small quantities of gunpowper tied tightly in strong paper and fired in the alleys and densely populated portions of the great metropolis. The concussion disturbed the air, and the odor from the powder displaced obnoxious effluvia and purified the atmosphere. It was used in theatres, churches and schoolrooms, and was found to be a powerful disinfecting agent, the smell remaining upwards of 24 hours in the buildings. It was used in the lazarettos of Trieste and Malta, and was tried in Paris in 1833, and also in Montreal. In the latter city cannon were placed in the narrow streets and fired with blank cartridges. In some of the Western towns recently afflicted, the same remedy has been tried with success.—Journal of Commerce.

SEWING IMPROVED.—We have been shown specimens of bags for grain, buckwheat, hominy and salt, sewed by machinery, which exceed in strength and beauty any we have before seen. We are told that they can be finished at a much lower price than those formerly sewed by hand. The proprietors are now engaged on a contract of 15,000 per day, and they have machinery capable of sewing twice that amount.—Journal of Commerce.

ACCORDING to an act of the present Legislature of New York, passed it 1847, the steamer Empire, if the late casuality should be fastened on her, can be libeled by the parties who have lost relatives, and such damages recovered in each case as a Jury shall deem fair and just. Further than this all persons convicted of being participant to the casuality can be tried and imprisoned for not more than five years and fined not more than $250, or can be both fined and imprisoned. This act should be widely-circulated by the press, and held as a wearing over vessels transporting passengers on our river and lakes. It is both desirable and just.

Colonel Fremont and his party have arrived safely in California.

☞ There were thirty-seven deaths in St. Louis on the 17th inst. of which twenty-four were from Cholera and one from starvation.

THE WHISKEY MONOMANIAC.—Miller, whom the Grand Jury, at Hagerstown, Md. refused to find a bill against some time since for stealing a gallon measure of whiskey, on the ground of monomania, (he having been twice in the Penitentiary for the same offense before,) was returned to jail again last week charged with an attempt to break into a distillery in Leitersburgh District, for the purpose of again stealing whiskey —Balt. Sun, 23d.

Watertown (Jefferson Co.) will soon recover, from the effects of the late conflagration. Preparations are already making, to rebuild some of the principal blocks.

A paper is about to be started in Montreal, for the advocacy of annexation to the United States.

Fifty-nine Presbyteries of the New School Presbyterian Church, have voted in favor of annual meetings of their General Assembly and 25 against. So the meetings of that body will hereafter be annual as they formerly were, instead of triennial, as they have recently been.

'Mother,' said a little boy the other day, 'why are orphans the happiest children on earth?' 'They are not—why do you ask?' 'Because they have no mother to spank them.'

LIPPARD'S
WASHINGTON AND HIS GENERALS,
Or, Legends of the Revolution.
BY GEORGE LIPPARD.
Author of 'The Quaker City,' 'Monks of Monk Hall,' 'Paul Ardenheim, the Monk of Wissahikon,' 'Blanch of Brandywine,' 'The Nazarine,' 'Legends of Mexico,' 'The Empire City,' 'The Rose of Ephraim,' etc. etc.

Complete in two large octavo volumes of 538 pages, printed on the finest white paper. Price for the entire work, one dollar. Or handsomely bound for $1 50.

The reputation of this book extends over the American Continent. It was first published in the Saturday Courier, in a series of legends, entending thro' 57 papers,' issued week after week, with a popularity unparelled in the annals of newspape rpublication, for 57 weeks. The work in book form contains at least twice the amount of reading contained in the Courier Legends.

This work has created an excitement almost without parelell, and received not only the warm encomiums of critics, but the enthusiastic commendations of the press through the Union.

It is emphatically the book of the revolution devoted to the records of the American revolution which it endeavors, how successfully let the public determine, to embody in a series of vivid and original historical pictures. It is the result of five years labor on the part of the author. It comprises his researches into the archieves, documents and papers, now hidden away in the libraries and closets of the Union. It also combines those traditions which old men, survivors of the past, have brought down to our time, concerning the days of '76.

It forms an elegantly printed work of 538 octavo pages, furnishing to every family, library and club in the Union, a book, which in size alone contains more substantial reading than any periodical of the day.

It also comprises descriptions of the following battles; Germantown, Saratoga, Quebec, Brandwine, Trenton, Paoli, Red Bank, with a new and minute description of the singing and proclamation of the declaration of Independence.

This work should be found on the centre table, or at the fireside of every patriot and American in the United States, and it should be handed down to their children and posterity, as an invaluable heir loom.

Purchasers should be careful to ask for Lippard's Washington and his Generals, as a work with similar title has been issued in New York, with whole pages taken from Lippard's Legends.

Any person in this country can have a copy of the above work sent them by return of mail on remitting one dollar to the publisher.

Booksellers, new agents, pedlars, and all dealers supplied at very low rates, and they will please send in their orders at once.—Published and for sale by

W. M. DRAKE'S

CAUTION EXTRA

A man by the name of CLAPP has engaged with a young man of the name of S. P. Townsend, and uses his name to put up a Sarsaparilla, which they call Dr. Townsend's Sarsaparilla, denominating it GENUINE, Original, etc. This Townsend is no doctor, and never was; but was formerly a waiter on railroads, canals, and the like. Yet he assumes the title of Dr., for the purpose of gaining credit for what he is not. This is to caution the public not to be deceived, and purchase none but the GENUINE ORIGINAL OLD Dr. Jacob Townsend's Sarsaparilla, having on it the Old Dr's. likeness, his family coat of arms, and his signature across the coat of arms.

Principal Office, 102 Nassau st., New York City

OLD DR. JACOB TOWNSEND,

THE ORIGINAL DISCOVERER OF THE

Genuine Townsend Sarsaparilla.

Old Dr. Townsend is now about 70 years of age, and has long been known as the AUTHOR and DISCOVERER of the GENUINE ORIGINAL "TOWNSEND SARSAPARILLA." Being poor, he was compelled to limit its manufacture, by which means it has been kept out of market, and the sales circumscribed to those only who had proved its worth, and known its value. It had reached the ears of many, nevertheless, as those persons who had been healed of sore diseases, and saved from death, proclaimed its excellence and wonderful

HEALING POWER.

Knowing, many years ago that he had, by his skill, science and experience, devised an article which would be of incalculable advantage to mankind when the means would be furnished to bring it into universal notice, when its inestimable virtues would be known and appreciated. This time has come, the means are supplied; this GRAND AND UNEQUALLED PREPARATION is manufactured on the largest scale, and is called for throughout the length and breadth of the land, especially as it is found incapable of degeneration or deterioration.

Unlike young S. P. Townsend's, it improves with age, and never changes, but for the better: because it is prepared on scientific principles by a scientific man. The highest knowledge of Chemistry, and the latest discoveries of the art, have all been brought into requisition in the manufacture of the Old Dr's Sarsaparilla. The Sarsaparilla root, it is well known to medical men, contains many medicinal properties and some properties which are inert or useless, and others, which if retained in preparing it for use, produce fermentation and acid, which is injurious to the system. Some of the properties of Sarsaparilla are so volatile, that they entirely evaporate and are lost in the preparation, if they are not preserved by a scientific process, known only to those experienced in its manufacture. Moreover, these volatile principles, which fly off in vapor, or as an exhalation, under heat, are the very essential medical properties of the root, which give to it all its value.

Any person can boil or stew the root till they get a dark-colored liquid, which is more from the coloring matter in the root than from any thing else; they can then strain this insipid or vapid liquid, sweeten with sour molasses, and then call it "SARSAPARILLA EXTRACT or SYRUP." But such is not the article known as the

GENUINE OLD DR. JACOB TOWNSEND'S SARSAPARILLA.

This is so prepared, that all the inert properties of the Sarsaparilla root are first removed, every thing capable of becoming acid or of fermentation, is extracted and rejected; then every particle of medical virtue is secured in a pure and concentrated form; and thus it is rendered incapable of losing any of its valuable and healing properties. Prepared in this way, it is made the most powerful agent in the

Cure of innumerable diseases.

Hence the reason why we hear commendations on every side in its favor by men, women, and children. We find it doing wonders in the cure of

CONSUMPTION, DYSPEPSIA, and LIVER COMPLAINT, and in RHEUMATISM, SCROFULA, PILES, COSTIVENESS, all CUTANEOUS ERUPTIONS, PIMPLES, BLOTCHES, and all affections arising from

IMPURITY OF THE BLOOD.

It possesses a marvellous efficacy in all complaints arising from Indigestion, from Acidity of the Stomach, from unequal circulation, determination of blood to the head, palpitation of the heart, cold feet and hands, cold chills and hot flashes over the body. It has not its equal in Colds and Coughs; and promotes easy expectoration and gentle perspiration, relaxing structure of the lungs, throat, and every other part.

But in nothing is its excellence more manifestly seen and acknowledged than in all kinds and stages of

FEMALE COMPLAINTS.

It works wonders in cases of Fluor Albus or Whites, Falling of the Womb, Obstructed, Suppressed, or Painful Menses, Irregularity of the menstrual periods, and the like; and is as effectual in curing all the forms of Kidney Diseases.

By removing obstructions, and regulating the general system it gives tone and strength to the whole body, and thus cures all forms of

Nervous diseases and debility,

and thus prevents or relieves a great variety of other maladies, as Spinal irritation, Neuralgia, St. Vitus' Dance Swooning, Epileptic Fits, Convulsions, &c.

It cleanses the blood, excites the liver to healthy action, tones the stomach, and gives good digestion, relieves the bowels of torpor and constipation, allays inflammation, purifies the skin, equalises the circulation of the blood, producing gentle warmth equally all over the body, and the insensible perspiration; relaxes all strictures and tightness, removes all obstructions, and invigorates the entire nervous system. Is not this then

The medicine you pre-eminently need?

But can any of these things be said of S. P. Townsend's inferior article? This young man's liquid is not to be

COMPARED WITH THE OLD DR'S,

because of one GRAND FACT, that the one is INCAPABLE of DETERIORATION, and

NEVER SPOILS,

while the other DOES; souring, fermenting, and blowing the bottles containing it into fragments; the sour, acid liquid exploding and damaging other goods! Must not this horrible compound be poisonous to the system?—What! put acid into a system already diseased with acid! What causes Dyspepsia but acid? Do we not all know that when food sours in our stomachs what mischiefs it produces? flatulence, heartburn palpitation of the heart, liver complaint, diarrhœa, dysentery, colic, and corruption of the blood? What is Scrofula but an acid humor in the body? What produces all the humors which bring on Eruptions of the Skin, scald Head, Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, White Swellings, Fever Sores, and all ulcerations internal and external? It is nothing under heaven, but an acid substance, which sours, and thus spoils all the fluids of the body, more or less. What causes Rheumatism but a sour or acid fluid which insinuates itself between the joints and elsewhere, irritating and inflaming the delicate tissues upon which it acts? So of nervous diseases, of impurity of the blood, of deranged circulations, and nearly all the ailments which afflict human nature.

Now is it not horrible to make and sell, and infinitely worse to use this

SOURING, FERMENTING, ACID "COMPOUND" OF S. P. TOWNSEND,

and yet he would fain have it understood that Old Dr. Jacob Townsend's Genuine Original Sarsaparilla, is an IMITATION of his inferior preparation!!

Heaven forbid that we should deal in an article which would bear the most distant resemblance to S. P. Townsend's article! and which should bring down upon the Old Dr. such a mountain load of complaints and criminations from Agents who have sold, and purchasers who have used S. P. Townsend's FERMENTING COMPOUND.

We wish it understood, because it is the absolute truth, that S. P. Townsend's article and Old Dr. Jacob Townsend's Sarsaparilla are heaven-wide apart, and infinitely dissimilar; that they are unlike in every particular, having not one single thing in common.
